The Commission reported on the state of play on a number of important trade negotiations. On the WTO, Commissioner Fischler welcomed the framework agreement reached in Geneva in the summer as a basis for continued detailed negotiations which safeguard essential European interests. He also reported on the continuing attempts to make progress in the EU/Mercosur negotiations; on work to agree a tariff-only arrangement for reform of the banana regime; and on resolving outstanding negotiations with certain third country suppliers of rice. Among a long list of many other business items, I and several others supported a Danish request to consider how best to include low fat dairy products in the school milk programme. Several, mostly central European, member states drew attention to the problems on the EU cereals market following this year's harvest. Other matters raised were: the impact of the US Bio-terrorism Act, implementation of the reformed CAP in Denmark, state aid for weather damage in Lithuania, the co-existence of GMO and other crops, the impact on fishing of increased diesel prices in France and the EU/Angola Fisheries

Agreement. The Commission tabled a written report on continuing BSE control measures. France reported on its action to deal with a recent case of rabies in an imported dog. Spain reported an outbreak of blue tongue disease in cattle in southern Spain and drew attention to a forthcoming conference on plant genetic resources.

Aircraft Emissions

Mrs May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what basis noise measurements will be taken to draw up a noise map for Heathrow. [195092]

Alun Michael: Details of the proposed options will be put out to public consultation in due course. As yet, no decision has been taken as to who will be the competent authorities for the production of strategic noise maps for airports under Directive 2002/49/EC on the assessment and management of environmental noise (the Environmental Noise Directive), or the methodology to be used.

The pilot project to map Heathrow in terms of the noise indicator L_{den} and the annual daytime contours produced for the DfT are produced using the calculation model, ANCON. This model is validated from empirical noise measurements for the various aircraft types included in the model.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Department for Trade and Industry on its target for greenhouse gas emissions; and which is the lead Department in setting those targets. [195343]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 November 2004]: The Spending Review 2004 reconfirmed the UK's targets to reduce greenhouse gas emissions to 12.5 per cent. below 1990 levels in line with our Kyoto commitment and to move towards a 20 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions below 1990 levels by 2010. These Public Sector Agreement (PSA) targets are shared jointly with the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department for Transport. The Government also announced in last year's Energy White Paper that we would put ourselves on a path to cut our carbon dioxide emissions by some 60 per cent. by 2050.

The UK Climate Change Programme published in 2000 sets out the Government's approach to tackling climate change. It contains a framework of policies and measures intended to achieve the emissions reductions necessary to deliver the UK's commitment under the Kyoto Protocol and move towards the 20 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions. Progress towards the Kyoto Protocol commitment and national goals are discussed by Ministers regularly, in particular through the Sustainable Energy Policy Network, whose ministerial group oversees the delivery of the Energy White Paper commitments. The group is jointly chaired by my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her latest estimate is of total UK tonnage of carbon dioxide emissions; what proportion is produced by (a) aircraft transport, (b) road and rail transport and shipping in territorial waters, (c) coal burned in power stations, (d) oil burned in (i) power stations, (ii) domestic heating and (iii) industrial heating, (e) gas burned in (A) power stations, (B) domestic heating and (C) industrial heating, (f) orimulsion/shale oil burned in power stations and (g) industry, broken down by sector. [195672]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 November 2004]: Total emission estimates of carbon dioxide (CO$_2$) in the UK in 2002 were 550,965,312 tonnes. The following table shows the proportion of these emissions that occurred from the sources listed. Figures quoted for oil and gas burnt by both the industrial and domestic sectors are total fuel figures for each sector, as it is not possible to disaggregate emissions to display heating only.

Orimulsion has not been burnt by any sector since 1997.

	Source	Fuel	Percentage UK total CO$_2$ emissions in 2002
(a)	Aircraft transport	All fuels used in category	0.5
(b)	Road transport	All fuels used in category	21
(b)	Rail transport	All fuels used in category	0.2
(b)	Shipping	All fuels used in category	0.3
(c)	Power Stations	Coal	18
(d)(i)	Power stations	Oil	0.4
(d)(ii)	Industry	Oil	2.4
(d)(iii)	Domestic	Oil	0.002
(e)(A)	Power Stations	Gas	10
(e)(B)	Domestic	Gas	13
(e)(C)	Industry	Gas	9

CITES Import Permits

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what safeguards there are to ensure that primates imported into the UK under Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species regulations are kept by people who have sufficient knowledge to care for and house the animals. [197043]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 November 2004]: A CITES import permit may only be issued when certain conditions have been met. One of the conditions is that the scientific authority must be satisfied that the intended accommodation for an Annex A specimen (great apes, chimpanzees etc) at the place of destination is adequately equipped to conserve and care for it properly. For Annex B specimens (most other primates) documentary evidence that the accommodation is suitable must be provided.

Departmental Expenditure

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will break down the budget set by her Department for public expenditure on wildlife, countryside and better regulation for financial years (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06 by programme. [196689]

Alun Michael: The Department's plans for public expenditure on wildlife, countryside and better regulation for the two years 2004–05 and 2005–06 consist of the following programmes:

£ million

Programme	2004–05	2005–06
Rural Support Services	15.7	20.1
English Nature	69.5	71.4
National Forest Company	2.9	2.9
Landscape Protection, Recreation and Public Access	10.2	15.0
National Parks and Broads Authority	28.3	28.2
Wildlife and Biodiversity Promotion	5.4	10.4
Total	132.0	148.0

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will break down the budget set by her Department for public expenditure by the Rural Payments Agency on (a) the Over-Thirty Month Scheme, (b) direct payments under the Common Agricultural Policy and (c) other schemes for the financial years (i) 2004–05 and (ii) 2005–06 by scheme. [196692]

Alun Michael: The current budget allocation that has been set by Defra for the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) for the 2004–05 financial year is as follows.

(a) Over-Thirty Month Scheme—£300 million

(b) Direct payments under the Common Agricultural Policy—£1,792 million

(c) Other schemes[1]—£167million

The public expenditure for the RPA for the 2005–06 financial year is under consideration. The expenditure figures are before any reimbursement by the European Union.

[1] Other schemes total includes the following main schemes:

England Rural Development—£124 million

Structural Funds (European Agriculture Guidance and Guarantee Fund Guidance)—£27 million

Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies Surveillance—£15 million

Hydrofluorocarbons

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress on her policies and measures for reducing HFC emissions as outlined in paragraphs 72–76, section two, chapter four of Climate Change—the UK Programme (November 2000). [196288]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Good progress has been made in developing effective measures to reduce HFC emissions. Political agreement to an EC regulation on certain fluorinated greenhouse gases, and a directive amending Existing Vehicle Type Approval in relation to Mobile Air Conditioning (MAC) in cars was reached in October 2004.

The regulation includes measures on: containment through responsible handling during use, recycling and end-of-life recovery; reporting on quantities produced, supplied, used and emitted; certain application specific bans on use and placing on the market. The directive includes a ban on the use of fluorinated gases with high Global Warming Potential (GWP) in MACs from 2011 (new vehicle types) and 2017 (all new vehicles).

Jubilee River

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the conclusions of the Atkins report into the construction of the Jubilee River; and if she will make a statement. [195683]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 November 2004]: Operational responsibility, including the planning, design, construction, maintenance and operation of the Jubilee River rests with the Environment Agency (EA).

I am advised that all independent reports so far, including the Atkins report, confirm that the effect of the operation of the Jubilee River on downstream water levels during flood events is minimal. The EA advise that the Atkins report recommended further investigations and survey work, particularly regarding the height of the river banks and further monitoring of flows while the scheme is being operated.

I understand that as a result of the report the EA will conduct surveys prior to consideration of further works to improve capacity.

Landfill

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with waste disposal authorities on the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme; and what contingency plans she has put in place if local authorities fail to reduce landfill by their targets. [195344]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 November 2004]: Ministers and officials in Defra have had extensive discussions with local authorities on the Landfill Allowances Trading Scheme ranging from bilateral meetings with individual councils through to regional roadshows aimed at all local authorities. In addition, local authority representatives sit on the Landfill Allowances Trading Scheme stakeholders group that discuses all issues in respect of the scheme.

If local authorities fail to meet their landfill reduction targets the draft Regulations laid before this House on 13 October make provision for financial penalties. Local authorities are being encouraged to make full use of the flexibilities built into the Landfill Allowances Trading Scheme to avoid exceeding their allowances.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to review the level of fines to be levied as a result of the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme Regulations 2004. [195345]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 November 2004]: The draft Regulations laid before this House on 16 October 2004 set the penalty at £200 per tonne. This represents the most expensive option available to local authorities taking account of the marginal cost of landfill compared with the most expensive diversion option. Government will keep the level of penalties under review, taking account of changes in marginal costs or other factors. A full review of the operation of the scheme, including penalty levels, is planned for 2007.

Water Bills

Mr. Heyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will replace current arrangements for assisting water customers who have difficulty paying their bills with payments through the benefits and tax credit system. [195108]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 November 2004]: A cross-Government steering group is reviewing the way in which lower income households are helped with their water and sewerage charges, in discussion with a range of stakeholders. A report will be published by the end of the year.

Refrigerators

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 16 September 2004, Official Report, column 1676W, to the hon. Member for Guildford (Sue Doughty), on refrigerators, what measures she has taken to prevent the loss of ozone depleting substances from refrigerators during their working life. [190869]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 October 2004]: EC Regulation 2037/2000 includes a requirement to take all precautionary measures that are practicable to prevent and minimise leakages of ozone depleting substances. This includes checking fixed equipment with a refrigerating fluid charge of more than 3 kg annually for leakages.

Domestic and small commercial refrigerators are manufactured with hermetic seals and so are designed not to leak.

Poaching

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) arrests, (b) prosecutions and (c) convictions there have been under the (i) Hares Act 1848, (ii) Night Poaching Act 1828, (iii) Game Act 1831, (iv) Game Licences Act 1860, (v) Ground Game Act 1880 and (vi) Deer Act 1991 in the last 30 years. [194304]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

Information collected centrally on arrests is available only by main offence group for "notifiable offences" and does not extend to individual offence level.

The information contained in the table gives the number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts for offences under the: (i) Hares Act 1848, (ii) Night Poaching Act 1828, (iii) Game Act 1831, (iv) Game Licences Act 1860, (v) Ground Game Act 1880 and (vi) Deer Act 1991, England and Wales 1983 to 2002. Data for these offences prior to 1983 is not available on the Home Office Court Proceedings database.

Statistics for 2003 will be published on 18 November.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193982]

Alun Michael: The Department is engaged in three private finance contracts.

The Environment Agency, which is a non-departmental body of Defra, has let two public/private partnership contracts for flood risk management—(i) the Broadland Flood Alleviation Scheme in Norfolk and (ii) the Pevensey Bay Sea Defences in Sussex. Costs shown in the table are actual up to 2003–04 and estimates thereafter.

The Department has also agreed a private finance contract with Kajima plc for its offices at (iii) Brooklands Avenue, Cambridge. The site is shared and the contracted annual costs are apportioned between the site's occupants. Defra's accounts reflect the share of costs estimated to fall on the Department; the table shows the total contract costs.

In determining the accounting treatment of PFI arrangements, the Department's Resource Accounts follow United Kingdom Generally Accepted Accounting Practice, including Financial Reporting Standards (FRSs) issued by the Accounting Standards Board (ASB). The specific guidance issued by the ASB for accounting for PFI is "Application Note F to FRS 5—Private Finance Initiative and Similar Contracts", as supplemented by the Treasury-issued "Technical Note No. 1 (Revised)—How to Account for PFI transactions".

The Department has also supported a number of PFI/PPP contracts which are not reportable in the Defra Resource Accounts, including infrastructure developments by British Waterways, the "SPIRIT" IT systems used by the Countryside Agency, and waste management schemes operated by the following local authorities:

Isle of Wight CC

Kirklees MBC

Hereford and Worcester CC

South Gloucestershire DC

Surrey CC

Leicester City

East London Waste Authority (partnership)

East Sussex and Brighton and Hove.

These are noted here for completeness but information on these contracts is not held centrally by the Department and is reported separately by the contracting bodies.

PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Office between (a) May 2001 and April 2002, (b) May 2002 and April 2003, (c) May 2003 and April 2004 and (d) May 2004 and the latest date for which figures are available, indicating in each case (i) the values of the contracts and (ii) the companies with which the contracts were placed; [196940]

(2) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which had previously held contracts with his Office (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with his Office in each of the past four years; [196941]

(3) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with his Department in each of the past three years. [196942]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office is part of the Cabinet Office. The specific information requested cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate costs.

Gambling

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions on which he has met representatives of (a) US casino operators, (b) British casino operators and (c) casino operators from other countries to discuss gambling issues, broken down by date of meeting. [195072]

The Prime Minister: As my official spokesman made clear on Monday 1 November 2004, I have not had any meetings with the industry in connection with the Gambling Bill.

Since the publication of the report of the Gambling Review Body (Cm 5206) in July 2001, officials have undertaken an extensive programme of consultations with interested bodies about options and proposals for changes to gambling law in Great Britain. There have been two formal consultations, the first on the Review Body's report and the second on the draft clauses published for pre-legislative scrutiny in November 2003. In addition to these consultations, officials have corresponded with and met individual companies, trade associations, charities and other bodies concerned with the problem gambling or who benefit from lotteries, local authorities, trade unions, law enforcement agencies, academics and many other public bodies and individuals, including members of the public with an interest. These contacts, designed to ensure that the Government's policy proposals are sound and take full account of all relevant benefits, cost and risks, have involved both Ministers and officials. All meetings were undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Prime Minister what contacts Mr. William Perrin of the Number 10 Policy Unit has had with companies involved in the (a) British and (b) US gaming industry in the past 24 months; and whether he has undertaken fact-finding visits in the United States in the company of employees of the (i) British and (ii) US gaming industry. [195391]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 November]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him, the hon. Member for Bromsgrove (Miss Kirkbride), and my right hon. Friend the Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 28 October, Official Report, column 1392W.

Iraq

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Prime Minister what records were kept of discussions with President Bush on the timing of going to war with Iraq during his visit to the US commencing on 7 September 2002. [195894]

The Prime Minister: Records of ministerial discussions and meetings are maintained in accordance with Cabinet Office Records.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer from the Solicitor-General of 26 October 2004, Official Report, columns 1104–05W, on Iraq, what sources he used to make his assessment of whether Iraq (a) made false statements or omissions in its declarations and (b) complied with and co-operated with the terms of UN Resolution 1441; which omissions and false statements in Iraq's declaration of December 2002 which he considered to be fact at the time (i) have been confirmed and (ii) have not been confirmed subsequently as fact; and if he will make a statement. [197544]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to paragraph 385 of the report of the Butler Review of Intelligence on Weapons of Mass Destruction (HC898).

Pacific Islands

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the Prime Minister of New Zealand on the possibility of sharing diplomatic premises on the Pacific Islands; and if he will make a statement. [197652]

The Prime Minister: I have discussions on a wide range of issues with the Prime Minister of New Zealand. As with previous Administrations, it is not the practice of this Government to make public details of discussions I have with foreign Governments.

Russia

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister what recent discussions he has held with the Russian Government on (a) terrorism and (b) Chechnya. [196774]

The Prime Minister: I regularly discuss a wide range of issues with President Putin. As with previous Administrations, it is not the practice of this Government to make public details of discussions I have with foreign Governments.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Scottish Human Rights Commission

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Advocate-General what discussions she has had with Scottish Ministers in relation to potential overlap with reserved matters in the establishment of a Scottish Human Rights Commission. [196313]

The Advocate-General for Scotland: I have had no discussions with the Scottish Ministers regarding potential overlap with reserved matters in the establishment of a Scottish Human Rights Commission. My role is to give legal advice when appropriate.

Policy discussions on reserved matters relating to the creation of a Scottish Human Rights Commission are for the Scottish Executive Ministers, the Department for Constitutional Affairs and Department of Trade and Industry.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the staff of the Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196129]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office, on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 619W.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Iraq

7. Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in Iraq. [197146]

Hilary Benn: Iraqi ministries, United Nations agencies, the Red Cross and Red Crescent, and Iraqi NGOs and citizens are providing emergency humanitarian assistance where people are affected by fighting. An Emergency Working Group has been established to coordinate these efforts.

DFID has committed £333 million to humanitarian assistance and reconstruction in Iraq since March 2003, contributing towards the progress that has been made in restoring essential services, delivering food rations, reopening hospitals and schools and beginning the process of longer-term reconstruction.

8. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much UK spending on Iraqi reconstruction has been incurred to date; and how much is planned for the remainder of the current financial year. [197147]

Hilary Benn: Since March 2003 DFID has spent £113 million on humanitarian assistance and £127 million on reconstruction in Iraq. An additional £17 million had been allocated for Iraq from the joint DFID, FCO and MOD Global Conflict Prevention Pool (the GCPP). The MOD has spent around £20 million on Quick Impact Projects in Iraq. These projects, intended for immediate local effect, are primarily used as a means of creating an environment in troops can operate safely.

Present plans are to spend a further £67 million this financial year on reconstruction and £7 million from the GCPP.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of households in Iraq have clean potable water supplied to them. [195843]

Hilary Benn: Estimates suggest that immediately after the 2003 conflict, 60 per cent. of urban and 30 per cent. of rural populations had access to safe water. Considerable work has taken place since May 2003 to improve the quality, quantity and reliability of water supplies.

In Basra the water supply system is now better than before the 2003 conflict. Informal estimates by the former Coalition Provisional Authority indicated that in southern Iraq water supply coverage increased by 10–15 per cent. from May 2003 to July 2004. Further work on restoring water treatment plants has continued since July. In Baghdad, specialists from the USA are working with local government officials to improve water treatment throughout the city. Drinking water is also supplied by bottle and from tankers.

Afghanistan

9. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department has spent on independent research on Afghanistan since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [197148]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID has spent £2,222,905 on research undertaken by independent organisations in Afghanistan since September 2001. This has included research into food security, alternatives to poppy production, private sector development and analysis of the budget and budgetary process.

The results of this research have been shared with the Afghan Government, international donor community and non-governmental organisations working in Afghanistan and is helping to shape development policy and practice.

12. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development he will make a statement on humanitarian aid to Afghanistan. [197151]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In common with many donors, DFID is now focusing the majority of it's support to Afghanistan on reconstruction efforts, however we continue to make funds available for humanitarian assistance. In the current financial year DFID has made £3 million specifically available for humanitarian assistance in Afghanistan. Our main focus is assistance to refugees and Internally Displaced Persons; both in their temporary accommodation and to assist them in their return home, and to this end we will be providing £2.5 million to the UNHCR and £0.5 million to the International Organisation for Migration.

In addition to planned assistance, we continue to monitor the on-going humanitarian situation in Afghanistan. DFID have recently made a further £3 million available for drought-affected areas in the south and west of the country, following the recent appeal from the Afghan Government and UN agencies.

Nigeria

10. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the level of aid given to Nigeria in 2003–04. [197149]

Hilary Benn: In 2003–04, DFID's aid to Nigeria was around £32 million. The EC (to which DFID contributes) gave about £9 million.

Nigeria is making good progress: The economic team put in place by President Obasanjo is vigorously pursuing reform: Nigeria recently launched a strategy for poverty reduction; is fighting corruption; and it has implemented sound macro-economic policies.

Support is critical to sustain this momentum, and Nigeria is severely under-aided. It receives only $1–2 per capita in aid compared with a Sub-Saharan average of $21. We are therefore doubling our aid to £70 million in 2005–06, and supporting a sustainable solution to Nigeria's debt problems.

European Constitution

11. David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the consequences of the proposed European Constitution on the executive powers and responsibilities of his Department. [197150]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The new Constitutional Treaty does not have any direct impact on DFID's role and responsibilities in the field of development cooperation. The Treaty reconfirms development cooperation as an area of shared competence between the Union and its member states.

We welcome the fact that the new Treaty gives strong prominence to poverty reduction as the main aim of its development actions, and to the principle of better coherence between the Union's external policies and its development policies.

East Africa

13. Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his assessment is of the contribution being made by faith-based NGOs in tackling housing and poverty issues in east Africa. [197152]

Hilary Benn: Faith-based organisations play an important role in East Africa, both in rural and urban areas. In informal settlements they often provide leadership to enable slum dwellers to organise themselves in dealing with concerns over land, infrastructure and services. This sometimes brings them into conflict with municipal authorities and vested interests. The poor have limited access to resources and services, and the support and voice offered by faith-based organisations is highly valued.

Palestinian Territories

14. Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on his Department's work in the Palestinian territories. [197153]

Hilary Benn: DFID is working with partners to help end conflict and create a viable Palestinian state that will reduce poverty. A Country Assistance Plan for Palestinians, published in July, provides a comprehensive statement of DFID's planned work in the Palestinian Territory over the next two years. Its central themes are enhancing the prospects for peace, promoting better Palestinian governance institutions and systems and making international aid and development assistance more effective.

Burma

15. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects his Department is supporting in Burma. [197154]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: We are currently supporting the following projects in Burma: Health Unlimited's work to enhance basic health care of Kachin and Wa refugees; the United Nations Development Programme Joint Programme for HIV/AIDS; the Burmese Border Consortium Relief Programme; the International Committee of the Red Cross; and the BBC World Service Trust Drama Project on HIV/AIDS.

Our total bilateral expenditure during the current financial year is expected to be £6.4 million.

Aid Budget

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of the UK's GNP has been spent on the international aid budget in each year since 1997 for which figures are available. [196816]

Hilary Benn: The percentage of the UK's Gross National Income (GNI) spent on official development assistance (ODA) in each year from 1997 to 2003 is shown in the following table.

UK ODA as percentage of GNI: 1997 to 2003

	Percentage
1999	0.24
2000	0.32
2001	0.32

Note:

We have used GNI rather than GNP because the new system of National Accounts (SNA 1993) co-sponsored by the Organisation for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD) and other major international organisations broadened the coverage of Gross National Product and it was renamed Gross National Income.

TREASURY

Cancer

Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the latest five year survival rate is for (a) prostate cancer and (b) breast cancer in (i) the Hemsworth constituency, (ii) the Wakefield area and (iii) England are; and if he will make a statement. [197258]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 10 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the latest available figures of five year survival for (a) prostate cancer and (b) breast cancer in (i) Hemsworth constituency, (ii) the Wakefield area and (iii) and England. I am replying in his absence. [197258]

The latest available survival statistics for prostate cancer and breast cancer at the sub-national level are for patients[1] diagnosed during 1994–96 and followed up to 31 December 2001. These data are available for West Yorkshire strategic health authority, which contains Wakefield West and Eastern Wakefield primary care trusts. Data are not available for the Hemsworth constituency.

Five-year age standardised relative survival (%) for patients[1] diagnosed in 1994–96 and followed up to 31 December 2001: Wakefield strategic health authority and England

	Survival (%)	(95% CI)[2]
West Yorkshire strategic health authority
Prostate	59	(56–63)
Breast (Women)	77	(75–78)
England
Prostate	60.2	(59.6–60.9)
Breast (Women)	74.9	(74.5–75.3)

[1] Adults aged 15–99 years.

[2] The 95% confidence intervals (CI) show the range of uncertainty around each survival rate.

IT Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies for which he is responsible in each of the past three years. [196905]

Mr. Timms: Over the last three years, the Chancellors' Departments have awarded a large number of contracts, varying in value and covering a wide range of goods and services (other than accounting and IT). Details of every individual contract could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However, details of contracts of significant value (i.e. over £100,000) have been placed in the Library of the House.

Crown Estates Properties

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many properties are on lease from the Crown Estate; how many of these are on lease for (a) 75 years or over, (b) 50 to 74 years and (c) 25 to 49 years; and how many houses are on lease from the Crown Estate for £1 million or more. [195133]

Mr. Timms: The Crown Estate has over 10,000 leases and licences covering both land and properties.

(a) Approximately 1,900 leases are for over 75 years.

(b) Approximately 1,000 leases are for between 50–74 years.

(c) Approximately 1,800 leases are for between 25–49 years.

The Crown Estate has 15 houses with leases valued at over £1 million.

Electoral Roll (Wandsworth)

Tom Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many electors were on the electoral roll in each constituency in the London borough of Wandsworth in each year since 1997. [196729]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 10 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question regarding electoral roll numbers for parliamentary constituencies in the London borough of Wandsworth. (196729)

The table below show these figures for the constituencies of Battersea, Putney and Tooting over the period 16 February 1997 to 1 December 2003, taken from our published annual electoral statistics tables.

Electoral roll totals for parliamentary constituencies in the London borough of Wandsworth, 1997 to 2003 [1,2]

	16 February:				1 December:
Constituency	1997	1998	1999	2001	2001	2003
Battersea	67,236	66,796	66,985	67,539	70,230	68,649
Putney	60,538	60,206	60,226	60,677	61,436	61,010
Tooting	67,027	66,461	66,692	68,518	72,246	69,906

[1] Owing to data quality issues, no electoral data were published for parliamentary constituencies in 2000.

[2] In a number of areas, including Wandsworth, 2002 electoral data could not be split between constituencies within a borough. Consequently no figure for 2002 is shown.

Equity Release Schemes

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the taxation of pre-owned assets on equity release schemes; [194291]

(2) whether the reversion scheme equity release plan will be affected by the changes made in the Finance Act 2004 to the taxation of pre-owned assets. [194292]

Dawn Primarolo: We will ensure that the pre-owned assets measures have no impact on the full range of bona fide equity-release schemes with arms-length providers, while continuing to bear down on schemes aimed merely at avoidance. The Inland Revenue are in discussion with equity release providers to define what provision is needed to ensure this. We will be making further announcements about the pre-owned asset regulations following the conclusion of the current consultation.

Fuel Prices

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what measures he plans to implement to protect (a) fishermen and fisheries and (b) farmers from rising fuel bills; and if he will make a statement; [196912]

(2) what measures he plans to put in place to restrict the increase in the price of industrial diesel; and if he will make a statement. [196913]

John Healey: Oil prices have been volatile and high during this year. On 1 October, the Chancellor issued a statement identifying four steps to reduce the risk of high oil prices denting confidence and pushing up inflationary pressures. Firstly, OPEC must continue to take necessary action to return prices to levels consistent with global prosperity. Secondly, actions are needed to improve the transparency and efficiency of the oil markets. Thirdly oil producing countries need to promote sustainable investment in their reserves and productive capacity. Fourthly, all countries must promote greater energy efficiency and develop new sources of energy.

Oil price rises affect the whole of the UK economy, and therefore are not limited to specific sectors. The Chancellor takes account of relevant economic, social and environmental factors when deciding taxation policy.

Funding (Hertfordshire)

Claire Ward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from

Hertfordshire police authority on funding of services; and if he will make a statement on the funding of (a) Hertfordshire and (b) other shire counties. [197139]

Mr. Timms: The 2002 spending review provided for record growth in spending on crime, justice and communities, from £16.5 billion in 2002–03 to £20.5 billion in 2005–06. The 2004 spending review has built on this progress by embedding the Government's success in delivery and further increasing spending in these areas by £3.5 billion by 2007–08, compared to 2004–05. The Home Secretary is due to announce specific policing allocations for 2005–06 shortly.

Productivity

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the levels of Gross Value Added per employee in the (a) manufacturing sector and (b) private services sector were for each year from 1997 to 2003 in Great Britain. [196865]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Trimble, dated 10 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the levels of Gross Value Added per employee in the manufacturing sector and in the private services sector for each year from 1997 to 2003 in Great Britain. (196865)

The table below shows the index levels of UK manufacturing output per job for each year from 1997 to 2003.

Manufacturing output per job index (2001 plus 100)

	Index levels
1998	87.0
1999	90.9
2000	96.6
2001	100.0
2003	106.6

We do not produce private services sector productivity. Total services industries output per job is available on the National Statistics website as part of the release of experimental statistics on services sector productivity. The web address of the latest release of service sector productivity is given below:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Product.asp?vlnk=9339.

Income Tax Evasion

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to reduce the level of income tax evasion. [196778]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has a programme of risk assessment directed at tackling income tax evasion. In addition, in Budget 2003 and again in 2004 the Government funded a package of further compliance initiatives. These included work on tackling evasion via offshore trusts and improving the inflow of information to the Inland Revenue. The proposed formation of HM Revenue and Customs, by merging Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise, will further enhance the effectiveness of the work currently undertaken by those departments.

Older Workers

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of (a) men and (b) women of each age from 50 to 70 years were in work on the latest date for which figures are available. [194849]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Willetts, dated 10 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment. (194849)

The attached table provides the percentages of men and women at each age from 50 to 70 who are in employment.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

People aged 50–70 in employment, 12 months ending in August 2004, United Kingdom

Employment (Pendle)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobs have been created in the Pendle constituency since (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [197035]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 10 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about jobs created in the Pendle constituency. (197035)

While statistics of new jobs created are not available explicitly, statistics from surveys enable comparisons to be made of net changes, in numbers of jobs, from year-to-year.

The attached table shows the information requested, relating to jobs in Pendle, for 1997, 2001 and 2002, which is the latest year available.

Number of employee jobs[1] with workplace in the Pendle parliamentary constituency: 1997, 2001 and 2002

	Total
Number of employee jobs
1997	29,900
2001	30,500
2002	32,100
Change[2]
1997 to 2002	2,200
2001 to 2002	1,700

[1] Excludes self-employed jobs.

[2] The 1997 to 2002 change and 2001 to 2002 change has been rounded to the nearest hundred separately from rounded levels for 1997, 2001 and 2002.

Social Service Volunteer Drivers

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that increases to Inland Revenue mileage allowances for social service volunteer drivers reflect fuel price increases; and if he will make a statement. [196291]

Dawn Primarolo: Volunteer drivers are not taxed on payments to reimburse them for costs of using their own cars. For convenience, organisations can reimburse volunteer drivers using the statutory approved mileage allowance rates that apply to employees generally. But, if the actual costs of using their own car exceed the rates, volunteer drivers can be reimbursed the higher amount without giving rise to a tax charge.

VAT

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost would be to the Treasury in a year of a reduction in VAT on all home repair maintenance and improvement works to (a) 12 per cent. 10 per cent. and (c) five per cent. [197450]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs do not collect data on VAT from individual goods and services, therefore no such estimates are available.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what commodities have been subject to changes in the rate of VAT since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [197216]

Dawn Primarolo: Details of changes to the rate of VAT on supplies of goods and services are published annually in the Financial Statement and Budget Report (FSBR), which is available in the Library of the House.

In addition, clarification of the VAT treatment of specific goods and services, including clarification of the boundaries for zero or reduced rates, results from court judgements and decisions of the VAT Tribunal. A full list of these minor changes for the period since 1997 could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Working Hours

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the number of hours in the average working week has been in each year since 1992; what figure was used for the number of workers in each year for the purposes of that calculation; and what the total number of hours worked in the economy was in each of those years. [194834]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Willetts, dated 10 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment. (194834)

The attached table from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) provides the information requested for the three-month period ending August each year from 1992 to 2004. Average actual weekly hours are calculated using the number of people in employment who have reported hours of work. This employment figure excludes a small number of people on Government supported training and employment programmes who, in the Labour Force Survey reference week, were attending college and were not asked for their hours of work.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Actual weekly hours worked, three months ending in August each year from 1992 to 2004 seasonally adjusted

HEALTH

Boots Medical Services

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on patient confidentiality in relation to NHS records of the transfer of optical and dental patients from Boots Opticians laser eye clinics and Boots dental clinics to Optical Express; and if he will make a statement. [197374]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A number of the optical and dental treatments provided by Boots plc are on a private basis and therefore outside the scope of national health service services. Where Boots or Optical Express (DCM optical Clinic and Matland Ltd.) are providing services to NHS patients, they will be required to comply with NHS standards of patient confidentiality as part of their contracts with the NHS.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the properties occupied by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004; and what the (A) area and (B) annual rental value (1) in aggregate and (2) in each case was in each year. [196073]

Eye Health Services

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS sight tests have been taken by individuals over 60 years in each year since 1999. [190914]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 14 October 2004]: The table shows the number of national health service sight tests paid by health authorities (HAs) and primary care trusts (PCTs) in England for the years ending 31 March 2000 to 2004.

General ophthalmic services: number of sight tests paid by HAs/PCTs in England for patients aged 60 and over for the years ending 31 March 2000 to 2004

	Number (million)
1999–2000	3.3
2000–01	3.8
2001–02	4.0
2002–03	4.1
2003–04	4.3

Sight tests cannot be equated to the numbers of patients. Although most people do not need a repeat sight test within the year, some patients suffering from medical conditions are advised to have re-examinations sooner.

Disabled People

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1965W, on disabled people, if he will renew central Government funding for disability charities. [196722]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government will continue to fund charities and other voluntary sector organisations through our section 64 programme.

Decisions about 2005–06 bids will be made shortly.

Domiciliary Care

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on recruitment and retention in domiciliary care services. [196295]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not employ social care domiciliary workers and it is the responsibility of the employers to tackle problems of recruitment and retention, but the Government are taking a lead with employers in a range of initiatives to deal with the problems. These include additional funding to employers to facilitate joined up working and human resource development, new types of worker pilot schemes and a new national information service.

For the second consecutive year, we are investing £1.5 million in a national social care recruitment campaign. The next television campaign is planned for January 2005 and will run for four weeks into early February. The previous television campaign, in February and March 2004, attracted over 80,000 contacts. All callers to the information service were either sent a suitable careers publication or, if they had an immediate interest in applying for a job, they were transferred to their nearest Job Centre Plus contact.

Health and Social Care

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that health and social care professionals carry out a full assessment of capacity about the matter in question when planning or providing health and social care to someone whose capacity is in doubt. [194735]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 10 November 2004]: The Mental Capacity Bill takes a functional approach to capacity. The question of who assesses an individual's capacity will depend on the particular decision to be made. The more serious the decision, the more formal the assessment of capacity may need to be.

For most day-to-day decisions, the carer most directly involved with the person at the time the decision has to be made will assess the person's capacity. Formal processes are rarely required, unless the assessment is challenged or there is reason for doubt. Whoever assesses capacity must be prepared to justify his or her findings.

Where consent to medical treatment or examination is required, the doctor proposing the treatment must decide whether the patient has capacity to consent and should record the assessment process and findings in the person's medical notes.

If a person's capacity to do something is disputed, or there is serious doubt, it is a question for the court to decide. Cases referred to the new Court of Protection will require evidence of the assessment of capacity. The code of practice will set out possible situations when a formal assessment of capacity is required and examples of where cases may be referred to the court.

Low Vision Aids

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to encourage social services departments to provide low vision aids, free of charge to any person requiring them. [196428]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Low vision aids are already available free on loan to any person requiring them. It is for local areas to decide how best to organise their low vision services. Most services are provided in a hospital setting by the hospital eye service, because prescription of the aid and training in its use must be done in the context of vision assessments. The hospital eye service will assess the needs of the individual and provide any necessary low vision aids, which could be in the form of strong reading glasses, magnifiers or telescopes.

Social services departments have responsibility for assessing the needs of individuals who request help due to problems with their vision. This is usually in the form of modifications to a person's home, such as improved lighting and hi-marks for cookers. Any help offered will be following a comprehensive assessment of the individual's needs.

The Government-funded integrating community equipment services initiative aims to produce better general equipment services for people by integrating separate national health service and social services equipment services.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) recruiting the equivalent of 1,000 dentists by October 2005 and (b) increasing training places for dentists by 170 from 2005. [187294]

Ms Rosie Winterton: £50 million was provided across the national health service to increase the amount of NHS work carried out by practising dentists during 2004–05. Other costs are under review.

The total cost to the Department and the Higher Education Funding Council for England of increasing training places by 170 is estimated as £40 million revenue and £95 million capital.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in Hull and East Riding were registered with an NHS dentist on (a) 1 September 2003 and (b) 1 September 2004. [194976]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There were 75,214 children under 18 registered with national health service dentists in the four primary care trusts covering Hull and the East Riding on 1 September 2003 and 74,366 on 1 September 2004.

Waiting Times

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 1 November 2004 to question 194032, what the average waiting time for a first appointment with a consultant in (a) psychiatry, (b) urology and (c) endocrinology were in the last period for which figures are available. [196604]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Average (median) times for consultant outpatient appointment following general practitioner referral

Specialty	Median waiting times (weeks)
Urology	5.11
Endocrinology	5.49
Mental handicap	3.56
Mental illness	3.72
Child and adolescent psychiatry	5.33
Forensic psychiatry	2.00
Psychotherapy	5.11
Old age psychiatry	3.80

TRANSPORT

Acoustic Screening

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost was of the acoustic screening erected within the last three years on both sides of the M1, north and south of Junction 11; what noise-level studies led to their installation; and what the results of those studies were. [195947]

Mr. Jamieson: In September 2003 the Highways Agency completed the first phase of a scheme to provide acoustic fences on both sides of the M1 at Junction 11 at Luton. Because of the cost and complexity of the scheme, the work is being carried out in two phases.

The cost of completing Phase 1 was £2.4 million.

Phase 2 is due to start this month with completion expected in April 2005. The cost for Phase 2 is estimated at £1.9 million.

In March 1999 the Government established revised criteria and a ring-fenced annual budget of £5 million to deal with some of the most serious and pressing cases of traffic noise on existing trunk roads. A written reply to a parliamentary question raised by my hon. Friend the Member for Chatham and Aylesford (Jonathan Shaw) on 11 November 1999, Official Report, column 681W, contained a letter from Lawrie Haynes, the then chief executive of the Highways Agency, identifying those locations where previous concerns about noise had been expressed which were found to satisfy the new criteria (location list known as the "Hansard" list). The M1 between Junctions 10 and 11 and between Junctions 11 and 12 were included on the list.

In September 1999, the agency commissioned its managing agents to carry out a detailed study of noise conditions between Junctions 10 and 12 of the M1 at Luton. The study report identified 772 properties in an area chiefly concentrated around Junction 11 with a noise greater than 68 dB(A). The report concluded that through the provision of noise barriers over extended lengths and varying in height between two and three metres, it would be feasible to provide substantial noise reducing benefits for many properties. 280 properties would receive a noise reduction of at least 3 dB(A); equivalent to a halving of the traffic. Another 492 properties would receive a smaller but nonetheless tangible benefit as a result of the scheme.

Air Travel (Financial Protection)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the Civil Aviation Authority Consumer Protection Group's July advice to Government on Financial Protection for Air Travellers and Package Holidaymakers; and if he will make a statement. [197183]

Charlotte Atkins: The advice from the Civil Aviation Authority on Financial Protection for Air Travellers and Package Holidaymakers in the Future can be found on the CAA website. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

In a joint statement with the CAA issued on 27 October, the Government announced that they had asked the CAA to carry out more detailed work on other options to address the decline in the proportion of people covered by the Air Travel Organisers' Licensing scheme. This work is expected to be completed early next year.

In the meantime, the Government will continue work with the CAA and industry on putting in place a range of interim voluntary measures to improve consumer protection.

Bus Lanes

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus lanes have been created within the Greater London area in each of the last three years. [197122]

Mr. McNulty: The Mayor and the boroughs are responsible for the introduction of bus lanes in Greater London. The number of bus lanes introduced in the Greater London area in each of the last three years is shown in the following table:

	Bus lanes
2001–02	77
2002–03	100
2003–04	51

Buses

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been given in bus subsidy since 1997. [197221]

Mr. Darling: The totals for bus subsidy in England for each year for the period 1997–98 to 2002–03—the last year for which figure are currently available—are shown in the following table.

	£ million
1997–98	762
1998–99	846
1999–2000	917
2000–01	1,056
2001–02	1,188
2002–03	1,440

Totals comprise Bus Service Operators Grant (formerly called Fuel Duty Rebate), support and grants for buses by local authorities and by Transport for London, and local authority expenditure on bus concessionary fares.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans the Government have to encourage bus use outside of London. [197233]

Mr. Darling: In "The Future of Transport" White Paper, which I published in the summer, I outlined a range of Government action to encourage the use of buses. These include funding of bus priority measures to reduce journey times, rural bus subsidy grant, real time information systems and regulations to facilitate demand-responsive bus services. The White Paper also encourages local authorities and bus operators to work together in partnership, and offers the opportunity for additional funding for authorities who wish to radically enhance bus services, perhaps through quality contracts, where the enhancement is combined with plans to tackle congestion.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of carbon dioxide emissions from road traffic in (a) 1990, (b) 1997, (c) 2003, (d) 2010, (e) 2015 and (f) 2020. [196810]

Mr. Jamieson: Estimates of carbon emissions from road traffic are set out in the table below. The data is taken from the National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory (NAEI) and is for the UK. The NAEI will not have 2003 emissions data available until early next year.

	UK—million tonnes carbon
2002	31.9

The latest DfT projections of carbon emissions are produced by the National Transport Model (NTM). Projections for 2010, 2015 and 2025 are shown in the following table.

	GB—million tonnes carbon
2025	28.6—30.2

The NTM operates at the Great Britain level. The National Environmental Technology Centre (NETCEN) estimates for 2001 suggest that UK emissions were around 3.8 per cent. higher than emissions for Great Britain. A good deal of uncertainty is attached to all forecasts and the numbers should be treated as indicative, illustrating possible trends. The range reflects uncertainty about several important factors that influence travel demand, e.g. economic growth and how people will respond in future to changes in the costs of travel.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the level of carbon emissions from rail haulage in each year since 1990. [196844]

Mr. McNulty: Carbon dioxide emissions attributable to rail for years between 1990 and 2002, expressed as a percentage of total UK carbon dioxide emissions, are:

	Percentage
1990	0.4
1991	0.4
1992	0.4
1993	0.4
1994	0.4
1995	0.4
1996	0.4
1997	0.3
1998	0.3
1999	0.3
2000	0.3
2002	0.2

Figures for years since 2002 are not yet available. The figures include direct emissions from diesel rail vehicles; those associated with electricity generation for the rail industry, most of which is used to power electric trains; and refinery emissions associated with the refining of fuel used by the industry. The last two categories between them make up around 14 per cent. of the total.

Container Security Initiative

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which UK ports are fully operational as far as the Container Security Initiative is concerned; which other ports will become part of the initiative; and for ports that are to become part of the initiative, how long their procedural development (testing) phase will last before they become operational. [196312]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The ports of Southampton, Felixstowe, Liverpool, Tilbury and Thamesport are fully operational. No other UK ports are scheduled to be included in the initiative.

Drink Driving

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road traffic accidents were caused by drink driving in the Greater London area in each of the last three years. [197120]

Mr. Jamieson: Whether an accident was caused by drink driving is not recorded as part of the Department's personal injury accident database. However, the following table shows the number and severity of accidents in Greater London where at least one of the drivers involved provided a positive breath test or refused to provide a breath test.

Accidents involving positive breath tests in Greater London

	Fatal or serious	Slight	Total
2001	192	830	1,022
2002	202	734	936
2003	181	676	857

Rail Services (Punctuality Statistics)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to prevent train operating companies setting artificially late arrival times at London terminals in order to avoid incurring penalties for late arrivals. [196831]

Mr. McNulty: Franchise agreements between train operating companies and the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) include minimum service requirements which specify the maximum permissible journey times. Train operators may only change these times with the permission of the SRA. The avoidance of penalties for lateness would not be acceptable grounds for such a change.

Rail Travel Demand

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is his policy to constrain demand for rail passenger travel by allowing an increase in travel costs above the rate of inflation. [196830]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 8 November 2004]: No. Last year's fares review concluded that regulated fares should move from RPI − 1 per cent. to RPI + 1 per cent. This move was made in order to help redress the balance of funding between the fare payer and the general tax payer and to recognise the fact that the travelling public is now seeing the benefits of a significant increase in investment in the railway.

Road Noise

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funds are available to his Department for noise mitigation on motorways; whether these funds are dedicated to noise mitigation measures; whether they are ring-fenced for acoustic barriers and quieter surfaces; and if he will make a statement. [196717]

Mr. Jamieson: Under the 10-year plan, 60 per cent. of the strategic road network, including motorways, is to be treated with quieter road surfacing in line with maintenance need. These resurfacing works are funded from a Roads Renewals budget, the value of which varies annually.

A list of locations having serious and pressing noise problems, but where there was no early prospect of quiet surfacing being installed as part of planned maintenance, was announced on 11 November 1999. Measures to relieve noise problems at these locations, by providing either acoustic barriers or quieter surfacing as appropriate, have been funded from an annual £5 million ring-fenced budget.

I gave more specific details of the overall strategy for dealing with noise mitigation on the strategic road network in the adjournment debate on motorway noise in Leicestershire held on 30 March 2004, Official Report, column 419WH.

Noise mitigation measures installed as part of a new road construction scheme, which may include measures such as earthwork bunds and secondary glazing, are funded from the overall budget assigned to the scheme.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average cost per mile is of resurfacing a standard dual carriageway with the new quieter surface. [196833]

Mr. Jamieson: The average cost per mile for resurfacing a standard dual carriageway (assumed as two lanes in each direction) with a quieter surface is £500,000.

Road Schemes

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will make an announcement on the priorities within the Targeted Programme of Trunk Road Improvement. [197176]

Mr. Jamieson: We plan to do so shortly.

Search Warrants

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many search warrants under the provisions of the Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001 have been implemented in each police authority area; and what action has resulted from such police investigations. [195061]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

Information about numbers of search warrants is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Statistics on prosecutions and convictions are published annually. The most recently published statistics cover the year ending December 2002. These show that there were no completed prosecutions or convictions under the Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001 between October (the earliest time the provisions became enforceable) and December 2002. Statistics for 2003 will be published in December.

Transport for London

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent discussions have taken place between his Department and Transport for London about transfer of further powers to Transport for London; [197212]

(2) what plans the Government have to change the powers of London borough councils in relation to transport. [197226]

Mr. Darling: The "Future of Railways" White Paper set out a number of areas where consideration would be given to extending the Mayor's responsibilities for rail services. Since then regular discussions have taken place with Transport for London (TfL) and these are ongoing.

My Department is also taking forward work on the Crossrail scheme, together with TfL. As noted in my statement to the House of 20 July 2004, were powers to be secured to construct Crossrail, the implementation of the scheme could subsequently be transferred to TfL.

The Traffic Management Act 2004 provides TfL with new powers to co-ordinate local highway authority works on a strategic road network. London boroughs will remain the highway authority for these roads but TfL will have powers to veto works on these roads, or on other roads that will adversely affect strategic roads.

Vehicle Salvage

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicle salvage operators have been registered in each month since October 2002; and how many have been registered in total in each police authority area. [195060]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Army Redundancies

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all personnel from the regiments to be made redundant will be allowed to leave the Army with a full compensatory package. [196220]

Mr. Caplin: Members of the regular armed forces who leave on redundancy are entitled to the redundancy terms set out in the Armed Forces Pension Scheme.

Iraq

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Iraqi civilians apprehended by British service personnel have been treated in a manner consistent with the "UN Body of Principles for the Protection of all Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment". [184828]

Mr. Ingram: The document "UN Body of Principles for the Protection of all Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment" provides guidance to the armed forces of member states who are engaged in UN operations. We are confident that the procedures we have adopted would be effectively consistent with it, though it does not apply to UK forces in Iraq which are operating under Security Council Resolution 1546 and are not engaged on UN Operations. Persons detained by UK forces are treated in accordance with the Geneva Conventions and other relevant international conventions, which include guidance on basic prisoner treatment.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 15 March 2004, Official Report, column 48W, on Iraq, what criteria were used to determine which pages of the Iraqi declaration on its weapons of mass destruction were relevant for translation from Arabic. [187391]

Mr. Hoon: The Iraqi Declaration on WMD programmes contained over 12,000 pages. The Declaration was split into two parts, the main text and the supporting documents. The main text contained over 5,000 pages, of which 650 were in Arabic; all of these were translated. Around 3,000 pages of the supporting documents were in Arabic, and only those judged to be of potential WMD significance were translated.

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will investigate the whereabouts of the research conducted by Professor Huda Ammash, Dean of Baghdad University, and other scientists, into the contamination of Iraq from depleted uranium. [196761]

Mr. Caplin: The Ministry of Defence carries out regular reviews of all peer reviewed scientific literature relating to the use of depleted uranium munitions by subscription to international scientific and medical databases such as PubMed and Web of Science. No record of any work by Professor Huda Ammash relating to depleted uranium has been found on these databases.

Mirach Target Service

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 13 July 2004, Official Report, column 1042W, on Llanbedr Airfield, when the Mirach target service will be taken out of service; and what will replace it. [196545]

Mr. Caplin: The Mirach target service, operated from Aberporth, replaced the Jindivik aerial target towing vehicles, which, until recently, were launched from Llandbedr. Operations at Llanbedr ceased on 31 October this year and Jindivik is no longer used. Mirach has only recently been introduced at Aberporth and QinetiQ, the company operating the service at that site on behalf of the Ministry of Defence, currently has no plans to replace it. MOD is currently considering proposals for a Combined Aerial Target Service, with a view to placing a single contract for the provision and operation of tri-service target support from 2006. It is not known, at this stage, whether Mirach will form part of this future service.

Satanism

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the policy of allowing members of the (a) Royal Navy and (b) armed forces to register their religion as satanist. [R][196739]

Mr. Caplin: There is no provision allowing members of the armed forces to record their religion as satanist.

Territorial Army

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Territorial Army personnel have resigned within 12 months of returning from a six-month tour of overseas duty in each of the last three years. [196214]

Mr. Caplin: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Aegis Defence Services

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the value is of contracts agreed with Aegis Defence Services by the (a) UK, (b) Coalition and (c) Iraqi administration; what the contracts are for; what other contracts the UK Government has awarded to the company; in what countries; and if he will make a statement. [197041]

Mr. Rammell: The UK Government have no contracts with Aegis Defence Services in Iraq or elsewhere.

The US Department of Defense has awarded Aegis Defence Services a contract worth $293 million over three years to provide security support to its Project Management and Contracting Office in Iraq. Her Majesty's Government is not a party to the contract, nor was it involved in any way in its negotiation.

We are not aware of any contracts between the Government of Iraq and Aegis Defence Services.

Afghanistan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to facilitate the admission of Afghanistan to the World Trade Organisation; and if he will make a statement. [196263]

Mr. Alexander: The Government supports the accession of Afghanistan to the World Trade Organisation on the right terms.

Afghanistan applied to accede to the WTO in April 2003 but their application for WTO membership has yet to be considered.

Following the successful conclusion of elections in Afghanistan the UK will consult with the European Commission and other European partners on how to facilitate Afghanistan's accession request. The European Commission has sole competence to negotiate WTO accession applications on behalf of the EU.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what strategy his Department plans to use to tackle opium in Afghanistan. [196445]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 9 November 2004]: The UK, as lead nation, is committed to supporting the Afghan Government in the implementation of their comprehensive National Drug Control Strategy. As well as co-ordinating the activity of international partners, we are providing substantial—spending more than £70 million over three years in support of the strategy as well as providing significant funding for alternative livelihoods. Our work is focusing on: providing poppy farmers with alternative livelihoods; targeted eradication campaigns; law enforcement and interdiction; a fast track counter narcotics element in the developing criminal justice system; drug demand reduction and an information campaign to alert farmers to the illegality and risks of poppy cultivation and to raise drug awareness.

British Indian Ocean Territory

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates discussions have taken place with the Department for International Development on resettlement costs for the Chagos Islands in the last year. [183930]

Mr. Rammell: Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Department for International Development officials were in contact on various occasions in late June and early July this year on the issue of possible resettlement costs relating to outer Islands in the British Indian Ocean Territory.

China

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the level of economic growth in China in the last 10 years. [196768]

Mr. Rammell: The level of economic growth in China over the last 10 years has been, by any measure, astounding: GDP has averaged 9 per cent. growth over the last decade, according to official figures. It has helped lift millions out of poverty. We welcome the Chinese Government's desire to encourage more balanced development across the country and between urban and rural regions. We hope that the Chinese Government will now try to implement political reform to support China's further economic development.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195624]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is responsible for the following primary legislation enacted in the last 30 years which has not yet been brought into force.

Antarctic Minerals Act 1989 (to the extent that it has not been repealed). This was an Act to implement the Antarctic Minerals Convention. That convention never came into force. The Act was mainly repealed by the Antarctic Act 1994, which implemented the Environmental Protocol to the Antarctic Treaty. The remaining provisions of the 1989 Act are jurisdictional provisions, which supported the Minerals Convention, but go wider. They would allow UK courts to deal with offences committed on British Antarctic Territory. It has not been thought necessary so far to bring them into force.

Arms Control and Disarmament (Inspections) Act 2003. This is an Act to implement an amendment to the Conventional Armed Forces in Europe Treaty (1991); that amendment has itself not yet come into force and can only do so when the treaty change has been ratified by all the states parties to the 1991 treaty.

Departmental Disciplinary Procedures

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the disciplinary complaints procedure used in relation to senior officials in his Department. [195795]

Mr. Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Misconduct Procedure applies to all FCO UK-based staff regardless of grade and includes the following stages:

an investigation into the allegation followed by a decision on whether there is a case to answer;

if there is a case to answer, a disciplinary hearing is convened;

if the allegation is upheld the officer has a right of appeal;

the officer who is subject to the allegation has the right to be represented by a work colleague or trade union representative at both hearing and appeal stage;

if dismissed, the officer has a further external right of appeal to the Diplomatic Service Appeal Board or the Civil Service Appeal Board, as appropriate, as well as to the Employment Tribunal under the appropriate act.

The FCO Misconduct Procedure is consistent with best practice and statutory obligations. A copy of the Procedure has been placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people in his Department earn more than a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,485 per year. [195327]

Mr. Alexander: There are currently 409 full-time Foreign and Commonwealth Office employees with a salary of £57,485 or more.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of the staff of the Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196132]

Mr. Alexander: The percentage of staff in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office who declared themselves disabled were 2.2 per cent. in 2002 and 2.02 per cent. in 2003.

Tibet

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the denial of access to detainees at Drapchi Prison, Lhasa, to the UN Working Group on Arbitrary Detention; and if he will make a statement. [197048]

Mr. Rammell: We have received no representations about the UN Working Group on Arbitrary Detention's difficulties in interviewing some prisoners at Drapchi Prison.

However, I raised this issue with Assistant Foreign Minister Li Hui during my visit to China earlier this month.

East Africa

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to facilitate the implementation of the 2002 world court ruling on Badme in the context of the Eritrea-Ethiopia border dispute. [195437]

Mr. Mullin: We are continuing to press Ethiopia to accept the final and binding decision of the Boundary Commission, and to press Eritrea to participate in the comprehensive political dialogue proposed by the UN Secretary General's Special Envoy, Lloyd Axworthy.

Fair Trade

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is his policy to ensure that hospitality within his Department is sourced from Fair Trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [197062]

Mr. Rammell: It is not current policy within the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) for all hospitality within the Department to be sourced from Fair Trade producers where possible. However all suppliers are encouraged to provide produce from Fair Trade producers where it is feasible to do so.

The FCO policy is currently being reviewed as part of DEFRA's Food Procurement Initiative, and the FCO are taking an active role in its development and implementation.

G8 Summit

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 225W, on the G8 Summit, what contracts for the supply of services at the G8 Summit the office plans to award; when he expects the contract award procedures to commence; how the contract award procedures will be publicised; and what estimate he has made of the monetary value of the contracts. [196529]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) will employ a production company to provide some of the meeting facilities for the Summit, and to set up and manage the Summit media centre. A host broadcaster will be taken on to handle the technical aspects of the media operation. The FCO advertised these requirements in the Official Journal of the European Union on 15 October, inviting companies to send expressions of interest by 18 November. The FCO will then invite tenders and award contracts according to Public Procurement Guidelines on a competitive basis. The monetary value of the contracts will depend on the tenders received.

The FCO may require other services but these have not yet been defined.

Gabon

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visas were granted to Gabonese students through the British high commission in Yaounde in Cameroon in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on these arrangements. [195438]

Mr. Mullin: In 2003, there were 39 student applications from Gabonese nationals, of which 14 were issued. So far in 2004, there have been 21 such applications of which six have been issued.

The United Kingdom currently has no representation in Gabon and visa applicants are invited to apply in Yaounde or the nearest accessible post. Yaounde offers a same-day service to all visa applicants.

General Election (Overseas Voters)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to ensure that British High Commissions are providing information for British citizens on how to vote in any forthcoming general election. [196737]

Mr. Mullin: In advance of a general election, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) instructs all its missions overseas, including British High Commissions, to seek every opportunity to publicise the provisions for overseas electors. This includes issuing press releases, using radio and TV broadcasts, and seeking free advertising space in local English-language newspapers.

We have also assisted the Electoral Commission in its efforts to make available information on overseas voter registration. Working with the Commission, we have developed guidance for the FCO website www.fco.gov.uk linked to the Electoral Commission's own website www.electoralcommission.org.uk where registration forms are available.

We have made the guidance available on a majority of the FCO's local Post websites and on our internal intranet.

Guide to the European Union

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost of production of the Guide to the European Union was; how many copies have been printed; how many imprints and downloads in respect of the documents have been made on his Department's website; and what steps are being taken to distribute the document. [197207]

Mr. MacShane: 207,000 copies of the Guide to the EU have been printed at a cost of approximately £45,000. The EU Guide has been sent to every public library in the UK and over the coming months will be distributed at events and venues nation-wide. It is also available online at www.europe.gov.uk and members of the public can request individual copies from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. No further decisions on distribution have been taken. The EU Guide website had received 951 visits by 8 November 2004.

Iraq

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) forensic and (b) other assistance is being provided by the UK for the (i) uncovering and (ii) investigation of mass graves in Iraq. [196860]

Mr. Rammell: The UK provided a forensic assessment team under the Coalition Provisional Authority, which was involved in recording and assessing reported mass gravesites. Overall the UK has allocated some £2 million to support the Iraqis in dealing with the issue of mass graves. This includes funding to support the development of a comprehensive mass grave action plan and to train a full Iraqi forensic investigation team.

Sudan

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the UN International Commission of Inquiry into alleged human rights abuses in Darfur about the need for a declaration by the Government of Sudan under Article 12(3) of the Rome Statute. [196080]

Mr. Mullin: It would not be appropriate for the UK or any other state to make representations to the International Commission of Inquiry. Although set up under UN auspices, it will be important for the Commission to have as much independence and autonomy as possible. We will however carefully consider any requests for assistance.

The precise judicial mechanism which will be used in Darfur will be decided following the investigations of the International Commission of Inquiry. We believe that the Government of Sudan should consider voluntarily accepting the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court under Article 12.3 of the Rome Statute.

Uganda

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of Prosecutor Luis Moreno Ocampo's statement on 1 November concerning the International Criminal Court's decision not to prosecute child soldiers in northern Uganda; and if he will make a statement. [196668]

Mr. Rammell: Article 26 of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court expressly excludes from its jurisdiction persons under 18 years old at the time of the alleged commission of a crime. The Prosecutor's statement was therefore not a decision, but a clarification that in northern Uganda, the child soldiers of the Lord's Resistance Army will not and cannot be prosecuted by the court.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the International Criminal Court's decision to investigate the activities of the Lord's Resistance Army in northern Uganda; and if he will make a statement. [196674]

Mr. Mullin: The International Criminal Court is independent and we respect any decision it takes to begin an investigation. We will do all we can to support the court in its activities. We continue to urge that all avenues—including dialogue—should be explored in the search for a comprehensive and sustainable end to this conflict.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his Department has (a) offered and (b) provided to the International Criminal Court in its investigation of northern Uganda's Lord's Resistance Army; and if he will make a statement. [196675]

Mr. Mullin: The UK has offered, and is already providing general practical support and advice in a variety of key areas, including witness protection and the enforcement of sentences. In addition, the UK has made a voluntary contribution to the International Criminal Court's (ICC) Trust Fund for Victims.

Because of the need to respect judicial independence, and to protect the integrity of the court's operations, we cannot comment on the operational aspects of specific ICC investigations; nor can we reveal what specific UK support is provided in that regard.

Ukraine

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the first round of the presidential elections in the Ukraine; and whether he has assessed this as a free and fair campaign and vote. [197220]

Mr. MacShane: I refer the hon. Member to the declaration on the conduct of the elections in Ukraine issued by the EU Presidency on 1 November, to the Conclusions issued by the European Council on 5 November and to the press statement I on 3 November.

In the Conclusions the European Council regretted that the first round of the presidential election did not meet international standards and called on the Ukrainian authorities "to address the noted deficiencies in lime before the second round of the elections and to create conditions allowing for free and fair elections, in particular by ensuring equal access to state media for both contenders."

The full text of the Council's Conclusions and the EU Presidency's declaration are available on the Presidency's website at www.eu2004.nl and my press statement at www.fco.gov.uk.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Anti-terrorism Legislation

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals have been detained on his authority under anti-terrorist legislative powers; how many are now detained; and for how long each individual has been detained. [194001]

Mr. Blunkett: 16 people have been certified and detained under Part 4 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001(ATCSA). One further person has been certified but is detained under other powers. Those detained under Part 4 of the ATCSA 2001 are free to leave the country at any time; and two have done so.

Of these, 12 remain in detention and one has been released from detention under strict bail conditions.

Details of the 12 remaining in detention and their dates of certification are as follows:

	Date of certification
A	17 December 2001
B	5 February 2002
C	17 December 2001
E	17 December 2001
H	22 April 2002
Rideh	17 December 2001
P	15 January 2003

	Date of certification
Abu Qatada	23 October 2002
I	22 April 2002
K	2 October 2003
S	7 August 2003
Q	15 January 2003

Each case is reviewed quarterly.

Further details are available on the Home Office website at: homeoffice.gov.uk/docs3/atcsa_detainees

Anti-Social Behaviour

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to reduce (a) begging and (b) street drinking. [146265]

Ms Blears: Since the end of July this year, begging has been included as a trigger offence under the Criminal Justice Interventions Programme. This will mean that those charged with begging will be drug tested and will enhance their opportunities for the underlying causes of their behaviour to be addressed and to route out repeat offending by offering treatment.

We need to ensure that we address the underlying causes of those who beg. If we help those who beg because of drug use to get access to effective treatment we help them, help communities and help those intimidated by begging. Better use of enforcement powers and alternative giving schemes will help to address the underlying and immediate problems.

Street drinking, like begging can be intimidating. In June 2003 70 local authorities notified the Home Office that they had set up designated public places orders (DPPOs) to restrict antisocial public drinking in areas that have experienced alcohol related disorder or nuisance. The Licensing Act 2003 has also extended the powers of the police to confiscate alcohol from individuals in a public place which is designated as a non drinking zone.

Fixed penalty notices for disorder which were strengthened in the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 are also proving useful tools for dealing with offences such as drunk and disorderly and drunk on a public highway.

Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the prospects for those detained (a) at HMP Belmarsh and (b) elsewhere within the Prison Service since 2001, under part 4 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001, to be brought to trial or released. [193569]

Mr. Blunkett: Part 4 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 (ATCSA) is an immigration power which enables me to certify and detain foreign nationals who are suspected of involvement in international terrorism and who are believed to pose a risk to national security, but who can not currently be removed from the United Kingdom. Those detained under part 4 of the ATCS Act are free to leave the country at any time; and two have done so. The detainees have also been offered transfer to special facilities at Woodhill prison—and their lawyers on their behalf have rejected this.

As the House debated at the time, the admissibility of the evidence presented for certification required the special process under the Special Immigration Appeals Commission (SIAC) to avoid exposure of security services and techniques.

The detainees' cases are kept under review. Only those who pose a continuing threat to national security are detained.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners held at Broadmoor Hospital are detained under provisions of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. [193660]

Mr. Blunkett: Two individuals who are the subject of a certificate under part 4 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 (ATCSA) have been transferred to Broadmoor under s48 of the Mental Health Act 1983.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what comparative assessment he has made of levels of (a) immigration and (b) asylum claims in the UK and the rest of the EU. [191466]

Mr. Browne: Assessment of levels of immigration and asylum claims in the UK and the rest of the UK is part of an ongoing process for policy development.

In the most recent full-year figures, asylum claims in the UK fell by 40 per cent. while the rest of the EU fell by 10 per cent. (2003 compared with 2002).

RDS have commissioned three reports which have assessed and reported on the patterns and trends of international migration:

1. Dobson et al (2001) International Migration and the United Kingdom: Recent Patterns and Trends. RDS Occasional Paper 75.

2. Clarke et al (2004) Migration Policies and Trends: International Comparisons. (Published on the UCL website).

3. Zetter et al (2003) An assessment of the impact of asylum policies in Europe 1990–2000. Home office Research Study 259.

The Home Office statistical bulletin on asylum statistics and the quarterly annual statistics report include tables to show asylum applications to European Countries. Comparative assessments are also made by Immigration Research and Statistic Service (IRSS) on an ad hoc basis.

The National Audit Office carried out a review of the Home Office's asylum and migration statistics. Part of the review was to examine whether changes in the number of asylum applications have impacted on other forms of migration within the UK. There was no clear statistical evidence that such an impact had occurred.

In addition numerous international bodies (Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), Council of Europe, International Organisation for Migration (IOM), United Nation High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) and Eurostat) regularly publish comparative data on the trends and levels of immigration and asylum claims.

IRSS is the UK contact point for the European Migration Network, which aims to build up and facilitate the exchange of comparative information in the field of migration and asylum across European Member States.

Communications Interception

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of, and how many, proposed interceptions of communications under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 submitted to him for approval by officials he rejected in the last year for which figures are available. [188048]

Mr. Blunkett: Records are not kept in a form which would enable the information requested to be extracted without disproportionate cost. Each application for interception is subject to careful scrutiny at a number of stages before a warrant is issued. The application is submitted by a very senior officer following scrutiny within the agency concerned. Within my Department, it will normally be examined by officials at four successive levels of seniority before being presented to me for approval. I consider each application carefully before issuing the warrant. At any stage in this process the case may, and on occasion is, referred back to the agency for clarification or further detail. This may, and sometimes does, result in a decision that the application should be withdrawn or that a warrant should not be issued.

The whole process including rejected applications is scrutinised by the Intercept Commissioner.

Consultants

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) nature and (b) value was of all contracts, consultancies and other services placed with (i) Deloitte & Touche, (ii) Ernst & Young, (iii) KPMG, (iv) PricewaterhouseCoopers and (v) PA Consulting since 2000-01 by the Department and its agencies. [188714]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information held by the Home Office on the value of all contracts, consultancies and other services placed with Deloitte & Touche, Ernst & Young, KPMG, PricewaterhouseCoopers and PA Consulting since 2000–01 by the Home Office and it's agencies is as follows:

Value of all contracts, consultancies and other services placed since 2000–2001

Company	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-
Deloitte & Touche	262,066	33,274	438,717	67,667	0
Ernst & Young	0	0	0	1,867,782	0
KPMG	0	114,477	54,689	93,136	65,541
PricewaterhouseCoopers	2,264,239	5,578,449	1,472,817	184,429	237,000
PA Consulting	2,400,267	2,366,666	4,196,057	138,737	165,566

The use of external consultants has helped the Department to successfully deliver projects across the office, which has resulted in improved business processes. A further benefit has been the transfer of specialist skill and knowledge, otherwise not available in house, to staff.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham on 7 January 2004, reference 147368, on overcrowding and poor conditions in prisons. [184166]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 15 July 2004]: I replied to the hon. Member on 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 486W.

Crime

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many occurrences of each category of crime there have been in Bournemouth in each year since 1997. [195536]

Ms Blears: Bournemouth is a Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership
(CDRP) area. The data available centrally is for six key offences and is available only from 1999–2000. See attached tables.

Note: The data in this table takes account of the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002. These figures are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time taken from arrest to trial for young offenders was in (a) Yorkshire and the Humber and (b) York in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2003–04. [191234]

Paul Goggins: The figures we collect are the average number of days from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders, by police force area. The figures for the years concerned are:

	1997	2003–04
Humberside	129	68
North Yorkshire	125	57
South Yorkshire	134	66
West Yorkshire	149	73

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed in (a) North Yorkshire and (b) England and Wales in 2003; and what percentage resulted in (i) an arrest, (ii) an individual being charged, (iii) a conviction and (iv) a custodial sentence in each case. [190448]

Paul Goggins: Recorded crime data is published on a financial year basis. The latest information relates to 2003/04 and shows that there were 71,473 recorded crimes in North Yorkshire, and 5,934,580 such crimes in England and Wales as a whole.

Arrests and court proceedings data relate to offenders. They are not directly comparable with the recorded crime statistics and it is not therefore possible to provide comparable percentage figures.

Table 1 gives the available information for those arrested in 2002 and Table 2 gives details of the numbers of defendants proceeded against, found guilty and sentenced to immediate imprisonment.

Table 1: Persons arrested for notifiable offences as recorded by the police for 2002

Police force area	Persons
England and Wales (estimated)	1,308,800

Note: Not all forces have been able to supply the information to the detail required and in a few cases no information at all. Estimates have therefore been made to provide a national figure.

Physical Restraint Techniques

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many training sessions in physical restraint techniques for staff have been carried out in each secure training centre in each of the last five years. [190479]

Paul Goggins: The information is not available in the form requested. All custodial staff in secure training centres must be certified as custody officers by the Home Secretary. To gain certification, they must undergo appropriate training, including training in Physical Control in Care, the restraint technique used in secure training centres. Additionally, the providers of secure training centres are contractually obliged to provide regular refresher training in restraint techniques.

Custodial Sentences

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of (a) parents aged between 18 and 25 years and (b) all other individuals convicted of crimes were sentenced to a custodial sentence in each of the last five years. [191687]

Paul Goggins: It is not possible, in the court proceedings statistics collected centrally, to identify persons who are parents, but the following table shows persons aged 18 to 25 who were convicted and sentenced for indictable offences and the number and percentage who received a custodial sentence compared with persons of other ages.

Persons sentenced for indictable offences at all courts and those receiving immediate custody, by age, England and Wales, 1998 to 2002

2002	128,915	34,911	27.1	206,608	50,240	24.3

Statistics on court proceedings for 2003 will be published in November.

Departmental Expenditure

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by his Department on (a) headhunters and recruitment consultants and (b) management consultants in each of the last eight years. [184806]

Fiona Mactaggart: (a) Information on the cost to the Home Office of headhunters or recruitment consultants in each of the last eight financial years is not held centrally, to obtain this information would incur disproportionate costs.

(b) The available information held by the Home Office on the cost of management consultants to the Department in each of the last eight financial years is as follows:

1996–97	n/a
1997–98	7,627,016
1999–2000	10,302,672
2000–01	27,877,286
2001–02	21,147,058
2002–03	n/a

We do not hold information on the cost to the Home Office of using external consultants for 1996–97 and to obtain this information would incur disproportionate cost.

The increase in expenditure on consultancy in 2000–01 was due to a major investment programme in the modernisation of the Home Office and in particular on IT related modernisation.

The high spend figures for 2001–02 includes costs on a wide variety of Immigration and Nationality Directorate projects, the cost of setting up the National Probation Directorate and various consultancies on IT business change in both the Home Office and its Executive agencies.

Following the National Audit Office report "Purchasing Professional Services" the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) issued guidance that re-defined consultancy to include the purchasing of all professional services and not just management consultancy. Information on the cost of consultants to the Home Office for the financial year 2002–03 was not collected centrally in order that the new OGC definition of consultancy could be embedded into Home Office policy.

Information for the financial year 2003–04 is currently being collated but is not yet available.

Ministers' Private Offices

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the running costs of Ministers' private offices in his Department have been in each year since 1997. [191386]

Mr. Blunkett: Running costs for my Department, Ministers' offices, the private office management support unit and parliamentary secretariat for each year from 1997 were as follows:

	Pay costs	Running costs
1997–98	1,551,644	572,622
1998–99	1,566,018	1,202,633
1999–2000	1,619,459	791,588
2000–01	1,223,794	841,809
2001–02	1,643,622	943,022

The running costs for the whole of private office, including the non-ministerial offices in 2002–03 was £5,176,925. The figure for 2003–04 was £5,552,690 which represented 0.05 per cent. of the total Home Office budget for that period.

Changes in financial recording systems from 2001 mean that it is no longer possible, without disproportionate cost, to separate the costs of ministerial from non-ministerial offices and figures provided after 2001–02 are therefore not directly comparable with earlier figures.

Police

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to prevent overlap between the work of the Police Standards Unit and the National Centre for Policing Excellence. [194862]

Ms Blears: The Police Standards Unit (PSU) and the National Centre for Policing Excellence (NCPE) have different and complementary roles with limited overlap between their work.

PSU seeks to improve policing performance through performance monitoring and measurement, for example through the Policing Performance Assessment Framework (PPAF), and through targeted support for police forces.

NCPE seeks to encourage continuous professional development and inform high standards of police practice through its work on doctrine. As part of Centrex (the Central Police Training and Development Authority), for which the Home Office is the sponsor Department, NCPE also offers specialist and technical learning and development courses in a number of areas.

Both organisations have an interest in developing good practice in policing.

This co-ordination is being driven forward by 'Improving Performance through Applied Knowledge' (IPAK). The programme is structured to avoid overlaps or gaps between the work of NCPE and PSU. Key stakeholders of the programme also include Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) and the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) and Sir David Phillips, the NCPE Director, is a member of the IPAK Programme Board.

At a working level, PSU works closely with NCPE on a variety of areas. For example, the NCPE guidance to the police on the management of volume crime is explicitly intended to sit above the PSU tactical guidance on dealing with domestic burglary, street robbery and vehicle crime.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action has been taken to tackle racist attitudes within the police service. [194866]

Ms Blears: Tackling racist attitudes remains a high priority for both the Government and the police service.

New assessment procedures for police recruitment have been put in place which test candidates' attitudes to race and diversity at least seven times across the process, including at interview. Those who do not score sufficiently highly in the competency "Respect for Race and Diversity" are not offered a job—irrespective of how well they do in the rest of the selection process. Candidates are also rejected automatically if, at any time during the recruitment process, they behave or speak inappropriately. Although no assessment and selection system is infallible, we have made the procedure as robust as possible in order to identify and root out racists and others with unacceptable attitudes.

The Police Service will also be rolling out a new probationer learning and development programme from April next year. The training will be based in the community and probationers will need to demonstrate their understanding and knowledge and carry out their tasks with due regard to community relationships and diversity.

Learning and development for police officers and police staff is also seen as central to tackling racist attitudes in the police service. Under a new Strategy for Improving Police Performance in Race and Diversity, which has been agreed by all the key stakeholders, and which will be published in November 2004, individuals will be made responsible for their performance in this area. Individual performance will be assessed against National Occupational Standards relating to race and diversity and through the Performance and Development Review process. Learning resources, which take into account an individual's rank or role and local policing environment, will be used with the aim of developing the individual's knowledge, understanding, skills, attitudes and behaviour in this area.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether an assessment has been made of the (a) merits and (b) effects of the career break system for police officers. [194867]

Ms Blears: I have asked the independent secretariat of the Police Negotiating Board to advise on how best to evaluate the operation of the scheme.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alternatives to the current 43-force structure are being assessed. [194909]

Ms Blears: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary have been commissioned to look at the issue of force structures and will report to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary in early 2005. The focus of this work is to gather an evidence base for whether any changes are needed.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much council tax revenue will be spent on police services in the West Midlands in 2004–05. [195691]

Ms Blears [holding answer 4 November 2004]: The West Midlands police authority will raise £61.3 million through the police precept on council tax in 2004–05. The final net budget requirement, most of which is funded by police grant, is £460.6 million.

Prisons

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 23 March 2004, Official Report, column 820W, what further compensation payments have been made to meet claims arising from HMP Wormwood Scrubs. [190234]

Paul Goggins: A full list of payments is set out in the following table. Figures are not yet available, in all cases, for legal costs. The figures do not include claims for loss of property or accidents.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans there are to build new prisons in the next two years. [191686]

Paul Goggins: There are currently a number of projects under way to increase the operational capacity of the prison estate. These include the building of a new prison, Her Majesty's Prison Peterborough, which is due to open in March 2005 as well as new accommodation at existing prisons. The National Offender Management Service has purchased two sites at Ashworth and Belmarsh for which there is outline planning consent for new prisons.

RAF Fairford (Protests)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has of the number of cudgels taken by protesters to RAF Fairford as described in answer to Oral Questions 59 to 61 of evidence to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 11 September 2003. [190779]

Mr. Blunkett: As I made clear in my answers to the Home Affairs Committee, the powers under the section 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 are intended to allow the police to seize offensive weapons where they believe serious violence may take place. I cannot comment further on particular cases, some of which are subject to appeal. I understand however that a range of items were seized from protesters using section 60. Contrary to my understanding at the time, I now understand that these did not include cudgels.

Restricted Alcohol Scheme (Romford)

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of (a) the effectiveness of the restricted alcohol zone in Romford town centre and (b) impact of the restricted zone on surrounding areas. [194730]

Ms Blears: Initial indications indicate a drop in disorder as a result of the Restricted Alcohol Zone in Romford. The effectiveness of the zone is being monitored with the initial six month evaluation due to be completed at the end of November. I am not aware that the restricted alcohol zone has impacted on the surrounding areas.

Road Safety

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have taken place for misuse of a mobile phone while driving. [190567]

Paul Goggins: Using a hand-held mobile phone became a specific offence on 1 December 2003. Data by police action (written warnings, fixed penalty notices and court proceedings) for 2003 will not be available until early 2005.

2004 data is expected to be published in autumn 2005.

Sex Offenders

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women are registered on the sex offenders register. [190254]

Paul Goggins: An overview of the 2003–04 Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA) annual reports, available in the Library, states that on 31 March 2004 there were 24,572 registered sex offenders living in the community. It is not possible to state the gender breakdown of these statistics.

Terrorism Act

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received regarding the use of police powers under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000; [191319]

(2) if he will make a statement on the ethnic breakdown of individuals subject to stop and search under the Terrorism Act 2000; [191537]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000. [191544]

Mr. Blunkett: The Government believes that the powers under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 are essential in the on-going fight against terrorism. As part of a structured counter-terrorist strategy, their use helps to deter and disrupt terrorist activity.

For the period 2001–02 and 2002–03, the ethnic breakdown of individuals stopped and searched in England and Wales under sections 44 (1) and (2) of the Terrorism Act 2000 is as follows:

	Number of s.44 (1) and (2) stops and searches 2001-02	Percentage of those stopped and searched under s.44	Number of s.44 (1) and (2) stops and searches 2002-03	Percentage of those stopped and searched under s.44
Black	529	6.19	1,745	8.09
Asian	744	8.7	2,989	13.85

Total	8,550		21,557

Statistics on Race and the Criminal Justice System 2003 http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs04/s95race2003.pdf

The increasing use made of section 44 powers over the above two year period is the result of the heightened threat to the UK from international terrorism following the events of 11 September 2001, and the subsequent rise in the number and scale of police counter-terrorist operations.

It is essential that our policing and counter-terrorism powers are used with the support of all communities and that we are able to actively demonstrate that these powers are not directed at or against Muslims or Islam, or any individual community. We are therefore formulating an outreach programme to explain counter-terrorism powers more fully. This work will involve the building of significant and productive relationships through regular meetings with key opinion formers in religious and ethnic communities, and by undertaking a comprehensive programme of visits by senior officials to those communities to explain the purpose and operation of our counter-terrorism powers.

In addition, the Stop and Search Action team, formed from within the Home Office, has been established to review the use of all stop and search powers, including the use of section 44 powers. It receives advice and scrutiny from a Community Panel with representatives from various community groups and a Delivery Board evolved from the Lawrence Steering Group sub-group on stop and search.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions an individual has been held in detention for 14 days under the Terrorism Act 2000. [191538]

Mr. Blunkett: Police records show that since 20 January 2004, when the maximum period available to police to detain suspects without charge under the Terrorism Act 2000 was increased from seven to 14 days, 25 persons have been detained for periods between seven and 14 days.

The extension reflects the evolution of the methodology and equipment available to terrorists over recent years. Police are now required to undertake a number of time consuming activities relating to evidence gathering, including testing the chemical substances found on or with suspects, examining hard drives of computers, and the detailed work required to establish the identity of suspects.

The safeguards built into Schedule 8 of the Act remain in place and cover areas including recording of interviews and reviewing grounds for detention.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many confirmations he has authorised regarding the use of section 44 powers under the Terrorism Act 2000. [191545]

Mr. Blunkett: An authorisation under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 has to be signed by a police officer of Association of Chief Police Officer rank and submitted to the Home Office. I, or one of my Ministers, has to confirm the authorisation within the 48 hour period specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 or the authorisation lapses.

Thailand

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Thailand regarding the prisoner transfer agreement concluded in 1992. [195715]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

We review prisoner transfer agreements and their efficacy on a case-by-case basis. The bilateral prisoner transfer agreement with Thailand forms part of the regular discussions that we have with the Government of Thailand about general prisoner welfare issues.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each year since 1997. [191410]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is as follows.

	Fraud and thefts
Accounting period	Home Office	Agencies	NDPB	Total
1997–98	—	—	—	[1]113
1998–99	3.8	114.4	70.1	188.3
1999–2000	204.3	165.4	0.0	369.7
2000–01	79.8	84.4	0.0	164.2
2001–02	12.1	121.3	9.0	142.4
2002–03	68.6	95.1	8.2	171.9
2003–04	123.1	30.2	57.7	211

[1] Analysis between Home Office, Executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies cannot be provided.

The Home Office has an Anti Fraud and Corruption Strategy that is based upon increasing the awareness of staff, use of cost effective methods to inhibit fraud and corruption and establishing procedures to respond effectively to incidents of alleged fraud including the provision of confidential "hot lines". The Department's overall security arrangements provide the basis for combating theft, supported by reminders to staff about preventative measures available to them. Individual line managers are responsible for combating fraud, corruption and theft in their own areas.

The totals represented here account for just 0.001 per cent. of the Home Office's £15 billion annual budget.

Wildlife Crime

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to classify wildlife crime as recordable. [195342]

Ms Blears: Crimes in the notifiable offence list, and therefore in the coverage of the police recorded crime statistics, are normally limited to indictable and triable either way offences (i.e. those that can be tried in the crown court). Most wildlife crimes are summary offences, but if such instances come to the attention of the police, then they will be subject to the National Standard for Incident Recording, which is currently being piloted. Statistics are available for the number of suspects being proceeded against in the courts for wildlife offences.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish detailed proposals to reduce the level of wildlife crime. [195351]

Ms Blears: We are currently considering the conclusions and recommendations of the Environmental Audit Committee's Report on Wildlife Crime published on 2 October 2004. Our response to the Committee is due by 6 December 2004.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Casinos/Amusements

Mr. Battle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many planning applications put to local authorities in England and Wales for (a) amusement arcades and (b) casinos which have been (i) objected to by (A) local residents and (B) local elected councillors and (ii) opposed by the local authority planning committee have been approved in the last year; and if he will make a statement. [196731]

Keith Hill: Information about the numbers of planning applications for specific proposals received by English and Welsh local authorities which have been objected to by local residents and locally elected councillors is not held centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

In cases where the local planning authority have not approved an application, and the applicant has appealed to the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, the appeal is heard by the Planning Inspectorate. In the last year (September 2003 to October 2004) the Inspectorate received:

(a) 19 appeals for development of amusement arcades. Of these, five were withdrawn, five were allowed, the rest are awaiting decision.

(b) Casinos lie within Use Class D2. The Inspectorate records appeals under this heading rather than the individual use. There were 22 D2 appeals, of which two were withdrawn, six were allowed, five dismissed, and the remaining nine await a decision.

Commercial Property Leases (Consultation)

Matthew Green: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many responses the Department received to its consultation paper on commercial property leases: options for deterring or outlawing the use of upward only rent review clauses, broken down by (a) representative organisations, (b) landlords and (c) property occupiers. [195722]

Keith Hill: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 4 November 2004, Official Report, column 435W.

Compulsory Purchase

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance has been circulated to local authorities in England concerning the issue of compulsory purchase orders where ownership of a particular site is in dispute or unknown. [197239]

Keith Hill: The ability of an acquiring authority to acquire land compulsorily is not affected by the fact that the land is in unknown or disputed ownership.

Part 1 of the Memorandum to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Circular 06/2004 "Compulsory Purchase and the Crichel Down Rules" (replacing predecessor CPO circulars) provides guidance to acquiring authorities in England on the use of compulsory purchase powers. Appendix U to Part 1 of the Memorandum to the Circular includes advice on how land in unknown or disputed ownership should be included in an order. Appendix T to Part 1 of the Memorandum to the Circular also refers to the procedure for notification of the making of an order in respect of land in unknown ownership at section 6(4) of the Acquisition of Land Act 1981.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the Department's target is for the interval between publication of (a) departmental announcements and documents and (b) material published by public bodies for which his Department has oversight and their posting online; and what the average interval was of the latest year for which figures are available. [195396]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister aims to publish departmental announcements and documents online simultaneously with printed publications. Typically online content is published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website on the same day as the printed publication.

Fair Trade

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether it is his policy to ensure that hospitality within his Department is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [197064]

Phil Hope: The purchasing policy of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister reflects the Government's value for money policy and the EC procurement rules, which require the procurement of goods and services to be based on value for money and acquired by competition, unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary, and the objectives of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Fair trade products are widely available in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. The restaurants sell fair trade products including coffee, tea and chocolate bars. The catering menus include options that allow for fair trade tea and coffee to be provided, on request, for official meetings and conferences.

Green Belt

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what reports he has received of sites designated as green belt wedge within a unitary development plan being redeveloped for community sports and recreation uses. [197236]

Keith Hill: In the first instance, all new development proposals are considered by the local planning authority, having regard to relevant policies in the adopted development plan for the area and any other material considerations. The First Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister is notified when the local planning authority is minded to grant planning permission for development that does not accord with the development plan. Such 'departures' from the plan should include applications for inappropriate development in the green belt.

Since 2001 the following planning applications in the West Midlands region involving development of community sports and recreation uses on green belt land have been referred to the First Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister as departures from the development plan:

Little Aston Parish Hall, Lichfield—replacement village hall

Smestow Bridge Industrial Estate, Wombourne, South Staffordshire—conversion of industrial unit to health and fitness centre

Wye Road Community Centre, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Staffordshire—extension and alterations to existing community centre

St. James Church, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Staffordshire—extension to church community hall

Three Hammers Golf complex, Coven, South Staffordshire—indoor golf academy

Friary Grange, Lichfield—recreation centre building, and outdoor multi-purpose activity areas/pitches

City Technology College, Kingshurst, Solihull—installation of all-weather pitch on area of playing field land

Leamington Rugby Football Club—extension of existing sports field

Aston Villa Football Club Training Ground, Bodymoor [illegible] Warwickshire—indoor pitch and block including [illegible] facilities

Nuneaton Football Club, Nuneaton, Warwickshire [illegible] football stadium and associated development

Woodlands School, Coventry—new sports hall, pavilion and floodlit pitches

Allard Way, Coventry—outdoor pitches with indoor recreation and community facilities

Dosthill Lake, Kingsbury, North Warwickshire—water ski and nature conservation centre

Wasthills Playing Fields, Bromsgrove—all weather sports pitch

Abbey Stadium, Birmingham Road, Redditch—athletics stadium, leisure complex.

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the legal constraints are on developing sites within an area designated as a green belt wedge within a unitary development plan for community and recreational uses; and what the process is for seeking to revise planning consents for such an initiative. [197237]

Keith Hill: Development proposals are subject to the provisions of planning legislation. Most new development requires planning permission. It is for the local planning authority in the first instance to determine planning applications. Section 38 (6) of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 requires that planning applications shall be determined in accordance with the development plan, unless material considerations indicate otherwise.

In preparing their development plan the local planning authority should have regard to national Planning Policy Guidance on Green Belts (PPG2). PPG2 makes clear that there is a general presumption against inappropriate development in the green belt, which should not be approved, except in very special circumstances. It is for the applicant to demonstrate that very special circumstances exist which clearly outweigh the harm that inappropriate development would cause to the green belt.

The construction of new buildings within a designated green belt is inappropriate development, except in certain circumstances as set in PPG2. For example, where the new buildings would provide essential facilities for outdoor sport and outdoor recreation, the development would not be inappropriate.

Once planning permission has been granted for a development, generally only the courts can set it aside. However, where outline planning permission has been granted for a new building, the applicant must still apply to the local planning authority for approval of the details of the scheme, known as reserved matters. In these circumstances, the authority may attach conditions to the consent covering details such as siting and design. What is proposed in detail must be consistent with the outline permission. Otherwise a fresh application will need to be made.

Housing Renewal (Birmingham)

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on projected capital investment in housing renewal in Birmingham, Hodge Hill in each of the next four years. [197244]

Keith Hill: Mainstream capital funding for housing investment from central Government is allocated in all cases to the strategic housing authority, which in the case of Hodge Hill is Birmingham city council. It is the responsibility of the city council to determine the strategic priorities for investment within the Birmingham area.

Annual capital housing allocations

Provisional housing capital allocations for 2005–06 were announced in December 2003, and the allocation for Birmingham city council was £35.082 million.

Included in the 2005–06 total is £3.271 million allocated to a Birmingham-led consortium of west midlands housing authorities, to focus specifically on improvements in private sector housing.

The confirmation of the 2005–06 allocations is expected in December 2004, and provisional allocations for 2006–07 and 2007–08 are expected to be announced in December 2005. No date is yet fixed for 2008–09 allocations.

Major repairs allowance (MRA)

Authorities with council housing stock receive the major repairs allowance (MRA), which is an annual subsidy calculated according to the number of dwellings and the estimated annual investment requirement for depreciation and on-going repairs.

The MRA is generally announced as part of the Housing Revenue Account. Determinations are made in December each year, and so the figure for 2005–06 is not yet available.

The allowance is re-calculated each year to take account of changes in the number of dwellings, and the projected costs of capital repairs, but as a guide the 2004–05 allowance for Birmingham city council was £39.036 million.

Other housing funding

Funding for a housing market renewal area feasibility study

The announcement of regional housing capital allocations in December 2003 included a separate sum of £1.66 million for 2005–06 (as well as £1 million in 2004–05) to take forward a research project, to be commissioned by the Regional Housing Board, to test the feasibility of developing a housing market renewal initiative in East Birmingham/North Solihull.

Housing Corporation

The Housing Corporation allocates the annual Office of the Deputy Prime Minister funding for registered social landlords (RSLs) for provision of new supported and affordable housing, with a small element of renewal investment. This funding goes directly to individual RSLs, which typically have a number of sites and projects across a number of local authorities. It is not therefore possible to identify separately what level of funding will be going into the Hodge Hill area.

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the funding streams from which Birmingham city council might access capital investment for housing renewal over the next four years; and through which organisational options such funding might be delivered. [197245]

Keith Hill: Birmingham city council can access external funding streams for housing renewal investment, and in addition has the flexibility to access certain corporate funding streams for investment in housing renewal as set out.

External funding

West Midlands Regional Housing Board—makes recommendations to Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister for the annual allocations of capital housing funding to local authorities. Allocations for 2004–05 and provisional allocations for 2005–06 were announced in December 2003. The confirmed allocation for 2005–06 will be announced in December 2004, and allocations for the following two years (2006–07 and 2007–08) are expected to be announced in December 2005.

Major Repairs Allowance (MRA)—The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's funding stream direct to local authorities to meet the ongoing capital investment needs of council housing stock. The level of funding is reviewed annually, and announced around December each year.

North West Birmingham Housing Market Renewal Pathfinder "Urban Living" —The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's funding for housing renewal in a defined area in North West Birmingham and Sandwell MBC and is administered through the Urban Living Project Board. Funding for the first two years of the 10 to 15 year project was announced in July 2004.

English Partnerships—are strategic partners in the North West Birmingham/Sandwell Housing Market Renewal Pathfinder "Urban Living", and have committed to invest resources into Pathfinder projects during the first two years of the initiative (2004–05 and 2005–06)

Housing Corporation—allocates the annual the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Approved Development Programme (ADP) to Registered Social Landlords for provision of new supported and affordable housing, with a small element of renewal investment. Allocations for 2004–05 and 2005–06 were announced in December 2003, with the following two years expected to be announced in December 2005.

New Deal for Communities—The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's funding for two renewal initiatives in Birmingham (Aston and Kings Norton) to tackle a range of deprivation issues, including those related to housing and the physical environment.

The NDC Partnership Board in each area administers funding over the life of the project up to March 2011.

Corporate Resources

Single Capital Pot (SCP)—all local authorities have flexibility in how they allocate corporately their annual Government capital allocations for the four key service areas of housing, education, social services, and transport.

Right to buy receipts—all local authorities have flexibility in how they allocate corporately receipts from the sale of council houses under the "Right to Buy" provisions.

Capital receipts from housing or land disposal—local authorities have flexibility in how they allocate these funds corporately.

Planning gain—S106 Commuted Sums—through the planning system local authorities can require developers to provide either social housing or local amenities on site, or to provide monies in lieu of housing/amenities—these are known as "commuted sums". Local authorities have flexibility in how they allocate these funds corporately.

Prudential borrowing—a freedom introduced through the Local Government Act 2003, effective from April 2004, enabling local authorities to undertake borrowing through any source.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much funding in grants has been paid to local authorities that have surrendered their housing stock. [197091]

Keith Hill: £157 million—£6 million for homelessness services and the rest for capital programmes—was provided in grants and other funding in 2003–04 to support housing spend by local authorities in England that had transferred their housing stock to a housing association or other registered social landlord by the start of the financial year. Authorities can also fund spend on homelessness and housing services (other than for council housing) from general Revenue Support Grant. In addition to this some £207 million was made available in 2003–04 for provision of affordable housing in these authorities through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme.

Low-cost Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Housing Corporation requires housing associations bidding for Approved Development Programme funding for new low cost home ownership schemes to provide information on the (a) ethnicity, (b) type of needs met and (c) size of household of people being housed. [196714]

Keith Hill: The Housing Corporation's Guide to the Allocation Process 2004–05 and 2005–06 sets out the information that housing associations are expected to provide as part of their bid for Approved Development Programme (ADP) funding. This includes information on the number of units, the number of persons and the type of household (e.g. family) as well as that on the ethnic client groups for which the scheme is intended to provide accommodation.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will break down the 569 low cost home ownership units planned for Tower Hamlets in the Housing Corporation's 2004–06 Approved Development Programme by (a) one-bed, (b) two-bed, (c) three-bed and (d) four-bed or more; [196715]

(2) if he will break down the 569 low cost home ownership units planned for Tower Hamlets in the Housing Corporation's 2004–06 Approved Development Programme by (a) commercial-shared ownership, (b) do-it-yourself shared ownership, (c) Homebuy and (d) other forms of low cost home ownership. [196716]

Keith Hill: The Housing Corporation have so far allocated resources to fund a total of 678 low cost home ownership units in Tower Hamlets over the years 2004–06. Of these 310 are conventional shared ownership, 348 are Key Worker Shared ownership. The remaining 20 are Homebuy Market Purchase. The corporation has not funded do-it-yourself shared ownership schemes through the Approved Development Programme (ADP) since 1999–2000.

The following table shows the split of low cost homeownership schemes by one, two, three and four or more bedrooms. The figure for Homebuy Market Purchase cannot be broken down until the individual properties are purchased.

Low cost home ownership in Tower Hamlets

	Dwellings	One-bed	Two-bed	Three-bed	Four-bed
Homebuy Market Purchase	20	n/k	n/k	n/k	n/k
Keyworker Shared ownership	348	128	213	7	0
Shared ownership	310	113	195	2	0
Total	678	241	408	9	0

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many shared ownership properties were sold in Tower Hamlets in each year since 1997; and how many of those properties were purchased by (a) a person in social housing in that area, (b) a person on the single housing register in that area and (c) a key worker. [196826]

Keith Hill: Estimates of annual shared ownership sales in Tower Hamlets from 1997–98 to 2003–04 are tabled as follows:

	Total shared ownership (SO) sales in Tower Hamlets	SO sales to people who were previously social tenants in Tower Hamlets	SO sales to purchasers who were registered on a local authority waiting list/common housing register
1997–98	76	14	23
1998–99	29	5	10
1999–2000	95	21	41
2000–01	17	1	8
2001–02	92	15	27
2002–03	64	11	24
2003–04	22	1	7

Note:

The occupation of purchasers was not collected as part of CORE Sales during the period 1997–98 to 2003–04. Consequently it is not possible to provide figures on the number of key workers that bought shared ownership properties in Tower Hamlets during this period.

Thames Gateway Development (Police)

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the number of additional (a) police stations and (b) police officers which will be required under the Government's plan for an additional 120,000 houses to be built between 2003 and 2016 in the Thames Gateway. [190687]

Keith Hill: The Government's agenda for an additional 120,000 homes in the Thames Gateway includes 80,000 homes already committed in the planning system. It therefore entails an additional 40,000 homes spread across the London, Essex and Kent Gateway areas.

The Thames Gateway sub-region covers three separate police forces—the Metropolitan police and the Essex and Kent forces. Policing policy falls under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, but the management of the police estate and allocation of resources are matters for each Chief Constable and police authority, who will make decisions according to local operational plans and priorities.

General grants funding for police authorities is allocated on the basis of relative need, with resident population forming the most significant single factor in this assessment. It is a matter for the Chief Constable and police authority of each force to determine budget requirement and allocate resources in accordance with local operational priorities.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Home Office will work together to assist police authorities in planning future needs, for example, by providing forecasts of population changes in the Thames Gateway. General police grants are calculated using a formula weighted largely on population estimates, with the management and allocation of these resources being matters that are decided locally.

Regional Fire Control Centres

Mr. Swire: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he will fund the move of regional brigades to a centralised regional fire control centre; and whether the costs of such a relocation will be taken out of the brigades' existing budget. [196489]

Mr. Raynsford: There are no current proposals to create regional fire and rescue authorities or brigades. The creation of regional fire and rescue control centres will lead to considerable efficiencies and improved resilience. However if, during the transition period, authorities incur a net additional expense, new burdens principles will apply. The new burdens principle means that, where a central government department's policies or initiatives lead to a net increase in the cost of providing local authority services, Government will fund the additional expenditure, provided that the aggregate value all department's burdens across all local authorities in England in any financial year is greater than £100,000.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he has (a) contracted a company to design a building for a regional fire control centre for the South West and (b) estimated how many people would be working in such a building; what type of equipment will be needed in such a building; and whether outline planning permission has been sought for this building. [196491]

Mr. Raynsford: A generic design for the regional control centres (RCCs) has been developed in consultation with fire and rescue service staff by a professional design team. The developer selected to build the RCC in each region will be required to complete the design to reflect local requirements, including site conditions and planning.

Work is in progress on staffing models for the RCCs. The number of staff to be employed in each RCC will vary regionally, reflecting different demand levels.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is undertaking a major procurement under the EU's 'Negotiated Procedure' rules to provide modern, high quality technology, including integrated command and communications systems, mobilising and resource management system, GIS and gazetteer, and an automatic vehicle location system, for each RCC. The procurement will also provide networking equipment to connect together the RCCs, creating a national resilient network.

Planning status was one of the criteria for site location.

Right to Buy

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes the Government has made to right to buy (a) discounts and (b) eligibility in England since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [197086]

Keith Hill: Following consultation, the Government reduced maximum Right to Buy discounts in February 1999 to levels that reflected more closely the actual cost of buying a home in each of the nine English regions. The previous nationwide limit of £50,000 was replaced by nine regional limits:

London, South East	38,000
Eastern	34,000
South West	30,000
North West, West Midlands	26,000
Yorkshire and the Humber, East Midlands	24,000
North East	22,000

In March 2003, the Government reduced to £16,000 the maximum Right to Buy discount available in 41 areas that were under the greatest housing pressure, as evidenced by high levels of homelessness and high local house prices. The position in all 354 local housing authority areas in England was considered. The 41 areas were:

Region	Areas
London	All London boroughs except Barking and Dagenham and Havering
South East	Chiltern, Epsom and Ewell, Hart, Oxford, Reading, Reigate and Banstead, Tonbridge and Mailing, Vale of White Horse, West Berkshire,
Eastern	Watford

The Government has made no changes to eligibility for the Right to Buy. Its Housing Bill, which is currently completing its progress through Parliament, proposes to increase the initial qualification period from two years to five years. Tenants will however qualify for the same percentage of discount after five years as they would have done under the current rules.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Access to Universities

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he intends to include milestones for individual universities in their access agreements in his annual report to Parliament under Schedule 5 of the Higher Education Act 2004; whether they will otherwise be published by (a) him and the Director General of the Office for Fair Access; and whether comments made by the Director General in respect of milestones for individual universities will be published. [194838]

Dr. Howells: Access agreements, which will include institutions' own milestones, will be published documents. It is a matter for the Director whether he includes milestones for individual universities in his annual report or whether he publishes any comments he makes on them.

Apprenticeships

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many young people in Bath and North East Somerset are on apprenticeship schemes. [196759]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is only available for local Learning and Skills Council (LSC) areas. In July 2004, there were 2,900 people on Apprenticeships in the West of England LSC area.

CAFCASS

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of separation and divorce cases referred to the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service during 2001/02 and 2002/03 were resolved without a formal court hearing. [194220]

Margaret Hodge: The Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS) does not collect the data requested. However, in many cases, CAFCASS's intervention has helped parties to reach agreement either by consent order or alternative arrangements so that parties have not proceeded to formal court hearings.

Child Care (Cleethorpes)

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care places there have been in (a) Cleethorpes constituency and (b) Great Grimsby constituency in each year since 1997. [194182]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the form requested.

Figures for 2003 and 2004 are shown in Table 1.

Table 1: Number of day care places[1, 2] by type of provider North East Lincolnshire local education authority 2003 and 2004

	Position at 31 March each year 2003	2004

Sessional day care	700	600
Childminders	500	600
Out of school day care	400	500
Crèche day care	60	70

Table 2: Number of day care places[1, 2] by type of provider North East Lincolnshire local education area 1997–2001

[1] The figures have been rounded.

[2] Data Source: Children's Day Care Facilities Survey.

[3] From 1999, places were counted once for each school holiday. Before 1999, places were counted once each year.

[4] Places may have been counted once rather than once for each school holiday; see 3 above.

[5] Includes schemes that were exempt from registration.

The figures for 2003 and 2004 are not directly comparable with the figures for 1997–2001 because the figures for 2003 and 2004 were derived from the Ofsted database of registered child care providers and the figures for 1997–2001 were derived from the Children's Day Care Facilities Survey, which was discontinued in 2001. There are no figures for 2002.

With the introduction of the National Day Care Standards and the transfer of responsibilities for registration and inspection of childcare providers from local authority social service departments to Ofsted in September 2001; childcare places were classified according to the type of day care provided: full day care, sessional day care, childminder, out of school day care or crèche day care. Ofsted have produced figures based on this classification on a quarterly basis from March 2003. Their latest figures were published on 21 October 2004 in their report "Registered Childcare Providers and Places, 30 September 2004" which is available on their website, www.ofsted.gov.uk/publications

Up until March 2001 child care providers were classified according to the type of provider; day nurseries, playgroups and pre-schools, childminders, out of school clubs and holiday schemes. Figures based on this classification were published in a series of statistical bulletins, which are available from the Department's website, www.dfes.gov.uk/statistics

Children Bill

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what provisions in the Children Bill in respect of children do not apply to the children of those seeking asylum in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [194677]

Margaret Hodge: Asylum seeking children are not excluded from the Children Bill. Its provisions are designed to ensure that services work to improve outcomes for all children, and this includes those who are the children of asylum seekers or themselves seeking asylum. The Children's Commissioner will have the function of promoting the views and interests of all children, including those seeking asylum.

The immigration service is acutely aware of the need to offer protection to vulnerable children. A number of new procedures have been introduced to ensure that any concerns about children are acted upon and to promote close working with local authorities and other agencies. Unaccompanied asylum seeking children are supported by local authorities in the same way as UK children and are therefore afforded the same protection.

Contact Centres

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding has been available from the Joint Investment Fund for (a) contact centres and (b) supervised contact centres in each of the last three years. [192529]

Margaret Hodge: The £3.5 million DfES/Sure Start Joint Investment Fund was announced in March 2004 and represents a major investment in child contact centres for the three financial years 2003–04 to 2005–06. In 2003–04 £100,000 was made available. In 2004–05 £1.8 million is being made available and in 2005–06 £1.6 million will be available.

Of the £3.5 million, £2.5 million has been allocated to the establishment of 14 new supervised contact centres in England. A sustainability fund of £430,000 will provide financial support to existing supervised and supported contact centres who are members of the National Association of Child Contact Centres (NACCC). £570,000 of training and consultancy support will be made available to supervised contact centres.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many contact centres are in operation in England; and how many of these are supervised contact centres. [192530]

Margaret Hodge: A mapping exercise conducted by the (former) Lord Chancellor's Department (now the Department for Constitutional Affairs) in autumn 2002, identified approximately 520 voluntary sector child contact centres in England and Wales. 483 of these centres were based in England.

Of the 483 centres in England, 47 offered supervised child contact services only, while a further 73 centres offered both supervised and supported child contact services.

Under the 2002 Spending Review, funding has been made available through a DfES/Sure Start joint investment fund to establish 14 new supervised contact centres. This funding was announced in March 2004. The operation of these new supervised centres will be supported by £2.5 million from the total £3.5 million joint investment fund, up until March 2006.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of the staff in his Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196121]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 619W.

EU Diploma Recognition

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Co-ordination Group to promote uniformity of application of the general system for the recognition of higher education diplomas (first general system) met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [196676]

Dr. Howells: A meeting of the EU Co-ordination Group was held on 24 June 2003 in Brussels. The agenda comprised points of information from the Commission and discussions on other technical areas on the recognition procedure including assimilated diplomas, lists of regulated professions and statistical reports. No decisions were made.

Fair Trade

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether it is his policy to ensure that hospitality within his Department is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [197063]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided by the Chief Secretary on 9 December 2002, Official Report, column 92W which read as follows:

> "There is no Government-wide approach to the procurement of Fair trade products. Each Government Department is responsible for making its own decisions on such products, against the background of the Government's value for money > policy, the EC procurement rules and the Department's objectives. However, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development has made clear, the Government are committed to supporting ethical trading wherever possible and provide significant support to the Fair trade Foundation's efforts in promoting the supply and marketing of Fair trade products".

In line with Government procurement policy the evaluation of tenders is based on value for money considerations having due regard to propriety and regularity. The use of fair trade products was given due consideration alongside other requirements during the last catering service procurement with a subsequent clause included within the contract requiring that Fair trade goods are offered for sale in all DfES Head Office restaurants.

Foundation Schools

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether schools applying to become foundation schools are obliged to consult on their proposal; how long the required period of consultation is; and what guidance the Department issues on how the consultation should be carried out. [196089]

Mr. Miliband: The Governing Body of any school that wishes to change category to become a foundation school must first consult interested parties. They must have regard to the Secretary of State's guidance on consultation. The guidance does not stipulate the length of a consultation period nor the form that consultation should take. However, the guidance makes it clear that the proposers must allow adequate time and provide sufficient information for consultees to form a considered view and must also make clear how the consultees can make their views known. The proposers must be able to show that they have taken account of views expressed during consultation in reaching their decision on whether to publish proposals.

We are currently consulting on plans to introduce a new fast track process for community and voluntary controlled secondary schools to change to foundation category. If implemented, these will remove the requirement to consult interested parties earlier before formally publishing the proposals, although they will be advised to discuss their plans with their local education authority. Local people will, of course, have the opportunity to make their views known about the proposals after publication and governing bodies will be required to take account of representations received.

Home Education

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures are in place to monitor the provision of education at home. [194768]

Margaret Hodge: Parents who elect to home educate their children must ensure that they receive full-time education of a good quality and suitable to each child's age, ability and aptitude and to any special needs they may have. It is the duty of local education authorities (LEAs) to monitor the quality of education being provided to home educated children of compulsory school age. Precisely how this is done, and how often, is a matter for the LEA. My officials are currently drafting guidelines for LEAs on elective home education, which are due to be issued early next year.

Information Technology (Schools)

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the computer to pupil ratio was in Bath and North East Somerset in each year since 1997. [196764]

Mr. Miliband: The information is not available in the form requested.

Figures for England, which were derived from a sample of schools, are shown in the table. Figures at sub-national level are not available as the sample was not large enough to provide reliable estimates.

Average number of pupils[1] per computer[2] by type of school—England

The latest provisional data on ICT in schools was published in the Statistical First Release Survey of Information and Communications Technology in Schools 2004 which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

Medical Students

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) men and (b) women are training to be doctors at medical schools. [195924]

Dr. Howells: The available information is given in the table.

Enrolments to clinical and pre-clinical medicine courses at UK HE institutions, 2002/03

Ofsted Inspections

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Ofsted inspections of schools in (a) the Greater London area and (b) London borough of Wandsworth there have been in each of the last three years. [196726]

Mr. Miliband: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, David Bell, will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Physical Education

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers are employed in schools solely to teach physical education, broken down by education authority; and if he will make a statement. [196506]

Mr. Miliband: This information is not collected centrally.

Table 24 of the School Workforce in England Statistical Volume, 2003 edition shows the numbers of teachers of physical education in secondary schools in England. The table includes all teachers who teach some physical education not just those employed solely to teach it. The information is not available by local education authority.

A copy of the volume has been placed in the House of Commons Library. Alternatively it may be accessed at the following URL: www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/VOL/v000380/index.shtml

Performing Arts

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people were studying for a degree or other Level 4 qualification in the performing arts in the most recent year for which information is available (a) in England, (b) in England from overseas and (c) in each region of England, broken down by type of Level 4 qualification. [196412]

Dr. Howells: The available information has been taken from the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) and is given in the table.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in what circumstances performing arts students are entitled to student loans and fee support; and if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on support for Level 4 students. [196413]

Dr. Howells: The Government supports a range of performing arts students with the standard package of Higher Education fees and loans for training at Level 4. This includes those pursuing degrees or diplomas on courses designated for student support in mainstream Higher Education, at universities or other institutions providing HE courses.

In addition, 525 students start courses each year supported by the Dance and Drama Awards which provide support with fees and means tested support for the student fee contribution and living costs The Awards provide performance training at Level 4 leading to Trinity College London Diplomas in private schools of dance and drama.

Pupil Referral Units

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of Pupil Referral Units in (a) raising levels of attainment, (b) enabling pupils to return to mainstream schools and (c) improving attendance. [194767]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Pupil Referral Units (PRUs) are inspected by Ofsted to assess the quality of the provision being delivered by LEAs and to address any instances where it falls below our expectations. PRUs form a significant element within each LEA's alternative provision strategy. However, in June 2003, Ofsted reported that the quality of alternative provision made for older pupils is variable. Well run PRUs make a great difference to their pupils, and we are disseminating guidance on good practice to help LEAs improve their effectiveness. We will also expect PRUs to work with groups of schools which take collective responsibility for managing excluded pupils and those at risk of exclusion, and provision for them.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he has (a) received and (b) been notified of proposals to sell school playing fields since the publication of new guidance on the matter. [197238]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: On 27 August, we announced our intention to tighten up the criteria against which applications for consent to dispose of school playing fields would be assessed. Following consultation with the independent School Playing Fields Advisory Panel, we have published the new guidance today. I have not yet received, or been notified of, any proposals to sell school playing fields under the new guidance.

Scientists in Higher Education

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the retention rate of scientists employed by universities. [195633]

Dr. Howells: We have made no assessment of the retention rate of scientists employed by universities. However, we do have access to the latest available information from the Higher Education Statistics Agency, which is shown in the following table. We have taken 'scientists' to mean academic staff in all science subjects.

Retention rates[1] of academic staff[2] on permanent contracts UK HE institutions

		Percentage

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average age is of scientists with permanent contracts employed by universities; and what the average age was 10 years ago. [195634]

Dr. Howells: The latest available figures from the Higher Education Statistics Agency, are shown in the following table. Information for 1992/93 is not held centrally. We have taken 'scientists' to mean academic staff in all science subjects. As well as figures for science staff, we have shown figures for all staff for comparison.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether it is the Government's policy that conductive education should be made available to all children with special educational needs; what research he has commissioned on conductive education in special education; and what guidance has been issued on the use of conductive education for children with motor disorders. [194626]

Margaret Hodge: Decisions about how to provide for children with special educational needs (SEN) are taken locally in light of all the individual circumstances. Local education authorities (LEAs) have a statutory duty to identify, assess and provide for children with SEN, taking advice from professionals and other agencies as necessary. Some individual placements at specialist centres providing conductive education are being funded by LEAs, social services and health.

A research project by the University of Birmingham to evaluate the effectiveness of conductive education was funded by the Department in 1993. This found no evidence that children receiving conductive education progress better than comparable children at maintained special schools.

There are no plans to give all pupils with special educational needs access to conductive education or to provide guidance. The Government's strategy for SEN—"Removing Barriers to Achievement"—launched in February this year, sets out our vision for giving children with SEN and disabilities the opportunity to succeed according to their personal needs and aptitudes. This strategy builds on proposals for the reform of the children's services in "Every Child Matters". It sets a new agenda for improvement and action at a national and local level.

University Admissions

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 290W, on university admissions, what his timescale is for consideration of the benchmarks on university admissions; and whether he plans to announce the outcome of this consideration. [197050]

Dr. Howells: I have said that I will look at the benchmarks to see if there is any way they can be improved or better understood. I have not yet announced a specific timescale, nor at this stage any plans to make an announcement.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Data Protection

Chris Ruane: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will reform the data protection laws to allow (a) local government and (b) national government to share information between departments. [196208]

Mr. Leslie: The Data Protection Act 1998 does not prevent the sharing of information between public bodies, it regulates the way in which such sharing must be done to ensure compliance with principles of good information handling. Data sharing between public bodies is also a matter of administrative law, common law and human rights. Guidance on how data sharing can be carried out on a lawful basis is set out in "Public Sector Data Sharing: Guidance on the Law" published by the Department for Constitutional Affairs in November 2003, copies of which are available in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many agency temporary staff have been working for the Department or its predecessors in each of the last five years, excluding those working for agencies for which no data are kept centrally. [196065]

Mr. Lammy: Within my Department, temporary staff are defined as individual contract staff employed through an agency. They are used to fill vacancies in a wide variety of support roles.

My Department has a national contract for the provision of agency staff workers. This contract has been in place since 2001. Prior to 2001 agency staff data were not held centrally. Information regarding the number of agency workers provided to the Department under this contract is provided in the following table. Prior to 2001 agency staff data were not held centrally.

Information relating to workers employed through other agencies is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department uses agency workers to meet short-term requirements and in areas where it is difficult to recruit and retain staff.

UN Conventions (Channel Islands)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs when the United Nations Convention (a) on the Rights of the Child and (b) on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women will be extended to (i) Jersey and (ii) Guernsey; what commitments the authorities in the Islands have given to implement the necessary legislation; and by what date. [197182]

Mr. Lammy: The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women both cover areas where the Governments of the Crown Dependencies have domestic competence. The Insular Authorities in Jersey and Guernsey have both made a commitment to have the necessary legislation in place when it is practicable to do so. Once that legislation is in place the Insular Authorities may then request the extension of the conventions, that may be done by declaration.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Burma

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value of imports from Burma was in the first six months of 2004; and if she will break down the items imported by value. [196719]

Mr. Alexander: According to figures published by HM Customs and Excise, the UK's imports of goods from Burma in the first six months of 2004 were as follows:

Product	£000
Fish, (not marine mammals), crustaceans, molluscs, and aquatic invertebrates and preparations thereof	2,347
Vegetables and fruit	188
Cork and wood	454
Petroleum, petroleum products and related materials	8

Products are classified according to the Standard International Trade Classification (Rev 3).

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 27 October 2004, Official Report, column 1240W, on corruption, if she will make a statement on the issues surrounding the details and practical application of anti-corruption procedures which she will be seeking to resolve. [195961]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 8 November 2004]: ECGD wrote to its customers on 5 November 2004 advising them of the outcome of discussions with industry about the terms of its procedures to combat bribery and corruption. I am putting a copy of this letter in the Library of the House. Revised application forms, reflecting the procedures now being put in place in the light of these discussion, will be posted to the ECGD website (www.ecgd. gov.uk) on 8 November 2004 and will come into force from 1 December 2004.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 27 October 2004, Official Report, column 1242W, on the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD), if she will place a copy of the interim arrangements which the ECGD agreed with Airbus on anti-corruption procedures in the Library. [195962]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Two documents formed the basis of ECGD's interim anti-bribery and corruption arrangements in respect of this business. I have placed in the Library of the House:

i. A specimen application form

ii. The schedule to the application form

The existing anti-bribery and corruption provisions that applied to Airbus pre 1 May 2004 supplemented the aforementioned documents.

Electricity

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the security of electricity supply in the Vale of York. [196741]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I am arranging an investigation into one particular complaint with regards to a series of power cuts in the Green Hammerton parish council area in the Vale of York.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Health on the health effects of electricity pylons. [196744]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: None.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent research she has evaluated on the health effects of electricity pylons. [196745]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A comprehensive report was published on 31 March 2004 by the National Radiological Protection Board. The contents of the report and the accompanying advice to Government have been welcomed by Government and are being acted upon.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with National Grid Transco on the health effects of electricity pylons. [196746]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My officials and those in the Department of Health hold ad hoc discussions with National Grid Transco on issues that may have a bearing on possible ill health effects from high voltage overhead lines.

EU Emissions Trading Scheme

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the role of her Department is in respect of the EU Emissions Trading scheme. [196845]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs has the lead responsibility for the EU ETS.

DTI's role is to consider all aspects of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme (EU ETS) that impact on the energy and business sectors. This includes making sure that the competitiveness of UK industry is maintained and ensuring that issues affecting security of supply, energy prices and North Sea oil and gas production are taken into account.

In addition, DTI has the responsibility for the energy and carbon dioxide projections that form an integral part of the UK's National Allocation Plan under the EU ETS.

DTI has substantially contributed to policy development in relation to new entrants and closures.

DTI also supports the industry-led Emissions Trading Group and assists business on opportunities arising from emissions trading through UK Trade and Investment and the joint DTI/Defra Climate Change Projects Office.

Gas Network

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how her Department interprets the value for money criterion in terms of connecting communities to the mains gas network; what estimates her Department has made of the number of communities and households not connected to the network for whom cost-effective connection is possible; what sources of funding are available to extend the gas network; and what contribution her Department makes to this investment. [197069]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The economic viability of connecting individual communities to the gas network will depend on a wide range of circumstances. Over 1,200 clusters of more than 150 households lie within 2 km of a gas main. It is likely that the communities that could most economically be connected to the network would fall within this group. A wide range of funding sources is available to facilitate connections. These will also vary from community to community, but include the Energy Efficiency Commitment, Warm Front and the European Regional Development Fund and contributions from gas transporters and suppliers. The Department's Design and Demonstration Unit is working with local authorities and others to design, develop and deliver pilot gas extension projects as a model for further activity.

Nuclear Clean-up

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent initiatives she has taken in respect of co-operation on nuclear clean-up with the Russian Federation Atomic Energy Agency; and what resources have been committed to this collaboration. [197206]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK is a key contributor to the G8 Global Partnership against weapons and materials of mass destruction, which was established at the G8 Kananaskis Summit in 2002, where the Prime Minister committed up to $750 million over 10 years. Under this programme the UK is working in partnership with the Russian Federation and other international partners on a variety of areas including redirection of former weapons scientists, improving protection of nuclear and radioactive material, and nuclear clean-up and submarine dismantlement in North West Russia. The annual budget for the UK's programme is £32.5 million.

The UK's nuclear clean up programme in the Russian Federation is primarily focused on two major projects near Murmansk—the Atomflot facility where the UK is funding a storage site for spent nuclear fuel and Andreeva Bay, where we and other international donors are contributing to making spent nuclear fuel assemblies safe and secure. The UK has also funded the decommissioning of two Oscar class submarines at the Zvezdochka shipyard near Archangelsk and is an active participant in the Arctic Military Environmental Programme alongside Norway, the US and the Russian Federation. Negotiations are also under way on various other programmes where final decisions on funding have not yet been reached. The total UK contribution to these projects amounts to £19 million in 2004–05 and approximately £23 million in 2005–06.

In December 2004, the Department of Trade and Industry, jointly with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence, will publish a second Annual Report on the UK's programmes under the G8 Global Partnership, which will be placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Waste

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will ask the Chairman of the new Nuclear Decommissioning Authority to provide an estimate of the additional volumes of (a) low, (b) intermediate, (c) high level and (d) plutonium contaminated nuclear wastes that will be added to the current stockpiles of each of the radioactive waste categories as a result of the continued operation of (i) Thorp and (ii) the Sellafield Mox Plant. [196423]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is contained in the 2001 UK Radioactive Waste Inventory. This provides estimates of the additional volumes of wastes expected to be produced from Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant (THORP) and the Sellafield Mox Plant (SMP). Routine low level waste sent to Drigg is expected to total around 15,000 cubic metres. Around 5,400 cubic metres of conditioned intermediate level waste and about 400 cubic metres of conditioned plutonium contaminated material (PCM) is also estimated. Vitirfication will reduce future amounts of high-level liquid waste to around 280 cubic metres.

It has been the position since 1995 that all HLW from overseas reprocessing will be returned to BNFL's customers. The programme to return overseas high level reprocessing wastes is planned to begin in 2007–08.

Power Cuts

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the risk of power cuts in the UK this winter; what measures are in place to ensure such risk is kept to a minimum; and if she will make a statement. [196958]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government are committed to maintaining secure energy supplies—it is one of the four goals of the Government's energy policy as set out in the Energy White Paper, published last February.

A market-based approach is the best way of delivering energy security.

National Grid's assessment in their "Winter Outlook Report" is that there is enough electricity generating capacity to meet demand even in a very severe winter. The forecast plant margin is over 20 per cent., and it could rise further if generators bring more mothballed plant back into service.

Through the Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group (JESS), the DTI and Ofgem continually monitor developments in the market, and look for ways of helping the market to work effectively to deliver secure energy supplies. We also provide valuable information to market participants, which can help them to plan investment decisions.

However, we can never guarantee that supplies will always be 100 per cent. secure. Storms and their aftermath remain the most likely cause of disruption this winter. I have therefore sought assurances from the electricity distribution network operators that they have done everything which can be reasonably expected of them to maintain network resilience this coming winter; and that they are implementing the recommendations outlined in the Network Resilience Working Group report "Proposals for Improved Storm Performance for Electricity Distribution Networks", published last December.

Research and Development

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria are used to distribute grants for research and development to help (a) individuals and (b) small and medium-sized businesses to research and develop technologically innovative products and processes. [196776]

Nigel Griffiths: The criteria against which applications from eligible individuals and small and medium-sized businesses for grants for research and development are judged are explained in the guidance notes for applicants and are (i) the level of technological innovation and risk; (ii) the commercial potential; (iii) the background and experience of the applicant and business; (iv) wider aspects such as environmental and social impacts; and (v) the need for the grant.

Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the default rate was on Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme loans broken down by numbers of loans made, in each year since 1990; and what the cost to her Department was in each year since 1990. [197251]

Nigel Griffiths: The information is contained in the following table.

	Number of guaranteed loans	Number of loans defaulted/claims made	Net cost of claims (£)
1995–96	7,484	814	27,556,269
1996–97	6,942	1,642	33,728,325
1997–98	5,081	2,085	41,339,760
1998–99	4,482	1,957	33,984,344
1999–00	4,279	1,779	29,940,471
2000–01	4,312	1,531	25,190,429
2001–02	4,369	1,624	35,615,658
2002–03	3,616	1,690	40,725,825
2003–04	5,966	1,578	41,053,159

The numbers of claims made each year are made up from loans that could have been guaranteed any time during the previous 10 years. Therefore, it is inappropriate to make any comparison between the number of loans guaranteed and the number of claims made each year.

Figures are not available before 1995.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many loans have been guaranteed through the Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme in each year since 1997; what the value of these loans was (a) in total and (b) by sector; and what proportion was made to start-ups. [197252]

Nigel Griffiths: The following table shows the number of guarantees in the financial years 1997 to 2004 and their total value and the total number of guarantees to start ups and their value.

Financial Year	Number of guarantees	Value (£ million)	Number of guarantees to start ups	Value of guarantees to start ups (£ million)
1997–98	5,081	201.34	1,378	39.09
1998–99	4,482	188.80	1,209	37.62
1999–2000	4,279	205.99	1,180	40.34
2000–01	4,312	240.46	1,323	53.17
2001–02	4,269	254.69	1,286	53.857
2002–03	3,916	269.461	1,024	50.719
2003–04	5,966	409.258	1,850	42.205

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what value of loans were made through the Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme in each year since 1997. [197253]

Nigel Griffiths: The following table shows the number of guarantees in the financial years 1997 to 2004 and their total value.

Financial Year	Number of guarantees	Value (£ million)
1997–98	5,081	201.34
1998–99	4,482	188.80
1999–2000	4,279	205.99
2000–01	4,312	240.46
2001–02	4,269	254.69
2002–03	3,916	269.461
2003–04	5,966	409.258

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial provision her Department has made in respect of the Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme in each year since 1997. [197254]

Nigel Griffiths: The following table shows the financial provision for the Small Firms Loan Guarantee for the years 1997 onwards.

Financial Year	Provision (£ million)
1998–99	45.07
1999–2000	47.34
2000–01	41.09
2001–02	40.2
2002–03	43.28
2003–04	45.77
2004–05	58.7

Trinidad and Tobago

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when a Minister from her Department last visited Trinidad and Tobago; and what plans there are for a Minister from her Department to visit the islands. [195960]

Mr. Alexander: The last DTI Minister to visit Trinidad and Tobago from 31 October-4 November 2001, was the then Minister for Employment Relations, Industry and the Regions (Alan Johnson). There are currently no plans for a DTI Minister to visit the islands.

Unsolicited Calls

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints about unsolicited silent calls by commercial power diallers have been referred to (a) Ofcom and (b) the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Telephone Information Services by consumers in the past 12 months. [196948]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The information requested is as follows.

(a) The Office of Communications (Ofcom) has received 302 complaints from consumers about unsolicited silent calls since Ofcom became fully operational on 29 December 2003. It is difficult to estimate how many of these complaints involved commercial power diallers, as some consumers may not be aware of such equipment or be certain that it has been used to make the calls.

(b) The Independent Committee for the Supervision of Telephone Information Services (ICSTIS) has received no complaints during the past 12 months about unsolicited silent calls made by commercial power diallers.

Working Parents

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the percentage of people who are employed by small and medium-sized enterprises who are parents of children aged (a) under five and (b) over five. [196028]

Nigel Griffiths: This information is not readily available. I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Responsibilities

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2004, Official Report, columns 268–9W, on departmental responsibilities, what decision has been made on the sum to be earmarked from the existing Cabinet Office budget to meet the cost of appointing a separate Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. [197333]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 9 November 2004]: The costs of appointing a separate Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will be met from the existing Cabinet Office budget, and will be accounted for in the 2004–05 Cabinet Office Annual Report and Resource Accounts.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Analogue Spectrum

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimates of the market value of the released analogue spectrum available after digital switchover informed the Cost Benefit Analysis of July 2003; whether her Department has made subsequent estimates; and if she will make a statement. [194663]

Estelle Morris: The Cost Benefit Analysis model developed by Government economists for digital switchover does not make an estimate of the market value of the released spectrum. As is standard in CBA methodology, economists have used estimates of the value of the consumer surplus that would be created by the new services which use released spectrum. We made the simplifying and conservative assumption that the providers of the new services would cover their costs.

The assessment of the consumer surplus is based on estimates of consumers' willingness to pay, using evidence from a revealed and stated preference survey. Consumers are asked to value services, some of whose features are novel and potentially available only in the future. The results give estimates with a wide range.

The Cost Benefit Analysis of Digital Switchover published by DTI and DCMS in September 2003 and is available at www.digitaltelevision.gov.uk. This showed that the quantifiable benefits of switchover were in the region of £1.5—£2 billion in net present value terms for the central case. Further work to refine estimates of the costs and benefits of switchover continues. This includes incorporating the results of a fresh consumer survey undertaken in spring 2004. The updated cost benefit analysis will inform the decisions on how and when switchover should be implemented.

Church Building Stock

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to survey the state of church building stock; and what assessment she has made of church building stock's future repair needs. [196925]

Mr. Caborn: The Government currently have no plans to survey the state of the church building stock. However the Department does draw on work by individual denominations, such as the Church of England parochial return form, which is sent out annually to all Church of England parishes, and in 2003 asked for information about outstanding repair costs.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much expenditure her Department has incurred in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with press and public relations; and if she will make a statement. [195440]

Mr. Caborn: There was no expenditure by the Department on employing external consultants to deal with press and public relations in either 2002–03 or 2003–04. The Department's Promotions and Publicity Unit has spent £8,142 on a public relations consultant for the digital television project since April 2004.

The Unit has also recently appointed a public relations consultancy for the public information campaign on the switchover from analogue to digital television. This work has been budgeted for £100,000 and is expected to run until March 2005.

Departmental Advertising

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for her

Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197302]

Mr. Caborn: The only advertising activity undertaken by the Department since 1997–98 has been a short radio advertising campaign for the BBC Charter Review—'Your BBC Your Say'. The total costs were:

Production (including creative and administration)	3,225
Media (including administration costs)	12,907.36

Departmental Estate

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the properties occupied by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004, showing (A) for each and (B) in aggregate the area; and what in aggregate the annual rental value was. [196367]

Mr. Caborn: Since 1997 DCMS has disposed of two of its premises, at lease termination, and acquired alternative premises, so that direct aggregated comparisons are not possible. The rents paid for the premises vacated in 1999 are not now known. The two premises occupied in 1997 had floor areas of: 1,365.36 sq m and 8,744 sq m with rents of £507,500 and £3,437,397 respectively. In 2004 floor areas remained the same and rents of £507,500 and £4,015,000 are paid following rent reviews in 2002. The two premises acquired in 1999 have floor areas of 1,320.05 sq m and 1,840.45 sq m and rents of £488,000 and £408,062.52 respectively. The Royal Parks Agency properties, listed as follows, are all freehold, hence no rents are paid.

Greyhounds

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the increased rate of voluntary payments from bookmakers to the British Greyhound Racing Fund will (a) enable all retired greyhounds to be re-homed and (b) guarantee adequate funding for greyhound rescue centres. [196983]

Mr. Caborn: The Government do not have control over the use of the voluntary payments made by bookmakers to the British Greyhound Racing Fund (BGRF). We understand that the distribution of the increased payments, agreed between bookmakers and the sport earlier this year, has not yet been determined.

Places of Worship

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will establish a cross-departmental governmental group to consider the impact of policy proposals on churches and places of worship; and if she will make a statement. [196924]

Mr. Caborn: There are currently no plans to create a cross-departmental Government group.

However the Department is involved in cross-departmental discussions regarding the ecclesiastical built heritage and actively seeks to keep all relevant parties engaged when necessary.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the importance of places of worship in planning decisions. [196926]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport considers listed places of worship as part of the built heritage as a whole, and therefore the Department and Office of the Deputy Prime Minister regularly discuss the importance of places of worship, including the current Ecclesiastical Exemption Review.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the operation of the Listed Places of Worship Scheme. [196927]

Mr. Caborn: To date over £22.9 million has been distributed under the Listed Places of Worship Scheme, and almost 5,000 listed places of worship UK-wide have now claimed under it. The scheme was intended as an interim measure pending the outcome of the review, presently under way, of Annex H of the European Union's sixth VAT Directive, which governs which goods and services are permitted reduced rates of VAT. The UK Government are committed to trying to secure a permanent lower rate of VAT to apply to repairs and maintenance of listed places of worship as part of this review.

However, as the future of these negotiations is uncertain at present, the Chancellor announced in the March 2004 Budget that listed places of worship would be able to claim the full amount of VAT paid on eligible carried out on and after 1 April 2004. The scheme is currently due to continue until 31 March 2006.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the level of public funding for historic church buildings; and if she will make a statement. [196928]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no specific discussions with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the current level of public funding for historic church buildings. DCMS officials have met with Treasury officials to discuss the continuation of funding for the Listed Places of Worship Scheme.

Gambling

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what information she has collated on the number of problem gamblers in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland, (c) Northern Ireland and (d) each region of England. [197199]

Mr. Caborn: The available information is set out in "Gambling behaviour in Britain: Results from British Gambling Prevalence Survey", published by the National Centre for Social Research, which was summarised in the report of the Gambling Review Body (CM 5206).

Regulatory Compliance Costs

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the aggregate annual cost as measured by the regulatory impact assessments is of compliance with regulations introduced by her Department since 1997; [196570]

(2) what her latest estimate is of the total cost in a year of compliance with regulations for which her Department is responsible. [196571]

Mr. Caborn: All proposals which impact on business, charities or the voluntary sector require a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) which includes details of the costs, benefits and risks of the proposal. RIAs are subject to public consultation and copies of final RIAs are available from the House Libraries and on departmental websites.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many unpaid special advisers the Department has; what their names are; and which Government (a) bodies, (b) committees and (c) strategy groups each unpaid adviser (i) belongs to, (ii) advises and (iii) works alongside. [194055]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly) on 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1380W.

Sport Participation

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of children under the age of 18 who (a) play rugby, (b) play football, (c) play cricket and (d) take part in boxing. [197370]

Mr. Caborn: According to surveys undertaken in 2003, the numbers of children under the age of 18 who play rugby, football, cricket and take part in boxing are as follows:

	Number
Rugby	1,064,000
Football	4,593,000
Cricket	2,599,000
Boxing	4,519

Windsor Castle (Power)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost to public funds will be of the provision of two hydro-powered turbines at Windsor Castle. [196835]

Mr. Caborn: None: the cost of the provision of four small turbines, rather than two large ones, is being met by the electricity generating company.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Winter Fuel Allowance

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the annual cost of extending the winter fuel allowance to disabled people aged below 60 years who are in receipt of (a) middle or higher rate care and (b) the higher mobility component of disability living allowance. [196779]

Malcolm Wicks: The estimated annual cost of extending the winter fuel payment to disabled people aged below 60 years who are in receipt of either the middle or higher rate care component or the higher mobility component of disability living allowance is £235 million for 2004–05.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Age-related Macular Degeneration

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the prevalence of age related macular degeneration in the Province. [196249]

Angela Smith: Information on age related macular degeneration is routinely collected through current eye examinations to determine serious visual impairment.

Analysis of that information is undertaken by the Ophthalmology Department at the Royal Victoria hospital. It has advised that prevalence rates of macular degeneration in Northern Ireland are consistent with those elsewhere in Europe and the United States.

Prevalence rates are typically around 5 per cent. of those aged 60; 10 per cent. of those aged 70; and 20 per cent. of those aged 80 or over.

Anti-TNF Medications

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether there is an upper age limit for treatment with anti-TNF medications in the Province. [196250]

Angela Smith: There is no prescriptive upper age limit for treatment with anti-TNF therapies. However, local clinicians do take the age of the patient into account when considering whether the potential clinical benefits arising from treatment outweigh the risk of side effects. As individuals get older, there is an increased risk of serious infection in those with a longer duration of inflammatory disease, and where patients have complex medical histories.

The decision to prescribe an anti-TNF medicine is, therefore, a clinical one, which takes account of the specific needs of the individual and experience of use of these new products.

Asbestos

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the sites in Northern Ireland where (a) asbestos and (b) asbestos products can be legally disposed of; and what safety measures are in place at these locations to protect members of the public. [197068]

Angela Smith: There are currently no facilities in Northern Ireland for the disposal of asbestos or wastes containing asbestos. However there is one facility, a waste transfer station located in Belfast, which is presently licensed to accept asbestos waste, on a temporary basis, prior to onward movement for disposal in Great Britain. This facility operates under a waste management licence which provides conditions for the environmentally sound management of the wastes accepted at the site.

Autism

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland where in the Province autism early intervention teams (a) are operating and (b) will be introduced within the next 12 months. [196956]

Angela Smith: Within the Eastern Health and Social Services Board, there are teams with specialist skills and experience in Autistic Spectrum Disorders (ASDs) located in each of the Trust's Child Development Clinic structures, which are locality based.

There are diagnostic teams within the Northern Health and Social Services Board. Within the next 12 months, Homefirst Trust will be developing its team further to include post-diagnostic support.

Within the Southern Health and Social Services Board there is an area wide Attention Behaviour Communication Specialist Assessment Clinic and Early Intervention (ABC) Clinic. The Board hopes to strengthen this clinic within the next 12 months with additional intervention workers and also associated training for professional and parents.

The Western Health and Social Services Board has been developing plans for enhancing diagnostic and assessment services during 2004/05 and 2005/06. The Board has also funded PAPA to employ, from 1 March 2004, an early intervention worker to pilot early intervention service.

Aviation

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in developing an aviation strategy for Northern Ireland. [197067]

Mr. Spellar: The Government's policy in relation to the future of air transport in Northern Ireland was set out in the Air Transport White Paper published in December 2003.

Back Pain

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his most recent estimate is of the number of days lost from work in a year in the Province as a result of back pain. [196352]

Mr. Gardiner: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer I gave on 7 June 2004, Official Report, columns 138–39W. A more recent estimate is not available.

Breast Radiologists

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to increase the number of breast radiologists (a) in the Northern Board Area and (b) elsewhere in the Province. [196349]

Angela Smith: Staffing is the responsibility of Health and Social Services Trusts, taking into account factors such as service needs and available resources. Nevertheless, the Department reviews the Consultant medical workforce, across all hospital-based specialties, annually and this informs decisions on the number in training. The requirement for breast radiologists is taken into account in this process.

In recognition of the demand for radiologists, the number of specialist trainees has been increased from 20 in 1999 to 34 in August 2004, out of which it is expected that two breast radiologists will be available within the next year.

Civil Service

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will take to ensure that services will not be adversely affected by the proposed cuts in Civil Service jobs announced on 12 July. [196520]

Mr. Pearson: The proposed reduction in Civil Service numbers is part of the Government's wider efficiency agenda. The question of any adverse impact on services does not apply, as the key aim of the efficiency agenda is to redirect resources to priority front line areas, and thus enhance the quality of public services.

Consultant Pain Sessions

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many regular consultant pain sessions took place at each hospital in the Province in the last period for which figures are available. [196354]

Angela Smith: Information on the number of regular pain sessions held is not collected centrally. However, the number of clinics held during 2003–04 in the anaesthetics and pain management specialties are as follows:

Number of outpatient clinics held for the anaesthetics specialty by hospital during 2003–04

Hospital	Number of clinics held
Causeway hospital	16
Mater Infirmorum	80
N.I. total	96

Number of outpatient clinics held for the pain management specialty by hospital during 2003–04

Hospital	Number of clinics held

South Tyrone	35
Tyrone County	33
Ulster	214
Whiteabbey	12
N.I. total	1,018

Notes:

1. Figures for the anaesthetic and pain management specialties have been provided. The treatment of pain can be classified as either of these specialties according to the contract of the consultant providing the treatment.
2. Data for 2003–04 is provisional and may be subject to change.

Consultant Radiologists

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland during which periods in the last 10 years there have been vacancies for consultant radiologist posts in the Northern Board Area. [196347]

Angela Smith: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Number of vacancies for consultant radiologist posts in the Northern Board Area each year since 1999

Year[1]	Total number (part year or full year)
1999	2
2000	7
2001	6
2002	3
2004	5

[1] United Hospitals Group HSS Trust are only able to trace figures back to 1999. Their Personnel Department moved location and installed a new computer package in 1999. Old records were not kept. Manual recruitment files are only retained for three years.

Decommissioning

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress there has been towards decommissioning of arms in the last 12 months. [196184]

Mr. Pearson: There have been four acts of decommissioning to date. The latest act occurred on 21 October 2003, when the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning (IICD) reported that it had witnessed a third event in which IRA weapons were put beyond use. What progress there has been since is a confidential matter between the IICD and those interlocutors representing both republican and loyalist organisations.

Dentistry

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what dental provision is available to the public outside normal working hours and at weekends in Northern Ireland. [196252]

Angela Smith: General Dental Practitioners providing health service dentistry have a contractual obligation to ensure that a registered patient has access to urgent treatment outside of normal surgery hours. In addition, Health and Social Services Boards have arrangements to provide out of hours emergency dental services for all patients at times when dental surgeries would not normally be open.

Doctors

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of (a) people living in the Province who are medical graduates and (b) whole-time equivalent doctors working within the NHS in the Province. [196261]

Angela Smith: The information requested regarding the number of people living in Northern Ireland who are medical graduates is not available.

The number of whole-time equivalent doctors working within the NHS at 30 September 2004 are detailed in the following table.

Doctors Working within the NI HPSS	2,975.37
GPs	983.75

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the financial situation of (a) the South East Education and Library Board and (b) the Belfast Education and Library Board. [195511]

Mr. Gardiner: Both boards have confirmed that they overspent their financial allocations for 2003–04. The South Eastern Education and Library Board has recorded, in its accounts for 2003–04, a deficit of £5.6 million. The figure for the Belfast Education and Library Board is expected to be confirmed at £5.4 million.

Both boards were asked, as a matter of urgency, to bring forward plans setting out the actions that would need to be taken to ensure that expenditure in the current financial year is contained within the budgetary limits voted by Parliament. I have now received these plans and will examine them carefully to assess the impact that the proposed actions are likely to have.

I remain concerned about standards of financial management and control in both boards. That is why I am today announcing an inquiry into the financial position in both boards. The inquiry will focus on the financial controls in place in each board and on how each board has discharged its responsibilities, including those responsibilities that fall personally to its designated Accounting Officer.

Dr. Bill Jack, the former Comptroller and Auditor General for Northern Ireland, has agreed to lead this inquiry. I believe that his experience, independence and expertise will ensure a fair and thorough process. To help him in his work, we have decided that this should be a Statutory Inquiry, thus allowing Dr. Jack full powers to access all relevant documentation and information. I envisage that findings from this inquiry will be available very early in the new year.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) the budgeted expenditure and (b) the actual expenditure out-turn was for each education and library board in each of the last four years. [195512]

Mr. Gardiner: The available information, taken from the published Statements and Summary of the Education and Library Boards' Accounts for 2000–01, is set out in the table. A number of outstanding issues remain to be resolved with the Comptroller and Auditor General in respect of various Boards' accounts for subsequent years, hence Statements and Summary of the Education and Library Boards' Accounts for those years are not yet available.

[1] The excess of expenditure over allocation relates to an increase in non-teaching pension costs for which a provision has been created during the year.

[2] The excess of expenditure over allocation relates to capital expenditure and is explained by the fact that, due to the changeover from cash-based to resource-based accounts, the expenditure figures are based on accrued spend whilst the allocation was on a cash basis.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements he has put in place to ensure good quality financial controls at education and library boards. [195514]

Mr. Gardiner: In common with all public bodies, education and library boards are expected to have in place robust and effective financial control arrangements. Those arrangements are based on model guidance from the Department of Finance and Personnel and set out in each board's Financial Memorandum. It is also the personal responsibility of chief executives as accounting officers to ensure the effective maintenance and operation of these financial controls and to ensure that approved expenditure is contained within the authorised budget.

Given the occurrence of overspends in two boards and wider concerns about financial control arrangements, I have decided to commission a wider review of education and library boards' resource budgeting and accounting and financial control, monitoring and reporting arrangements. This review, which has now begun, will run alongside the work I have asked to be undertaken by the South-Eastern and Belfast Boards to tackle the systems and other weaknesses that contributed to the overspends and to their late discovery.

Enviromental Heritage Service

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) facilities and (b) assistance are available at properties under the control of the Environmental Heritage Service in Northern Ireland for the admission of visitors with mental and physical disabilities. [196915]

Angela Smith: Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) manages over 250 sites. These include monuments in state care or guardianship, country parks and nature reserves.

At the major sites, there are visitor centres, at which visitors with mobility difficulties have access to reception and exhibition areas, classrooms, lecture theatres, toilets and cafes. Some stretches of the paths at each country park are accessible to wheelchairs. At some of these sites special facilities have been provided. These include a special trail for the visually impaired at Roe Valley Country Park, mobility scooters at Crawfordsburn and Roe Valley Country Parks, and a narrow-gauge railway at Peatlands Park, which can take people with disabilities. A stair-lift takes visitors to the upper floor of Bellaghy Bawn, and one is planned for the keep at Carrickfergus Castle. A new ferry, capable of taking people with mobility difficulties to the monastic site on Devenish Island, is to be in place by Easter 2005.

The staff who assist visitors at EHS's most popular sites receive formal training in customer care and disability awareness. Individual tours, tailored to the requirements of visitors with special needs, are provided by educators and tour guides at all major visitor attractions.

However, given the nature and location of some of the minor EHS properties, it is not possible to provide access to all sites for people with mobility difficulties.

EHS is carrying out a disability audit of its main priorities to identify any improvements which could be made.

External Terrorism

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to protect the Province from the threat of external terrorism. [196186]

Mr. Pearson: The Government are committed to the fight against terrorism, whatever its origin. Since the terrorist attacks in the USA on 11 September 2001, the Government and their partners have been completely overhauling arrangements to protect the UK, working both to help prevent terrorist attacks wherever possible, and to minimise the impact of an attack. Northern Ireland is fully involved in that programme where appropriate.

Foetal Alcohol Syndrome

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the prevalence of foetal alcohol syndrome in the Province. [196254]

Angela Smith: It is not possible to provide data in the manner requested that will enable a statement on the prevalence of foetal alcohol syndrome (FAS) in Northern Ireland to be made as there is no database or registry of people in Northern Ireland with FAS.

Glycogen Storage Disease

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the prevalence of glycogen storage disease is in the Province; and if he will make a statement. [196350]

Angela Smith: The number of patients admitted to hospital in Northern Ireland with a diagnosis of glycogen storage disease is very low. Records held indicate three admissions in 2000–01, no admissions in 2001–02 and one admission in 2002–03.

General Practitioners

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the most common reasons for attending general practitioner surgeries in the Province. [196314]

Angela Smith: Information is not collected on the specific reasons why people in Northern Ireland visit their general practitioner surgeries and thus no assessment has been made of the most common reasons.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 510W, on general practitioner contract/services, from whom, and in what form he has received representations regarding the implementation of the new general practitioner contract in the Province. [196283]

Angela Smith: Representations have been made to the Department in the form of correspondence from the General Practitioners Committee (NI) of the BMA, Members of the Legislative Assembly, the Royal College of Nursing (NI) and a small number of GP practices. A number of PQs have also been raised by hon. Members. Some of these representations have been received since my previous reply to the hon. Lady on this matter on 18 October.

In addition, the Department has held regular meetings with representatives of the General Practitioners Committee (NI) on matters concerning implementation of the new general practitioner contract.

Hazardous Waste

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his answers of 27 October 2004, Official Report, columns 1261–62W, on hazardous waste, what assessment has been made of the sources of illegal special waste being dumped in Northern Ireland; if he will list the nature of the special waste being dumped; and what action is being taken to prevent future incidences of the illegal dumping of special waste. [197071]

Angela Smith: The majority of special waste illegally deposited is the residual material produced from the illegal laundering of diesel with a small amount (less than 2 per cent.) of waste asbestos accounting for the remainder.

Given the very nature of the waste and the way in which it is deposited (fly-tipped usually at night), it is difficult to trace the source. In most cases there is insignificant evidence or eye witness accounts to identify the culprit and hence pursue a prosecution.

The Department carries out a comprehensive programme of audits and inspections of those involved in the movement of special waste, including those producing special waste, the waste carriers and the facilities receiving the waste, to ensure compliance with the regulations. The Department also works closely with other Agencies, sharing information and intelligence.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients and what proportion of relevant patients had to wait (a) up to six months, (b) six to 12 months, (c) 12 to 18 months and (d) more than 18 months for hospital inpatient or day treatment in each of the last four years in (i) Northern Ireland, (ii) each health and social services board area and (iii) each health and social services trust. [195363]

Angela Smith: The most recent published waiting list data available shows the position at 30 June 2004. Data in the tables refer to the position at this date in 2004 and at the same date in the previous four years.

Note:
Data for 2003–2004 is provisional and may be subject to change. I have set a target for 2004–05 to reduce the number of patients waiting more than two hours in an A&E department between the clinician's decision to admit and admission to a ward by one third compared to 2003–04 levels.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time is for each speciality in elective surgery in each (a) health and social services board and (b) health and social services trust; what the equivalent figures for the last three financial years were; and if he will make a statement. [195424]

Angela Smith: Waiting list information is collected by time band. It is therefore not possible to calculate the arithmetic mean length of time waiting. It is however possible to identify the median or mid point waiting time band.

ICT Consultants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Department spent on outside information technology and communication specialist consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year. [191908]

Mr. Pearson: The 11 departments of the Northern Ireland Administration and the Northern Ireland Office spent £1,961,593 on information and communication technology consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year.

This investment was made to provide expertise and/or resource that was not available within the internal ICT resource.

The figure provided relates to specific ICT consultancy engagements. It does not include on-going and planned contractual arrangements between NI Departments and the private sector for operational ICT systems and services.

Intellectual Property

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to combat intellectual property crime in the last three years. [196171]

Mr. Pearson: The Police Service of Northern Ireland have had significant success in disrupting and frustrating those criminal networks involved in intellectual property crime and from 2002 have seized approximately £18 million of counterfeit and pirated goods. That important enforcement work is continuing.

Under the umbrella of the Organised Crime Task Force, the PSNI continue to work in partnership with industry and brand holders to identify illicit product, improve understanding of the scope of trademark and copyright law and to raise public awareness of the risks associated with the purchase of counterfeit goods.

Juvenile Justice Centre

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the required notice period is for Commissioners of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission to visit the Juvenile Justice Centre; whether they are allowed (a) unrestricted and (b) private access to young people at the centre; and if he will make a statement. [197025]

Mr. Spellar: There is no prescribed period of notice required for Commissioners of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission to visit the Juvenile Justice Centre and the degree of access to the young people in the centre would be commensurate with the accessed level of risk and subject to the consent of the young people and their parents.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the methods of restraint used in controlling young offenders at the Juvenile Justice Centre have recently been reviewed. [197070]

Mr. Spellar: This is an operational responsibility of the chief executive of the Youth Justice Agency of Northern Ireland (Bill Lockhart). He has advised me that the Director of the Juvenile Justice Centre has been invited to take part in a United Kingdom review on the use of restraint methods and will be meeting with colleagues across the UK to undertake this task.

Learning Disability

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the health concerns of those with learning difficulties are represented in health equity audits in the Province. [194524]

Angela Smith: In Northern Ireland means other than health equality audits are used to assess the needs of people with learning disabilities, including specially commissioned research, engagement with relevant non-government organisations, consultations on new policies as they are being developed, and equality screening and equality impact assessments carried out on existing and emerging policies.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety is currently implementing a strategy to develop community learning disability services to resettle long-stay hospital patients, prevent inappropriate hospital admissions and re-admissions, and focus hospital services on assessment and acute short-term treatment. The Independent Review of Mental Health and Learning Disability (NI) will shape policy and service development over the next 10 to 15 years. The report of this review is expected to be submitted to the Department early in the new year. This will contain a number of recommendations to address the particular health needs of people with a learning disability.

Mental Health

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of health and personal social services funding was spent on mental health services in each of the last five years. [196351]

Angela Smith: The information requested is as follows:

Percentage of health and personal social services funds spent on mental health services in Northern Ireland

Year end March	Mental health spend as percentage of total
1999	9.2
2000	9.0
2001	8.8
2002	8.6
2003	7.8

MRI Scanning

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on provision of MRI scanning in the Province; and what improvements are planned to such provision. [196348]

Angela Smith: There are currently nine MRI scanners available across the province: one each at Altnagelvin, Antrim, Belfast City, Belvoir Park, Craigavon Area, Royal, and Ulster hospitals and two at Musgrave Park hospital.

The new imaging centre at the Royal group of hospitals will incorporate a further MRI scanner. It is intended that this will be fully operational from April 2006. The Regional Cancer Centre at Belfast City hospital, due to open in early 2006, will also incorporate an MRI scanner.

MRSA

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the products used within the Province's health service to try to eradicate MRSA. [196255]

Angela Smith: Health and Personal Social Services organisations use the following products for the management of MRSA:

Products used for environmental and equipment decontamination	Products for hand decontamination	Products for eradication of MRSA carriage in colonised patients
Detergent and water	Liquid soap.	CX powder
Cream cleanser	Antiseptic skin cleanser	Corsodyl throat spray
Buffered hypochlorite	Alcohol hand rub	Mupirocin (Bactroban)
70 per cent. alcohol	—	Tricolasan 2 per cent., 0.3 per cent. (paediatrics)
Cidex OPA 0.55 per cent.	—	Hibiscrub antiseptic cleanser
—	—	Fucidin with polyfax
—	—	Aquasept skin cleanser
—	—	Chlorhexidine washes

For the treatment of MRSA infection, antibiotics would be prescribed as appropriate.

Organic Foodstuffs

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assistance is being offered to those engaged in the (a) growing and (b) distribution of organic foodstuffs in Northern Ireland. [196914]

Mr. Pearson: The Organic Farming Scheme (OFS) delivered by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development provides financial support to farmers during the period when they are converting their farm business from conventional to organic production. The scheme has played a valuable role in assisting some 75 producers to convert their farm business to help meet consumer demand for organic produce.

The Organic Farming Scheme is complemented by the Organic Farming (Conversion of Animal Housing) Scheme, which opened in December 2003. The Organic Housing Scheme provides a total of £2 million to assist organic livestock producers to convert existing animal housing to comply with organic standards.

An organic conversion information service is also available to all producers in Northern Ireland. Growers and farmers can avail of short courses provided by Greenmount Campus, College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise. Assistance with conversion planning and sector specific production issues is also available.

The Department is also seeking to establish an independently chaired Organic Lead Group, as per the first recommendation of the action plan published in "Organic Farming in Northern Ireland: A Development Strategy". This group, the membership of which will be drawn from the local organic sector, will facilitate the growth of the local organic sector and give strategic direction across a range of issues, including the production and distribution of organic produce.

Organised Crime

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on organised crime in Northern Ireland. [196181]

Mr. Pearson: The levels of organised criminality remain unacceptably high in Northern Ireland. The Organised Crime Task Force Threat Assessment, which was published on 11 May 2004, indicated that approximately 235 organised criminal gangs operate in Northern Ireland.

The partner agencies of the task force continue to have significant success against organised criminal gangs. Every seizure, arrest and conviction further disrupts and frustrates the efforts of organised criminal gangs and I pay tribute to PSNI, Customs and the Assets Recovery Agency for their on-going effectiveness and commitment to tackle this problem.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement regarding the Northern Ireland Organised Crime Task Force. [196179]

Mr. Pearson: The Organised Crime Task Force provides the strategic framework for the law enforcement agencies to share views on intelligence flows and operational details, and to agree priorities for tackling organised crime in Northern Ireland.

The task force is actively engaged with over 40 agencies and has formed significant links with the private sector to develop new initiatives in response to specific crime types. This is a clear example of effective partnership working at a local level.

Planning Service

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many full-time planning service employees there have been in each of the last 15 years. [196284]

Angela Smith: The information in relation to full time employees is only available for the period from 1996 when the Planning Service became an Agency of the Department of the Environment. It is set out as follows.

Financial year	Number of full-time staff in Planning Service
1997–98	363
1998–99	364
1999–2000	376
2000–01	420
2001–02	474
2002–03	524
2003–04	583
2004–05	645

Parades

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next intends to carry out a review of the regulatory framework for parades. [196180]

Mr. Pearson: The Government are currently reviewing the existing regulatory framework and will publish proposals shortly.

Psychiatric Beds

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1072W, on psychiatric beds, in what periods, since the number of child and adolescent psychiatry inpatient beds has been increased to its present level, it was not possible to operate on full bed occupancy as the result of insufficient staff being available. [196282]

Angela Smith: Since the number of adolescent psychiatric beds was increased in August 2002, the period in which it has not been possible to operate on full bed occupancy as the result of insufficient staff being available is from August 2004 to the present.

Smoking

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many recent representations he has received from groups and individuals seeking a ban on smoking in public places; who they were from; and in what form they were received. [196251]

Angela Smith: Since 1 January 2004, 17 representations have been received in support of a ban on smoking in public places, all in written form. A breakdown of the source of the representations is shown in the following table.

Category	Number
Political representatives	4
Health professionals	2
Local councils	4
Voluntary organisations	3
Statutory consultative bodies	1
General public	3

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what research he has evaluated into a putative link between passive smoking and cot death. [196253]

Angela Smith: United Kingdom and international research in this area links both prenatal maternal smoking and children's exposure to second-hand smoke (passive smoking) to a range of conditions including sudden infant death syndrome. However, the relative impact on the foetus of maternal smoking in pregnancy, and the infant through subsequent exposure to second-hand smoke remains unclear.

TREASURY

Economic Growth Projections

14. Mr. David: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the most recent growth projections for the British economy are. [197397]

Mr. Boateng: The Government last published forecasts for the UK and world economy in the Budget on 10 March 2004, with UK GDP projected to grow by 3 to 3.5 per cent. both this year and next. We will update our forecasts, as usual, in the forthcoming 2004 pre-Budget report.

Business Link

15. Ms. Keeble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on plans to change the tax status of Business Link organisations. [197398]

Dawn Primarolo: Changes to the way Business Link organisations deliver their services mean that an increased part of their service is being provided free of charge. This has implications for VAT. It is a basic principle of VAT that when an activity is provided free of charge there is no supply for VAT purposes and the supplier therefore cannot recover the VAT incurred on purchases.

Customs are currently working with the Small Business Service, Regional Development Agencies and Business Link organisations to put in place simplified arrangements to enable Business Link organisations to calculate their tax liabilities.

Start-up Companies

16. Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on start-up companies of section 22 of the Finance Act 2003. [197399]

John Healey: We are aware, from sector representations, that reform of the taxation of employee shares through schedule 22 of Finance Act 2003 has resulted in uncertainty of tax treatment for researchers in universities starting up spinout companies.

Officials are working closely with the sector to identify solutions that provide certainty of tax treatment. the Government are committed to creating a clear fiscal environment that enables public sector research establishments to grow companies based on their research.

Growth Forecasts (North-West)

17. Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes he has made to his forecasts for growth in the North West since this year's Budget. [197400]

Mr. Timms: HM Treasury does not produce economic forecasts for individual regions of the United Kingdom. However, I can report that the regional policies this Government has put in place to level up the performance of all regions to that of the best has seen the North West enjoying above UK average growth of GVA per capita in recent years and the highest employment and lowest unemployment since records began.

Employment

18. Mrs. Humble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to achieve progress towards full employment. [197401]

Mr. Timms: The Government's long-term goal is employment opportunity for all—the modern definition of full employment. Its aim is to ensure a higher proportion of people in work than ever before by 2010. The Government's strategy is set out in "Full Employment in Every Region", published alongside the 2003 pre-Budget report, and is based on maintaining macroeconomic stability and ensuring a dynamic and flexible labour market that equips people to adapt to change.

Indirect Taxation

19. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the change in the level of indirect taxation between 1997 and 2004. [197402]

Dawn Primarolo: In 1996–97, revenues from taxes collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise totalled £89.8 billion, equivalent to 10.7 per cent. of Gross Domestic Product. In 2003–04, the corresponding figures were £115.7 billion, or 10.4 per cent. of GDP.

The change reflects a combination of factors including strong economic growth and consumer spending, policy changes—including real-terms cuts in the duties on fuel and alcohol, and increases in tobacco duties—and successful efforts by Customs and Excise to measure and tackle losses from fraud, avoidance and non-compliance.

Workforce Skills

20. Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has held with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on the effects on the economy of developing workforce skills. [197403]

Mr. Timms: Treasury Ministers have regular dialogue with their colleagues in the Department for Education and Skills about a range of issues, including the importance of developing the skills of the workforce.

Third World Debt

21. Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met G8 leaders to discuss progress towards reducing Third World Debt. [197405]

Mr. Timms: At the Annual Meetings of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund in Washington, donors agreed to work together to extend the HIPC initiative for a further two years. This will enable another 10 countries to benefit from over $30 billion of debt relief, freeing up resources which can be spent on health and education and the eradication of poverty.

G8 Finance Ministers have been asked to report back by the end of the year on additional measures that can further help developing countries address the sustainability of their debt, including the UK's decision to provide our share of up to 100 per cent. cancellation of multilateral debt for the poorest countries.

Climate Change

22. Miss McIntosh: To ask The Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the role of economic instruments in tackling climate change and global warming. [197406]

John Healey: The Government have introduced a number of economic instruments to help tackle the challenge of climate change—including the climate change levy, enhanced capital allowances, and the reform of company car taxation. The role of economic instruments in tackling environmental challenges was set out in "Tax and the Environment: using economic instruments", published alongside PBR2002. The Government continues to explore options for using cost-effective economic instruments, alongside other policies, to tackle climate change and global warming, taking into account all social, economic and environmental objectives.

Millennium Goals

23. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been achieved in meeting the millennium goals. [197407]

Mr. Timms: The world is on track to meet the poverty reduction goal. Progress towards the other seven goals varies. On current rates of progress, Sub-Saharan Africa will not meet any of the goals by 2015. For this reason, the Prime Minister set up the Commission for Africa to generate further international action on Africa. The Government are also seeking to raise the finance needed to meet the Millennium Development Goals, through the International Finance Facility.

G7 Presidency

24. Clive Efford: To ask The Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the economic objectives of the UK's presidency of the G7. [197408]

Mr. Timms: The Government sees the UK's Presidencies of the G7 and the EU in 2005 as an opportunity to develop consensus for, and action towards, the appropriate responses to the challenges and opportunities of today's global economy.

This includes: a greater focus on development to ensure that the world's poorest can share in rising prosperity; structural economic reform in the developed world to increase flexibility; and ensuring that we have the correct structures and institutions in place to deal with these challenges and opportunities.

Drug-related Deaths

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many drug-related deaths were recorded in England in the last five years. [196443]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 9 November 2004]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 11 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many drug-related deaths were recorded in England in the last 5 years. (196443)

Available figures are related to deaths from drug poisoning, not on the number of deaths which were drug-related. The most recently available information is for deaths in 2002. Figures are shown in the table below for the calendar years 1998 to 2002.

Number of deaths from drug-related poisoning[1], England, 1998 to 2002[2]

	Number
1998	2,753
1999	2,788
2000	2,772
2002	2,507

[1] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 292, 304, 305.2-305.9, E850-E858, E950.0-E950.5, E962.0 and E980.0-E980.5 for 1999 and 2000, and the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-IO) codes FII-F16, FI8-F19, X40-X44, X60-X64, X85 and YJO-Y14 from 2001 onwards.

Gambling

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what meetings (a) he, (b) his departmental Ministers and (c) advisers and officials have held with representatives of (i) Sun City International, (ii) MGM Mirage, (iii) Mandalay Resort Group, (iv) Kerzner International, (v) Las Vegas Sands, Inc., (vi) Harrah's Entertainment, (vii) Caesar's Entertainment and (viii) other foreign casino firms; what the (A) dates and (B) venues of the meetings were; and which individuals were present; [193763]

(2) which (a) UK and (b) international organisations have submitted written representations to the Department concerning the Government's proposals for changes to legislation on gambling; and on what dates each representation (i) was received and (ii) was given a substantive response; [194512]

(3) on what dates (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the Department have held meetings with representatives of the UK gambling industry to discuss proposed changes to legislation on gambling. [194516]

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the occasions on which (a) he and (b) other Ministers in his Department have met representatives of (i) US casino operators, (ii) British casino operators and (iii) casino operators from other countries to discuss gambling issues, broken down by date of meeting. [195071]

John Healey: The Chancellor keeps all taxation under review. As part of policy development and analysis, Treasury Ministers and officials receive representations from, and have meetings with, a wide range of organisations and individuals, including the gambling industry. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the "Ministerial Code" and the "Civil Service Management Code".

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the overseas visits made by (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the Department in relation to proposed changes to legislation on gambling; what the itinerary was for each visit; how long each visit lasted; which hotels were used; what the cost was in each case; and how each visit was funded. [194543]

John Healey [holding answer 1 November 2004]: Since 1999 this Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

An official of HM Customs and Excise visited France in connection with the proposed changes to legislation on gambling. The cost of the visit was met by the Department.

Physical Activity

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average level of physical activity (a) including and (b) excluding walking was in each region for each year in which the General Household Survey has been published since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [197365]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Don Foster, dated 11 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the average level of physical activity including and excluding walking in each region for each year in which the General Household Survey has been published since 1990. (197365)

The General Household Survey, carried out by the Office for National Statistics, periodically publishes participation rates in at least one sport, game or physical activity (including and excluding walking). The latest available estimates are for the 2002 survey. The attached tables show participation rates in the 4 weeks before interview for:

(a) Government Office Region, 2002;

(b) Standard Region, 1996;

Unfortunately, regional analyses for 1990 to 1993 are not readily available.

In England, adults living in the North, West Midlands and Yorkshire and Humberside regions were the least likely to have taken part in some sport or physical activity during the four weeks before interview (57%, 59% and 61% respectively) and those living in the South West, East Anglia or the two South East regions outside of London were the most likely to have participated (66%, 67%, 68% and 67% respectively). Adults living in Scotland also had high participation rates (66%) compared with England (64%) and Wales (63%).

Scotland had the highest participation rate at 62% compared with 58% in England and 57% in Wales. In England, adults living in the South West were more likely than those in other regions to have participated in at least one activity excluding walking (50% compared with 37% to 46% for other regions in England).

As with any sample survey, estimates from the General Household Survey are subject to sampling variability.

For 2002 the weighted base (000's) shown is the base for percentages. Bases for earlier years are of similar size and can be found in GHS reports for each year.

Hospices (VAT Relief)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2004, Official Report, column 580W, on hospices (VAT relief), on which purchases hospices can benefit from specific VAT zero rates. [193727]

Dawn Primarolo [pursuant to the reply, 27 October 2004, Official Report, c. 1295 W]: I very much regret that the opening sentence of my earlier answer inadvertently contained information that was incorrect. It should have read:

The construction of a new building for use as a hospice and the first sale of a hospice converted from an existing non-residential building is VAT zero-rated.

I apologise for this mistake.

Voluntary Sector Funding

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on funding for the voluntary sector. [197404]

Mr. Boateng: Government funding represents a significant proportion of overall revenue for the voluntary and community sector, and is rising in absolute and percentage terms. The Home Office plans to publish a report on central Government funding for the voluntary sector at the end of November.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Ex-Members

Tom Cox: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what facilities an ex-Member of the House of Commons who holds an ex-Member's pass is able to use within the Palace of Westminster; and if he will make a statement. [196730]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: An ex-Member's pass allows the holder to use the Terrace Cafeteria and the Strangers' Bar and, on Monday lunchtimes only, the Members' Dining Room (the smaller of the two) in the House of Commons.

Green Travel Plan

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what plans he has to introduce a green travel plan for the parliamentary estate to include hon. Members. [196982]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Travel arrangements made by hon. Members to or from the parliamentary estate are not primarily the responsibility of the House of Commons Commission. Cycle parking facilities are provided on the estate for hon. Members, their staff and staff of the House of Commons. In the past year, former Member's car parking bays in Star Chamber Court have been converted into cycle parking racks, and additional racks have been provided outside 7 Millbank.

WALES

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196602]

Mr. Touhig: None.

Departmental Publications (Accessibility)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what proportion of publications issued by his Department are available in (a) Braille, (b) autoprint, (c) large print and (d) easy read format. [194301]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office has never been requested to provide any of its publications in any of these formats. In the event that such a request was received, the Office would endeavour to meet it.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each year since 1997. [191423]

Mr. Touhig: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Secretary of State for Wales to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 21 January 2003, Official Report, column 73W.

The Wales Office was established on 1 July 1999. The Wales Office does not sponsor any agencies or non-departmental public bodies.

Since this time, there has been no reported theft or fraud against this office.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of the staff in his Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196126]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: I refer the hon. Member for Buckingham to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 619W.

Development Awareness Fund

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding his Department has spent on the Development Awareness Fund. [197201]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Since 1998–99 a total of £27.6 million has been spent on the Development Awareness Fund.

	Amount spent (£ million)
1998–99	1.5
1999–2000	3.0

Nigeria

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions the Government have had with the Nigerian Government on the implementation of the UK's Country Assistance Plan in Nigeria. [197202]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development has carried out extensive consultations on the new Nigeria Country Assistance Plan (CAP) with the Nigerian Government, both at federal and state level. We have also consulted widely with the private sector and civil society organisations. Discussions have included the Minister of Finance, the Chief Economic Adviser to the President, other members of the Economic Reform Team, the National Planning Commission, the Nigerian High Commission in London, and various federal Government agencies. State and local governments were consulted in a series of meetings held across the country. I personally met with a range of government representatives during my visit to Nigeria in September.

We will continue to work closely with our Nigerian partners in Government, Civil Society, the Private Sector and the Nigerian Diaspora as we move to implement the new CAP.

I will arrange for a document entitled "Report on the Outcomes of DFID Nigeria's CAP Consultation with Key Stakeholders in Nigeria and the UK" to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

CHP

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received on the new energy efficiency commitment being used to stimulate the market for micro-combined heat and power and domestic heat pumps. [195183]

Mr. Morley: The consultation exercise on proposals for the Energy Efficiency Commitment after 2005 received a number of suggestions for the inclusion of an incentive for innovative technologies. The consultation period closed on 13 August. Following the formal consultation process, we received a number of representations from Members of Parliament in support of a specific amendment to the Order. They hoped that their proposal would assist the promotion of new energy efficient technologies, such as domestic heat pumps and micro combined heat and power.

We have been considering all suggestions as part of the development of the draft legislation for the next phase of the Energy Efficiency Commitment to be laid before Parliament shortly.

Coastal Defences

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport and (b) English Heritage concerning the weighting given to heritage in the calculation of need for coastal defences. [193493]

Mr. Morley: I have had no direct discussion on this issue with my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport.

However English Heritage, as the Government's statutory adviser on matters concerning the conservation of England's historic built environment, was consulted during development of guidance on environmental appraisal of flood and coastal defence projects and of the scoring system for prioritising such projects for Defra grant aid. English Heritage is also represented on Defra's Stakeholder Forum to inform the Government's new Strategy for Flood and Coastal Erosion Risk Management.

Economic justification for proposed defences should as far as possible take into account benefits arising from protection of all assets, including heritage assets. Higher benefits in relation to costs will tend to increase a proposed project's priority score and, additionally, a specific allowance is made for protection of heritage assets in the scoring system. It is important to note that the priority scoring system does not attempt to determine the need for defences in an absolute sense but to prioritise proposed projects so that finite funding is allocated to best effect nationally.

Cattle Farming (Payments)

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been paid out under (a) the Beef Special Premium Scheme, (b) the Suckler Cow Premium Scheme, (c) the Slaughter Premium, (d) the Over 30 Scheme and (e) the Beef National Envelope in each county in England in 2003–04; and if she will make a statement. [193847]

Alun Michael: The total amount paid out under the (a) Beef Special Premium Scheme (BSPS), (b) Suckler Cow Premium Scheme (SCPS), (c) Slaughter Premium Scheme (SPS), (d) Over 30 Month Scheme (OTMS), and the (e) Beef National Envelope (BNE) for each county in England for the 2003 scheme year is as detailed in the following table:

Consultants/Advisers

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of her annual departmental budget was spent on the payment of professional advisers and private sector consultants in each year since June 2001. [197223]

Alun Michael: Details of expenditure on professional advisers and private sector consultants since June 2001 are not held centrally.

For the financial year 2003–04, the Department spent £45 million on externally provided professional services, approximately 10 per cent. of core departmental expenditure on goods, services and works.

Mr. Yeo: T[illegible] the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and R[illegible]ffairs how many of the private sector consultants a[illegible] professional advisers employed by the Department since June 2001 are former civil servants; and, of those, how many were previously employed by her Department and its predecessor. [197224]

Alun Michael: The information requested cannot be provided as the Department does not keep records of the employment of staff after they leave the Department. The criteria for the selection of professional service providers in Defra are eligibility, economic and financial standing, and the ability and technical capacity to provide the services required at best whole life cost.

Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the UK defines a specialist private keeper when processing Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species importation applications for primates; and if she will make a statement. [196415]

Mr. Morley: This is not an expression defined by CITES or used by the UK CITES management authority.

Dairy Farming

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average dairy farm income in (a) England and (b) Lancashire was in the last period for which figures are available. [194624]

Alun Michael: In 2002-03 the average net farm income for dairy farms in England was £18,300 and for the north-west Government office region £16,800. There are insufficient farms in the sample to quote county levels of income by farm type for Lancashire. Net farm income is the return to the principal farmer and spouse for their manual and managerial labour and to the tenant-type capital of the business.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) dairy cows and (b) dairy herds there were in the UK in each of the past 10 years for which records are available. [196688]

Alun Michael: The following figures show the number of dairy cows and the number of holdings with dairy cows in England from 1994 to 2003.

	(a) Dairy cows	(b) Holdings with dairy cows
1994	1,897,024	25,830
1995	1,809,282	24,678
1996	1,783,327	23,798
1997	1,700,250	22,932
1998	1,642,636	22,316
1999	1,659,210	21,326
2000	1,575,320	20,094
2001	1,490,226	18,125
2002	1,462,155	16,897
2003	1,434,727	16,027

Notes:

1. Figures for the other UK countries fall under the jurisdiction of the devolved authorities.
2. Figures prior to 2000 show main holdings only. From 2000 onwards all holdings are included.

Departmental Expenditure

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will break down the budget set by her Department for public expenditure on the food industry and crops for financial years (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06 by programme. [196693]

Alun Michael: The Department's plans for public expenditure on food industry and crops for the two years 2004–05 and 2005–06 consist of the following programmes:

£ million

Programme	2004–05	2005–06
Support for Development of Arable Crops Policy	6.2	6.2
Plant Health	4.8	4.8
Plant Varieties and Seeds	1.8	1.8

Egg Imports

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the status will be of egg imports from other EU countries where the eggs are produced in conditions that would not meet the standards set for the welfare of laying hens in this country. [193929]

Alun Michael: Council Directive 1999/74/EC sets down standards for the protection of laying hens and all eggs produced in the UK or imported from other EU countries have to meet these standards.

World Trade Organisation (WTO) rules do not permit the prohibition of imports of goods on animal welfare grounds alone. Restrictions can only be applied where there is a threat to human, animal or plant health in the importing country. Restriction on trade of goods based on method of production is not permitted and would put us in breach of WTO rules.

Energy Efficiency/Targets

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to ensure that energy efficiency measures are implemented in the Government's Sustainable Communities Plans. [195189]

Mr. Morley: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister lead on delivery of the Government's Sustainable Communities Plans. Defra is working closely with ODPM at all levels to ensure that these plans encourage, among other things, an energy-efficient built environment. Low-carbon technologies, including CHP, changes to planning policy and building regulations, support for exemplary development schemes and research in the growth areas all have a role to play in this. Defra is also actively contributing to the development of the Code for Sustainable Buildings, to be demonstrated in the Thames Gateway and elsewhere.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when Government Departments will publish their plans detailing the actions they will take to deliver energy targets. [193824]

Mr. Morley: Under the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate, all Departments were required to publish their delivery plans (within six months for civil Departments, eight months for MOD) detailing the actions they will take to deliver energy targets. These energy targets were published in February 2004. Delivery plans should be posted on departmental websites and can be accessed via the framework website at http://www.sustainable≫development.gov.uk/sdig/improving/progressa.htm.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the committees (a) for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress and implementation of the directives on waste met, (b) on the directive on packaging and packaging waste and (c) for the adaptation to technical and scientific progress of the directive on the protection of the environment, and in particular of the soil, when sewage sludge is used in agriculture; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [193396]

Mr. Morley: During the Greek Presidency, which took place between January to June 2003, the technical adaptation committee (TAC) on waste met twice in Brussels on 15 January and 7 May. On 15 January, the committee voted to adopt a commission decision establishing component and material coding standards for vehicles pursuant to directive 2000/53/EC on end-of-life vehicles. This subsequently appeared in the Official Journal on 28 February 2003, and was transposed in the UK by the End-of-Life Vehicles Regulations 2003 (S.I.2003/2635).

No decisions were taken at the TAC meeting on 7 May, but there was preliminary discussion on a common system for demonstrating compliance with the recovery and recycling targets in the ELV directive.

The packaging and packaging waste committee met once during the Greek Presidency, on 29 January 2003, in Brussels. The committee's role is to exchange information on and progress harmonisation of related issues including data reporting by member states to the commission and marking of packaging.

The committee in relation to the Recycling to Agricultural Land Sewage Sludge Directive (86/278/EEC) did not meet during the Greek Presidency. Command Paper 6097 "Developments in the European Union, January to June 2003, the Greek Presidency" was laid before Parliament in January 2004 and is available at www.fco.gov.uk/commandpapers, and gives further information on progress during the Greek Presidency.

EU Registration, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she has taken to minimise the number of experiments that will need to be conducted on animals following the introduction of the EU Registration, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive. [196821

Alun Michael: Keeping animal testing to the necessary minimum is a prime objective of the UK Government in negotiating the REACH regulation. Our aim is to protect human health and the environment whil keeping bureaucracy to a minimum and keeping animal testing down both by use of alternative methods and by avoiding duplicates. Our proposal for "one substance one registration" commands support because it is designed to meet all these UK negotiating requirements and discussions in Council Working Groups are continuing on that basis.

We welcome the fact that there is now widespread acceptance of the need to minimise animal testing. Concerns of the UK and others have led to several provisos being included in the legislative proposal to encourage maximum use of existing data, avoid duplication of testing and to require the use of alternative methods wherever possible and appropriate.

The Commission proposal includes a pre-registration phase which should allow for data sharing. There are also incentives to encourage consortia formation through sharing fees incurred in the registration process. The UK has proposed a mandatory system of "one substance, one registration" to ensure data sharing and decrease the burden on regulators, and this is currently being discussed in Council Working Groups.

The UK Government have in place a programme for work on improving animal welfare in research and in May 2004 we set up a New Centre for the Replacement, Refinement and Reduction of Animals in Research with a doubling of the budget for the current year to £660,000. The new centre will develop a UK strategy for the implementation of the 3Rs, fund high quality research that advances the 3Rs, provide advice on the 3Rs and animal welfare to the scientific community and work with regulators on the acceptance of alternative methods for regulatory toxicity testing. The work of the centre will help to reduce the animal experiments required under REACH.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate how many extra experiments will need to be conducted upon animals in each of the next five years as a result of the UK's implementation of the EU Registration, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals Directive. [196822]

Alun Michael: The UK Government's approach to REACH is to achieve the best possible outcome in terms of protecting human health and the environment while keeping both the bureaucratic burdens on industry and the extent of animal testing to the necessary minimum. REACH is currently under negotiation in Council and in the European Parliament and is unlikely to be agreed before 2006. Once agreed REACH will phase in existing substances over 11 years. REACH is still being negotiated and any estimate of how many experiments would be needed over each of the next five years could be misleading.

The information needed by REACH to provide the basis for protecting human health and the environment may come from a number of sources, of which animal testing is only one. The chemical industry already has some of this information while there are other sources of information such as mathematical modelling and read-across of data from one chemical to another which will reduce the number of new experiments that will be required.

Another factor that will lead to further reductions in the number of experiments that will be conducted under REACH is the significant amount of testing that has taken place internationally over recent years and is ongoing on high production volume chemicals (those produced or imported in quantities over 1,000 tonnes per year) that will not need to be repeated.

It is an overall objective for the UK Government, in negotiating the REACH Regulation, to ensure that animal testing is kept to the minimum necessary to protect human health and the environment.

We hope that our proposal for "one substance, one registration" will have significant impact in minimising animal testing and that meaningful estimates can be provided once the process of negotiation is complete.

Executive Agencies

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many full-time equivalent jobs (a) her Department and (b) its executive agencies had in (i) Yorkshire and the Humber and (ii) the City of York in (A) 1997 and (B) the latest year for which figures are available. [191850]

Alun Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State, Cabinet Office on 25 October 2004, Official Report column 1053W.

The information placed in the Library of the House did not include the Rural Payments Agency, which had 420 permanent staff in Yorkshire and the Humber on 1 April 2004. None of these staff were located in the City of York. Data is not available for 1997 as RPA was created in November 2001.

Extensification Payment Scheme

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the information requested in the "Extensification Payment Scheme 2004: Status of Subsidiary Holdings" is also available on pages 17 and 18 of Farm's 2003 Integrated Administration and Control System form. [193874]

Alun Michael: The information requested by the Rural Payments Agency in a letter entitled "Extensification Payment Scheme 2004: Status of Subsidiary Holdings" is not available in answers given on a producer's Integrated Administration and Control System application or any of the bovine scheme claim forms.

Fair Trade

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to ensure that hospitality within her Department is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [196656]

Alun Michael: We have introduced fair trade food and drink products into nine of the eleven Defra staff restaurants, including the Department's headquarters and a number of regional offices in Guildford, Reading, York and Crewe. At all of these sites the teas and coffees served as official hospitality are fair trade products.

The position in Defra generally is explained in a case study published on the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative web site. URL: http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/sustain/procurement/casestudies/tea-coffee.htm.

The web site also provides advice on fair trade considerations at http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/sustain/procurement/trade.htm, including a link to the Office of Government Commerce's "Guidance on Fair and Ethical Trading".

Flooding

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the latest position on the proposed flood defence scheme for the Silk Stream, Edgware and Colindale. [194851]

Mr. Morley: Main works at Prince Edward's Playing Field in Harrow are expected to be complete by December 2004 and work on the flood storage area in Summerhouse Lake is expected to start in April 2005. Construction to enhance flood storage at Stoney Wood Lake is expected to start in September 2005 subject to the availability of funds in the Environment Agency (EA)'s Capital Programme for 2005–06.

The EA's proposed Compulsory Purchase Order (CPO) needed for the new flood storage areas at Bury Farm and Edgwarebury Park is currently being implemented and a revised planning application for the proposed work will be submitted in December 2004. Subject to funding and the satisfactory resolution of any objections to the CPO, work is scheduled to begin at both sites in 2006.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what reports the Department has received from the Met Office about potential flooding in the UK during the coming winter. [196002]

Mr. Morley: The Department receives twice-weekly briefings on the flood risk outlook from the Environment Agency, which are based on forecast information that they receive from the Met Office. The Met Office does not claim to be able to make predictions of rainfall and other major meteorological drivers of flooding for more than about five days ahead.

Glass Container Industry

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of recent development of the glass container industry upon the industry's prospects for meeting the 2008 target for glass recycling under the EU Packaging and Packaging Waste Directive; and if she will make a statement. [194723]

Mr. Morley: No assessment has been made of the UK's ability to meet the Packaging Directive's glass target of 60 per cent. in 2008 following the recent developments within the glass container industry.

While the UK glass container industry alone is unlikely to have sufficient reprocessing capacity to deliver the glass target in 2008, there is work being carried out with Industry, WRAP and the Agencies to open up viable alternative markets for recycled glass in order to bridge the gap. The Department, in conjunction with the Advisory Committee on Packaging, is continuing to monitor progress on glass recycling closely and fully expects the UK to comply with the target in 2008.

Greenhouse Gases

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what progress the Government have made in meeting targets for emissions of greenhouse gases in the UK; [195980]

(2) what further plans the Government have for achieving a reduction in the output of greenhouse gases in the UK. [195964]

Mr. Morley: The UK remains on course to achieve its Kyoto target to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 12.5 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2008–12. Total UK emissions of greenhouse gases in 2003 are provisionally estimated to have fallen by 14 per cent. compared to 1990. Emissions of carbon dioxide for 2003 are provisionally estimated at about 7 per cent. lower than in 1990.

The UK climate change programme published in 2000 sets out the Government's approach to tackling climate change. It contains a framework of policies and measures intended to achieve the emissions reductions necessary to deliver the UK's commitment under the Kyoto protocol and move towards the 20 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions.

The Government recognise that additional measures may be needed to achieve the domestic goal of a 20 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions. The current review of the UK climate change programme aims to provide a comprehensive assessment of the progress that the Government and the devolved Administrations have made towards reducing greenhouse gas emissions since the programme was published in 2000 to see whether the UK is still on track to meet its domestic goal of reducing carbon dioxide emissions by 2010. If not, the Government will look carefully at whether to introduce new policies and measures, and/or strengthen existing ones. The review will also consider the action that the UK will need to take to ensure it is on course to make "real progress by 2020" towards the ambitious longer-term goal of reducing carbon emissions by 60 per cent. by 2050, as set out in the Energy White Paper.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she intends to take to reduce the loss of greenhouse gases from refrigerators during their lifetime; and if she will make a statement. [196075]

Mr. Morley: Most major UK manufacturers of domestic refrigeration now use hydrocarbon refrigerants. The refrigerant charge in domestic refrigerators is also hermetically sealed and therefore designed not to leak.

The EC proposal for a Regulation on certain fluorinated greenhouse gases includes a range of measures for the containment and recovery of these gases from commercial refrigeration. Political agreement was reached in October 2004.

Hunting

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the Government have to offer a payment to those affected by a ban on hunting; and whether this would apply if the individual were to emigrate. [193448]

Alun Michael: The Government have no plans to pay compensation to anyone affected by a ban on hunting.

Landfill

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what controls regulate the disposal of waste in landfill sites. [195972]

Mr. Morley: The disposal of waste to landfill is controlled by the Landfill (England and Wales) Regulations 2002 as amended by the Landfill (England and Wales) (Amendment) Regulations 2004. This legislation is regulated by the Environment Agency.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of waste in England was (a) sent to landfill sites for disposal and (b) recycled in 2003–04. [195973]

Mr. Morley: The Municipal Waste Management Survey of English local authorities, conducted annually by Defra, shows that 75 per cent. of municipal waste was sent to landfill in 2002–03 and 16 per cent was recycled. Audited data for 2003–04 are not yet available.

Figures for the amount of commercial and industrial and construction and demolition waste are not collected annually. However, the Environment Agency's National Waste Production Survey of a sample of 20,000 businesses, conducted in 1998–99, estimated that 50 per cent. of commercial and industrial waste was sent to landfill and 30 per cent. was recycled, while 35 per cent. of construction and demolition waste was recycled and 24 per cent. sent to landfill. A further estimated 41 per cent. of construction and demolition waste was used on landfill sites as day cover.

Leisure Boats

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the environmental impact of privately-owned leisure boats; and if she will make a statement. [195579]

Mr. Morley: Privately-owned leisure boats are subject to a range of general environmental legislation, specific statutory controls and good practice guidance designed to mitigate any harmful effects on the environment. These measures are developed through regular contact with relevant associations such as the Royal Yachting Association and the British Marine Federation.

Formal consultation is carried out with stakeholders to gauge environmental impacts and to ensure measures adopted take into consideration the studies carried out by agencies, navigation authorities, environmental groups and private bodies into specific aspects of leisure boat use.

In addition, work is carried out within Government Departments and through external consultants to gauge the impact of the leisure sector on the environment, for example the generation of marine litter washed up on the UK shoreline.

Litter

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the cost of dealing with litter (a) dropped and (b) wrongly disposed of during each of the last five years. [195965]

Alun Michael: It is not possible to separate costs for litter cleansing. These costs are included within the overall street cleansing figures. ODPM has provided the total expenditure figures on street cleaning not chargeable to highways, as follows:

1998–99	386
1999–2000	413
2000–01	448
2001–02	469

It is estimated that 2002–03 will be £492.45million.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department will increase penalties for people who drop litter on the streets. [195966]

Alun Michael: Yes. We have already made that intention clear and consulted on our proposals.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's strategy is over the next five years for dealing with litter on the streets. [195969]

Alun Michael: The recent Clean Neighbourhoods consultation set out a number of practical proposals for dealing with litter and improving the local environment everywhere in the country. We hope to take forward several of the measures contained therein through the earliest suitable legislative opportunity.

Recent pilots have resulted in a significant reduction in fast food litter and as a result we are currently finalising the Voluntary Code of Practice for "Food on the Go".

We have recently published the segmentation research into chewing gum droppers, at www.defra.gov.uk/environment/localenv/litter/index.htm. The research will inform a national campaign to target gum users to change the behaviour of gum droppers. The campaign will be launched in the summer.

All this work is underpinned by the annual Local Environmental Quality Survey of England, developed on the Government's behalf by ENCAMS. The survey provides the most precise picture we have ever had of the state of the local environment throughout the country.

The survey also enables us to accurately assess how successful the above measures are working on the ground.

Ministerial Expenses

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the running costs of Ministers' private offices in her Department have been in each year since 1997. [191385]

Alun Michael: The running costs of Ministers' private offices since Defra was formed in June 2001 are:

Financial year	Amount (£)
2001–02 (part year)	943,101
2002–03	1,194,162
2003–04	1,064,083

These figures incorporate the staff and administration costs incurred, by financial year.

New Forest

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether back-up grazing land belonging to commoners of the New Forest is defined as land used for horses for the purposes of the single farm payment scheme; and if she will make a statement. [194672]

Alun Michael: Any land held by commoners outside the area of the common, whether grazing horses or not, is potentially eligible for the single payment, subject to the conditions that generally apply.

Refrigerators

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of new sales of domestic refrigerators did not rely on hydrofluorocarbon technology in the last year for which figures are available; and what plans she has to phase out the use of this technology in domestic refrigeration. [194118]

Mr. Morley: Hydrofluorocarbon technology in domestic refrigerators has already largely been phased out in the EU.

All major UK manufacturers of domestic refrigerators now use hydrocarbon based refrigerants. A small amount of imported domestic refrigeration equipment uses hydrofluorocarbons.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the purpose is of the study on commercial refrigeration commissioned by her Department; [194125]

(2) whether her Department's study on commercial refrigeration is related to her objective of ensuring that the UK reduces its emissions of global warming gases. [194126]

Mr. Morley: This study is part of a larger piece of work intended to update data relevant to projections of emissions of fluorinated greenhouse gases. The study will review the relevant section of an earlier Defra commissioned report by AEA Technology.

The work will review the calculation methodology used in the emissions model, the activity and emission factors used, and the baseline assumptions concerning future market trends and developments (e.g. uptake of alternative fluids). The assumptions required for the emissions model will be clearly defined, and an estimate of uncertainties provided where possible. Industry and other stakeholders will be contacted during this task, and their views reported.

Regulation (Compliance Cost)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the aggregate cost of compliance with her Department's regulations was in the last year for which figures are available. [196559]

Alun Michael: All proposals which impact on business, charities or the voluntary sector require a Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) which includes details of the costs, benefits and risks of the proposal. RIAs are subject to public consultation and copies of final RIAs are available from the House Libraries and on departmental websites.

Rural Development

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will break down by programme the budget set by her Department for public expenditure on land management and rural development, including the Entry Level Scheme, other England rural development programme schemes and other schemes for financial years (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06. [196652]

Alun Michael: The budget profile and breakdown for the England Rural Development Programme (ERDP) in 2004–05 are shown in the following table. This is the full resource-based budget and relates specifically to the anticipated value of payments to be made to beneficiaries.

The agri-environment schemes are the Countryside Stewardship Scheme (CSS), the Environmentally Sensitive Areas scheme (ESA) and the Organic Farming Scheme (OFS). The Entry Level Stewardship budget of £2.0 million shown below relates to the ongoing pilot agreements only.

Defra has not yet concluded its formal business planning process for the 2005–06 financial year. Figures will be provided as soon as that process is complete. Subject to European Commission approval, a new agri-environment scheme called Environmental Stewardship (ES) will be launched in England in 2005 to replace the three existing schemes (CSS, ESA, OFS). Environmental Stewardship will consist of three separate elements: Entry Level Stewardship (ELS), Organic Entry Level Stewardship (OELS) and Higher Level Stewardship (HLS).

Agri-environment schemes are budgeted a year in arrears, which means that the expenditure reflects agreements signed in the previous year. Current planning assumptions about the expected rate of uptake to the Entry Level element of Environmental Stewardship suggest that by 2006–07 expenditure will be in the region of £132 million and will rise further thereafter.

In addition to the England Rural Development Programme budgets shown, Rural Development funding of £21.2 million in 2004–05 and £19.3 million in 2005–06 is also available under the Objective 1 Programme. This funding stream is directed to beneficiaries in the three, geographically defined Objective 1 areas in England: Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly, Merseyside and South Yorkshire.

ERDP 2004–05	Total (£ million)
Agri-environment schemes (ESA, CSS, OFS)	155.8
Entry Level Stewardship Pilot	2.0
Hill Farm Allowance	27.2
Rural Enterprise Scheme	30.0
Vocational Training Scheme	4.0
Processing and Marketing Grant	8.0
Energy Crops Scheme	1.4
Farm Woodland Premium Scheme	11.8
Woodland Grant Scheme	22.0
Total ERDP	262.2

Set-aside

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been paid out under set aside in each county in England in 2003–04; and if she will make a statement. [194815]

Alun Michael: The amounts paid out under set aside in each county in England for Arable Area Aid claims submitted in 2003 are set out in the following table. The figures for Arable Area Aid claims submitted in 2004 are not yet available as the payment window has not yet closed.

Sheep Payments

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was paid out under (a) the Sheep Annual Premium and (b) the Sheep National Envelope in each county in England in 2003–04; and if she will make a statement. [194415]

Alun Michael: The amounts paid out under (a) the Sheep Annual Premium and (b) the Sheep National Envelope in each county in England submitted in 2003 are set out in the following table. Payments were made during the payment window of 16 October 2003 to 31 March 2004. Over 97 per cent. of applicants received their Premium and Sheep National Envelope payments within the first two weeks of the opening of the payment window. The figures for claims submitted in 2004 are not yet available, as the payment window has not yet closed. However over 98 per cent. of qualifying applicants received their premium during the first few days of the payment window opening.

Single Farm Payment

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how payments under the single farm payment between 1 December 2005 and 30 June 2006 will be made; and when they will be made. [R] [193775]

Alun Michael: The European Regulations require payments for 2005 to be made between 1 December 2005 and 30 June 2006 and our objective is to make payments as promptly as possible within that period. Payments will be made by bank transfer in line with the way IACS payments are made at present.

Temporary Staff

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many agency temporary staff have been working for the Department or its predecessors in each of the last five years, excluding those working for agencies for which no data is kept centrally. [196053]

Alun Michael: The information requested is not held centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave on 22 April 2004, Official Report, columns 583–85 and column 588; and on 23 June 2004, Official Report, column 1427. Defra came into being in June 2001.

Waste Disposal/Management

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of London's waste was disposed of in Essex in the last year for which figures are available; and at which sites. [194915]

Mr. Morley: This information is not held centrally by Defra.

Information on the destination of waste for disposal is being gathered for the first time by Defra through WasteDataFlow, an online comprehensive waste data reporting system for local authorities introduced in April 2004, and will not be available until mid 2005.

The Greater London Authority and the Environment Agency may be able to provide an answer based on data held by them.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much waste in Somerset by (a) tonnage and (b) percentage was disposed of by (i) landfill, (ii) recycling and (iii) incineration since 1997–98. [195147]

Mr. Morley: Results from the Defra Municipal Waste Management Survey show the following municipal waste disposal routes for Somerset Waste Disposal Authority and North Somerset Unitary Authority. Both authorities reported no incineration over the period. Full results for Somerset are not available for 1997–98.

Results from the 2003–04 Defra Municipal Waste Management Survey will be available in early 2005.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the Department plans to develop the strategy for managing waste over the next 10 years. [195970]

Mr. Morley: The Government's strategy on waste is set out in "Waste Strategy 2000", published in May 2000. The Government outlined further plans in May 2003 in response to the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report "Waste Not, Want Not". The Government is committed to reviewing its strategy on waste in 2005. A small team has been established in the Department to take forward the review.

Water Framework Directive

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress in implementing the water framework directive. [196022]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 13 September 2004, Official Report, column 1582W.

TRANSPORT

Aviation White Paper

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a report on the action he has taken since the publication of the White Paper on Aviation to achieve the goals set out therein. [193081]

Charlotte Atkins: Following the publication of "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper in December 2003, we have been working to implement its policies and proposals and have already completed a number of specific actions. These include:

Removing the parliamentary passenger air transport movement limit (PATM) at Stansted airport so that it is regulated by the local planning authority, in line with other UK airports;

Issuing a consultation on night flying restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick, and Stansted airports;

Publishing guidance to airport operators on the preparation of airport master plans; Publishing a consultation on the protection of regional air services to London.

Airport Operators are also undertaking work to deliver the White Paper proposals. We expect them to publish outline master plan statements by the end of this year and full master plans by the end of next year. The first new runway in the South East should be at Stansted and BAA, the airport operator, is taking work on this forward.

We will report on progress made by the end of 2006.

British Transport Police

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions his Department has had with the British Transport Police on combating vandalism and anti-social behaviour at railway stations covering the Greater London area. [196533]

Mr. McNulty: Ministers and officials of the Department met the Chairman of the British Transport Police (BTP) Authority, Sir Alistair Graham, on 26 October for a wide ranging discussion on the work of the BTP. I also have regular meetings with the BTP Chief Constable, most recently on 10 November. I discussed with him the steps being taken by the Force to combat vandalism and anti-social behaviour at railway stations in the context of the Force's Annual Policing Plan.

Crossrail

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on funding of the Crossrail project. [197488]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement on Crossrail that the Secretary of State for Transport made on 20 July 2004.

Drivers (Regulations)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of the regulation of drivers of commercial and public vehicles on the jobs available in those areas. [197203]

Mr. Jamieson: The two key pieces of regulation affecting drivers of commercial and public service vehicles are the EU driver's hours rules (3820/85/EEC) and the new EU directive (2002/15/EC) regulating the working time of drivers. The drivers' hours rules were introduced in 1988 and the working time rules need to be implemented by 23 March 2005.

Last year we published a partial regulatory impact assessment on the impact of the new working time legislation. The assessment concluded that an extra 12,300 drivers (just over 2.5 per cent. of the current workforce) would be required.

Great Yarmouth (Outer Harbour)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to announce his decision on the outer harbour at Great Yarmouth. [197456]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government expect to be making a decision very shortly on whether public funding of the East Port project would be appropriate. The Secretary of State for Transport would then determine the outstanding application for an HRO in the light of that.

Railway Stations (Wheelchair Access)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment the Department has made of the recent judgment in the High Court in the case of Mr. Keith Rhodes, concerning wheelchair access at rail stations. [197415]

Mr. McNulty: We have been following the progress of this case with interest and will be considering the implications of the recent judgment.

Ship Inspections

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 6W, on ship inspections, whether the Marine Coastguard Agency is targeting ships for inspection in accordance with the criteria set by the Paris Memorandum of Understanding on Port State Control; and whether ships are being targeted on security grounds. [195693]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency is selecting ships for inspection in accordance with the criteria set by the Paris Memorandum of Understanding on Port State Control. The criteria does not include a security factor. Procedures are, however, in place to deploy duly authorised officers where security-related concerns have been identified.

Transport for London

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much funding his Department has given to Transport for London in each of the last three years. [197121]

Mr. McNulty: The Department has provided Transport for London with the following funding though the GLA Transport Grant over the last three years:

	£ million
2004–05	2,224.536
2003–04	1,681.932
2002–03	1,024.118

The increase in funding between 2002–03 and 2004–05 largely reflects the transfer of London Underground to TfL in July 2003.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

"Fit for the Future"

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made with the "Fit For the Future" programme. [194092]

Ms Hewitt: The "Fit for the Future" programme was, with a number of other best practice programmes, integrated into the new "Achieving best practice in your business" theme released in April. Replacing an array of schemes has allowed my Department to rationalise and simplify its support for the promotion and implementation of best practice, including offering direct grant support to SMEs.

The material in the theme helps provide ideas and insights into how businesses can improve performance in a range of areas, such as leadership, skills and E-Business. The material can be viewed at www.dti.gov.uk/bestpractice. There is also a range of free printed brochures that can be ordered from the DTI Publication Orderline on 0870 150 2500. Over 70,000 brochures have been ordered since launch in April. Both the website and brochures contain reports, guides and case studies, as well as a range of self-assessment tools. These have won an award of excellence at this year's "Communications in Business Awards".

Agency Temporary Staff

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many agency temporary staff have been working for the Department in each of the last five years, excluding those working for agencies for which no data is kept centrally. [196058]

Ms Hewitt: DTI currently has 135 full-time equivalent agency temporary staff. Prior to April 2004 agency temporary staff were aggregated with core service contractors and programme consultants for tracking purposes and so it is not possible to provide estimates of historic agency temporary staff numbers. However, a departmental snapshot in spring 2003 estimated the total number of full-time equivalent agency temporary staff to be approximately 350. Both quoted numbers are based on core DTI HQ and Small Business Service staff and exclude UK Trade and Investment.

Business Support

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry through which business support products her Department provides subsidised consultancy. [197250]

Nigel Griffiths: DTI's nine business support products take a variety of forms including grants, loan guarantees and subsidised consultancy.

Two of the nine business support products use subsidised consultancy as their means of delivering assistance to business. These are Grant for Investigating an Innovative Idea and Support to Implement Best Business Practice.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196148]

Ms Hewitt: My Department undertakes a wide variety of projects as part of on-going maintenance and improvements in its current stock. The cost of projects involving significant works to the building services and fabric for the last four complete financial years are as shown in the table. These figures relate only to the DTI headquarters London estate.

Financial year	(a) Decoration	(b) Refurbishment
2000–01	233	1,402
2001–02	Nil	4,321
2002–03	432	1,230
2003–04	79	2,058

Departmental Press Officers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many press officers the Department has employed in each year since 2003. [195408]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 1 November 2004]: The number of press officers employed in DTI in each year since 2003 is as follows:

As at 1 January	Number
2003	23
2004	19

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the staff in her Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196122]

Ms Hewitt: The Department collects disability data on a voluntary basis. The information tabulated as follows is extracted from our personnel records database and gives the position in DTI Headquarters as at 31 December 2003 respectively:

DTIHQ—Staff who have declared a disability as a percentage of total number of staff

	Percentage
(a) 2002	7.4
(b) 2003	2.1

Electricity

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new electricity pylons are planned to be constructed in (a) the Vale of York and (b) North Yorkshire in (i) 2004, (ii) 2005 and (iii) 2006. [196742]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government do not have this data as they do not centrally plan the electricity network. It is a matter for the network operators to bring forward proposals as the need arises and these will be subject to appropriate scrutiny under section 37 of the Electricity Act 1989.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the potential to construct new electricity cables in the Vale of York underground. [196743]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Under grounding new power lines is very much more expensive than putting them overhead, particularly at higher voltages and this may be reflected in electricity prices to the consumer. Technological developments are unlikely to change that equation in the immediate future. The network companies concerned will consider representations to underground all or part of proposed overhead line developments in working up the details of their proposals, and it is possible that underground cables may be appropriate in certain circumstances. But expectations must be realistic.

Employment Tribunals

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the reasons are for the removal of the Register of Employment Tribunal Applications from the public domain via the Employment Tribunals (Constitution and Rules of Procedure) Regulations 2004; and what representations she has received from (a) trade unions and (b) legal professionals on the subject. [195647]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government carried out a full and open consultation on the future of the public register, as part of a wider public consultation, between December 2003 and March 2004, on reform of the employment tribunal regulations and rules of procedure. The Government response summarising the outcome of that exercise was published in July 2004. It noted that the balance of views among key stakeholders was that the register's advantages—in terms of freedom of information and access to sources of advice and support that the parties might not otherwise know to approach—were outweighed by its significant disadvantages. The disadvantages cited included compromising the privacy of the parties, and leaving them open to receiving numerous unwelcome, and in some cases misleading approaches from "ambulance chasers". Evidence of such approaches was provided by some consultees.

Many consultees, including the TUC, individual unions and a number of employment law firms, favoured complete abolition of the register. There were concerns that the register was used for blacklisting purposes. There was, however, support expressed by some for the retention of the aspect of the register recording judgments. This was considered to be useful for monitoring purposes, and to ensure that there continued to be a public record of judgments reached in the tribunals.

The Government decided, in the light of the consultation responses, and having given further careful consideration to the matter, that pre-judgment details of claimants and respondents should no longer be entered on the public register, but that judgments should continue to be recorded. This decision was implemented in the new regulations, which came into effect on 1 October 2004.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Standing Committee on the harmonisation of national legislation on cableway installations designed to carry passengers met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by the (A) EU and (B) UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [194890]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

No meetings of the Standing Committee on the harmonisation of national legislation on cableway installations designed to carry passengers took place during the Greek presidency.

The European Community directive 2000/9/EC, which introduced common standards for the construction and putting into service of cableway systems designed to carry persons has been implemented in the UK by the Cableway Installations Regulations 2004, which came into force on 3 May 2004.

Details of developments during the Greek presidency can be found in Cm6097 "Developments in the European Union, January to June 2003, the Greek Presidency" which was laid before Parliament in January 2004 and is available at www.fco.gov.uk/commandpapers.

Fair Trade Sourcing

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make it her policy to ensure that all hospitality within her Department is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [196657]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers given to him and the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on the policy adopted for the use of fair-trade products in hospitality on 15 December 2003, Official Report, column 641W, 1 November 2004, Official Report, column 88W and 4 November 2004, Official Report, columns 362–63W.

It is departmental policy to include the promotion of and use of fair trade products within our contracted hospitality, including tea, coffee, drinking chocolate, orange juice, cereal snack bars and sugar.

Gas

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment her Department has made of the impact of the recent rise in the cost of wholesale gas on the competitiveness of British companies; and what steps she plans to take to minimise this impact; [197177]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the price differential between the gas markets in the UK and continental Europe; and if she will make a statement. [197192]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Historically, industrial gas prices in Great Britain have been at or among the lowest in the EU. Although it is too early for official comparative data to be available, gas industry sources and intelligence indicate that wholesale gas prices have also increased (under the influence of higher oil prices) in continental Europe. A recent report by Oxford Economic Research Associates shows that the UK had the most competitive energy markets in the EU and G7 in 2002, and provisionally also for 2003. (The report is on the DTI website at www.dti.gov.uk/energy/gas_and_electricity/competitiveness_structure/index.shtm.l.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is on a European Commission investigation into the impact of a liberalised gas market. [197178]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My Department has been encouraging the European Commission to use its existing competition powers to the full extent to ensure timely progress towards a liberalised and competitive EU energy (gas and electricity) market.

Glass Container Industry

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received regarding cost increases to the glass container industry as a consequence of new emissions limits. [197007]

Jacqui Smith: Over the past year my Department has received a number of representations from the glass container industry about cost increases and other issues arising from new emissions limits, particularly in relation to CO_2. This has included contact with Ministers at plant visits, in ministerial correspondence and at meetings at official level.

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice and assistance her Department has given to the glass container industry on (a) closure of plants in recent years and (b) challenges facing the industry; and if she will make a statement. [194725]

Jacqui Smith: In August 2002 the Department commissioned the British Glass Manufacturers Confederation to examine the requirements for a full scale competitiveness study of glass manufacturing and manufacturing sectors.

A precursory study of competitiveness in the UK glass manufacturing sector was completed in February 2003.

Officials continue to meet with the British Glass Manufacturers Confederation to discuss a number of issues that have an impact on the sector.

The Department and the Regional Development Agency remain committed to providing support and advice if plant closures occur.

IT Skills

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she plans to take to ensure that the people who need to upgrade their IT skills, referred to in the e-Skills UK research published on 1 November, receive the training they require. [197047]

Ms Hewitt: Following the recommendations of the industry report "Skills for the Information Age", over the three years 2000–03, DTI invested £7 million in action programmes to increase the supply of advanced skills for the IT, electronics and communications sector. This programme promoted a positive image of ITEC in schools, helped students to develop the necessary skills required by ITEC employers and supported Work-Life Balance and diversity initiatives for the ITEC sector.

To follow up this programme, further ITEC skills initiatives have been taken forward directly by the recently appointed Sector Skills Councils for the ITEC sector, working in partnership with the industry, the Sector Skills Development Agency, DTI and DfES. A high priority for DTI is to make the UK the most competitive global location for IT skills. We are working closely with e-Skills UK, companies in the sector and across Government to match the current and future IT skills supply with business demand. DTI and DfES are also working with industry to improve diversity in employment in the IT sector, particularly the severe under-representation of women in the IT sector.

Miners' Compensation

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her Department is using Capita as a contractor in relation to the miners' compensation schemes. [194163]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 28 October 2004]: Yes. A Press release to this effect was issued on 16 February 2004.

Non-financial Reports

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if her Department will require public-listed companies to publish annual non-financial reports. [197471]

Jacqui Smith: My right hon. Friend will be making an announcement shortly about the implementation of a new non-financial report—the proposed Operating and Financial Review.

Offshore Wind Farms

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the environmental impact of the construction of offshore wind farms. [196276]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In respect of offshore wind farms both developers and Government are undertaking a significant amount of environmental impact work. In preparing their consent applications developers must undertake a comprehensive environmental impact assessments to consider a range of impacts for example on coastal processes, benthic ecology, fishing, navigation, birds and seascape. Where appropriate Government has made monitoring of impacts during the construction and post construction phases of wind farms a condition of Round 1 licences. In addition, this summer under the auspices of a newly created Research Advisory Group my Department launched a two-year £2.5 million programme of research to support offshore impact studies with further support coming from other Departments. The research group has already identified the highest priority studies and work programmes are under way for birds, navigation and fishing.

Parliamentary Questions

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to make a substantive reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Barnsley, East and Mexborough for Named Day answer on 28 October, reference 194163. [197756]

Nigel Griffiths: I have answered today.

Post Offices

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the likely impact on (a) the general public and (b) businesses of the proposal by the Post Office to close a number of Crown post offices; and if she will make a statement. [196850]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Decisions on individual closures and conversions of directly managed (Crown) post offices are operational and commercial matters for Post Office Ltd. Post Office Ltd.'s current policy, which has the Government's support, is to maintain a core network of directly managed post offices while continuing to drive efficiencies, with the aim of making the business commercial viable.

Post Office Ltd. has clarified in a letter of 3 November to all Members of Parliament that the company is working with the trade unions to develop proposals that will help address the significant losses generated by the network of directly managed post offices. Though plans are yet to be finalised, fewer than five directly managed branches are expected to be closed in 2005–06 and the company will continue to seek to transfer operation of directly managed post offices to franchise partners where suitable opportunities arise while ensuring that products and services for customers remain unchanged.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the Crown post offices in Northern Ireland which have been earmarked for closure; and if she will make a statement. [197260]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 10 November 2004]: The Government have no such list. Decisions on individual post office closures and conversions are operational and commercial matters for Post Office Ltd.

Post Office Ltd has clarified in a letter of 3 November to all Members of Parliament that the company is working with the trade unions to develop proposals that will help address the significant losses generated by the network of directly managed (Crown) post offices. Though plans are yet to be finalised, fewer than five directly managed branches are expected to be closed in 2005–06 throughout the UK. The company will continue to seek to transfer operation of directly managed post offices to franchise partners where suitable opportunities arise, whilst ensuring that products and services for customers remain unchanged.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with Post Office Ltd concerning its review of directly managed post offices. [196773]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 9 November 2004]: Ministers and officials are in regular contact with Post Office Ltd on a variety of post office issues. The Government do not, however, intervene in the day to day running of the business. The management of directly managed offices is, like the rest of the post office network, a commercial and operational matter for the company. Post Office Ltd has the Government's support for their strategy, which is to maintain a core network of directly managed post offices while continuing to drive efficiencies with the aim of making the business commercially viable.

Post Office Ltd has clarified in a letter of 3 November to all Members of Parliament that the company is working with the trade unions to develop proposals that will help address the significant losses generated by the network of directly managed post offices. Private Finance Initiative

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193977]

Ms Hewitt: The Department has three PFI contracts. They are (a) the provision of centralised IT within the Department (ELGAR) running until 2013–14; (b) the rebuilding of the National Physical Laboratory at Teddington running until 2023–24; and, (c) Constructionline which provides information on approved contractors within the construction industry.

The figures for the National Physical Laboratory are given as follows. Figures for 2004–05 onwards are estimated. The Constructionline PFI arrangement has no cost implications for the Department. The information for the provision of centralised IT within the Department is Commercial in Confidence and is therefore subject to exemption 13 Third Party Commercial Confidences—of the code of practice on access to Government Information.

The arrangements for reporting these contracts are set out in the Department's resource accounts for 2002–03 (in notes 1.20, 11 and 26). The accounts are available from the House of Commons Library.

Royal Mail Holdings

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports she has (a) requested and (b) received from the Shareholder Executive regarding the privatisation of Royal Mail Holdings plc. [197179]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have not requested or received any reports from the Shareholder Executive.

Privatisation of the Royal Mail is not on the Government's agenda. There are no plans to dispose of the Government's shareholding in the Royal Mail.

Trans-European Energy Network

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the role that the EU-sponsored trans-European energy network might play in providing energy security for the UK. [197561]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The trans-European energy network programme (TENs) provides assistance for feasibility studies and pre-construction development for infrastructure projects, particularly interconnectors, between member states and between the EU and its neighbours. Gas and electricity interconnectors make an important contribution to security of supply. The annual budget for TENs is small (currently €20 million) compared to the investment necessary to bring projects to fruition. TENs support can, however, be a catalyst for investment by supporting the initial stages of projects. Information from the Commission shows that in the period 1996–2001 a total of 140 actions in 53 projects received assistance totalling €123 million, with 56 per cent. going to natural gas projects and the remainder to electricity projects. UK projects have received a proportionate level of support from the TENs energy programme.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Casinos

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the location of each gaming casino in Scotland is. [197647]

Mr. Caborn: The Gaming Board for Great Britain report that casinos are licensed in the following locations in Scotland.

	Casinos
Aberdeen	2
Dundee	1
Edinburgh	4
Glasgow	5

Departmental Documents/Staff

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the Department's target is for the interval between publication of (a) departmental announcements and documents and (b) material published by public bodies for which her Department has oversight and their posting online; and what the average interval was in the latest year for which figures are available. [195399]

Mr. Caborn [pursuant to the reply, 1 November 2004, Official Report, c. 42W]: I regret that my earlier answer did not take into account the amended wording of the question.

The Department aims to make all announcements and documents available online at the same time as they are otherwise released. The Department does not keep a record of timings from which an average interval could be calculated. We would expect our sponsored bodies to adhere to the same target but information on the average interval for publishing online by DCMS bodies could be discovered only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of the staff of the Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196133]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 9 November 2004, Official Report, columns 619–20W.

Football Association

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to appoint (a) a regulator to oversee the operation of the Football Association and (b) an independent adviser to oversee constitutional change at the Football Association; and if she will make a statement. [196769]

Mr. Caborn: The Government's aim for the Football Association is for them to be fit for purpose. The FA's Board and Council are committed to a review headed by an independent person and I remain in regular contact with all parties concerned.

Gambling Bill

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on which dates the proposals contained within the Gambling Bill were discussed at the Joint Ministerial Committee; and in what format. [196310]

Mr. Caborn: I have no knowledge of this Committee.

Horse Racing

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will propose an extension to the horse racing levy system and board. [197905]

Mr. Caborn: We have no plans to do so. We are, however, asking the British Horseracing Board for an assessment of the possible implications of a recent judgment of the European Court of Justice in relation to database rights.

Lottery Grants

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many swimming pools have been constructed with Lottery grants in each of the last 10 years. [197117]

Estelle Morris: 92 swimming pools, including those integrated with sports and leisure centres, have been constructed in the last 10 years. The year-by-year breakdown is as follows:

	Pools constructed
1995	14
1996	9
1997	11
1998	13
1999	10
2000	10
2001	10
2002	8

Figures for 2004 are not yet available, and no lottery-funded swimming pools were constructed in 1994, as the first lottery panel did not convene until March 1995.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the constituencies which have received Lottery grants for the construction of swimming pools in the last 10 years. [197118]

Estelle Morris: In the last 10 years, the following constituencies have received lottery grants for the construction of swimming pools:

> North Devon; Brigg and Goole; Weaver Vale; West Dorset; Penrith and the Border; Leominster; Truro and St. Austell; Surrey Heath; Vale of York; Cambridge; North Cornwall; Tiverton and Honiton; Richmond (Yorkshire); Ealing North; South East Cambridgeshire; South East Cornwall; Bristol North West; Wells; Forest of Dean; Aylesbury; Harrogate and Knaresborough; Yeovil; South West Norfolk; Liverpool Wavertree; North Wiltshire; Hitchin and Harpenden; Arundel and South Downs; Erith and Thamesmead; South Norfolk; East Devon; East Surrey; Rushcliffe; Woodspring; North West Leicestershire; Tiverton and Honiton; Ludlow; North Warwickshire; Bexleyheath and Crayford; Berwick-upon-Tweed; Hertsmere; Liverpool West Derby; Morecambe and Lunesdale; Bexhill and Battle; North West Hampshire; Epping Forest; Leicester South; Harrow East; West Chelmsford; Middlesbrough South and Cleveland; East; Totnes; Skipton and Ripon; Southport; Stockton South; Mid Dorset and North Poole; Westmorland and Lonsdale; Maidstone and The Weald; Somerton and Frome; Lewisham West; Croydon Central; Norwich South; Bath; Cheltenham; Nuneaton; Hertsmere; Grantham and Stamford; St. Ives; North Norfolk; Torridge and West Devon; Berwick-upon-Tweed; Durham North; Horsham; Newcastle East/Wallsend; Harborough; Beckenham; Liverpool, Riverside; Calder Valley; Upminster; Camberwell and Peckham; Blackpool South; Walsall South; Sunderland South; Liverpool, Garston; Department for Culture, Media and Sport Parliamentary Branch, 2–4 Cockspur Street, London SW1Y 5DH www.culture.gov.uk Morley and Rothwell; Huddersfield; Loughborough; Southampton Test; Cambridge; Hackney N. and Stoke Newington; Gloucester; East Ham; Norwich South; and Manchester Central.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money was distributed to sport through the Lottery in each of the last 10 years. [197457]

Estelle Morris: The following amounts have been awarded to the sports good cause in each calendar year. The figures for 2004 are the latest available and will represent a lag in the reporting process.

	Awarded (£ million)
1995	1.7
1996	2.1
1997	1.8
1998	1.9
1999	6.1
2000	10.4
2001	13.1
2002	9.7
2003	4.9
Total	53.1

The Big Lottery Fund and Awards for All programme (which receives contributions from Sport England, Arts Council England, Heritage Lottery Fund and Big Lottery Fund) also channel funding into projects that may involve an element of sport, however it is not possible to disaggregate precisely sports funding.

The information is freely available from the Department's searchable Lottery award database at www.lottery.culture.gsi.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors.

PRIME MINISTER

Consultants

Mr. Weir: To ask the Prime Minister how much his office spent in each year since 2002 on employing (a) external management consultants and (b) external human resources consultants; and if he will make a statement. [195762]

Pete Wishart: To ask the Prime Minister how much expenditure his Department has incurred in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [195453]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Members to the answer my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office gave the hon. Member for North Tayside (Pete Wishart) today.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the properties occupied by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004, showing (A) for each and (B) in aggregate the area; and what in aggregate the annual rental value was. [196365]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office today.

DEFENCE

156 Provost Company

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will issue posthumous medals to the members of 156 Provost Company, Royal Military Police, killed on active service in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [196299]

Mr. Hoon: The armed forces do not, as a matter of course, make recommendations for the award of military honours to all those who have died in the line of duty.

However, service personnel who die on operations are awarded Campaign Medals. All the Royal Military Policemen who died in Al Majarr al Kabir last year were awarded posthumously the Iraq Campaign Medal, which was presented to their families at a service at the Royal Military Police Training School Chapel on 4 September 2004.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will publish the findings of the report of the investigation into the deaths of members of 156 Provost Company, Royal Military Police, killed on active service in Iraq. [196300]

Mr. Hoon: The Board of Inquiry into the deaths of the six Royal Military Policemen who died in Al Majarr al Kabir last year has now concluded and I expect to be able to publish information on the outcome of that inquiry shortly.

The Royal Military Police Special Investigation Branch (SIB) investigation has been referred to the central criminal court of Iraq. In line with usual practice we have no plans to make public the SIB findings.

Channel Islands

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) British service personnel and (b) ships will take part in the 60th anniversary celebration of the liberation of the Channel Islands in May 2005; and if he will make a statement. [196727]

Mr. Caplin: Arrangements are being made for the armed forces to be represented at events in the Channel Islands in May 2005, but at this stage it is too early to be more specific.

Departmental Publications (Accessibility)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what proportion of publications issued by his Department are available in (a) Braille, (b) autoprint, (c) large print and (d) easy read format. [194298]

Mr. Caplin: Due to the lack of demand, the Ministry of Defence no longer routinely holds in store copies of its corporate publications in formats such as Braille and large print. However, in accordance with the Ministry's equality and diversity guidelines and legislative requirements, alternative formats of corporate publications are provided as and when they are requested.

Falklands War

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Ministry of Defence will sponsor a commemoration in the UK of the 25th anniversary of the liberation of the Falkland Islands. [173790]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 17 May 2004]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him at Defence questions on 25 October 2004, Official Report, columns 1133–34.

Temporary Staff

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 223W, on temporary staff, how many agency temporary staff have been working for his Department in its central headquarters buildings in each of the last five years. [196615]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 8 November 2004]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 223W.

US Military Personnel (Europe)

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the implications for UK security of the decision by the US Department of Defense to re-organise its military personnel in Europe. [187568]

Mr. Hoon: US plans for the disposition of their forces are a matter for them. Our assessment, however, of the US proposals for future deployments in Europe that have, so far, been made public is that they are entirely consistent with the historic US commitment to European security and to the NATO alliance. They reflect moves across the alliance to develop more flexible and rapidly deployable force structures, including through the development of the NATO Response Force and Allied Command for Transformation. The US have made clear their intention to continue to consult allies, including the UK, as their plans develop.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Central Government Grant

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes there were in central Government grant allocated to (a) Hereford and Worcester county council for each year between 1992 and 1998 and (b) Worcestershire county council since 1998. [197379]

Mr. Raynsford: The amount of central Government grant allocated to (a) Hereford and Worcester county council for each year between 1992 and 1998 and (b) Worcestershire county council since 1998 are in the following tables.

Hereford and Worcester

1993–94	318,044
1994–95	328,233
1995–96	277,981
1996–97	290,772
1997–98	292,429

Worcestershire

1998–99	234,279
1999–2000	253,735
2000–01	275,842
2001–02	296,776
2002–03	316,844
2003–04	341,186
2004–05	365,693

It is not possible to give figures for 1991–92 and 1992–93 as, under the community charge system which was in operation then, some grant was paid into the collection funds operated by lower tier authorities and hence supported expenditure by more than one tier.

The data are taken from the Revenue Summary (RS) (outturn) forms for all years except 2003–04 and 2004–05 when the data are taken from the Revenue Account (RA) (budget) form. These forms are completed each year by individual local authorities.

Grants in the table include special and specific grants inside "Aggregate External Finance", Standard Spending Assessment (SSA) reduction grant, Police grant, Revenue support grant, Central support protection grant and Redistributed Non- domestic rates.

Commonwealth Citizens (Voting Rights)

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister under which legislation Commonwealth citizens are entitled to vote in local government elections in the UK; and what the eligibility criteria are. [196446]

Mr. Raynsford: Qualifying Commonwealth citizens are entitled to vote in local government elections under section 2 of the Representation of the People Act 1983.

To be eligible to vote in a local government election qualifying Commonwealth citizens must be registered in the register of local government electors for that area; must not be subject to any legal incapacity to vote, age apart; and must be of voting age, that is 18 years or over.

Qualifying Commonwealth citizens are those who do not require leave to enter or remain in the UK under the Immigration Act 1971, or those who require leave, but for the time being have any description of such leave.

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his Department is planning to review the entitlement of Commonwealth citizens to vote in UK elections for which his Department is responsible in countries in which British citizens are not entitled to vote in elections. [196878]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no plans to carry out such a review.

Council Tax

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the effect of council tax revaluation and regional banding on Harrogate district. [196740]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government have accepted the conclusion of the Balance of Funding Review that council tax should be retained but reformed. However, no decisions have yet been taken on what that reform should be. The Government looks to the Independent Inquiry, being undertaken by Sir Michael Lyons, to consider the detailed case for changes to the present system of local government funding, and to make recommendations on any changes that are necessary and how to implement them. This will include looking at how best to reform council tax, taking into account the revaluation in 2007 of English domestic property. Sir Michael is due to report by the end of 2005.

Claire Ward: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received from (a) Hertfordshire police authority and (b) other authorities within Hertfordshire on the capping of council tax; and if he will make a statement. [197138]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received representations from authorities in Hertfordshire in advance of the 2004–05 capping round, which has now been completed, but has not received representations about future capping action. However, I understand that Hertfordshire MPs have made representations to my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, after having been contacted by Hertfordshire police authority.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196145]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not retain details of redecoration costs. However the costs of any redecoration as part of a refurbishment project exceeding £15,000 will be included in the following figures.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established in May 2002. Since that date the following has been spent on refurbishment of the London headquarters offices and the Government office for London.

	Total (£)
2002–03	2,097,441
2003–04	823,205

The figures provided, which exclude VAT, are gross expenditure and do not reflect receipts from other building occupants.

Although the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has overall responsibility for the buildings occupied by Government offices, they carry out functions on behalf of 10 Government Departments.

Departmental Policy (South Dorset)

Jim Knight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the South Dorset constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on the South Dorset constituency. [194971]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy prime Minister is determined to develop to improve the lives of people across the UK, including the south-west.

In the local government finance settlements since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister took office we have been able to increase the amount of government grant given to local authorities by £19.1 billion. This is a 30 per cent. increase in real terms and compares with a 7 per cent. cut in the previous four years before 1997–98.

The two local authorities in South Dorset have received average annual increases in formula grant since 1997 of 2.3 per cent. for Purbeck and 2.7 per cent. for Weymouth and Portland. Residents of South Dorset have also benefited from Dorset county council's increase in grant of 4.5 per cent.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is determined that everyone should have the opportunity to have a decent home. Where extra money is not required to achieve this, tenants can choose for their homes to remain under direct council management. Those local authorities requiring additional funding have three options: setting up an arm's length management organisation (ALMO), creating a private finance initiative (PFI) and transfer. This strategy has meant that in 2004 the number of social sector non-decent homes in England will have been reduced by 1 million.

Since 1997 Purbeck transferred a total of 1,622 dwellings of which 835 were non-decent, to Purbeck Housing Trust, an RSL. In the same period Weymouth and Portland has transferred 3,105 dwellings to Weymouth and Portland Housing RSL.

This year the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has provided £10.5 million in supporting people grant to Dorset county council to enable it to deliver housing related support services to vulnerable people in the area. Currently this provides over 7,000 units of support to a range of people, including homeless families, older people, people with learning disabilities and young people at risk.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./.

Deprived Wards (England)

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the top 10 per cent. of the most deprived wards in England. [197546]

Phil Hope: It is not possible to list the top 10 per cent. of the most deprived wards in England. The IMD2004 is not based on wards but on a new geography called Super Output Areas (SOAs). These are geographical areas which are designed to be similar in size and consistent over time. They have a population of approximately 1,000 to 3,000 people. There are 32,482 SOAs in England. A list of the top 10 per cent. of these, i.e. the most deprived 3,248 SOAs, has been made available in the Library of the House.

East of England Assembly

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has for holding a referendum on setting up a Regional Assembly in the East of England. [197873]

Mr. Raynsford: None.

Brownfield Land

Llew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the implications for the re-use of reclaimed brownfield land of the European Court of Justice case concerning the leakage of petrol from a petrol station involving the parties Texaco and Van de Walle. [194873]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

Judgments by the European Court of Justice are binding on member states and their "competent authorities". The Department is assessing the implications of the Court's judgment in Case C-1/03 for land affected by contamination and the remediation of such land. On conclusion of this assessment, I intend to publish a statement of the Department's views on the judgment's implications. I am not yet in a position to confirm when this will be but I recognise the need for our competent authorities and industry to be informed as soon as possible of our conclusions.

Energy Efficient Buildings (EU Directive)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he will take to implement the EU Energy Performance in Buildings Directive requirement in relation to (a) combined heat and power and (b) district heating or cooling. [197348]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published on 21 July proposals for implementing these requirements as part of the revision of the Building Regulations energy efficiency provisions. The proposals can be inspected on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's web site, www.odpm.gov.uk. The consultation closed on 22 October and there has been a good response. This is now being considered by the Building Regulations Advisory Committee.

Fire Service

Mr. Mackay: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) staff and (b) consultancy costs were of the

(i) Fire Service Effectiveness Division, (ii) Fire Service Improvement Team and (iii) Fire Safety Legislation and Pensions Division from January 2002 to date. [196078]

Mr. Raynsford: These divisions were formed in June 2003 following publication of the White Paper, "Our Fire and Rescue Service". Figures from that date are:

	£000
(a) Staff costs
(i) Fire Service Effectiveness Division	1,903
(ii) Fire Service Improvement Team	2,088
(iii) Fire Safety Legislation and Pensions Division	1,316
(b) Consultancy costs
(i) Fire Service Effectiveness Division	13,446
(ii) Fire Service Improvement Team	1,891
(iii) Fire Safety Legislation and Pensions Division	119

Key Workers (Housing)

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 19 July 2004, Official Report, columns 10–11W, on key workers (housing), if he will make a statement on the progress of his discussions with employers and other Government departments about additional land contributions and access to accommodation. [196840]

Keith Hill: Over 750 dwellings of accommodation available for health staff have been made available to all key workers; further work is progressing with the Department of Health, the NHS Trusts and their RSL partners to increase the access of this type of short term rented accommodation for all key workers. Discussions are on-going with other Government Departments about contributing land.

Leukaemia

Ms Keeble: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the implications for planning policy of the preliminary findings of the study by the Childhood Cancer Research Group at Oxford University into possible links between power lines and increased rates of childhood leukaemia. [197003]

Keith Hill: Following the publication of the National Radiological Protection Board's (NRPB) new Electromagnetic Field (EMF) guidelines in March 2004 and the associated advice to Government, the Government are committed to taking forward the issue of building near power lines in consultation with all the relevant stakeholders. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's officials are participating in this process.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister takes advice from the Department of Health, which considers the implications of medical research projects.

Local Elections (Spending Limits)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the candidate spending limits will be for the 2005 local elections in England; and if he will make a statement. [197439]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government will shortly be inviting the Electoral Commission to make recommendations on what the limits should be for candidates' election expenses for parliamentary and local government elections. The Government will consider carefully any recommendation the Commission makes. The Government are presently consulting upon an inflation increase to such expenses limits for City of London ward elections and elections by liverymen in common hall.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he takes to reflect the cost of providing local authority services in rural areas of England in central government funding; and if he will make a statement. [197493]

Mr. Raynsford: The relative cost of providing local authority services for all appropriate authorities, including rural areas, is assessed using the individual Formula Spending Share (FSS) formulae. The formulae split the total amount of FSS for the service between authorities taking into account their various socio-economic factors. They are generally of the form of:

a basic amount for each client (for example, primary school pupils) that is the same for each authority;

a deprivation top-up that allows for the additional cost of providing services in deprived areas; an area cost top-up that recognises that wages and business rates vary across the country; and other top-ups that take into account a number of other cost pressures including rural sparsity, density and visitors and commuters.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will use up to date population figures in the formula grant calculations made by his Department for the support of local authority services; and if he will make a statement. [197494]

Mr. Raynsford: Yes. The formula grant calculations are based on the latest available mid-year population estimates. For example, the 2005–06 Local Government Finance Settlement will be based on the mid-2003 population estimates released on 9 September 2004.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will increase the area cost adjustment; and if he will make a statement. [197495]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister calculates the area cost adjustment (ACA) for 53 areas in England and Wales. The 25 areas with the lowest wage costs are protected by the lower limit, and receive an ACA of one. For the remaining 28 ACA areas, the size of the ACA in each area is determined using data on local wage and business premises costs. We do not intend to change the way the ACA is calculated during the current formula freeze.

The majority of the data the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects to use in calculating the 2005–06 provisional Formula Spending Shares for each authority is now available on the internet at: http:// www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/0506/grant.htm. This includes the 2005–6 ACA factors for each local authority.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average per capita external grant support for all local authority services was in 2004–05 in (a) England, (b) inner London, (c) outer London and (d) Lincolnshire. [197497]

Mr. Raynsford: The following table shows the average per capita amount of revenue support grant (RSG) and redistributed business rates (NNDR) for all services for the areas requested.

Area	All service RSG plus NNDR per head (£ per head)
England	846.54
Inner London boroughs excluding the City of London	1,300.05
Outer London boroughs	971.78
Lincolnshire	742.54

Lincolnshire's all service amount per head has been calculated as the weighted average of the all service amount per head for each of its districts. These are tabled as follows:

Area	All service RSG plus NNDR per head (£ per head)
Boston	753.46
East Lindsey	755.64
Lincoln	765.42
North Kesteven	724.51
South Holland	746.13
South Kesteven	727.36
West Lindsey	730.74

The differences in the all service amount per head reflect differences in both the socio-economic characteristics of the area and the relative ability of councils to raise council tax.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will change the rules which limit the gains local authorities may make in grant settlements as a result of formula changes; and if he will make a statement. [197499]

Mr. Raynsford: The distribution method for formula grant includes a formula that takes account of the relative socio-economic characteristics of local authority areas; an element that takes account of the relative ability of councils to raise council tax; and guaranteed minimum grant increases (the "floors"). Grant floors must be paid for within the total amount of grant that goes to authorities each year. In recent years, the cost of the floor has been recovered both from a "ceiling"—a maximum grant increase—and a scaling factor applied to grant increases between the floor and the ceiling. Decisions on the level of floors and how to fund them in 2005–06 have not yet been taken.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the per capita external grant support from his Department to (a) Lincolnshire county council, (b) Lincolnshire Police Authority, (c) Boston borough council, (d) East Lindsey district council, (e) City of Lincoln council, (f) North Kesteven district council, (g) South Holland district council, (h) South Kesteven district council and (i) West Lindsey district council was in 2004–05. [197496]

Mr. Raynsford: A table showing Revenue Support Grant (RSG), redistributed business rates (NNDR), the sum of RSG and NNDR, mid-2002 population estimates and the sum of RSG and NNDR per head, for the authorities requested, is tabled as follows.

Authority	Revenue Support Grant (£ million)	Redistributed business rates (£ million)	RSG plus NNDR (£ million)	Mid-2002 population estimates (Number of people)	RSG plus NNDR per head (£ per head)
Lincolnshire	241.838	172.220	414.058	657,843	629.42
Lincolnshire Police	13.725	8.959	22.685	657,843	34.48
Boston	3.533	1.544	5.077	56,686	89.56
East Lindsey	8.550	3.611	12.161	132,571	91.73
Lincoln	6.384	2.341	8.725	85,947	101.52
North Kesteven	3.232	2.638	5.870	96,852	60.61
South Holland	4.351	2.155	6.506	79,125	82.22
South Kesteven	4.546	3.418	7.965	125,501	63.46
West Lindsey	3.214	2.211	5.425	81,161	66.84

The mid-2002 population estimates given are those published on 27 January 2004. These were used in the calculation of the 2004–05 Revenue Support Grant and redistributed business rates. It should be noted that the Office for National Statistics published revised mid-2002 population estimates on 9 September 2004.

Regional Fire Control Rooms

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his Department sought advice from (a) the Strathclyde fire control centre and (b) the London fire control centre in developing its proposals for regional fire control rooms. [197358]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister looked at the experience of a range of control centres dealing with emergency calls in developing our proposals for regional fire control centres. These included Strathclyde and London as well as other fire and rescue services, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, Highways Agency, and police services across the UK. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister did not specifically seek advice from the Strathclyde fire control centre but the London fire control centre has provided advice and assistance to the FiReControl project, along with other fire and rescue services. The FiReControl project has several experienced fire control managers seconded from English fire and rescue services to provide advice as the project progresses.

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in what percentage of calls from (a) land line phones and (b) mobile phones the location of the call can be identified in fire control rooms. [197359]

Mr. Raynsford: In 2002–03, the most recent year for which data are available, fire control staff in England and Wales handled 1,797,193 emergency calls. It is not currently possible to disaggregate the data between mobile or landline calls, nor is any information available centrally on the proportion of calls where the location of the call can be identified in fire control rooms.

Mortgage Costs

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of household income was spent on mortgages by first-time buyers in (a) rural and (b) urban areas in England and Wales in each of the past 10 years for which records are available. [196685]

Keith Hill: Estimates of initial mortgage repayments by first-time buyers as a percentage of the gross income on which their mortgage application was based are tabled as follows. Figures are provided for each of the English regions and for Wales. However it is not possible to provide a breakdown by urban and rural areas.

Notes:

1. The mortgage interest rates used in the calculations are the general rates that applied at the time that the first-time buyers made their purchase. And, for those years when MIRAS existed, they reflect the net interest rates after MIRAS.

2. For consistency, it is assumed throughout that the type of mortgage was a "repayment" mortgage. In other words the repayments reflect both payments of both interest and part capital.

3. Data up to and including 2002 are based on a 5 per cent. sample of mortgage completions. The 2003 figures are based on a significantly larger sample.

Regional Government

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the timetable for a referendum on regional government in the north-west; [197376]

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to proceed with referendums on regional government in the (a) North West and (b) Yorkshire and the Humber. [197377]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the statement given by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 8 November 2004, Official Report, columns 587–606.

Social Rented Homes

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what proportion of the 10,000 social rented homes to be provided annually by 2007–08 will be funded from (a) the additional £430 million in Approved Development Programme funding and (b) efficiency savings; [196836]

(2) if he will break down by Government office region the location of the 10,000 social rented homes to be provided annually by 2007–08. [196837]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will provide an additional 10,000 homes a year for social rent funded by direct investment through the Approved Development Programme, an expanded private finance initiative programme and efficiencies in procurement.

Decisions have not yet been taken on how regional housing pot funding, of which the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme is one element, for 2006–07 and 2007–08 (including the additional funding for affordable housing) is split between regions. This needs to reflect the different pattern of needs across regions and the Government's national housing priorities, including development of the growth areas, and targets. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister aims to complete this work, which raises some complex issues, by the end of the year.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will announce decisions on allocation of funding within regions next summer in the light of recommendations from Regional Housing Boards, which are due in May next year.

Even after the regional allocations are decided the location of the additional social housing rented units will not be known until after the respective bidding rounds. In many cases the homes will be provided through a combination of grant and efficiency savings.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to require social rented and shared ownership housing to be built on the same sites as his Department's proposed 60,000 homes for first time buyers. [196838]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister remains strongly committed to the provision of mixed tenure communities and we will set out full details in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Strategic Plan.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to limit access to his Department's proposed 60,000 homes for first time buyers to people in social rented housing or on housing waiting lists in that area. [196839]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently considering criteria for eligibility and will set out further details of the scheme in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Strategic Plan.

South West Regional Assembly

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will take steps to abolish the South West Regional Assembly; and if he will make a statement. [197463]

Mr. Raynsford: No. The South West Regional Assembly is a voluntary body recognised by Government for certain purposes. The Government have no plans to alter that position.

Strategic Plan

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to publish his Department's Five-Year Strategic Plan. [196841]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to publish the Plan shortly.

Wilf Ward Trust

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what funding has been provided to the Wilf Ward Family Trust through a Supporting People grant in 2003–04; [196753]

(2) what funding has been allocated to the Wilf Ward Family Trust through a Supporting People grant for 2005–06. [196754]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister provides grants directly to Administering Authorities to enable them to procure housing related support services. The amount of funding provided to individual services is therefore a matter of local discretion.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Commonwealth Citizens (Voting Rights)

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many Commonwealth citizens voted (a) at the UK general election in 2001, (b) at the Birmingham, Hodge Hill by-election in 2004 and (c) at the Leicester, South by-election in 2004. [196397]

Mr. Leslie: No record is kept of the country of origin or nationality of voters participating in UK elections.

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs under which legislation Commonwealth citizens are entitled to vote in (a) general elections and (b) European parliamentary elections in the UK; what the eligibility criteria are in each case; and whether all Commonwealth citizens are entitled to vote in referenda in the UK. [196447]

Mr. Leslie: Entitlement to vote in UK parliamentary elections is set out at section 1 of the Representation of the People Act 1983, and in European parliamentary elections at section 8 of the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2002. These statutory provisions provide for Commonwealth citizens to vote in UK and European parliamentary elections. Only those persons who are included on the electoral register are entitled to vote and eligibility to register is set out at section 4 of the Representation of the People Act 1983 (persons who are registered for UK parliamentary election are also eligible to vote in European parliamentary elections). Section 4 of the Act entitles 'qualifying' Commonwealth citizens to register to vote and they are defined as Commonwealth citizens who do not require leave under the Immigration Act 1971 to enter or remain in the United Kingdom, or such persons who for the time being have any description of such leave. The franchise for referendums is determined on an individual basis and is set out explicitly in the relevant dedicated enabling legislation.

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether his Department is planning to review the entitlement of Commonwealth citizens to vote in UK elections for which his Department is responsible in countries in which British citizens are not entitled to vote in elections. [196877]

Mr. Leslie: My Department has no plans at present to carry out such a review.

Consultants

Mr. Maples: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to consultants in each of the last five years, stating in each case (a) the name of the consulting company, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the purpose for which the contract was awarded; and if he will make a statement. [191727]

Mr. Lammy: Information on the value of individual consultancy contracts and the purposes for which they were awarded is not held centrally by my Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department does however collect details of expenditure with consultants on an annual basis. The Department's expenditure over the last five financial years is as follows:

	£ million
1999–2000	1.9
2000–01	2.6
2001–02	6.5
2003–04	9.0

The Department uses consultants for the provision of expert professional advice and support on specific, time-limited tasks, usually in connection with projects, but sometimes in support of the ongoing operation of the Department. Services performed include customer and market surveys, risk assessments, provision of technical advice (e.g. IT Security, Health and Safety), undertaking specific studies and reviews and supporting the implementation of major projects and programmes.

The recent increase reflects the wide-ranging and fast-paced programme to modernise the Department's work, to increase efficiency, provide better customer service, and value for money for the taxpayer.

Delivering such a programme, in the most effective and efficient way, has necessitated the use of external expertise and skills to supplement the Department's own resources.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of the staff of the Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196127]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 619W.

District Judges' Salaries

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the total expenditure was on district judges' salaries and expenses in each of the last 10 years. [192687]

Mr. Leslie [pursuant to the reply, 20 October 2004, Official Report, c. 772W]: The figures provided in my previous answer also included expenditure on other judicial office holders not paid from the consolidated fund. These include masters and registrars in the High Court, tribunal adjudicators and chairman. The following table sets out the net salary costs for county court district judges over the last six years, as well as the total expenditure by the Court Service departmentally paid judicial salaries including employers national insurance and superannuation contributions.

	DJ salaries exclusive of NI/superannuation	All judicial salaries of NI/superannuation
1998–99	27,566,445	46,626,845
1999–2000	29,858,574	53,747,583
2000–01	32,815,714	60,841,891
2001–02	34,389,992	66,009,217
2002–03	36,242,439	72,311,129
2003–04	38,949,490	88,286,003

Norman Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Romford (Mr. Rosindell) of 20 October 2004, Official Report, column 772W, on district judges' salaries, what factors underlie the size of the annual increases from 1998–99 to 2003–04; and what the projected figure for 2004–05 is. [196827]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the pursuant answer I gave today to the hon. Member for Romford (Mr. Rosindell).

The annual increases from 1998–99 to 2003–04 on district judges' salaries are largely due to the increase in the number of district judges (these have increased from 385 in 1998–99 to 436 in 2003–04), annual pay increases, as recommended by the SSRB and increases in superannuation and national insurance.

The projected district judge salaries figure for 2004–05 (net of national insurance and superannuation) is £40,208,534.

CABINET OFFICE

Buying British

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the Cabinet Office policy is on buying British goods. [195953]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for South, West Bedfordshire (Andrew Selous) by my predecessor my hon. Friend for Paisley, South (Mr. Alexander) on 20 April 2004, Official Report, column 154.

Civil Service

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many UK civil service jobs are located in Scotland, broken down by (a) constituency and (b) local authority area; and what percentage of the total number of civil service jobs those located in Scotland represent. [196954]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 9 November 2004]: The number of civil service jobs is not available centrally at constituency level. The number of civil service jobs at local authority area is also not available centrally.

The number of jobs as at 1 April 2003, in Scotland is shown in Table D of Civil Service Statistics 2003, which is available on the internet at http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_information/statistical_information/statistics/index.asp. and in the Library. These figures are updated annually.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195613]

Ruth Kelly: There is no legislation passed in the last 30 years for which the Cabinet Office is responsible which has yet to be brought into force.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much expenditure her Department has incurred in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with press and public relations; and if she will make a statement. [195443]

Ruth Kelly: The Department spent £13.39 million and £15.93 million on external consultancy in the financial years 2002–03 and 2003–04 respectively. External consultancy encompasses several areas including financial, information technology and communications.

Expenditure on press and public relations consultancy is also contained within the external consultancy figures and cannot be separately identified without incurring disproportionate cost.

Consultation

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the organisations and individuals outside his Department who are (a) sent information on and (b) consulted about individuals who may be proposed for appointment to posts for which he is responsible. [195952]

Mr. Milburn: Those consulted in relation to Duchy appointments depend upon whether the appointment is public or personal to Her Majesty the Queen; many of which are ceremonial.

Public appointments apply almost entirely to the Palatinate magistracy. Local advisory committees are set up for the recruitment and subsequent recommendation of suitable candidates for appointment as Justice of Peace.

Personal appointments by Her Majesty the Queen are not public appointments but, in each case, wide consultation is undertaken with the Duchy Officers as well as: the Lord Lieutenants of Lancashire, Merseyside and Manchester; Lancashire county council; the Prime Minister's Secretary of Appointments; local parish committees; and various local bodies and individuals with relevant experience of the post or who may know an identified candidate for the position.

Departmental Properties/Staff

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will list the properties occupied by (a) the Cabinet Office and (b) its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004, stating (A) for each and (B) in aggregate the area; and what the aggregate rental value was in each year. [195128]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 1 November 2004]: Figures requested in respect of the Cabinet Office's estate are as follows:

[1] Freehold properties. Remaining properties are either held as leasehold properties or via a Memorandum of Terms of Occupation (MOTO) with another department.

Notes:

1. Figures for 1997–98 and those marked 'n/a' can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.
2. Figures for the size of buildings exclude space occupied by another Government department.
3. Figures shown under the 'rental value' column are as at 1 April 2004. For leasehold properties or those occupied via a MOTO, the figures shown are the estimated open market rental values. For freehold properties the figures are the 'existing use value' figures, adjusted to reflect any space occupied by other departments.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many people in the Office earn more than a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,485 per year. [195332]

Ruth Kelly: Information of the number of civil servants in departments and agencies (where known) whose whole-time equivalent salary exceeds £57,485 per annum has been placed in the Library. The information provided is at 1 April 2004.

London Project

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the London Project. [195974]

Mr. Milburn: The Strategy Unit's London Project published its final report in July 2004. The work is now being taken forward by a Cabinet Committee chaired by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State at the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Keith Hill).

Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many press releases have been issued by her Department in each month of 2004; and if she will make a statement. [195442]

Ruth Kelly: The Government News Network (GNN) issues press releases on behalf of all departments except the Prime Minister's Office, the Scotland Office, the Wales Office and the Northern Ireland Office. The information requested is shown in the following table.

Period: January-October 2004

Department	Total Releases
Attorney Generals Office	24
Cabinet Office	81
Department for Constitutional Affairs	302
Department for Constitutional Affairs (Judicial Appointments)	165
Department for Culture, Media and Sport	179
Department for Education and Skills	141
Department for International Development	20
Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs	1065
Department for Transport	599
Department for Work and Pensions	255
Department of Health	396
Department of Trade and Industry	1492
Foreign and Commonwealth Office	597
HM Treasury	197
Home Office	458
Ministry of Defence	349
Office of The Deputy Prime Minister	854

Notes:

1. Departments not issuing through NDS—House of Commons, Northern Ireland Office, Privy Council Office, Scotland Office, Wales Office and Prime Minster's Office.
2. The above figures include both national and regional releases

Public Appointments

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what public appointments he has made since taking office. [195949]

Mr. Milburn: Since 13 September 2004 I have approved, as the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the appointment of magistrates to the Benches within the Duchy area.

In making these appointments the Duchy follows the procedures laid down by the Department for Constitutional Affairs.

The Duchy Office has appointed members to its Advisory Committees on Justices of the Peace.

Furthermore, Advisory Committee Chairmen were appointed, selected from the existing Advisory Committee.

Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what measures her Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake to comply with the Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order 2003. [194425]

Ruth Kelly: Cabinet Office buildings in Whitehall make use of heating from CHP via the Whitehall District Energy Scheme, although this does not extend to CHP generated electricity.

We will aim to contribute to the CHP generated electricity commitments set out in the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate where there is likely to be no significant costs and/or further increase the percentage of electricity supplies currently being generated from renewable sources.

Working Mothers

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) what estimate she has made of the number of women working for the Government who have children; [196011]

(2) how many women working for the Government are single parents. [196012]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested is not collected centrally.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ambassadors

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether ambassadors are expected to learn the official language of the country of their posting; and if he will make a statement. [196867]

Mr. Alexander: Yes, all Heads of Mission posted to a country where English is not an official language are expected to learn the official language. They are given language training to enable them to do so.

Armenia/Azerbaijan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government have taken to encourage Armenia to withdraw from Azerbaijani territories in accordance with 1993 UN Security Council Resolutions 822, 853 and 874. [197089]

Mr. Rammell: The OSCE Minsk Group is the framework that leads on negotiation towards a settlement to the Nagorno Karabakh dispute. While the UK is not a member of the Minsk Group, we support its work and remain in close touch through the work of the UK Special Representative Sir Brian Fall. The UK will support any mechanism for the resolution of the Nagorno Karabakh dispute which both parties can accept and which has a realistic chance of delivering a lasting political settlement.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding the changes in the demographic make-up of the Nagorno Karabakh region of Azerbaijan. [197090]

Mr. Rammell: Since the fighting began in 1988 in Nagorno Karabakh, large numbers of Azerbaijanis and Armenians have been displaced throughout the region. There are strong humanitarian reasons for negotiating a settlement that improves the conditions of those displaced as a result of the conflict. We urge all parties to the dispute to seek a lasting political settlement through negotiation. We note that the Government of Azerbaijan has introduced for debate at United Nations General Assembly the subject of settlement in Nagorno Karabakh and the surrounding seven districts outside Azeri control.

Bangladesh

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Bangladesh on (a) the burning of the Ahmadiyya Mosque in Brahmanbaria and (b) harassment of the Ahmadiyya community in that country; and if he will make a statement. [197180]

Mr. Alexander: On 5 November, EU Heads of Mission in Dhaka visited the main Ahmadiyya mosque in Dhaka to demonstrate EU concern over the attack at Brahmanbaria. Officials in London and at our High Commission in Dhaka regularly raise the treatment of religious minorities, including the Ahmadiyyas, with the Bangladeshi authorities. We remain concerned about the Ahmadiyyas and continue to encourage the Bangladeshi authorities to ensure that they are suitably protected. We will continue to monitor the situation closely and make representations whenever appropriate.

Cayman Islands

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether there will be an independent review of the handling of the state of emergency in the Cayman Islands; and if he will make a statement. [197310]

Mr. Rammell: In the immediate aftermath of Hurricane Ivan striking the Cayman Islands, a state of emergency was declared, in accordance with the Cayman Island's constitution, on 11 September 2004 and revoked on 27 September. We see no need for an independent review as this was a prudent measure. There were reports of opportunistic looting following the Hurricane. The Government provided funding for police officers from neighbouring Overseas Territories to provide short-term support for the local police force. We also assisted with immediate needs for medical supplies, technical expertise and helping restore essential services. We continue to be engaged in the post-hurricane recovery effort.

Commonwealth

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many countries, excluding the UK, belong to the Commonwealth; if he will list them; and what the population is of each country. [197134]

Mr. Rammell: In addition to the United Kingdom, 52 sovereign nations are members of the Commonwealth. Full details, including population, are updated annually and published in "The Commonwealth Yearbook". A copy of the publication is held in the Library of the House.

Correspondence

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood will receive a substantive reply to her letter of 23 August on behalf of a constituent Mrs. Shamila Shaheen Sia concerning her husband, Mr. Raja Rashad Majeed Khan (reference: GV100/98911/NMJ). [197344]

Mr. Mullin: UKvisas replied to my right hon. Friend on 10 November.

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 2001 to April 2002, (b) May 2002 to April 2003, (c) May 2003 to April 2004 and (d) May 2004 to the latest date for which information is available, indicating in each case (i) the values of the contracts and (ii) the companies with which the contracts were placed. [196920]

Mr. Rammell: Because of the large quantity of information required to answer the question, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has made it available in the Library of the House in spreadsheet format.

Some of the contracts awarded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office involve security matters. I am therefore withholding this information under Exemption 1*(a)* of Part 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, which covers information whose disclosure would harm national security.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with his Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with his Department in each of the past four years; [196921]

(2) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies for which he is responsible in each of the past three years. [196922]

Mr. Rammell: This detailed information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ivory Coast

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of France concerning the military situation in Ivory Coast; and if he will make a statement. [197669]

Mr. Mullin: On 7 November my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary expressed his condolences to the French Foreign Minister for the deaths of nine French peacekeepers killed in an airstrike on 6 November. He confirmed our support for French actions to defend civilians in Abidjan, and thanked them for their support of the UN operation. He expressed our gratitude for French help in protecting British nationals in Abidjan.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials had with the Government of Ivory Coast concerning its security situation prior to the recent emergency meeting of the UN Security Council. [197670]

Mr. Mullin: Since the signing of the Linas Marcoussis Agreement in January 2003 we have maintained an intense dialogue with the Ivorian Government, and indeed major Ivorian parties, to urge all Ivorian signatories to fulfil their responsibilities and deliver sustainable peace.

Last weekend we expressed our deep concern to the Cote d'Ivoire Government at the security situation, calling for an end to the violence, and emphasising that the Government of Cote d'Ivoire is responsible for the safety of all British Nationals.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with the Organisation of African Union concerning the situation in the Ivory Coast; and if he will make a statement. [197671]

Mr. Mullin: We discussed the situation in Cote d'Ivoire with President Obasanjo of Nigeria, the current Chair of the African Union (AU) on 7 November.

On 6 November, the AU and the Economic Community of West African States met to discuss the Ivorian political crisis. The AU has condemned the Ivorian airstrikes, and is working to develop a political solution to the crisis. We welcome this.

We strongly condemn the breach of the cease-fire and have called on the Government of Cote d'Ivoire to end all military action and to guarantee the safety of foreign nationals.

Nigeria/Cameroon

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to encourage Nigeria to cede sovereignty of the Bakassi peninsula to Cameroon, as required under the October 2002 ruling by the International Court of Justice. [197130]

Mr. Mullin: We have made clear to both Nigeria and Cameroon our support for the International Court of Justice ruling. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 13 October 2004, Official Report, column 299W.

We support the work of the UN Mixed Commission and look to Nigeria and Cameroon to negotiate the detail of implementation. We hope the decision at the last meeting in October to remit further discussion to the respective Heads of State, and the UN Secretary-General, will lead to a swift resolution.

Romania

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Foreign Minister of Romania in connection with that country's application for EU membership. [197478]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I regularly meet Romanian Foreign Minister Mircea Geoana in London, Brussels and Bucharest. I met him most recently during the visit of President Iliescu on 8 September 2004. We regularly discuss Romania's preparations for EU accession. Mr. Geoana often expresses his gratitude for the UK's continuing support and assistance.

Rwanda

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will assess the threat posed to the security of Rwanda by the presence of Ex-FAR/Interahamwe in the East of the Democratic Republic of Congo; and whether the level of threat has altered since 1994. [197433]

Mr. Mullin: The Ex-FAR/Interahamwe are a well armed force of several thousand. Since 1994, their strength and potency has diminished, but they continue to pose a threat to the security and stability of Rwanda's border regions and eastern Democratic Republic of Congo.

Southern Thailand

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have taken place between the Government and Thailand regarding instability in the provinces of Narathiwat, Pattani and Yala. [197132]

Mr. Alexander: We have expressed our concerns to the Thai Government at the loss of life during and after clashes between protestors and members of the Thai security forces on 25 October.

An independent committee is investigating the tragedy. We welcome this investigation and hope the committee can swiftly establish the facts to allow those responsible to be held fully accountable.

We remain in close contact with the Thai Government about the situation in the far south of Thailand.

Turkey

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Turkey's proposed accession to the EU accession. [197698]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Govan (Mr. Sarwar) on 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 473W.

HEALTH

A and E Staff

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed in the accident and emergency departments in Hull and East Yorkshire NHS Trust on 1 October (a) 2004 and (b) 2003, broken down by grade. [194973]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Figures for the number of staff employed in accident and emergency departments on 1 October 2004 have not yet been published. The figures for 2003 are shown in the table.

Breast Cancer

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting times for breast cancer treatment were in each year since 1997 in North Lincolnshire and Goole NHS Trust; and if he will make a statement. [194187]

Cancelled Operations

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations in Hull and the East Riding in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004 were cancelled for non-clinical reasons; and what proportion of admissions these figures represent in each case. [194978]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested is shown in the table.

Cancer

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made since the publications by the National Audit Office of its report, "Tackling cancer in England: saving more lives", HC364, Session 2003–04, in improving (a) five year survival rates and (b) mortality rates. [197259]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 9 November 2004]: No new assessment has been made comparing progress to other countries as regards cancer survival and mortality since the National Audit Office report was published.

Capital Investment

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of capital investment in primary care facilities in Hodge Hill; and what future capital investments will be made in (a) 2005, (b) 2006 and (c) 2007. [197235]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There are four schemes for capital investment in primary care facilities in the Eastern Birmingham primary care trust area, which includes the Hodge Hill constituency. These have either been completed or there is a planned investment within the period 2003–04 to 2006–07. The schemes are as follows:

Pearl Medical Centre—completed in 2003–04 with an investment of £200,000.

Washwood Heath—refurbishment costs of £50,000 in 2004–05.

Saltley Medical Centre—an interim solution at a cost of £600,000 in 2004–05. A permanent solution through the local investment finance trust (LIFT) programme is planned, at a cost of £6.5 million, scheduled to commence in 2006.

Kitts Green Medical Centre—a LIFT scheme of £3.5 million is planned to start in 2007.

Care Assistants

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the proportion of care assistants working in the UK who are from (a) the UK, (b) Eastern Europe and (c) the Philippines. [195842]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is not available centrally.

Data collected by the local government employers' organisation showed that, as at 30 September 2001, grossed estimated number of care workers working in residential, dual registered and nursing homes in the independent and voluntary sector was 285,300, and the number of domiciliary care workers was 111,600.

Data collected by the Department in respect to local authority headcount indicates 110,985 staff at 30 September 2003 employed as care staff in day centres, residential establishments and specialist needs establishments and in domiciliary care.

Workforce data collected by both the employers' organisation and the Department includes broad ethnic group broad ethnic groups, but nothing to identify those from Eastern Europe, the Philippines or even the United Kingdom.

Dementia

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that guidance is issued on the uniform prescribing of anti-dementia drugs; and if he will make a statement. [196930]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has produced guidance on the use of drugs for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease and will be producing new guidance on pharmaceutical treatments for non-Alzheimer dementias by May 2005.

NICE is also developing a comprehensive guideline on all aspects of the management of dementia in older people. This guideline is currently planned for release in February 2007. This will bring together and build on the drug appraisals referred to above.

Dental Care

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental suites there will be in the Yarnspinners Wharf Medical Centre in Nelson; and if he will make a statement. [196461]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The dental action plan for the Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale Primary Care Trust indicates that there will be four dental suites within the Yarnspinners Wharf local investment finance trust development in Nelson. This forms part of the new health centre development that will replace the current Nelson Health Centre in 2004–05.

Eye Test Charges

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many residents in Manchester, Withington aged over 60 years have benefited from the abolition of charges for eye tests. [197878]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Data for the number of sight tests by constituency or by the number of senior citizens is not collected centrally.

The total number of national health service sight tests paid for by the Greater Manchester strategic health authority in 2002–03 for patients in the aged 60 and over category was 189,900. The total number eligible for a free sight test for those aged 60 and over was 493,100. Sight tests cannot be equated to the numbers of patients.

Fluoridation

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated costs are of the capital works which would be necessary to fluoridate domestic water supplies in the West Yorkshire strategic health authority area; and what the annual revenue costs are estimated to be. [191140]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The University of York health economic consortium conducted a study in 1998 in "Water Fluoridation—An Economic Perspective". Applying the figures in this study to a population the size of West Yorkshire strategic health authority, the initial capital cost would be around £3 million. Figures from the water industry suggest that recurring revenue costs would be approximately 80 pence per head of population. Research indicates that the fluoridation of water is capable of increasing the number of children without tooth decay by 15 per cent.

Free Fruit

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when (a) Broughton, (b) Stockbridge, (c) Wallop, (d) Wherwell and (e) Barton Stacey schools will have access to the free fruit in school scheme. [196918]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Schools in Broughton, Stockbridge, Wallop, Wherwell and Barton Stacey that have joined the school fruit and vegetable scheme will have received their first delivery of fruit and/or vegetables on either 2 or 3 November. The first consumption date for children in those schools will have been either 3 or 4 November.

Roll out of the school fruit and vegetable scheme is currently being staggered to eligible schools in the four remaining regions, including the South East.

GP Services

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on out-of-hours services for general practitioners in North Yorkshire; [197079]

(2) if he will make a statement on the extent of the use of locum doctors for out-of-hours general practitioner services in North Yorkshire. [197485]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The four primary care trusts have contracted with North Yorkshire Emergency Doctors for the provision of out-of-hours general practitioner-services. North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire Strategic Health Authority estimates that around 20 per cent. of this service is currently provided by locum doctors.

Health and Social Care

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support will be given to an individual to enable them to express their wishes when an assessment of individual capacity is carried out by health and social care professionals. [194807]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 1 November 2004]: The Mental Capacity Bill starts from the assumption that a person has capacity unless it is established that he or she lacks it. It includes an obligation in the principles set out in clause 1 to take "all practicable steps" to help the person make his or her own decision. This will include the provision of communication and other forms of support to make sure that the person is not too readily regarded as lacking capacity and enabling them to express their wishes.

The code of practice will provide detail about the types of communication support, which should be made available when health and social care professionals make an assessment of capacity. This includes taking time to be with someone to explain the decision in a way that the person can understand, the provision of electronic and other technical aids and language experts, where appropriate.

We have issued guidance to local authorities to explain the importance of involving independent advocates when appropriate in assessments of need and the Code of Practice emphasises this as well.

Health Protection Agency

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the administration costs were of the Health Protection Agency in the last year for which figures are available; and how many staff it employed. [196118]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The administration costs for the Health Protection Agency (HPA) for the year ended 31 March 2004 were £7.9 million. These costs were incurred for the key central activities of human resources, finance, audit and corporate affairs.

The HPA employed 2,518 whole-time equivalent (wte) staff during 2003–04. In addition, over the same time period, a further 200 wte staff were employed on agency, secondment or similar arrangements.

Hospital Infections

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in each (a) hospital and (b) trust in England have contracted methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus in the NHS since 1997. [193456]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information by individual named trust is only available from 2001, when we introduced mandatory surveillance for methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections. The data is available on the Department's website at http://www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/08/58/93/04085893.pdf.

Copies have been placed in the Library.

Information by individual hospital is not available.

Leukaemia

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the report on research by the Childhood Cancer Research Group at Oxford University into possible links between power lines and childhood leukaemia. [197002]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A report by the Childhood Cancer Research Group at Oxford University into possible links between power lines and childhood leukaemia is being submitted to the Department this week. At the same time, the report will be sent to a scientific journal for publication. In accordance with the usual practice, publication will follow the appropriate peer review process. This is expected to take a few weeks.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on research conducted by his Department on possible links between high voltage power lines and incidence of leukaemia in children under 15-years-old. [197551]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Northampton North (Ms Keeble) today.

Nappies

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the environmental (a) benefits and (b) disbenefit of the use of (i) disposable and (ii) re-usable nappies in NHS hospitals. [196968]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Issues relating to the environmental impact of the use of disposable or re-usable nappies are a matter for the Department for Environment and Rural Affairs.

The use of disposable or re-usable nappies in the national health service is a matter for individual maternity units and trusts to determine locally.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued to NHS Trusts on the use of disposable nappies in maternity units. [196969]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The use of disposable or re-usable nappies in the national health service is a matter for individual maternity units and trusts to determine locally.

Neck Surgery

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether patients awaiting neck surgery will be affected by the investigation by the NHS Counter Fraud Service into the Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust as a result of the appointment of the head of neck surgery as the acting chief executive. [195305]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority reports that patients waiting for head and neck surgery or consultation at the Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital National Health Service Trust will not be affected by the appointment of Mr. Andrew Prichard as acting chief executive.

NHS Bureaucracy

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many forms that are included in central returns of information and statistics to (a) his Department and (b) his Department's arm's length bodies are required from NHS organisations in each year. [193410]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information on the number of forms included in central returns is not available centrally for the Department or its arm's length bodies. The overall number of central returns and changes to the burden these impose on the national health service is strictly controlled.

At the end of 2003–04 there were 127 ongoing central returns, and this number will be reduced by at least 20 per cent., by the end of 2004–05.

NHS Dentists

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists operate in West Oxfordshire; and how many were operating in West Oxfordshire in (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [195432]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The numbers of general (GDS) and personal dental service (PDS) dentists in the South West Oxfordshire Primary Care Trust (PCT) area at 30 September 1997, 2001 and 2004 are shown in the table.

North Cheshire Hospitals Trust

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answers of 26 October 2004, Official Report, column 1202W, to questions 193629, 193630 and 193631, on the North Cheshire hospitals trust, if he will provide the information for the last 12 months for which figures are available. [196378]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Information for 2003–04 is not yet available. However, the latest available data for the numbers of people who have received treatment for diabetes, coronary heart disease and stroke is shown in the following table.

Primary diagnosis—selected groups of diagnoses—counts of finished admission episodes for North Cheshire hospital trust (organisation code RWW). NHS hospitals, England 2002–03

Primary diagnosis	Finished admission episodes
Type I diabetes	241
Type II diabetes	329
Coronary heart disease	1,148
Stroke	424

Notes:
1. A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
2. The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the hospital episode statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
3. Definition of selected group of diagnoses:
Type I diabetes: 3 character primary diagnosis code = E10 or 4 character primary diagnosis code = 0240.
Type II diabetes: 3 character primary diagnosis code = E11 or 4 character primary diagnosis code = 0241.
Coronary heart disease: 3 character primary diagnosis code between 120 to 125.
Stroke: 3 character primary diagnosis code between 160 to 164
4. Figures have not (yet) been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answers of 26 October 2004, Official Report, column 1202W, to questions 193632 and 193645, on NHS services in Warrington and North Cheshire, if he will (a) obtain the information and (b) publish it. [196380]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested on the number of people suffering from chronic pain is not available. It is not possible to determine which patients are suffering from this condition using diagnosis codes.

The number of people receiving support from a national health service dietician in Warrington is not held by the Department and can be obtained from the Warrington primary care trust.

Nurses' Pay

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average full-time equivalent gross pay of nurses in North Lincolnshire and Goole NHS Trust was in each year since 1997 (a) across all grades and (b) at each grade. [194185]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Pylons

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will publish the report on the health effects of electricity pylons. [196748]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton, North (Ms Keeble) today.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the Prime Minister on the health effects of electricity pylons. [196749]

Miss Melanie Johnson: None.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research he has evaluated on the health effects of electricity pylons. [196750]

Miss Melanie Johnson: At the request of the Department, the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) has recently undertaken a comprehensive research evaluation of the health effects of electromagnetic fields (EMF) to support its most recent advice on limiting EMF exposure. This advice was published in March 2004 in the series, "Documents of the NRPB" (Volume 15, No. 2, 2004). NRPB information on extremely low frequency fields (ELF) such as those from power lines was principally drawn from a report on "ELF Electromagnetic Fields and the Risk of Cancer" (2001) by the NRPB's independent advisory group on non-ionising radiation.

In providing advice on EMF, the NRPB continually monitors world-wide research and works closely with the International Commission on Non-Ionizing Radiation Protection and the World Health Organization

Renal Dialysis

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients from Warrington are travelling outside the local area for renal dialysis. [197641]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested is not held centrally.

Sexual Health

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the report by the Independent Advisory Group for Sexual Health and HIV on training general practitioners to perform medical and surgical terminations. [197981]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department is considering all of the recommendations contained in the annual report for 2003–04 of the Independent Advisory Group for Sexual Health and HIV and will be publishing a response in due course.

Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which hospitals will be affected by the NHS Counter-Fraud Service inquiry into the Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust; [195306]

(2) if he will ensure that any financial shortfall discovered by the NHS Counter Fraud Service inquiry into the Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust arising from financial misconduct or other irregularities will be made good from public funds; [195307]

(3) whether the findings of the inquiry by the NHS Counter Fraud Service into the Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust will be made public; [195308]

(4) when the inquiry by the NHS Counter Fraud Service into the Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust will report. [195309]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Shrewsbury and Telford hospital national health service trust covers the Royal Shrewsbury hospital, Shrewsbury and the Princess Royal hospital, Telford. Both hospitals will be involved in the investigation which is in the hands of the NHS Counter Fraud Service. Any further action will depend on the outcome of the investigation. When the investigation is concluded, and subject to legal advice, it is the trust's intention to make the findings public.

Smallpox Vaccine

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full, undiluted, tons of the smallpox vaccine his Department holds. [196304]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Quantities of smallpox vaccine are given in doses rather than tonnage. The United Kingdom Government currently has over 40 million doses of undiluted smallpox vaccine. The National Institute for Biological Standards and Control has tested the potency and stability of the vaccine, supplied from several sources, and has certified it as being suitable for use in the event of a smallpox emergency.

Transport

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what funding has been allocated to the provision of transport to health care facilities in North Yorkshire in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; [197307]

(2) what plans he has to secure funding additional to that already allocated for improvements to transport links to health care facilities in North Yorkshire. [197308]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Funding for the provision of transport to health care facilities is included in the baseline allocation to primary care trusts (PCTs). In the financial year 2004–05, the four PCTs that cover North Yorkshire received baseline allocations totalling £668.6 million.

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the change in waiting lists for hospitals covering the constituency of Bolsover has been since 1997. [197093]

Dr. Ladyman: Information relating to those national health service trusts most likely to cover the Bolsover constituency is shown in the following table.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many in-patients in the primary care trust covering the Sedgefield constituency had to wait more than (a) three, (b) six, (c) nine and (d) 12 months for treatment in each year since 1997; and what the percentage change was in each case; [195101]

(2) what changes there have been to NHS waiting list times for residents of the Sedgefield constituency in the past seven years. [195102]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information is not gathered on a constituency basis. The table shows the requested information for the Sedgefield Primary Care Trust and its predecessor body.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Airport Police

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of policing independently owned airports in the UK was in the last year for which figures are available; and what contribution to this cost was made by airport owners. [191317]

Ms Blears [holding answer 15 October 2004]: The majority of airports in the UK are independently owned. Some groups own a number of airports, such as BAA (which owns Heathrow, Gatwick, Stansted, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen and Southampton) and Manchester Airports Group plc (which owns Manchester, Nottingham, East Midlands, Bournemouth and Humberside.) Only a few airports are owned by the local authority, such as City of Derry airport.

The policing of airports is a matter for the Chief Constable of each force who is advised by the National Co-ordinator of Ports Policing. Uniform policing arrangements are made on a territorial basis as the circumstances of each airport dictate.

Funding has been made available to the police service in England and Wales to enable them to respond to the current threat from international terrorism and which includes funding for policing at non-designated airports. For security reasons we would not wish to comment on the level of funding allocated to individual police forces for specific reasons.

Under the Aviation Security Act 1982, for those airports which are "designated", the airport and the police agree between them the relevant contribution to the costs of policing. Sir John Wheeler's report on Aviation Security recommended a review of the arrangements by which airports are "designated" for uniform policing purposes. A working group has been established and is taking this forward.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the alcohol industry on financial contributions the industry may make towards the costs of policing alcohol-related antisocial behaviour. [196848]

Ms Blears: We are working with the industry to draw up a social responsibility scheme and a code of practice. The scheme will be voluntary, but will include a financial contribution from retailers, where necessary, towards managing the local crime and disorder consequences of alcohol misuse.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in North Somerset since their introduction. [196694]

Ms Blears: Antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) have been available to the courts since 1 April 1999. The number of notifications received by the Home office of ASBOs issued, up to 30 June 2004 (latest available), where the restrictions imposed are specific to North Somerset council, is four.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to visit other countries to assess their immigration and asylum procedures. [191272]

Mr. Browne: Formal discussion of immigration and asylum procedures takes place in a number of fora at both EU and international level. Myself and other Ministers also undertake bilateral visits to meet our counterparts in other countries, which provides opportunities to assess their immigration and asylum procedures.

For example, along with other Ministers, I will be visiting other EU member states in the run up to the UK presidency, primarily in order to promote the justice and home affairs agenda. This will be combined with my usual ministerial duties and will give me an opportunity to assess the immigration and asylum procedures in the states which I visit. As part of this programme I have recently visited Hungary and the Czech Republic.

The UK also maintains strong co-operation with the Governments of our key cross-channel partners on immigration and asylum issues. The Home Secretary leads on these contacts and meets with his counterparts when possible. He will be meeting with his French counterpart in mid-November.

In terms of visits further afield, at the end of October I visited China and Vietnam as part of the UK's continuing engagement with the Chinese and Vietnamese Governments on asylum and immigration issues. China remains the source of a significant number of asylum applications and illegal entrants. During my visit I discussed with Chinese Ministers and senior officials how the number of unfounded applications can be reduced and how the UK and China can work together to dismantle the criminal gangs responsible for facilitating illegal entry to the UK. We also considered how we can improve the system for returning those who have no leave to remain in the UK. Asylum applications from Vietnam have shown year-on-year increases from 2001 to 2003, and we are working closely with the Vietnamese Government to address this. My trip included a day in Vietnam where I was able to discuss this further with Ministers and officials. While in Hanoi, I also signed a Memorandum of Understanding between the UK and Vietnam on migration issues which will facilitate the return to Vietnam of Vietnamese citizens residing illegally in the UK and also sets out a framework for future co-operation on migration.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the principal countries of origin were of (a) legal and (b) illegal immigrants to the UK in each of the last 25 years. [191273]

Mr. Browne: Statistics on the number of persons granted indefinite leave to remain (settlement) in the UK are shown in the table.

Prior to 1991 data is shown in five-year intervals, as it would incur disproportionate cost to produce the requested information from manual records.

There is no information available on the country of origin of illegal migrants. Illegal migrants are motivated to remain hidden, so by definition they fall outside official statistics and therefore it is difficult to obtain information about them.

In the light of this, information on those illegal migrants who are detected by the Immigration Service would not necessarily reflect the principal countries of origin.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with his French counterparts on limiting illegal immigration to this country. [191453]

Mr. Browne: The French and UK Governments have a long-standing working relationship on immigration matters, working closely together to deal with the problems of illegal immigration from France. Ministers and officials meet frequently in forums such as the biannual Anglo-French Summit and the Cross Channel Commission, and other bilateral meetings. The UK and France also maintain regular contact between staff and exchange intelligence at an operational level.

Following a number of constructive meetings in the summer and autumn of 2002, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and the French Interior Minister agreed a substantial package of measures, including the closure of the Sangatte Red Cross Centre through which around 67,000 people passed in three years. The centre had served as a magnet for would-be illegal immigrants and a centre for people smugglers. This package of measures has formed the basis for much of the work that is currently ongoing of moving the UK's border controls to France.

Working in co-operation with French counterparts, the Immigration Service continues to deploy a range of initiatives to deter and detect illegal entry to the UK. These include: the enhancement of the juxtaposed controls established at Calais, Dunkerque, Boulogne, Paris and Lille; the continued deployment of UK personnel detection technology in France; and continued efforts to ensure the closest co-operation between carriers, port authorities and French colleagues. These measures successfully prevented over 9,000 people reaching the UK from France during 2003.

British Crime Survey

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the differences are in the data collected for the British Crime Survey and police recorded crime. [196700]

Ms Blears: The British Crime Survey (BCS) and police recorded crime statistics are complementary series that together provide a better picture of crime than could be obtained from either series alone. Together they ensure that we have available the most comprehensive picture of crime in England and Wales.

Police statistics provide a good measure of trends in well-reported crimes, are an important indicator of police workload, and can be used for local crime pattern analysis.

For the crime types it covers, the BCS can provide a better reflection of the true extent of crime because it includes crimes that are not reported to the police. The BCS count also gives a better indication of trends in crime over time because it is unaffected by changes in levels of reporting to the police, and in police recording practices.

The British Crime Survey (BCS) includes all crimes experienced by adults aged 16 and over living in private households in England and Wales, with the following exceptions:

Murder (since we cannot interview the victims)

Corporate crime

Fraud (although credit card fraud is covered separately).

By definition, the BCS does not include commercial victimisation nor crimes against under 16's.

Police recorded crime counts all those offences that are reported to the police and recorded by them in accordance with the Home Office Counting Rules for Recorded Crime and the National Crime Recording Standard. All reports of incidents result in the registration of an incident report by the police. Following that registration, an incident will be recorded as a crime, if, on the balance of probability, the circumstances as reported amount to a crime defined by law and there is no credible evidence to the contrary.

British Transport Police

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community safety officers (a) are operating and (b) are expected to operate under the auspices of the British Transport police; what their role will be; what funding has been applied for their function; for what purposes; when he expects a decision to be made on the application; and if he will make a statement. [196486]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

The British Transport police (BTP) are accountable through the BTP Authority to the Secretary of State for Transport. The force is funded by the rail industry and the authority approves its budget. There are currently no community support officers (CSOs) operating under the auspices of the BTP. The authority has approved the recruitment of 151 CSOs and a recruitment process is under way. The role of the CSOs will be to provide a high visibility presence at stations, on trains and on London underground. They will reassure the public and staff; help prevent, deter and disrupt terrorism, crime and disorder; and support BTP officers and allow them to be released to deal with more serious issues when appropriate.

Centrex Action Plan

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the response to Centrex's Action Plan will be published. [194904]

Ms Blears: We are currently considering the Centrex (Central Police Training and Development Authority) Action Plan, produced in response to the recent Her Majesty's Inspection of Constabulary (HMIC) inspection, and are liaising with Centrex and HMIC regarding it. We have no plans to publish a formal response to the Action Plan.

Community Support Officers

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the integration of community support officers into a long-term policing strategy. [195475]

Ms Blears: The primary role of Community Support Officers (CSOs) is to provide a high visibility and reassuring presence in the communities where they patrol.

CSOs will be a key component of neighbourhood policing teams which will provide a visible, accessible and responsive presence in communities. We will support the roll-out of neighbourhood policing with substantial investment through the new Neighbourhood Policing Fund (NPF) which will deliver 24,000 CSOs by 2008.

We are also working with stakeholders to develop a minimum set of powers which all CSOs need to play a full part in neighbourhood policing, and to develop role profiles linked to national occupational standards to enable forces to match recruitment, training and development programmes to the work that CSOs perform.

Claire Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when funding for community support officers in Watford will end; and what discussions he has had with (a) the police and (b) local authorities on (i) the requirement and (ii) the funding for these officers. [196577]

Ms Blears: We have notified forces that Home Office funding for community support officer (CSO) posts allocated under the three CSO funding rounds since 2002 is available until the end of March 2008.

Out target is to have 24,000 CSOs in place by 2008. We have allocated £50 million under the first round of the Neighbourhood Policing Fund (NPF) to recruit new CSOs before the end of March 2005 and to support their salary and related costs in 2005–06. Forces will be notified of their allocations shortly. Funding under this round of the NPF will also continue to be available until the end of March 2008.

Details of further rounds of the NPF will be announced next year. Decisions on funding arrangements for CSOs after 2008 will be made in the context of the next spending review.

The deployment of CSOs is an operational decision for chief officers.

Crime Victims

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to improve services to victims of crime. [190592]

Paul Goggins: The Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Bill introduces a code of practice, binding on criminal justice agencies, which lists the services they should be delivering to victims. The code will create tangible statutory rights for all victims around the themes of information, advice, support and protection. The Bill will also establish a Commissioner for Victims and Witnesses to champion the interests of victims and witnesses across Government.

The Bill includes measures to improve the police response to domestic violence by making common assault an arrestable offence; and making breach of a non-molestation order a criminal offence, punishable by up to five years' imprisonment. It will also extend protection to victims by giving courts the power to impose a restraining order where a defendant has been acquitted but the court believes the victim needs protection.

In April this year, we established a Victims Fund with the announcement of £4 million from the proceeds of crime to be spent on victims of sexual offending over the next two years. Some of this will be used to extend the number and coverage of sexual assault referral centres.

We also continue to support the voluntary organisation Victim Support in their work with victims and witnesses. Between 1997 and 2004 the Home Office's funding of Victim Support nearly trebled, from £11.7 million to £30 million.

In addition, we have been working to extend specialist support services for road traffic victims. Pilot projects, subject to independent evaluation, have been established in three areas to test approaches to service provision. Findings from the evaluation will steer future developments on national provision.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will amend the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme to enable a child injured by a foster parent with whose family he or she had been placed by a local authority to recover compensation under the scheme. [192742]

Paul Goggins: A child in such a case has in fact been eligible for compensation since the scheme rules were changed with effect from 1 October 1979 to admit cases of intra-family violence (where the victim and assailant were living together as members of the same family), which had previously been excluded. Proposals to admit cases involving intra-family violence occurring before the 1 October 1979 rule change have been considered whenever amendments to the scheme have been mooted. However, successive administrations have decided not to change the rule because it would add a large and unacceptable burden to the costs of the scheme.

Dispersal Order Scheme

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the dispersal order scheme at (a) Elm Park, (b) Hornchurch and (c) Upminster Bridge stations. [194728]

Caroline Flint: I understand from British Transport Police that the use of dispersal powers under section 30 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 together with other measures has contributed to a visible fall in groups of youths loitering on stations and causing disorder on the eastern end of the District Line, together with a significant reduction in recorded crime.

Drugs

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrestees in (a) Haltemprice and Howden, (b) the East Riding of Yorkshire and (c) the Humberside police authority area tested positive for category A and B drugs in each of the last four quarters for which figures are available. [194981]

Caroline Flint: It is not possible to provide figures for the number of individuals testing positive at arrest for Class A or Class B drugs. However, the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 gave the police power to drug test arrestees once they are charged with a trigger offence. Data on the number of individuals testing positive at charge for opiates and/or cocaine and/or crack are available from three drug testing sites in Humberside police force, and are shown in table 1. There is no data available for the areas of Haltemprice, Howden and East Riding of Yorkshire as they are not currently drug testing sites.

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what classification of drugs has taken place in Thames Valley police area during the last 12 months. [195606]

Caroline Flint: The number of illegal drugs seized by the Thames Valley police area during the last 12 months is not currently available. The latest data that are available for the Thames Valley police force are for 2002. The information is analysed from the Home Office Drug Seizures Database and relates to all drugs classified under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. The data have been published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin on Drug Seizure and Offender Statistics 2001 and 2002 (maps 1, 2 and 3 on pages 10, 15 and 19 of the main bulletin and tables A1.1 to A 1.5 of the area tables). The bulletin is available on the RDS website and in the House Library.

Fixed Penalty Notices

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fixed penalty notices have been issued under section 72 of the Highways Act 1835, in each year since 1999, broken down by (a) police and (b) local authority area. [196411]

Caroline Flint: The regular collection of data on fixed penalties for motoring offences does not identify separately offences peculiar to driving a motor vehicle on a footpath (section 72 of the Highways Act 1835), from other motoring offences of neglect of pedestrian rights. Neither are fixed penalty data collected centrally on the number of pedal cyclists riding on a footpath or obstructions caused by animals (also under section 72 of the Highways Act 1835).

However, the table shows information collected as part of a special exercise conducted in 2001 on the number of fixed penalties issued by police force area, for specific offences under section 72 of the Highways Act 1835, in 1999 and 2000 only.

Fixed penalty offences: Number of substantive tickets issued, England and Wales, August to December 1999 and January to December 2000 for cycling and driving on the footpath (pavement) offences under section 72 of the Highways Act 1835 by police force area

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will arrange for the payment of fixed penalty notices issued in Great Britain to holders of driving licences issued in Northern Ireland to be payable by cheque without the necessity of appearance at court in Great Britain. [196419]

Caroline Flint: If a driver is able to avail himself of the fixed penalty system, he does not have to appear in court. Holders of driving licences issued in Northern Ireland are now in this position. The Crime (International Cooperation) Act 2003, which came into effect on 11 October 2004, allows NI driving licences holders to apply for a GB counterpart to the licence. The possession of the counterpart allows them access to the fixed penalty system for endorsable road traffic offences committed by them while driving in Great Britain.

The decision to offer a fixed penalty is for the police. They may choose prosecution if they consider that the more appropriate course.

Foreign Agencies

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what correspondence his Department had with foreign agencies prior to the seizure of web servers from the office of Rackspace; from which agencies correspondence was received; and what authorisations were granted to these foreign agencies. [195833]

Caroline Flint: The Home Office received no correspondence from foreign agencies in relation to this matter, and gave no authorisations.

Forensic Science Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the proposal to convert the Forensic Science Service into a public-private partnership. [196631]

Caroline Flint: As my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary made clear following the independent review of the Forensic Science Service (FSS), radical change is the only realistic option if the potential for forensic science is to be maximised.

Since then, we have been working closely with the FSS and the police to ensure that we are clear about how the necessary changes can best be managed, taking into account the demands of the criminal justice system, ongoing developments in the use of forensic science and the business needs of the FSS itself.

An Outline Business Case has been prepared that provides an analysis of those needs and of the forensic science market. The results are the subject of on-going discussions with key stakeholders.

Gambling

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the likely impact of the provisions of the Gambling Bill on criminal activity. [196630]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

The Bill should ensure either a reduction or no increase in criminal activity associated with gambling, since it will extend the scope of effective regulation to forms of gambling which currently lack it and establish important new investigative and enforcement powers, including the power for the Gambling Commission to exchange information with other regulators.

Hunting

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to enforce the proposed ban on hunting with dogs in the event of deliberate law-breaking. [191001]

Caroline Flint: Enforcing the proposed ban on hunting, as with other offences, is a matter for the police. The Association of Chief Police Officers have made it clear that they consider the Bill to be enforceable. Deferring commencement will help the police prepare for the ban.

Indymedia

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he authorised the seizure of web servers belonging to Indymedia. [191015]

Caroline Flint: I can confirm that no UK law enforcement agencies were involved, so no authorisations were needed.

Metropolitan Police

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers serving in the Metropolitan police force have resigned from the force in each of the last three years to transfer to another police force in the United Kingdom. [193475]

Ms Blears: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has advised me that the number of Metropolitan officers who have transferred to other UK forces in the previous three years is as follows:

	Number
2001-02	442
2002-03	430
2003-04	381

Note:
The information has been recorded as full-time equivalent. The number of individual officers is not available. The recording period is from April to March, as per the financial year.

The total police officer strength as at 31 March in each of the given years for the Metropolitan police is contained in the following table:

	Number
2001	24,878
2002	26,223
2003	27,984
2004	29,735

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department keeps the funding of the Metropolitan Police Service's capital city functions under review; and if he will make a statement. [194129]

Ms Blears: The Metropolitan Police Service uniquely receives special additional provision within its police formula grant in recognition of its capital city and national functions. The additional provision was £207 million in 2004–05. The amount is reviewed annually and we are currently considering the level for next year. This will be announced shortly as part of the provisional funding settlement for 2005–06.

Motor Cycling

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what examples of best practice are available to (a) local authorities and (b) police authorities on (i) making provision for off-road motorcycles and (ii) tackling irresponsible off-road motorcycling. [195780]

Caroline Flint: We have given the police a power to seize any vehicle being used without authority off-road, or inconsiderately on-road, where such usage causes alarm, distress or annoyance. The vehicles are then released only on payment of prescribed fees for removal and storage. This puts an immediate stop to the nuisance. We are aware that a number of police forces have been working with their local authorities and other members of local crime and disorder reduction partnerships to make best use of this power and to take other steps to reduce the problem, including via the provision of facilities for lawful off-road motor-cycling. We are currently discussing with the Association of Chief Police Officers the effective use of the power, the identification of good practice and any need for further central guidance.

National Intelligence Model

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implementation of the National Intelligence Model [197174]

Caroline Flint: Implementation of the National Intelligence Model (NIM) which was planned for in the 2001, "Policing a New Century" White Paper, has ensured that the NIM has become the cornerstone of policing in England and Wales. All 43 forces have now reached the minimum standards for NIM compliance.

Police forces' approaches to implementation of NIM have varied both in format and intensity and the challenge now is for forces to continue to work on developing and enhancing the model in order to ensure that it is fully embedded in operational policing.

Overseas Corruption

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with which foreign jurisdictions his law enforcement agencies are co-operating on investigations into overseas corruption cases. [194718]

Caroline Flint: We cannot comment on individual reports received in order not to prejudice criminal investigations.

Police

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in (a) Avon and Somerset and (b) East Somerset district in each quarter from 1992–93 to 30 September; and if he will make a statement. [191312]

Ms Blears: The latest available information on police officer numbers is published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 13/04, "Police Service Strength in England and Wales 31 March 2004", a copy of which should be available from the House of Commons Library or internet site http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html.

In England and Wales, the numbers of police officers employed in Avon and Somerset and East Somerset district are given in the following table. For Avon and Somerset police force area, only six monthly figures are available for years March 1995 to March 2004 and annual figures for March 1992 to March 1994.

For East Somerset district, data are only available for March.

	Avon and Somerset police force area		East Somerset district

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the North Yorkshire Police Authority budget was met from council tax receipts in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 2004–05. [193904]

Ms Blears: The information is set out in the table.

	1997–98	2004–05[1]
Total gross revenue expenditure (£000)	74,485	132,874
Total government funding[2] (£000)	59,295	79,957

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been recruited in England and Wales in each year since 2001. [196815]

Ms Blears: Information on police officers joining the police service is published annually in a Home Office Statistical Bulletin. The latest figures appeared in Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 13/04, copies of which are available in the Library or on the internet site:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html

Police officers joining the service since 2001 in England and Wales are as follows:

As at 31 March:	Number
2001	7,415
2002	10,215
2003[1]	13,126

[1] Not comparable with previous recruitment figures as data includes transfers from other England and Wales forces.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average number of arrests per day was for police officers in England and Wales in the six months (a) before and (b) after the commencement of the Charging Initiative of the Crown Prosecution Service. [196233]

Ms Blears: The Charging Initiative is being implemented in two phases: statutory and shadow. In May 2004 the first area moved to statutory charging. The first areas to fully implement shadow charging went live in June 2004. Statutory charging will have been implemented in the 13 priority areas by November 2004. By the end of 2004–05 all but six areas will have full shadow charging in place.

Figures for the number of persons arrested for notifiable offences are available centrally only up to 31 March 2003. Data for the financial year 2003–04 are due to be published in December 2004. No meaningful before and after comparisons will be available until the 2004–05 arrest data are published at the end of 2005.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which local authority wards comprise each police authority basic command unit in England and Wales. [195176]

Ms Blears: The information requested will be placed in the House Library.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future funding of (a) community support officers and (b) regular officers. [195476]

Ms Blears: We have made £50 million available under the first phase of the Neighbourhood Policing Fund (NPF) to help forces recruit additional Community Support Officers (CSOs) by March 2005. Under this round we will pay 100 per cent. of salary costs, up to a maximum of £24,5000 per annum, until the end of 2005–06. We shall continue to meet at least 75 per cent. of the salary costs allocated in this round in 2006–07.

The NPF will provide further support to deliver our target of 24,000 CSOs by 2008.

We will also provide 50 per cent. of the salary and related costs of CSOs recruited as part of earlier funding rounds until the end of 2007–08.

The provisional police funding settlement will be announced shortly and will be followed by a six week consultation period.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure that funding is available for moves to new technology in the police force. [195478]

Caroline Flint: The Home Office has and will continue to provide significant funding to support the delivery of new technology in the police force.

The science and technology initiatives set out in the Home Office Science and Technology Strategy support the Government's key priorities for policing as set out in the National Policing Plan 2004–07. The Home Office will seek to fund these initiatives from the recent SR2004 settlement.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how cost implications of new technology for the police force are assessed and monitored by the Department. [195479]

Caroline Flint: The cost implications of new technology for the police force are subject to an assessment and monitoring process. As far as police information and communications technology is concerned the central customer function of the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO) supports the police service in articulating its business requirements for ICT. Its function is to provide robust business cases and to encourage the deployment of solutions in forces that meet those needs and enable the realisation of policing benefits.

The priorities and business requirements set by the central customer will fully reflect those set by the Department in the National Policing Plan and the Home Office Police Science and Technology Strategy.

The police forces can also purchase technology based on local needs and priorities including non-ICT items of technology. These are assessed and costed locally by the police force and relevant police authority.

PITO are currently subject to an end to end review and a key aspect of the review is how the provision of ICT to the police should be managed both nationally and locally. The findings of the review will be closely aligned to proposals currently under consideration as part of the Police Reform agenda.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have (a) been recruited to and (b) left the Avon and Somerset police force in each year since 1997. [188668]

Ms Blears: The available information is given in the table:

Avon and Somerset

As at 31 March:	Joiners	Leavers	Total officer strength
1997	174	160	2,989
1998	138	148	2,976
1999	142	104	2,999

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are in the London borough of Wandsworth; and how many are from ethnic minorities. [193478]

Ms Blears: I am told by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (Sir John Stevens) that at the end of September 2004 the Wandsworth Operational Command Unit had 572 police officers of whom 39 (6.8 per cent.) were from ethnic minorities.

Probation Service

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long it took the Workload Measurement Tool Working Group for the Probation Service to be established. [197000]

Paul Goggins: A Project Board for the Workload Measurement Tool (WMT) first met on 25 April 2002, it included representatives from probation areas, the National Probation Directorate (NPD), Napo and Unison. A WMT user group comprising members of eight pilot areas, Napo, Unison and the Probation Board Association (PBA) was set up on September 2002.

RAF Fairfield

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons Gloucestershire Constabulary was not fully re-funded for the cost of policing RAF Fairfield during the recent Iraqi conflict. [195296]

Ms Blears: The Home Secretary has agreed a special grant of £7.29 million towards the £7.72 million costs of policing RAF Fairford. This was over 94 per cent. of the total cost.

Police authorities are normally expected to hold sufficient reserves to meet exceptional costs, up to a sum equal to one per cent. of the force budget. Grant is considered on the balance above this amount. In the extraordinary circumstances of this case the Home Secretary reduced the threshold to 0.5 per cent.

Road Safety

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effects of the development of automatic number plate recognition on the level of enforcement of the ban on the use of hand-held mobile telephones while driving. [196416]

Caroline Flint: Police intercept teams stopped a total of 180,543 vehicles across 23 forces during a year-long pilot of automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) technology from 1 June 2003 to 31 June 2004.

44 per cent. (78,768) of all vehicle stops were as a result of officer observations as vehicles passed. Of these, 2.7 per cent. of stops were for the offence of using a hand-held mobile phone while driving.

Sexual Offences

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of sex abuse victims' satisfaction with their contact with the police. [196635]

Ms Blears: Home Office Research Study 237 "Rape and sexual assault of women: the extent and nature of the problem—findings from the British Crime Survey" reports on the findings of self-completion questionnaires included in the 1998 and 2000 British Crime Surveys (BCS).

This report showed that about a third of rape victims (32 per cent.) were "very satisfied" with the way in which the police handled their (most recent) case, and a further quarter (25 per cent.) were "fairly satisfied". However, about a fifth were "very dissatisfied" (22 per cent.), and 16 per cent. were "a bit dissatisfied". The remaining five per cent. said that it was too early to say. Table A7.3 in the report has further detail.

Terrorism Act

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the number of prosecutions resulting from arrests under section 41 of the Terrorism Act 2000. [191541]

Mr. Blunkett: Statistics on arrests, charges and prosecutions have recently been updated on the Home Office website. I think it would be useful to set out the full picture as follows. We are unable to provide figures for Section 41 in isolation.

Police records show that from 11 September 2001 until 30 September 2004, 664 people were arrested under the Terrorism Act 2000.

118 of these were charged under the Act. Of these, 44 were also charged with offences under other legislation. 135 were charged under other legislation. This includes charges for terrorist offences that are already covered in general criminal law such as murder, grievous bodily harm and use of firearms or explosives.

17 Individuals have been convicted of offences under the Terrorism Act.

The following table gives the outcome for those not covered previously:

Outcome	Number
Transferred to immigration authorities	55
On bail to return	21
Cautioned	7
Dealt with under mental health legislation	7
Awaiting extradition	1
Returned to Prison Service custody	1
Released without charge	315

At the time these figures were collated four individuals were not yet dealt with by police.

There can be a number of reasons for the difference between the number of those arrested under the Terrorism Act 2000 and the number of charges resulting from those arrests. For example, where an intelligence-led search of premises is made as part of an investigation, the police may find more than one person there. In these circumstances it is possible that a number of individuals could be arrested and subsequently released without charge because it is not clear at that stage which is the individual sought. This was envisaged when Parliament approved the legislation.

Alternatively, if the search is for explosives for example, the police may well arrest all the individuals found on the premises and hold them for questioning to establish what connection they have with any materials found. Again, those subsequently found not to be involved would be released without charge.

It will continue to be the case that some persons arrested under the Terrorism Act will not subsequently be charged under the Act but will be charged with offences such as murder, grievous bodily harm, use of firearms or explosives which are contained within other Acts.

Home Office Research Development and Statistics publish a Command Paper and supplementary volumes of criminal statistics annually. A breakdown of prosecutions and convictions under the Terrorism Act 2000 for 2001 and 2002 are in the accompanying table. Figures for 2003 will not be available until later in the year.

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.

Theft

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of thefts from farms in each of the past 10 years for which records are available. [196686]

Ms Blears: No information is collected by the Home Office on thefts from farms. Such offences cannot be separately identified in the recorded crime series or in the British Crime Survey.

Vehicle Scanning System

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact that the increase in the funding for the vehicle scanning system will have on the number of police officers patrolling the roads. [197204]

Caroline Flint: My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, announced on 2 November 2004 that £15 million will be available to help the expansion of Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) across England and Wales. This might include for example, converting existing CCTV systems to become ANPR-enabled and provide mobile technology.

It will not lead to an increase in the number of police officers ANPR; rather it will enable existing police officers to use the latest available technology to build on the success highlighted by the Evaluation Report "Driving Down Crime".

The Home Office will ask that forces who receive funding demonstrate their commitment to ANPR by deploying sufficient resources in order to maximise this investment opportunity while not diverting from other policing priorities.

This funding represents a significant boost to ANPR. The Government are keen that the momentum provided by the ANPR pilot projects is maintained.

Wildlife Crime

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the link between wildlife crime and organised crime. [195352]

Ms Blears: The National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit of the National Criminal Intelligence Service (NCIS) monitors the links between organised wildlife crime and other areas of criminality, including money laundering, fraud, deception and distribution of drugs. That assessment by its very nature has operational and intelligence information not intended for publication.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure the employment of at least one full-time wildlife crime officer by each police force. [195353]

Ms Blears: The employment of police officers in each force area is an operational matter for the chief officer concerned based on operational priorities.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces have a full time wildlife crime officer. [195354]

Ms Blears: Figures are not held centrally. The appointment of officers on operational duties is a matter for the chief officer of each individual force.

Young Offenders Institutions

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to outsource the management of young offenders' institutions; and if he will make a statement. [190421]

Paul Goggins: We are currently considering how to take forward contestability within the National Offender Management Service but no decision has yet been taken.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what educational assessments are carried out on each young offender entering each young offenders' institution. [191895]

Paul Goggins: Each young person entering custody undergoes a range of educational assessments. When they are referred to a young offenders' team by the police, they undergo a standard assessment with an assessment tool called ASSET. The assessment includes a section on education needs. They also undertake the PLUS Strategy assessment for literacy and numeracy and diagnostic assessment. They can be referred to an educational psychologist or the establishment's special education needs co-ordinator if there is a need identified during assessment and induction.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Caravan Parks

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what requirements are placed on the (a) owners and (b) operators of holiday caravan parks to ensure that ponds or lakes do not pose a safety hazard to children. [196853]

Jane Kennedy: The Health and Safety at Work etc Act 1974 (HSWA) protects members of the public affected by work related activity. HSWA will apply to holiday caravan parks.

Employers or the self-employed are required to take reasonably practicable precautions to adequately control risks, including those posed by lakes or ponds. The duty holder can be the operator, owner or both depending upon the circumstance.

Caravan parks, apart from the local authority owned ones, are also licensed under the Caravan Sites and Control of Development Act 1960. The local authority issues the licence.

Carers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what financial support is available to people who are unable to work (a) full-time and (b) part-time because of caring responsibilities; and if he will make a statement. [196917]

Maria Eagle: Carers are entitled to the full range of social security benefits if they meet the usual qualifying rules. In particular, carer's allowance is available to those who are 16 years of age and over, not in full-time work and provide regular and substantial care for at least 35 hours a week to a severely disabled person. It is possible to combine entitlement to carer's allowance and part-time work provided that earnings do not exceed the national insurance lower earnings limit (currently £79 per week) after deduction of allowable expenses.

Entitlement to carer's allowance gives carers access to the carer premium in income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit and to the carer's additional amount in pension credit. In addition, carers can get help through the carers grant which was introduced in 1999 to support local councils in providing breaks in caring and services for carers.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196150]

Maria Eagle: LandSecurities Trillium (LST) owns the estate occupied by the Department for Work and Pensions. Ownership of accommodation transferred to LST under a PFI scheme (PRIME) in 1998. This PFI Contract was further expanded in December 2003 to include the former Employment Service (ES) estate following the merger of the former Department of Social Security and ES to create DWP.

Under the PRIME PFI Contract DWP pays a unitary charge that includes an element for all aspects of building maintenance and repair (which includes routine decoration and refurbishment), this is known as Life Cycle Capital Expenditure (LCCE). The elements of decoration and refurbishment cannot be disaggregated from the overall LCCE expenditure.

Departmental Publications (Access)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of publications issued by his Department are available in (a) Braille, (b) autoprint, (c) large print and (d) easy read format. [194285]

Maria Eagle: We are committed to giving disabled people access to the same information as non-disabled people and ensuring a consistent approach in providing information to all our customers.

We make a large number of our publications available in alternative formats, either readily available or upon request. Of 276 national publications, 50 are available in large print format, 64 are available in Braille, and 59 are available on audio tape.

However, virtually all our publications are available in the above formats upon request.

The Department does produce more publications than are detailed above. However, information concerning those publications could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many full-time equivalent jobs (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies had in (i) Yorkshire and the Humber and (ii) the City of York in (A) 1997 and (B) the latest year for which figures are available. [191845]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly) on 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1053W.

My hon. Friend's reply gave figures collected via the Cabinet Office mandate system. The figures in the following table are not collected by the mandate system and are in addition to those published. Figures are not available prior to April 2002.

Jobcentre Plus	2002	2003	2004
City of York	100	90	90
Elsewhere in Yorkshire and Humberside	3,950	4,190	4,000
Total	4,050	4,280	4,090

Notes:

1. Figures are full time equivalents and are consistent with Cabinet Office definitions.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
3. Temporary staff are not included.
4. Figures are as at 30 April for 2002 and 31 March for 2003 and 2004.

Farm Machinery (Child Accidents)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many children under 16 were injured in accidents involving (a) tractors and (b) farm machinery in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [196458]

Jane Kennedy: There were no reported injuries to children under 16 years involving tractors and three injuries to children under 16 involving other farm machinery in 2002–03. There was one fatality to a 12-year-old boy involving a tractor during the same period. Two children were run over and killed by farm vehicles in 2003–04. The latest provisional non-fatal injury figures for 2003–04 will be published on 18 November 2004.

The small number of child farm deaths in recent years reflects the considerable effort invested by HSE and the farming community to tackle this problem, and the wider health and safety problems of the agricultural industry where deaths among the self-employed are a particular concern.

Greek Presidency

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Restricted Committee of the Safety and Health Commission for the mining and other extractive industries met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [194876]

Jane Kennedy: The Restricted Committee of the Safety and Health Commission for the Mining and Other Extractive Industries (SHCMOEI) met once, in Luxembourg on 4 June 2003, during the Greek presidency of the EU.

A member of the Health and Safety Executive represented the UK Government at the 4 June 2003 Restricted Committee of the SHCMOEI.

The UK Government representative raised technical issues relating to: the minutes of the previous meeting; proposed changes to the draft 2002 Annual Report of the Safety and Health Commission; a "Coal Worker Pneumoconiosis" document tabled for adoption and commented on the cancellation of a planned meeting of the Committee on Underground Workings.

The UK Government representative did not raise any financial issues at the Restricted Committee of SHCMOEI on 4 June 2003.

The Restricted Committee made the following recommendations: amended and approved the minutes of the previous meeting, agreed representation for the Advisory Committee planning group; amended and adopted the 2002 Annual Report of the Safety and Health Commission and agreed the date for their next meeting.

I am not aware of any proposals for action or actions that were taken by either (A) the EU or (B) the UK Government as a result of the Restricted Committee's recommendations made by the SHCOMEI committee meeting on 4 June.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on employment met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [194877]

Mr. Pond: There were four meetings of the Employment Committee during the Greek Presidency, on 28 January 2003 in Brussels, on 20/21 February in Vasilitsa (Greece) and on 23 April 2003 and 14–15 May 2003, both in Brussels.

Officials from the Department for Work and Pensions attended all of these meetings. In addition: an official from the Department for Education and Skills attended one meeting; an official from the United Kingdom Permanent Representation to the EU attended another. An official from the Department for Work and Pensions chaired two of these meetings.

During the Greek Presidency the Committee produced Opinions on: the preparation to the spring 2003 European Council; Commission proposals for a Council Decision on Guidelines for member states' employment policies; a Commission recommendation for a Council Recommendation on the implementation of member states' employment policies; and on a Commission recommendation on the Broad Economic Policy Guidelines. The Committee also agreed the work programmes for subsidiary Committees (the Committee on Employment Incentive Measures and the Indicators Group). The Employment Committee discussed several other issues, without making any formalised recommendations.

Contributions by UK officials primarily focused on ensuring that outcomes reflected the broad policy principles of the Lisbon reform agenda, rather than specific financial or technical issues. The UK delegation consistently argued for a set of guidelines that reflected the reform agenda and were clear, simple and outcome focused.

The EU and the UK took forward Committee's conclusions in the context of applying Article 128 of the Treaty establishing the European Community. The Council therefore takes the Committee's Opinion into account when agreeing the Employment Guidelines in accordance with Article 128.2, which the United Kingdom subsequently takes into account in national employment policies. On the basis of these Guidelines, the government produced the annual report referred to at Article 128.3 (ie the National Action Plan for Employment for 2004, copies of which were placed in the Library of the House on 19 October 2004.)

For general information on the Greek Presidency please see Cm 6097 'Developments in the European Union, January to June 2003, the Greek Presidency' which was laid before Parliament in January 2004.

Guarantee Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households were in receipt of the guarantee credit at the end of each of the past 12 months. [195526]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is given in the following table.

Households in receipt of the guarantee element of pension credit, October 2003 to September 2004

	Number
2003
October	1,784,020
November	1,837,225
December	1,858,235
2004
January	1,879,015
February	1,920,260
March	1,979,445
April	1,997,685
May	2,018,180
June	2,036,865
July	2,049,260
August	2,059,255
September	2,065,455

Note:
Figures are rounded to the nearest five.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 1 November 2004, Official Report, column 124W, on jobseeker's allowance, when figures will be available for 2003–04. [196975]

Mr. Pond: We expect to publish estimates of the number of incorrect payments of jobseeker's allowance in 2003–04 in spring 2005.

Ministers' Private Offices

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the running costs of Ministers' private offices in his Department have been in each year since 1997. [191391]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the former Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment including the Employment Service. Expenditure prior to June 2001 relates solely to the former Department of Social Security.

	Cost (£)
2003–04	3,200,000
2002–03	2,900,000
2001–02	2,600,000
2000–01	2,500,000
1999–2000	2,600,000
1998–99	2,300,000

Notes:
1. Information for 1997–98 is not available.
2. Running costs cover the cash spend on the day-to-day expenditure for Ministers' private offices including: Ministers' and officials' civil service pay, travel and subsistence; resource spending on accommodation; capital charges; and office services, stationery, postage, and IT equipment.

Pension Credit

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are in receipt of pension credit in (a) Scotland and (b) the City of Edinburgh local authority area. [195154]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of pension credit recipients in (a) Scotland and (b) the City of Edinburgh local authority area at the end of September is given in the table.

Pension credit recipients—September 2004

	Households	Individuals
Scotland	273,395	327,225
City of Edinburgh	17,290	20,070

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five
2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for North Down (Lady Hermon) of 27 October 2004, Official Report, column 1289W, on pension credit, what the absolute figures for the male and female population aged 60 used for the answer were; and how many (a) men and (b) women are receiving pension credit. [196448]

Malcolm Wicks: The figures on which the answer was based are given in the following table. At 30 September there were (a) 1,067,650 male and (b) 2,117,030 female individual recipients of pension credit in Great Britain.

Pension credit recipients as proportion of population aged 60 or over, England and Wales, 31 August 2004

	Females	Males
Population aged 60 or over (number)	6,178,795	4,881,190
Individual recipients of pension credit
Number	1,888,920	951,355
Percentage	30.6	19.5

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people living in the Weston-super-Mare constituency are (a) eligible for and (b) in receipt of pension credit. [196695]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of people likely to be eligible for pension credit is not available at constituency level. However, we estimate that approximately 300,000 households in the South West Government Office Region (GOR), corresponding to approximately 400,000 individuals—rounded to the nearest 50,000—are likely to be eligible for pension credit in 2004–05. Information on the number of pension credit recipients in the South West GOR and in Weston-super-Mare at the end of September is given in the table.

Pension credit recipients—30 September 2004

	Households	Individuals
South West GOR	217,195	265,250
Weston-super-Mare	5,080	6,145

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60.

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are (a) eligible for and (b) in receipt of pension credit in the Manchester, Withington constituency. [196910]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of people likely to be eligible for pension credit is not available at constituency level. However, we estimate that approximately 500,000 households in the North West Government Office Region (GOR), corresponding to approximately 600,000 individuals (rounded to the nearest 50,000), are likely to be eligible for pension credit in 2004–05. Information on the number of pension credit recipients in the North West GOR and in Manchester Withington at the end of September is given in the table.

Pension credit recipients—30 September 2004

	Households	Individuals
North West GOR	348,525	420,680
Manchester Withington	4,010	4,690

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60.

Pension Service

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many letters of invitation were sent by the Pension Service to people coming up to pensionable age during the last financial year. [196537]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of automatic invitations issued to customers inviting a claim to state pension during the period April 2003 to March 2004 was 607,719.

Pensioners Poverty

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of eradicating pensioner poverty. [196030]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is not available. Poverty and social exclusion are complex and multi-dimensional issues, affecting many aspects of peoples' lives—including their living standards, health, housing, the quality of their environment and not just low income. It is not therefore possible to estimate the cost of eradicating poverty with any assurance.

The sixth annual "Opportunity for all" report (Cm 6239) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of measures. In 2002–03 the Government spent £6 billion a year more on pensioners than we would if policies in 1997 had continued. This helped to cut the number of pensioners in low income (in households under 60 per cent. of median income after housing costs) from £2.7 million to £2.2 million in 2002–03 (which does not reflect the introduction of pension credit). This year the Government is spending £10 billion more than we did under 1997 policies, of which £5 billion goes to the poorest third.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Department's estimate is of the number of pensioners in the UK. [197536]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government Actuary's Department currently estimates that there were 11.126 million pensioners in the UK at mid-year 2004. A pensioner is considered to be an individual over state pension age.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been paid in means-tested benefits to pensioners in each year since 1999. [197552]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table.

Total income related benefits paid to pensioners

	Nominal terms	£ million 2004–05 prices
1998–99	8,587	9,894
1999–2000	8,876	10,007
2000–01	9,435	10,518
2001–02	10,190	11,075
2002–03	10,596	11,143
2003–04	11,125	11,382

Notes:

1. All figures have been rounded to the nearest £ million.
2. All figures quoted are income related benefits paid to people aged 60 and over.
3. Totals include minimum income guarantee/pension credit, housing benefit and council tax benefit.

Pensions

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average amount of basic state pension paid to (a) men in their own right, (b) women in their own right and (c) couples was in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2003; and how many people were in each group in each year. [194752]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

	Average basic state pension (£)	Number of recipients of Category A basic state pension (Thousand)
1997
Men	61.51	3,490
Women	50.54	1,626
2003
Men	75.94	3,808
Women	62.71	1,912

Notes:

1. Basic state pension refers to Category A pensions obtained from a person's own national insurance contributions plus basic state pensions derived from a former spouse's national insurance contributions. It excludes people with entitlement to a Category A pension where their Category B pension is more than their Category A pension.
2. Amounts are rounded to the nearest pence and numbers of recipients are rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Amounts and numbers are for Great Britain.

Notes:

1. Incomes are presented as pounds per week. Figures for incomes are given in 2002–03 prices and rounded to the nearest pound. Totals may not equal their components due to rounding.

2. The Pensioners' Incomes Series analysis is for pensioner units, which are either: single pensioners (ie people over state pension age) or pensioner couples (i.e. married or cohabiting pensioners where the man is over state pension age.)

Redeployment Units

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in his Department and its agencies were in redeployment units during 2003; and how many have been in such units in 2004. [196518]

Maria Eagle: The Department did not have any redeployment units in 2003. The Pension Service redeployment unit was set up in July 2004 and is currently the only redeployment unit within the Department. 228 staff have been in the redeployment unit, 120 of whom have moved on.

Sign Language

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans there are to include (a) British and (b) Irish Sign Language in the European Charter of Minority Languages. [196887]

Maria Eagle: The Council of Europe's Charter for Regional or Minority Languages does not include provision for sign languages. The Council's Parliamentary Assembly made a recommendation to the Council on the protection of sign languages used in member states to which the Council's Committee of Ministers responded on 5 July 2004. The reply notes that before deciding on the question of any possible future instrument a study of the needs of sign language users should be conducted in consultation with them and their organisations. The Government have indicated a willingness to participate in further work to move the process forward.

Social Security Benefits

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has following the introduction of the Mental Capacity Bill to modernise the system for appointment to receive social security benefits in lieu of the beneficiary. [194820]

Maria Eagle: We are looking at our current appointee arrangements in the light of the Mental Capacity Bill, in particular the initial assessment of incapacity and 'best interests'. The proposed codes of practice will provide the opportunity to review and bolster our existing guidance and arrangements. We are also looking at possible post-appointment monitoring systems.

TV Licence Fees

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had, and with whom, on the possibility of changes to the present television licence fee for people who are in receipt of state retirement pension. [195372]

Estelle Morris: I have been asked to reply.

A range of matters relating to BBC funding, including television licence fee concessions, need to be considered in the context of BBC Charter Review. As part of the Charter Review process, the Government have carried out an extensive public consultation exercise and have also commissioned supplementary research. In the course of this process a wide range of issues have been raised concerning the television licensing regime.

Women Pensioners

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the reasons for differences in the percentages of women pensioners entitled to a full basic state pension in England and Wales and in Northern Ireland. [197013]

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the reasons for the differences between the number of women pensioners in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) England and Wales in receipt of the full basic state pension. [197075]

Malcolm Wicks: The differences between the proportions of women receiving a full basic state pension in England and Wales and in Northern Ireland can be attributed to variations in the extent to which women's own contribution records entitle them to qualify for a full basic state pension in their own right: and numbers of women who are widowed or divorced and qualify for a full basic state pension based on their late or former husband's contributions.

Work-related Illness

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of working days lost in each year since 1997 as a result of work-related (a) illness and (b) stress in (i) England and (ii) each region, broken down by gender. [196236]

Jane Kennedy: Currently the only data on work-related sickness absence since 1997 is from the survey of work-related illness undertaken in 2001–02. Estimates of the number of working days lost in 2001–02 for all self-reported work-related illness and self-reported work-related stress, depression or anxiety from this survey are shown by English region in the table.

Sample numbers are too small to provide reliable estimates for region by gender. However, for Great Britain as a whole an estimated 19.2 million working days were lost in 2001–02 due to work-related ill-health among males and 13.7 million among females. Similar estimates of working days lost in 2001–02 attributed to work-related stress, depression or anxiety in Britain indicate 6.3 million working days lost for males and 7.1 million working days lost for females.

South East	4,476	2,153
South West	2,954	1,172
All England	28,571	11,258

[1] This estimate is based on less than 40 sample cases.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many instances of self-reported work-related stress there were in each of the last five years by women in the 16 to 34 year age range; and if he will make a statement. [196245]

Jane Kennedy: Two surveys one in 1998–99 and one in 2001–02 provide estimates of the prevalence (long standing as well as new cases) of self-reported work-related stress, anxiety or depression since 1997. Data from these surveys indicates that the estimated prevalence of self-reported work-related stress, anxiety or depression among females aged 16 to 34 was 68,000 cases in 1998–99 and 85,000 cases in 2001–02. However, these survey data are not directly comparable because of a difference in survey methodology.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the incidence of work-related mental illness in each of the last five years for (a) teachers, (b) police officers, (c) nurses and (d) prison workers; and if he will make a statement. [196243]

Jane Kennedy: The following table shows cases of work-related mental ill-health seen for the first time by psychiatrists and occupational physicians reporting to schemes in the Health and Occupation Reporting network (THOR) in each year from 1999 to 2003 for teachers, police officers, nurses and prison officers.

	Estimated cases of work-related mental ill-health by years: 1999	2000	2001	2002	2003[1]

Police officers	276	204	252	275	289
Prison officers	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	[2]—	148

[1] Data for 2003 is based on a different occupational coding structure to the other years.

[2] Number of reported cases are too low in individual years to make individual year estimates reliable. For all years 1999–02 there were in total an estimated 184 cases of work-related mental ill-health among prison officers.

THOR comprises seven surveillance schemes for work-related ill-health. Each scheme has reporters from a specific medical specialty and new cases seen by the specialist are reported that the specialist believes are related to work. This network is run for HSE by Manchester university.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Child Pornography

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons have been convicted of charges relating to the production, possession or distribution of material connected with child pornography in Northern Ireland in the past two years. [196513]

Mr. Spellar: Offences relating to the production, possession or distribution of material connected with child pornography are prosecuted under the Protection of Children (NI) Order 1978. The following tables, which has been provided by NIO Research and Statistics Branch, details the number of convictions for offences related to child pornography in Northern Ireland for the years 2001 and 2002. This is the most current data available in the NIO courts dataset which is based on extractions from the PSNI operational database, ICIS (Integrated Criminal Information System).

Note:

Where proceedings involve more than one offence dealt with at the same time, the figures relate to the principal offence. The basis for selection of the principal offence is laid down in rules by the Home Office. In summary these indicate that, where there is a finding of guilt, the principal offence is usually that for which the greatest penalty was imposed. Where there has not been a finding of guilt (e.g. on acquittal or committal for trial) it is usually that for which the greatest penalty could have been imposed.

Departmental Funding/Offices

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what amounts of the regional rate for 2003–04 were allocated to each Government Department in Northern Ireland. [194948]

Mr. Pearson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for East Antrim (Mr. Beggs) on 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1073W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196143]

Mr. Pearson: The information requested is as follows.

Crime

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) burglaries, (b) armed robberies and (c) car thefts have occurred in each of the Province's Westminster constituencies in each of the last six years. [196258]

Mr. Pearson: The statistics are not held by Westminster constituency, however, the following table provides the information for each of the Province's district command units over the past six financial years.

Fisheries

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the impact of increases in fuel prices on the viability of the Northern Ireland fishing fleet. [197336]

Mr. Pearson: Fuel prices are particularly volatile at the moment and I am conscious that this may be having an impact on the local fishing industry in terms of vessel profitability. I have asked the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development to continue to monitor the situation.

Economic Output Statistics

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the level of Gross Value Added per employee in the (a) manufacturing sector and (b) private services sector was in each year from 1997 to 2003 in Northern Ireland. [196864]

Mr. Gardiner: The Office for National Statistics has responsibility for official productivity measures, but do not produce regional estimates of GVA per employee by industrial sector as requested. However, the Department of Trade and Industry publishes GVA per workforce job by broad industry sector for the UK regions. The most recent Northern Ireland and UK data available for this measure is provided in the following table for 1997 to 2001.

Gross value added per workforce job[1] by broad industry sector for NI and UK

Housing Executive

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many properties owned by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in 2003 took three months or more to repair and refurbish after the departure of the previous tenant. [196916]

Mr. Spellar: The information is not available. However, the Housing Executive, as part of the good management of its stock, carries out post vacancy inspections and depending on demand for housing in the area, any work required to be done will be prioritised with a view to having it completed within a maximum of six weeks from the date the contract is awarded. Basic health and safety checks of the electric and heating systems would be undertaken within one to two days and the timescale for completing other work would vary according to the cost and nature of the work.

Part-time Reserve

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons new members of the part-time reserve are allowed to serve beyond the age of 62 years; what plans he has to amend this policy; and if he will make a statement. [197261]

Mr. Pearson: In accordance with the Police Service of Northern Ireland Reserve (Part-Time) Regulations 2004, part-time reserve members appointed after 8 February 2004 (the date on which the regulations came into force) shall be compulsory retired at age 65. These regulations also contain transitional arrangements for existing part-time reserve members.

I have been informed by PSNI that given the community focus of the new part-time officers (as per Patten), it makes sense for their composition to reflect more broadly the community at large. This includes, inter alia, attracting older applicants. It was for this reason that the PSNI recommended an upper age limit of 65 and they have advised there are no plans to amend this position.

Police Recruitment

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the recruitment figures have been for (a) the Police Service of Northern Ireland and (b) the Royal Ulster Constabulary in each of the last 10 years. [196183]

Mr. Pearson: The following table provides the total number of recruits to the Royal Ulster constabulary and the Police Service of Northern Ireland from 1994 to date:

Pre-school Education

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide sufficient funding to ensure all children in nursery education benefit from having a teacher fully qualified in nursery education. [197111]

Mr. Gardiner: All children in nursery education do receive their pre-school education from a fully qualified teacher.

PSNI Flag

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what advice the Northern Ireland Office has given the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) Chief Constable regarding the flying of the PSNI flag at police stations on official flag days. [197021]

Mr. Pearson: It is solely a matter for the Chief Constable to decide when the PSNI flag is flown in line with the Police Emblems and Flags Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2002. A copy of these regulations is available in Library of the House.

Public Appointments

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, columns 242–43W, on public appointments, what action is being taken regarding the levels of appointments from the Protestant community to temporary positions in the general service grades of the (a) Northern Ireland Civil Service and (b) Northern Ireland Housing Executive. [196888]

Mr. Pearson: Protestants and men are currently under-represented in temporary positions in the general service grades of the Northern Ireland Civil Service. To encourage applications from these groups advertisements for general service temporary positions have included the following welcoming statement:

> "As Protestants and men are currently known to be under-represented among applicants for employment in this grade in the NICS, applications from the Protestant section of the community and from men would be particularly welcome."

As part of current outreach measures, Recruitment Service attends careers events throughout Northern Ireland to encourage young people to consider a career in the Northern Ireland Civil Service. Officials from my Department have also met careers teachers from a predominantly Protestant catchment area in an initiative to ensure that careers in NICS are perceived in a positive way by young Protestant school leavers and that applications received are representative of the entire community. Further outreach measures consistent with achieving a more representative and diversified workforce in the NICS are now being developed. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive has implemented an Affirmative Action Plan in agreement with its Board and the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland. The Plan outlines a series of measures developed to specifically encourage the Protestant community to consider working for the Housing Executive in the future, and therefore apply for vacancies, whether permanent or temporary, when they arise. The measures put in place include:

a. ensuring the recruitment process is targeted effectively;

b. encouraging more applications through the establishment of a community out reach service;

c. promoting employment opportunities through a schools programme; and

d. carrying out research on equality and employment opportunities as well as gauging public perception in relation to the organisation as a potential employer.

Republican Terrorism

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on republican terrorism in the last 12 months. [196169]

Mr. Pearson: The Provisional IRA maintains its capability but as the recent IMC report states, there is no evidence of intent to return to a campaign of widespread terrorism and its paramilitary activities have declined in recent months. Dissident republicans have continued to carry out attacks although many of their activities have been thwarted, intercepted or nullified by the security forces. INLA's activities have been confined principally to 'civil administration'. The report by the Independent Monitoring Commission published on 4 November gives further details of the activities of all republican terrorist organisations.

Strategy 2010

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what procedures are in place to assess the progress Strategy 2010 is making towards meeting its 10-year targets; what progress has been made since 1999; and if he will make a statement on the relationship between Strategy 2010 and the draft Economic Vision published in October. [196861]

Mr. Gardiner: The Economic Development Forum (EDF), chaired at ministerial level, was set up as one of the recommendations of Strategy 2010. Subsequently EDF used the information in Strategy 2010, including proposals on targets, in formulating its Medium Term Strategic Priorities (MTSPs) and associated targets for the Northern Ireland economy. EDF has given a commitment to monitor Northern Ireland's economic performance against targets on an annual basis. EDF's first statement on progress towards the MTSPs targets was published in January 2004.

The draft Economic Vision is a proposed corporate and cohesive view of the Northern Ireland economy going forward and overarches all other strategies.

Copies of the MTSPs and the draft Economic Vision referred to above have been placed in the House Library.

Student Suspensions

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students have been suspended from each of Northern Ireland's universities in each of the last five years; and how many have been suspended for anti-social behaviour that took place off-campus. [193668]

Mr. Gardiner: Universities are independent, autonomous institutions responsible for their own policies and practices in relation to student discipline, where appropriate. The Department for Employment and Learning does not maintain statistics pertaining to student discipline as this lies within the locus of the Universities. Queen's University and The University of Ulster have provided statistics on suspensions within their Institutions.

Terrorism Act

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been arrested and charged under the Terrorism Act 2000 in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [196178]

Mr. Pearson: The following table provides details of the number of persons arrested and charged under section 41 of the Terrorism Act 2000 from 19 January 2001 (when the Act came into force) to 31 December 2003.

	Number of persons arrested	Number of persons charged
19 February–31 December 2001	179	50
2002	236	80
2003	359	121

Water Charges

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether charges for water applied through the regional rate will be removed when water meters are introduced. [193564]

Mr. Pearson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1073W.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Civil Servants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average length of continuous service for civil servants within the Department is. [194403]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I would refer my right hon. Friend to the reply given by the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 268W.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196147]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The cost of decoration and refurbishment carried out in my London Headquarter Offices in each of the last four years is set out in the following table:

2000–01	774,744
2001–02	1,335,207
2002–03	1,154,363
2003–04	2,108,082

The way in which my Department holds the information means we are unable to break the figures down.

Foreign Language Teaching

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to ensure that there are adequate numbers of teachers available to teach foreign languages in primary schools. [197640]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There has been considerable progress on the development of language learning in primary schools, underpinned by the launch in December 2002 of the Government's National Languages Strategy for England. Implementation of the Strategy is being driven by Lid King, the National Director for Languages.

The Strategy recognises the importance of developing a workforce and resources to support successful implementation of primary language learning, and much of our work to date has focussed on these areas.

In developing a school workforce, we are building up a cadre of specialist teachers and non-teacher specialists to support primary language learning. 580 places have been allocated this year for Primary Initial Teacher Training with a specialism in French, German, Spanish or Italian, and we intend to expand this programme further next year. This means that over 1200 teacher trainees will have been trained by the end of this year. In addition we have allocated 50 primary MFL places a year to the Graduate Teacher Programme.

For existing teachers, we have funded primary MFL Advanced Skills Teacher posts and are working with the TTA to develop and pilot CPD courses for existing primary teachers to enhance language skills and MFL pedagogy.

For non-teacher specialists, we are working with the British council to extend the foreign language assistants programme into primary schools, and are developing training for teaching assistants to support primary language learning.

Information Technology (Schools)

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research has been commissioned to establish the proportion of (a) primary and (b) secondary teachers who were confident about using ICT in each year since 1997. [196762]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My Department has carried out an annual survey of ICT in schools since 1998 which includes a question about the confidence of teachers in using ICT in their job. The full survey data is in the House of Commons Library. It shows that the percentage of teaching staff who feel confident to use ICT in their subject teaching has risen as follows:

	Primary	Secondary
1999	68	66
2000	67	65
2001	76	70
2003	87	82

Although my Department has not commissioned any research studies specifically about teachers' confidence in using ICT, this topic has been covered in a number of other recent research and evaluation studies, such as the evaluations of Computers for Teachers, Laptops for Teachers and Curriculum Online.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the constituency of Bolsover were connected to the internet at the latest available date. [197096]

Mr. Miliband: The information is not available in the form requested.

It is estimated from a sample survey of schools that over 99 per cent. of both primary and secondary schools in England were connected to the internet at 31 March 2003.

The latest provisional data on ICT in schools was published in the Statistical First Release "Survey of Information and Communications Technology in Schools 2004", which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

School Governors

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what rights of appeal a school governor has against suspension. [197657]

Mr. Miliband: A school governor has no right of appeal against suspension.

Any motion to suspend a governor must be specified as an agenda item of a meeting for which at least seven days notice must be given. Before the governing body votes to suspend a governor, the governor or governors proposing the suspension must give their reasons for doing so and the governor who is proposed for suspension must be given the opportunity to make a statement in response. A vote on the issue must then be taken at a meeting of the full governing body.

A governing body can only decide to suspend a governor in the very limited range of circumstances as set out in the School Governance (Procedures) (England Regulations 2003. These are:

(a) the governor is paid to work at the school and is the subject of disciplinary proceedings in relation to his employment; or

(b) the governor is the subject of any court or tribunal proceedings, the outcome of which may be that he is disqualified from continuing to hold office as a governor under schedule 6 of the Constitution Regulations; or

(c) the governor has acted in a way that is inconsistent with the school's ethos or with the religious character and has brought or is likely to bring the school or the governing body or his office of governor into disrepute; or

(d) the governor is in breach of his duty of confidentiality to the school or to the staff or to the pupils.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what process a school governing body has to undertake to remove a governor. [197677]

Mr. Miliband: A governing body may remove from office community governors, any parent governors who have been appointed, and sponsor governors. Sponsor governors may also be removed at the request of the nominating body. The governing body may not remove any parent governors who have been elected, any staff governors or any LEA governors. LEA governors may, however, be removed by the LEA that appointed them. In the case of the removal of any community governor, appointed parent governor, or sponsor governor whose removal is requested by the governing body, the governor(s) proposing the removal must give the reasons for the proposed removal and the governor in question must be given the opportunity to make a statement in response before a vote is taken on a resolution to remove the governor in question.

A governing body's decision to remove any community, sponsor, or appointed parent governor must be confirmed at a second meeting not less than 14 days after the first meeting. At both meetings, the removal of the governor in question must be specified as an agenda item.

School Inspections

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will reduce the inspection requirements on schools with a good inspection track record. [197184]

Mr. Miliband: In June 2004, the Department and Ofsted published "A New Relationship with Schools", setting out our plans for a shorter, sharper school inspection system, based around a schools own self-evaluation. From September 2005 all school inspections will provide schools with less notice of an inspection, involve fewer inspectors, spending less time in schools. Hence all schools will experience a significantly reduced weight of inspection. The proposals will require that all schools be inspected at least once every three years, providing more relevant information for parents and their communities, but will operate such that higher performing schools can expect to receive fewer inspection visits. There are no plans to introduce further differentiation in inspection requirements at this stage.

Teacher Applicants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applicants have been refused in each year since the establishment of qualified teacher status. [197200]

Mr. Miliband: This information is not collected centrally.

School Targets

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list all the schools targets set by the Government in Spending Reviews since 1997, indicating whether or not they have been reached. [186472]

Mr. Miliband: The following table lists all the schools targets set by the Government in spending reviews since 1997. My hon. Friend may wish to note that only CSR 1998 targets have had a final assessment, all others are ongoing. Progress reports against PSA targets from the 2000 and 2002 Spending Reviews are set out in the 2004 DfES departmental report, a copy of which I have placed in the House of Commons Library.

Annex A: Reconciliation table—DfES targets

CSR 1998 PSA Targets	Spending Review 2000 PSA Targets	Spending Review 2002 PSA Targets	Spending Review 2004 PSA Targets
1. The number of pupils aged five, six or seven in infant classes of over 30 to fall from 477,000 to zero by September 2001 at the latest. Target met
2. Increase the proportion of those aged 11 meeting the standard of literacy for that age (level 4 in the Key Stage 2 test) from 63 per cent. to 80 per cent. by 2002. 75 per cent. by 2002	1. Increase the percentage of 11 year olds at or above the expected standard of literacy and numeracy for their age. By 2004: Increase the percentage of children who achieve level 4 in each of the key stage 2. English and maths tests beyond the targets for 2002 of 80 per cent. in English and 75 per cent. in maths to 85 per cent. by 2004; and Reduce to zero the number of local education authorities where fewer than 78 per cent. of pupils at level 4 or above achieve these standards.	1. Raise standards in English and maths so that: by 2004, 85 per cent. of 11-year-olds achieve level 4 or above and 35 per cent. achieve level 5 or above with this level of performance sustained until 2006; and by 2006, the number of schools in which fewer than 65 per cent. of pupils achieve level 4 or above is significantly reduced.	1. Raise standards in English and maths so that: by 2006, 85 per cent. of 11-year-olds achieve level 4 or above, with this level of performance sustained to 2008; and by 2008, the proportion of schools in which fewer than 65 per cent. of pupils achieve level 4 or above is reduced by 40 per cent.
3. Increase the proportion of those aged 11 meeting the standard of numeracy for that age (level 4 in the Key Stage 2 test) from 62 per cent. to 75 per cent. by 2002. 73 per cent. by 2002
4. A reduction by one third in school truancies (from 0.7 per cent. to 0.5 per cent. half days missed a year through unauthorised absence); (Unauthorised absence remained at 0.7 per cent. as it has since 1994) and exclusions (from 12,500 to 8,400 permanent exclusions a year) by 2002. Target met	2. On pupil inclusion: By 2004, reduce school truancies by 10 per cent. compared to 2002 and to sustain the new lower level, and improve overall attendance levels thereafter. ensure that all pupils who are permanently excluded obtain an appropriate full-time education.		2. Improve levels of school attendance so that by 2008, school absence is reduced by 8 per cent. compared to 2003.
5. Increase the proportion of those aged 16 who achieve one or more GCSEs at Grade G, or equivalent from 92 per cent. to 95 per cent. by 2002. 94.6 per cent. by 2002
6. Increase the proportion of those aged 16 who achieve five or more GCSEs at Grades A*-C from 45 per cent. to 50 per cent. by 2002. Target met (51.6 per cent.)	3. Increase the percentage of pupils obtaining five or more GCSEs at grades A*-C (or equivalent): increase the proportion achieving the standard by 4 percentage points between 2002 and 2004; and at least 38 per cent. to achieve this standard in every LEA by 2004.	3. Raise standards in schools and colleges so that: between 2002 and 2006 the proportion of those aged 16 who get qualifications equivalent to five GCSEs at grades A*-C rises by 2 percentage points each year on average and in all schools at least 20 per cent. of pupils achieve this standard by 2004 rising to 25 per cent. by 2006: and	3. By 2008, 60 per cent. of those aged 16 to achieve the equivalent of 5 GCSEs at grades A*-C; and in all schools, at least 20 per cent. of pupils to achieve this standard by 2004, rising to 25 per cent. by 2006 and 30 per cent. by 2008. (This target may be reviewed in the light of recommendations in the Tomlinson report.)
	4. Increase the percentage of 14 year olds at or above the standard of literacy, numeracy, science and ICT for their age. by 2007, 85 per cent. to achieve level 5 or above in each of the key stage 3 tests in English, maths and ICT and 80 per cent. in science; as milestones towards that target 75 per cent. to achieve level 5 in English, maths and ICT and 70 per cent. in science by 2004; by 2004, as a minimum performance target at least 65 per cent. to achieve level 5 and above in English and maths, and 60 per cent. in science in each LEA; and by 2004, no more than 15 per cent. of pupils will fail to attain at least one level 5.	4. Raise standards in English, maths, ICT and science in secondary education so that: by 2004, 75 per cent. of 14-year-olds achieve level 5 or above in English, maths and ICT (70 per cent. in science) nationally and by 2007, 85 per cent. (80 per cent. in science): by 2007, the number of schools where fewer than 60 per cent. of 14-year-olds achieve level 5 or above is significantly reduced; and by 2007, 90 per cent. of pupils reach level 4 in English and maths by age 12.	4. Raise standards in English, maths, ICT and science in secondary education so that: by 2007, 85 per cent. of 14-year-olds achieve level 5 or above in English, maths and ICT (80 per cent. in science) nationally, with this level of performance sustained to 2008; and by 2008, in all schools at least 50 per cent. of pupils achieve level 5 or above in each of English, maths and science.

TRANSPORT

Blue Badge Scheme

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend the automatic qualifying criteria for the Blue Badge scheme to include recipients of attendance allowance. [195714]

Charlotte Atkins: There was no support during the last review of the scheme to extend it to this group of people and we have no plans to do so.

The scheme is designed primarily to assist people with severe difficulty in walking which is reflected in the eligibility criteria for a badge. This includes an automatic qualifying criterion for those in receipt of the higher rate of the mobility component of disability living allowance on the basis that receipt of that benefit indicates that the applicant has considerable difficulty in walking.

Mr. Paul Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the publication of research into the eligibility of parents of children with severe autistic conditions for inclusion in the Blue Badge Scheme, following the Department's review of the scheme. [194051]

Charlotte Atkins: The research we will be undertaking will consider the mobility needs of a number of groups of disabled people who are currently excluded from the scheme. I can confirm that this research will include the needs of both adults and children with autistic conditions. This is one of three research projects we are taking forward as a direct result of the review of the scheme. We are finalising the work specifications and intend to go out to tender later this year for all three. On this particular project we would expect to have results and recommendations in the course of next year.

European Coastguard

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of the consequences for the Royal Navy's (a) search and rescue and (b) coastal patrol roles of the creation of a European Coastguard. [197572]

Mr. Jamieson: None, since there is no prospect of a proposal to establish a European coastguard being made or accepted.

A30 Goss Moors

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement on the dualling of the A30 Goss Moors in Cornwall. [195099]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department is in the process of reviewing the timing and relative priorities of all major schemes in the Highways Agency's trunk road programme in the light of this year's spending review. I hope to announce the outcome shortly.

Dartford Crossing

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much of the surplus from user charges for the Dartford Crossing was spent in transport projects in Essex and Kent in 2003–04. [197543]

Mr. Jamieson: All income from charging at the Dartford Crossing is taken into account in the funding for the 10 year plan.

Departmental Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many press releases have been issued by his Department in each month of 2004; and if he will make a statement. [195451]

Charlotte Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 857W.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the staff of the Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196130]

Charlotte Atkins: I refer to the answer given on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 620W, by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office.

Driving Licences (Chinese Visitors)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to require Chinese visitors to the UK to have British driving licences before being allowed to drive in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [198086]

Mr. Jamieson: The requirements for driving in the UK are the same for all holders of licences issued in countries outside the European Economic Area (EEA), including China. In order to be able to drive here, all individuals must hold a valid driving licence or International Driving Permit (IDP) showing the relevant driving entitlement.

New residents may drive small vehicles for 12 months from the date they became resident. To ensure continuous driving entitlement, a British driving licence must be obtained before this period elapses.

Visitors may drive all vehicles shown on their licence for 12 months from the date they last entered the country. They cannot drive beyond that period and are unable to obtain a British licence because they are not resident.

The concessionary 12-month period in which holders of valid foreign driving licences can drive in this country is a long-standing arrangement. It was introduced for residents to allow sufficient time to become familiar with the road and traffic conditions here to take a driving test, and for visitors, in the interest of tourism and commerce.

Lighthouses

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent contracts for maintenance work the (a) Trinity House Lighthouse Service, (b) Northern Lighthouse Board and (c) Commissioners for Irish Lights have obtained from other bodies; and if he will list contracts (i) entered into and (ii) pending, broken down by financial value. [197335]

Mr. Jamieson: The following tables provide information on recent and pending contracts, grouped by type of customer:

(a) Trinity House Lighthouse Service

£000

	Contracts entered into since 1 April 2004	Contract bids pending
Local authorities	4	4
Utility companies	20	8

M6

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many responses were received to the document, M6: giving motorists a choice—a consultation proposal, from (a) individuals, (b) motoring and transport lobbying groups, (c) businesses and commercial associations, (d) environmental groups, (e) councils, parishes and other local or regional authorities and (f) honourable Members; how many were received in total; and how many in each category were (i) in favour of development of the option of an M6 Expressway, (ii) against the development of such an option and (iii) neither for nor against this option; [197455]

(2) when he proposes to announce (a) the results of and (b) his response to the consultation on the document M6: giving motorists a choice; [197460]

(3) what methodology he proposes to use in giving weight to each of the responses received to the consultation M6: giving motorists a choice, before announcing his decision regarding further development of the option of an M6 expressway between Birmingham and Manchester. [197461]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 11 November 2004]: By the closing date for this consultation exercise we had received approximately 5,260 responses as well as a number of petitions amounting to around 3,000 signatures. The responses are currently being analysed. Details of the responses received will be included in our published response to the consultation. We will publish our response once we have reached our conclusion in the light of the analysis of the responses. The methodology we adopt to analyse the responses will be explained as part of this published response.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a list of those responding to his consultation M6: giving motorists a choice. [197782]

Mr. Jamieson: The responses are currently being analysed. Details of the responses received will be included in our published response to the consultation.

Meetings

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list meetings he has held with (a) officials and (b) members of (i) passenger transport authorities and (ii) passenger transport executives since 1 March. [197935]

Charlotte Atkins: The Secretary of State has met during the course of regional visits since March representatives of Nexus in Tyne and Wear, Merseytravel in Merseyside and Centro in the West Midlands.

Private Finance Initiatives

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193976]

Charlotte Atkins: The forecast capital value of PFI contracts awarded by the Department for Transport and its Agencies are reported to Parliament on a six-monthly basis. Details are available from the HM Treasury website.

Details of the (a) lifetime total and (b) forecast annual unitary charge payments for all the PFI contracts awarded by the Department for Transport and its agencies have been placed in the Libraries of the House. The payment of the full unitary charge sum is contingent on the contractor providing a quality service in line with the project's output specification.

The Department for Transport Resource Accounts record:

(a) a list of Private Finance Initiative contracts the Department has entered into;

(b) the imputed finance lease obligations under on balance sheet PFI; and

(c) the charge to the operating cost statement for future commitments.

The information in the Resource Accounts relates to Highways Agency. Payments by the Vehicle Operator and Services Agency are not consolidated into the Department's Resource Accounts.

Railways

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings his Department has had with representatives of (a) Network Rail, (b) the train operating companies and (c) others in the rail industry about the changes being made to the structure of the railways. [194650]

Mr. Darling: Both my ministerial colleagues and I, as well as my officials, met and continue to meet regularly with a wide range of representatives from the rail industry following the announcement of the Rail Review in January this year and publication in July of the Rail White Paper—"The Future of Rail".

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions (a) he and (b) his Department have had with the Prime Minister on the future of the railway industry. [194651]

Mr. Darling: I meet with the Prime Minister on a regular basis to discuss a range of transport issues.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the aggregate annual cost obtained by adding the costs in each regulatory impact assessment is of regulations imposed by his Department since 1997; [196561]

(2) what his latest estimate is of the costs to (a) Government and (b) regulators of transport regulation in a year; [196562]

(3) what his latest estimate is of the compliance cost to business of transport regulation in a year. [196563]

Charlotte Atkins: All proposals which impact on business, charities or the voluntary sector require a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) which includes details of the costs, benefits and risks of the proposal. RIAs are subject to public consultation and copies of final RIAs are available from the House Libraries and on the departmental website at http://www.dft.gov.uk/.

Remote Regional Airports

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce a compulsory scheme of six months' notice of intention before withdrawal of flights serving remote regional airports. [197341]

Charlotte Atkins: There is presently no legal basis on which compulsory notification of withdrawal from a route could be required. However, the Department recently consulted on a voluntary scheme where an airline operating regional air services to London airports, would give four months notice of any intention to withdraw from, or reduce services on, regional routes. The consultation closed on 8 November and we will be considering the responses carefully.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has commissioned on the role frequency of flights plays in the (a) economic and (b) social wellbeing of remote rural areas. [197342]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport has not commissioned any analysis to be carried out on the role frequency of flights plays in the economic and social wellbeing of remote rural areas.

Rotherwas Access Road

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the proposed Rotherwas access road; and if he will make a statement. [191365]

Charlotte Atkins: The Secretary of State for Transport has received 19 representations about the proposed Rotherwas access road. In March this year, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Tony McNulty) met with Herefordshire council to discuss the scheme and other transport matters. I also met with my hon. Friend and Hertfordshire council recently to discuss the Rotherwas access road.

The proposed road was initially submitted to DfT for approval in July 2003. The scheme was not approved and the council were informed that further consideration was required as to whether the scheme provides value for money for the benefits to be gained, the extent of the potential employment benefits and whether the scheme proposed is the best option for improving access to the estate. The scheme was re-submitted in July 2004. The Secretary of State for Transport will make an announcement about this and other schemes later this year as part of the Local Transport Settlement.

South East Trains

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he will take to ensure the public gets value for money from the future operators of the South East Trains franchise; [196869]

(2) what discussions he has had with South East Trains about the future of its franchise; [196870]

(3) if he will list the performance against each target set for South East Trains for each month since it took over from Connex; what the performance figures were for the same periods in the previous five years; and if he will make a statement; [196871]

(4) what measures he will put in place to ensure that train services do not deteriorate if the South East Trains franchise is put back into the private sector. [196873]

Mr. McNulty: South East Trains (SET) is being operated as a subsidiary of the Strategic Rail Authority under s.30 of the Railways Act 1993 pending its re-franchising as part of the new Integrated Kent Franchise (IKF). The Department has frequent discussions with the SRA on a variety of issues.

We expect the new operator for IKF franchise to be in place late 2005. The operator will be chosen by a process of competitive tendering. The winner of the competition will be the bidder that offers best value for money for passengers and taxpayers throughout the life of the franchise. The franchise agreement will specify performance and service standards that the operator will need to meet otherwise be in breach of the franchise agreement.

SET's passengers' charter sets targets for punctuality and reliability. If the moving annual average falls below the relevant threshold it will trigger compensation payments to season tickets holders. The targets for punctuality and reliability on their main line services are 82 per cent. and 98 per cent. respectively. The targets for punctuality and reliability on their Metro services are 86.5 per cent. and 98 per cent. respectively. A table showing SET's passengers charter performance per four-week period over the last five years has been placed in the Library of the House.

The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) measures train operator performance using the public performance measure (PPM) which combines punctuality and reliability. PPM is published in the SRA's National Rail Trends, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Traffic Management Act

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the new regulatory impact assessment for the Traffic Management Act 2004. [196387]

Charlotte Atkins: We have no plans to produce a new Regulatory Impact Assessment covering the Traffic Management Act as a whole. However, many of the provisions in the Act will need to be brought into force by way of secondary legislation. Where this is the case we will publish separate assessments covering each of these. We expect to publish the first of these assessments next year.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what targets he has set for improvement in performance for (a) utility companies and (b) highway authorities over the next three years under the Traffic Management Act 2004. [196389]

Charlotte Atkins: We are not proposing to set overall targets for improvement in performance under the Traffic Management Act 2004. We intend activating key powers and duties under the Act over the coming year. We will be devising a monitoring regime to measure the impact of the Act, covering both utilities and highway authorities.

Victoria Embankmnet (Closure)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons Victoria Embankment was closed to traffic on the evening of 19 September; and for what reasons diversion notices were not put in place. [197679]

Mr. McNulty: Victoria Embankment was closed to traffic in the evening of 19 September for the Mayor's Thames Festival. I understand that the Festival organisers arranged for diversion notices to be put out 10 days before the event; and that Transport for London also put diversion notices on the dot matrix displays on their road network.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Responsibilities

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to her answer of 3 November 2004, Official Report, columns 268–69W, on departmental responsibilities, what estimate has been made of the sum from within her Department's budget to be used to meet the cost of appointing a separate Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. [198006]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave him on 10 November 2004, Official Report, column 769W.

Draft Civil Service Bill

Tony Wright: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when the Government will publish a draft Civil Service Bill for consultation. [198927]

Ruth Kelly: The Government are today publishing its proposals for legislation for the Civil Service. This fulfils the Government's commitment, given in its response to the ninth report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, to publish a draft Bill as a basis for further consultation following the publication of the Public Administration Select Committee's proposal for a Civil Service Act.

Copies of the consultation paper and the draft Bill have been placed in the Libraries of the House, and can be accessed at www.cabinet-office.gov.uk.

We would welcome comments on the consultation paper and the draft Bill by 28 February 2005.

Engagements

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list his public engagements individually for the week beginning 8 November. [198005]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to him on 2 November 2004, Official Report, columns 223–24W.

High Sheriffs (CPOs)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the liability of High Sheriffs in the case of improper enforcement of compulsory purchase orders. [198135]

Keith Hill: I have been asked to reply.

Where the owner or occupier of land which an authority has been authorised to acquire under the terms of a compulsory purchase order refuses to give up possession of it, the authority may issue a warrant to the Sheriff who is then authorised to take possession of the land using sufficient force to enable this to be achieved. The Sheriff is also responsible for settling the costs accruing as a result of the issuing and execution of the warrant. These powers are provided in section 13 of the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965, with similar powers in section 91 of the Lands Consolidation Act 1845 for compulsory purchase orders to which the provisions of that Act apply.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Africa/Caribbean/Pacific

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on EU FLEX financial support to the African, Caribbean and Pacific regions to smooth export earnings. [197632]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The FLEX mechanism is a compensatory financing mechanism provided from the EU's European Development Fund under the Cotonou Agreement for African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries. It has been in place since 2000. Its objectives are:

> to provide support in the case of short-term fluctuations in export earnings in order to safeguard reforms and policies at risk as a result of a fall in revenue; and > to remedy the adverse effects of instability of export earnings in particular from agricultural and mining products.

Until June of this year there were two eligibility criteria to receive funding from FLEX:

> (i) A 10 per cent. (2 per cent. in the case of least developed countries) loss of export earnings compared with the arithmetical average of earnings in the first three years of the four years preceding the application; and
> (ii) A 10 per cent. worsening in the programmed public deficit programmed for the year in question or forecast for the following year.

Between its inception in 2000 and March 2004 only €35million was disbursed. Of the 51 applications, only nine met both eligibility criteria. In March 2004, the EC proposed revisions to relax FLEX's eligibility criteria, in order to ensure that it responded more effectively to its stated objectives.

In July, the EU and the African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) States agreed to modify the eligibility criteria as follows:

> (a) To criteria 1: Extension to landlocked and island ACP states of the more favourable provision of having to only have suffered a 2 per cent. loss of export earnings (rather than 10 per cent.); and
> (b) Reduction of the second criteria from a 10 per cent. to a 2 per cent. worsening of programmed public deficit.

The European Commission has agreed to undertake a review of FLEX by the beginning of 2005 at the latest, and annually thereafter. The evaluation will provide an initial assessment of the impact of these modifications. It is expected that they will result in an increase in the number of successful applicants, and the overall level of FLEX assistance provided.

AIDS

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the Department spent on support for people in sub-Saharan Africa with AIDS and their families (a) directly and (b) through the EU in the last year for which figures are available. [196371]

Hilary Benn: Sub-Saharan Africa is home to 24 of the 25 countries with the highest levels of HIV prevalence: between 25 and 28 million people are infected with HIV in Africa. The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) estimate that in 2003 alone, 2.3 million Africans died of AIDS. Despite high death rates, the number of people infected continues to rise. The Department for International Development attaches significant importance to addressing the epidemic globally, but most particularly in Africa. Our response needs to be comprehensive and broad if we are to have impact.

DFID spent over £270 million globally on HIV/AIDS programmes in 200–03. About two-thirds of this support was targeted at sub-Saharan Africa. DFID is one of the leading bilateral donors in support for HIV/AIDS. In addition, since 1997, DFID has provided over £1 billion of assistance to the development of the health sector.

In this financial year the Prime Minister launched our new AIDS strategy, which commits us to spending £1.5 billion over the next three years, with £50 million per year of this to be spent on support for orphans and vulnerable children. We are also on course to achieve overall development assistance levels of £1 billion per annum for Africa by the end of 2005 and will use the Presidency of both the G8 and the European Union in 2005 to concentrate upon both Africa and HIV and AIDS.

European Union (EU) activities to combat AIDS in developing countries is carried out within the framework of the European Commission's Programme for Action (PfA), entitled: "Accelerated action on HIV/AIDS, malaria and TB in the context of poverty reduction". The PfA aims to increase the impact of existing interventions to combat HIV/AIDS; increase the affordability of pharmaceuticals; and encourage investment in research for the development of global public goods to tackle HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis (TB) and Malaria.

The Commission's average annual expenditure on the HIV/AIDS, TB and malaria, which is mainly through the Global Fund for AIDS, TB and Malaria (GFATM) is currently €269 million per year. About 70 per cent. of GFATM expenditure goes to HIV/AIDS, while 60 per cent. of the total is spent in Africa (tentatively translating into €113 million per year for Africa). In addition to this direct expenditure, average annual EC global financing for the health sector is estimated as €565 million per year. Finally, HIV/AIDS prevalence rates are used as an important indicator in all countries where the EC is providing budget support.

The UK's significant contributions to the European Commission Development Budget and the European Development Fund however can not be tracked back specifically to use on HIV/AIDS in Africa. Most EC resources are allocated by region or country in response to country government's own priorities, and details of the proportion of UK support for HIV and AIDS are not available centrally. However, the UK has been working hard within the EU to protect the principles agreed at the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) in Cairo in 1994, which redefined sexual and reproductive health and rights.

Commission for Africa

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the Commission for Africa. [197191]

Hilary Benn [pursuant to my reply, 9 November 2004, Official Report, c. 557W]: There was a slight delay in putting the Commission for Africa consultation document on the commission website. I can now confirm that it was placed on the website on 11 November 2004.

EU Development Aid

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the untying of EU development aid. [197583]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID welcomes the agreement of the Council to untie all the development programmes managed by the European Commission. This is consistent with our White Paper commitment to work for multilateral untying. DFID wants the agreement to be put into practice as soon as possible. A draft implementing Regulation, which must be agreed by both the Council and the European Parliament, is under discussion.

EU aid contracts will be open to non-EU donors on a reciprocal basis as well as to suppliers from developing countries. By untying aid in this way, Europe is giving an international lead and a practical example for other donors to consider as the basis for further untying by members of the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) of the Organisation for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD).

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment has been made of the response of (a) recipients and (b) other donors to the EU decision to untie its development aid. [197584]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The draft Regulation requires the consent of a recipient to the untying of its aid from the EU. I am confident recipients will welcome the benefits offered by this further untying of the Community's development assistance. Other donors are continuing to discuss further untying in the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) of the Organisation for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD).

Goats

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of aid programmes involving providing goats to women and families in the developing world; what support the Department is giving to such programmes; and if he will make a statement. [197556]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID has made no formal assessment, but has funded a range of non-governmental organisations such as ActionAid and Farm Africa in programmes whose primary goal has been the provision of goats directly to women and families in the developing world. Since 1990, DFID has spent or committed in excess of £3 million on such programmes. DFID has also supported many broader rural development programmes within which the provision of goats has played an important role.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on UK development aid in Sierra Leone. [197801]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government programme to Sierra Leone is managed through a 10 year Agreement that commits the Government of Sierra Leone (GoSL) to reforms in exchange for DFID support. The main areas of our programme are security sector reform, governance reform including public administration reform, decentralisation, public financial management, diamond sector reform, anti corruption measures and budgetary support. DFID has committed £120 million to the first three years of the Agreement, which was signed in November 2002.

A particular feature of the Agreement is the inclusion of performance benchmarks agreed between the UK Government and the GoSL. Quarterly reviews of progress against the performance benchmarks are held with Sierra Leone authorities. DFID is arranging a joint review of the Agreement with the GoSL.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much development aid to Sri Lanka has been channelled through (a) the Sri Lanka Government and (b) non-governmental organisations in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [197594]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Figures for DFID bilateral aid to Sri Lanka, in each of the last three financial years, are as follows:

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Sri Lanka	1.391	1.051	0.502
Government Expenditure in partnership with International Organisations (e.g. United Nations or World Bank)	0.820	1.566	4.833
NGOs	1.740	1.895	2.068
Others	0.788	1.219	0.696
Total	4.739	5.731	8.099

In addition DFID contributes to programmes financed from the Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP). This is a pooled fund to which DFID, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence contribute. GCPP expenditure is £153,000 in 2003–04 and an estimated £178,000 in 2004–05. Most of this is channelled through NGOs.

The United Kingdom also contributes a proportion of the cost of European Community development expenditure in Sri Lanka and core programmes by multilateral organisations. Expenditure details for these are available only up to 2002, and are set out in the following table:

	2000	2001	2002
European Community	0.9	0.8	1.0
United Nations	0.6	0.7	0.6
World Bank	1.3	1.1	0.0
Other	1.9	0.2	0.0
Total	4.7	2.8	1.6

The withdrawal of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) from the peace talks in 2003, and the subsequent stalling of the peace process, has prevented implementation of a number of initiatives. This has resulted in an underspend of the agreed allocations of development aid to Sri Lanka.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are taken to ensure that development aid in Sri Lanka is not diverted to illegal or corrupt purposes. [197595]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID takes careful precautions to prevent development aid funds being misused. We demand annual audited reports from all programmes we finance and reserve the right to commission independent audits should we deem necessary.

The bulk of our funds are channelled through international organisations such as the United Nations and the World Bank. Financial management systems and audit in these organisations are thorough and regularly reviewed.

Where we provide support through non-government organisations, such as OXFAM and Save the Children, DFID has reviewed their financial control and audit systems and confirmed that they are of high standard.

Our programmes with the Sri Lankan Government are managed by reputable UK based consultants. Again DFID has reviewed their financial control and audit processes to confirm that they meet required standards.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much UK bilateral aid has been allocated to Sri Lanka in each of the last three years; how much is projected for the next two years; how much has been spent in the Tamil areas of Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement. [197596]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: UK aid allocations to Sri Lanka from 2002–03 to 2004–05 are:

£ million

	Amount	Approximate amount spent in the North East of Sri Lanka:
2002–03	5.5	1.6
2003–04	15	0.3
2004–05	14	[1]0.749

[1] Estimate.

The planned allocation for 2005–06 is £4 million, which will be reviewed as part of DFID's annual resource allocation exercise that will conclude in the new year. Figures for 2006–07 and beyond have not yet been agreed.

Most DFID programmes support initiatives that cover the whole of Sri Lanka. A breakdown of expenditure in the North East under these programmes is not readily available. The figures provided for expenditure in the North East relate to programmes, such as de-mining, that focus solely upon the needs of communities directly affected by the conflict.

Uganda

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the humanitarian impact of the Lord's Resistance Army in northern Uganda; and if he will make a statement. [196666]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member for Moray to the statement I made in the House on 10 November 2004, Official Report, column 832.

TREASURY

Teenage Pregnancy Rates

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the teenage pregnancy rates in (a) Wales and (b) England were in each year since 1996. [197410]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Bill Wiggin, dated 15 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the teenage pregnancy rates in (a) Wales and (b) England were in each year since 1996. I am replying in his absence. (197410)

The most recent year for which conception statistics are available is 2002 and figures for this year are provisional.

The data requested are given in the table.

Child Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many child tax credit claimants he has written to with details about the process of finalising their 2003–04 claim and renewing a claim for 2004–05 reassessments; and how many have responded; [134687]

(2) what the (a) total and (b) average value is of tax credits (i) overpayments and (ii) underpayments that (A) have been repaid and (B) are outstanding; [185062]

(3) how many tax credits awards for 2003–04 have been finalised; of these, how many families have had their subsequent rewards (a) reduced and (b) increased because of overpayments or underpayments; and what the value was of (i) overpayments and (ii) underpayments of (A) child tax credit and (B) working tax credit. [185063]

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit renewal forms were received back for the 2004–05 year by 30 September; and if he will make a statement. [191780]

Dawn Primarolo: Tax credit awards are initially set using latest circumstances and previous year income. Families are encouraged to report changes in both income and circumstances in year; any changes not notified in year will be picked up at the end of the year when tax credit awards are finalised. In this way the tax credits strike a balance between a system that provides certainty of support, and a system that responds to changes in family need. Furthermore, the first £2,500 of any income rise is ignored.

As I announced on 19 November 2003, Official Report, columns 1099–1100W, in a written answer to the hon. Member for Birmingham Northfield (Richard Burden) from April, Inland Revenue wrote to all families who had had a 2003–04 tax credit award to explain the action they needed to take to finalise their 2003–04 award and to renew their award for 2004–05. Families were sent reminder letters and as the 30 September deadline approached, those that had not returned their annual declaration were telephoned as a further reminder. Many families contacted the helpline, both for help and to provide the information necessary to finalise and renew their awards. All of this activity was supported by an extensive publicity campaign involving television, radio and newspaper advertisements which began in April and ran across the summer.

Families benefiting from the Child Tax Credit through IS/JSA continue to receive their support in this way and are not part of the renewals process. And families receiving the family element only were told that they needed to contact the Inland Revenue only if their income had changed significantly or their circumstances had changed. This has meant that 1.3 million families did not need to contact the Inland Revenue and these families will have their awards renewed automatically. A further 3.7 million have returned their annual declaration enabling their 2003–04 award to be finalised and their initial award for 2004–05 to be set. At the start of October, around 200,000 families had neither renewed their award nor contacted the Inland Revenue and stood to have their awards cut off.

For 2003–04 tax credit awards were set using 2001–02 income. As set out in "The Child and Working Tax Credits. The Modernisation of Britain's Tax and Benefit System Number Ten April 2002", the first £2,500 rise in income will be disregarded for tax credits. This disregard means that many families will not see their tax credits reduced as their incomes rise. The Code of Practice 26 sets out what happens when tax credits have been over or under paid. Analysis of the numbers of families with over or underpayments and the values of these will only be available once all awards have been finalised. This will only be after the deadline of 31 January for reporting of final 2003–04 income for those families only able to provide an estimate by the 30 September deadline. Statistics on over and underpayments will be published in Spring 2005 under National Statistics.

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how many families in Manchester, Withington have received child tax credits. [197884]

John Healey: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. friend the Paymaster General to the hon. Member for Wansdyke (Dan Norris) on 12 July 2004, Official Report, columns 992–23W.

Figures for early December 2004 will be published on 23 December.

Chronic Pain

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate has been made of the number of days lost from work as the result of chronic pain in each of the last 10 years. [197611]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mrs. Iris Robinson, dated 15 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the number of working days lost because of chronic pain. I am replying in his absence. (197611)

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) gives estimates of the number of working days lost due to sickness or injury during the reference week. However, the LFS does not collect information about the types of illnesses or injuries which cause sickness absence. Therefore, information about the number of working days lost because of chronic pain is not available.

The attached table gives estimates of the total number of working days lost due to sickness or injury in the United Kingdom for the twelve-month periods ending in August each year from 2002 to 2004. This information is not available for previous years due to a change in the LFS questions on sickness absence.

Civil Service Jobs

Mr. Best: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the impact on public services resulting from the proposals to reduce the number of civil service jobs. [197418]

Mr. Boateng: Civil Service workforce reductions are an integral part of the efficiency programme that will generate over £20 billion of savings to invest in essential, frontline services. The programme is based on rigorous and detailed evidence as set out in releasing resources to the front line—Independent Review of Public Sector Efficiency published by Sir Peter Gershon in July 2004.

Correspondence

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Chair of the Inland Revenue expects to reply to the letter dated 24 August from the hon. Member for Workington regarding Mr. and Mrs. S. Hully. [197758]

John Healey: I understand that the Inland Revenue has made a thorough investigation of Mr. and Mrs. Hully's case and wrote to the hon. Member on 11 November 2004.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196146]

Mr. Timms: In April 2001 the Inland Revenue (including Valuation Office Agency) and HM Customs and Excise outsourced the management and maintenance of all of their offices to Mapeley under the STEPS contract. Costs of decoration and refurbishment are included in a single unitary price that the departments pay to Mapeley on a site-by-site basis. Separate costs specific to London offices are therefore not available for the years since 2001–02.

For 2000–01 the data available for the Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise includes amounts for refurbishment, decoration, maintenance, service charges and other accommodation costs. To extract this information would entail disproportionate cost.

In the summer of 2002, the Treasury moved into 1 Horse Guards Road under a PFI agreement. The total costs of refurbishment of that building were given in answer to the hon. Member for South Norfolk, (Mr. Bacon) on 5 February 2002 (Official Report, column 837W). Under the terms of the PFI agreement, ongoing decoration and refurbishment costs are met by Exchequer Partnership.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the staff in his Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196120]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly) on 9 November 2004, Official Report, columns 619–20W.

Drug-related Deaths (Wales)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many drug-related deaths there have been in Wales in each year since 1996. [197409]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Bill Wiggin, dated 15 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many drug-related deaths there were in Wales in each year since 1996. I am replying in his absence. (197409)

Available figures relate to deaths from drug poisoning, not the total number that were drug-related. The most recently available information is for deaths in 2002. Figures are shown in the table below for the calendar years 1996 to 2002.

Number of deaths from drug-related poisoning[1], Wales, 1996 to 2002[2]

	Number of deaths
1996	126
1997	132
1998	150
1999	139
2000	173
2002	152

[1] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 292, 304, 305.2–305.9, E850-E858, E950.0-E950.5, E962.0 andE980.0-E980.5 for 1996 to 2000, and the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes F11-F16, F18-F19, X40-X44, X60-X64, X85 and Y10-Y14from 2001 onwards.

Economic Growth

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the rate of economic growth in (a) Hampshire and (b) the area covered by Portsmouth, Southampton, Fareham, Gosport, Havant and Eastleigh local authorities for the most recent period for which data are available. [198048]

Mr. Timms: HM Treasury monitors economic progress across the UK, down to the county, local authority and constituency level. Economic activity rates in Hampshire are now higher, and unemployment rates now lower, than the national average. Since 1997 we have seen reductions in unemployment of over 50 per cent. in each of the Portsmouth, Southampton, Fareham, Gosport, Havant, and Eastleigh local authorities and the lowest unemployment in Hampshire since records began.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the relationship between increase in housing stock and economic growth. [198051]

Mr. Timms: The interim and final reports of the Barker Review of Housing Supply, published in December 2003 and March 2004, respectively, contain an assessment of the UK housing stock and housing supply and their relationship with the wider economy. These can be found on HM Treasury's website at:

www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/pre_budget_report/prebud_pbr03/prebud_pbr03_index

www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/budget/budget_04/bud_bud04_index.cfm

Fraud

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on cross-border cooperation (a) within the EU and (b) with states outside the EU to tackle (i) VAT fraud and (ii) fraud arising from manipulation of transfer pricing. [197574]

John Healey: Officials work very closely with their counterparts both within and outside the EU to tackle all types of tax fraud.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Green Ministers his Department has had since 1997. [197673]

John Healey: The Treasury has had five Green Ministers since 1997.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the gross domestic product of (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) the UK was in 2003. [197411]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Bill Wiggin, dated 15 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about GDP in England, Wales and the UK in 2003. I am replying in his absence. (197411)

Figures for 2003 are not yet available. The latest published information is for 2002.

The estimates in the table below are based on the regional Gross Value Added[1] (GVA) estimates published in April 2004. These are available on the National Statistics website at http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 7359

GVA England, Wales and United Kingdom (£ million)

Year	Total GVA England	Total GVA Wales	Total GVA UK less Extra-Regio[2]
1997	600,123	28,590	705,553
1998	639,746	29,747	749,692
1999	669,847	30,721	783,395
2000	699,768	31,865	817,292
2001	737,727	33,351	860,116
2002	775,266	35,084	903,836

[1] Information presented here is Gross Value Added (GVA) which is Gross Domestic Product (GDP) less taxes (plus subsidies) on products.

[2] Extra Regio is that part of the UK's economic territory which cannot be allocated to any specific region.

Interest Rates (Eltham)

Clive Efford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of interest rates on the constituency of Eltham over the last 15 years; and if he will make a statement. [197628]

Mr. Timms: Interest rates are set by the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) to meet the inflation target set by the Government, which is currently a 2 per cent. annual rise in the Consumer Prices Index (CPI). The MPC was set up in 1997 as a body independent of government and political influence. This reform has worked well—it has brought stability and transparency to monetary policy, resulted in low and stable inflation and interest rates and has anchored inflation expectations to the inflation target. Today, interest rates are at their lowest level for 40 years. Since May 1997, interest rates have averaged 5.3 per cent. This compares to an average rate of 10.5 per cent. between 1979 and 1997.

The Bank of England Act requires the MPC to collect the necessary regional information when making interest rate decisions and this requirement is enforced by the court of directors of the Bank.

NUTS 2

Mr. Moore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the review by the Office of National Statistics and Eurostat of NUTS 2 statistical areas to (a) begin and (b) be completed. [198043]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Michael Moore, dated 15 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on when the review by the Office for National Statistics and Eurostat of NUTS2 statistical areas is expected to (a) begin and (b) be completed. I am replying in his absence. (198043)

There is scheduled to be a general review of NUTS (Nomenclature of Territorial Units for Statistics) by Eurostat in the second half of 2006 with its implementation planned for 1st January 2008. The ONS will consult widely as it did in 1998 before submitting a UK response.

NUTS is the statistical geography that is used across the 15 "old" EU member states. There is also a proposal COM (2004) 592 dated 15 September 2004 before the European Council and the European Parliament to amend Regulation (EC) No 1059/2003 to extend NUTS to the 10 "new" EU member states. This regulation formalised a 3 level hierarchy (NUTS levels 1 to 3) through its publication in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 21 June 2003.

Personal and Retirement Savings

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of Government policy on (a) personal and (b) retirement saving. [197486]

Mr. Timms: The Government provides tax support of £2 billion every year for savers through Individual Savings Accounts (ISAs) and other products, resulting in increased take-up of ISAs for both the low-income and the young. The Government also provides generous tax relief for pension saving worth over £11 billion in net terms to individuals and employers and is simplifying the pensions regime by replacing eight regimes with just one, providing greater choice and flexibility to 15 million pension savers.

The Government's wide-ranging support for savings and pensions includes empowering individuals with financial information, improved access to advice, and savings products that are simple and easy to understand. With ISAs, pensions simplification and by implementing the recommendations of the Sandler review, the Government is delivering new incentives, greater choice and simpler products for all savers and pensioners. In addition, the pension credit provides for the first time a reward for saving for people with modest savings and small occupational pensions.

Redundancies (West Midlands)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest figures for the number of redundancies in the West Midlands. [197468]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 15 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about redundancy. I am replying in his absence. (197468)

Based upon Labour Force Survey interviews carried out during the three months ending August 2004, it is estimated that 11,000 people resident in the West Midlands had been made redundant in the past three months.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Tax Credit Office (Preston)

David Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how long the Director of the Tax Credit Office in Preston has been in his post. [197881]

John Healey: The Director of the Tax Credit Office was appointed to the post on 6 May 2002.

David Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2004, Official Report, columns 655–56W, on correspondence, what percentage of replies to hon. Members from the tax credit office in Preston in the 12 months prior to 1 April went out within 15 working days. [197882]

John Healey: The information requested is not available.

David Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue officials are employed in the Tax Credit Office in Preston; and if he will list the names of (a) the director, (b) the deputy director and (c) the four next most senior officials in the office. [197936]

John Healey: The Inland Revenue employs the equivalent of around 2,700 full-time staff in the Tax Credit Office, which is based in Preston and Liverpool.

My right hon. Friend the Paymaster General has asked the Director of the Tax Credit Office to write to the hon. Member separately explaining the structure of the Tax Credit Office and their processes for dealing with correspondence from hon. Members.

David Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2004, Official Report, columns 655–56W, on correspondence, for what reasons it would not be practical for the Director of the Tax Credit Office to reply personally to hon. Members writing on behalf of constituents. [197937]

John Healey: The Director of Child Benefit and Tax Credit Operations has overall responsibility for the Tax Credit Office and the Child Benefit Office. Taking into account all the other duties of the Director it is not practical for him to reply personally to all of these letters and his Customer Relations Manager usually replies on his behalf. This is normal departmental practice, and the Director remains responsible for the replies sent out by his office.

Tax Credits

Vera Baird: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people claimed the new deal for 50-plus employment credit between April 2002 and March 2003; and how many people claimed the working tax credit 50-plus element between April 2003 and March 2004. [197381]

John Healey: I understand from the Department for Work and Pensions that about 31,000 people in the United Kingdom aged 50 or more received the New Deal 50-plus employment credit after returning to work between April 2002 and March 2003.

For the number finally benefiting from the 50-plus return to work element in working tax credit, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right honourable Friend the Paymaster General to the hon. Member for Havant (Mr. Willetts) on 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1382W.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance has been offered on how long a claimant should be waiting after submitting a completed tax credit application form before they are advised of (a) the outcome of their claim and (b) their first payment; and if he will publish that guidance. [197788]

John Healey: The Inland Revenue aim to decide 55 per cent. of all tax credit claims and change of circumstances in five working days and 95 per cent. in 30 working days. These targets were published in the Inland Revenue Spring Departmental Report May 2004.

The Department is currently on track to achieve these targets.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications for tax credits have been awaiting a decision on the outcome of their claim for (a) one month, (b) two months, (c) three months, (d) four months, (e) five months and (f) six months or more. [197789]

John Healey: Payments are made automatically on the first scheduled payment date after a claim is decided.

Tobacco Duty

Mr. Baron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total amount of duty on tobacco products evaded and avoided since 2000, broken down by (a) revenue lost through cross-border shopping and (b) revenue lost through smuggling and fraud. [196979]

John Healey: Estimates of tobacco revenue lost through legitimate cross-border shopping and through smuggling and fraud, for the last three financial years, are contained in HM Customs and Excise's paper Measuring and Tackling Tax Losses published alongside the pre Budget report in December 2003, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Voluntary Sector

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether all publicly regulated funding schemes are required to apply the Spending Review 2002 principle of fully supporting the relevant overhead costs of the voluntary sector. [197423]

Mr. Boateng: All departments are expected to incorporate the principle of including the relevant overhead costs into the price for contracts with the voluntary sector. The Home Office are working with departments to ensure that they incorporate this recommendation into their procurement policies and the National Audit Office expects to publish an examination of departmental progress in implementing the recommendations in the spring of 2005.

PRIME MINISTER

Cabinet Meetings

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to Lord Butler's evidence to the Select Committee on Public Administration on 21 October 2004, what assessment he has made of Lord Butler's statement on the number of Cabinet meetings which take place in the absence of tabled papers. [196771]

The Prime Minister: The Cabinet receives substantive oral presentations at most of its meetings. In addition, it considers papers as necessary. Cabinet Committees transact a very large amount of business on the basis of tabled papers.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196605]

The Prime Minister: For accounting purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. The information requested cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate costs.

European Constitution

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions the Government have had with other EU Governments about the timing of referendums on the European Constitution; and if he will make a statement. [197919]

The Prime Minister: The timing of referenda on the EU Constitution was discussed by Ministers at the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 12 July 2004. EU Governments confirmed then that ratification of the treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe including the timing of any referenda is entirely a matter for each individual member state.

India/Pakistan

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Prime Minister what recent negotiations he has had with representatives of the (a) Indian and (b) Pakistani Governments concerning (i) the future of Kashmir and (ii) nuclear weapons proliferation. [197797]

The Prime Minister: Whenever suitable opportunities have arisen, I have discussed the composite dialogue between those Governments, and the issue of nuclear weapons proliferation. In respect of India, I refer the hon. Member to the press conference I held with the Indian Prime Minister on 20 September 2004, and to the joint India-United Kingdom declaration, both of which are available on the No. 10 website.

Libya

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Prime Minister what recent information he has received from the Libyan Government that can assist in tackling terrorism. [197798]

The Prime Minister: The threat of terrorism is under constant review. The Government take the appropriate action on any information received.

Youth Parliament

Andrew Selous: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer to the honourable Member for South West Bedfordshire of 20 October, Official Report, column 888, if he will meet a group of members of the Youth Parliament to discuss the youth service. [198199]

The Prime Minister: I met the UK Youth Parliament on 29 January 2003 and a number of issues were discussed. I welcome the contribution made by the UK Youth Parliament to the democratic process. I am happy to consider any requests from the UK Youth Parliament for further meetings.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the Solicitor-General whether the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) has established the national team of CPS anti-social behaviour prosecutors as described in the Home Office Action Plan, "Together Tackling Anti-Social Behaviour", published in 2003; how many specialist prosecutors are working full-time in the national team; how many are working in the county of Nottinghamshire; and how many prosecutions have so far been brought by the national team (a) in England and (b) in Nottinghamshire. [191619]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) has established a team of 13 anti-social behaviour expert prosecutors as described in the Home Office Action Plan. None of these is currently working in Nottinghamshire.

Available figures indicate that 457 post conviction orders have been made nationally as a result of CPS applications. No figures are available for Nottinghamshire.

Appeals Process

Mr. Allen: To ask the Solicitor-General if the Law Officers will take steps to re-assess the appeals process, following the court of appeal decision relating to those convicted of the assault on Mr. Derek Senior; and if she will make a statement. [196228]

The Solicitor-General: There is no plan to take any steps to re-assess the appeals process.

Charging Initiative

Mr. Allen: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will conduct a pilot project to locate Crown Prosecution Service prosecutors in police stations to provide a 24-hour on-site charging capability. [196230]

The Solicitor-General: Crown prosecutors are already located in police stations in the 13 areas where most recorded crime takes place, along with Cleveland. They are available between 9am and 5pm. Out of hours cover for all areas with a statutory charging scheme is provided by CPS Direct, a centralised telephone advice service staffed by experienced prosecutors, operating from 5pm to 9am Monday to Friday, and 24 hours at weekends and bank holidays.

While there are no current plans to provide 24 hour presence in police stations, the CPS and ACPO are working together to consider the introduction of more face-to-face-charging advice locally at weekends and during the evenings.

Nigerian LNG Plant/Serious Fraud Office

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) whether the Serious Fraud Office is assisting (a) the French authorities and (b) the Nigerian authorities with their investigation into allegations of bribery relating to a Nigerian LNG plant; [197262]

(2) on what date the Serious Fraud Office began providing assistance to the US authorities with their investigation into allegations of bribery relating to a Nigerian LNG plant. [197263]

The Solicitor-General: For operational reasons the SFO cannot confirm or deny whether a specific matter has been referred to it, or is under investigation. However due to exceptional approval obtained from the US authorities, the SFO can confirm that a request for mutual legal assistance from the USA in relation to the Bonny Island LNG plant, was acceded to on 28 October 2004.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Solicitor-General how many overseas jurisdictions the Serious Fraud Office is assisting with overseas corruption cases; and if she will list the jurisdictions. [197172]

The Solicitor-General: The Mutual Legal Assistance Unit of the Serious Fraud Office is currently assisting in eight overseas cases concerning offences involving bribery and corruption as specified by the referring jurisdiction.

As these investigations are ongoing, the SFO cannot disclose details of these investigations or the individual referring jurisdictions.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cases of overseas corruption the Serious Fraud Office is (a) investigating and (b) vetting; and if she will make a statement. [197173]

The Solicitor-General: The Serious Fraud Office is currently conducting two investigations where allegations of overseas corruption constitute an element of the case.

A further 11 referrals where allegations of overseas corruption may constitute an element of the referral are currently subject to the SFO's vetting process. It is not known at present which, or if any, of these cases will be accepted for investigation by the SFO.

The SFO is committed to investigating such allegations where the acceptance criteria of the SFO are met. In such cases the SFO will prosecute the offence or offences that are best supported evidentially, and best represent the conduct of the suspects.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Leader of the House if he will bring forward proposals for parliamentary questions which have not been answered by the end of a parliamentary session to be carried over to the next session; and if he will make a statement. [198173]

Mr. Hain: No. I refer my hon. Friend to the written ministerial statement I made on 21 July 2004, Official Report, column 35WS, on "I will write replies".

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Advertising Standards

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when her Department expects to receive from the Broadcast Committee on Advertising Practices a draft of the interpretative guidance for the Advertising Standards Authority's final amendment to the Advertising Standards Code; and if she will make a statement. [196765]

Estelle Morris: The Department expects to receive the draft guidance at the time of the public consultation which is due to begin in early 2005. Ofcom published their revised rules on alcohol advertising on 1 November. These were their final amendments to the Advertising Standards Code before responsibility passed to the Broadcasting Committee of Advertising Practice (BCAP) of the Advertising Standards Authority under the new co-regulatory arrangements. The new rules take effect from 1 January 2005 with temporary exemptions for campaigns already made. Full implementation for all broadcast advertising will be from 1 October 2005. BCAP plan to begin a public consultation on draft guidance notes for interpreting and implementing the new rules in early 2005 and will submit the guidance to Ofcom for final approval before publication.

Crossrail

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will reply to e-mail correspondence from the Romford Crossrail Action Group regarding the impact of the proposed Crossrail depot on local playing fields. [197489]

Mr. Caborn: There is no record of this e-mail correspondence having been received by the Department. A copy of the letter has been requested and a response will be sent in due course.

The address for e-mail correspondence to the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport is: tessa.jowell@culture.gsi.gov.uk

Governing Bodies (Sport)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to assist the modernisation of national governing bodies for sports; and if she will make a statement. [197425]

Mr. Caborn: Since 2001 UK Sport has administered a modernisation programme designed to help national governing bodies (NGBs) of sport to become more efficient and effective. Further to this, Game Plan, the joint DCMS-Strategy Unit report published in December 2002, recommended the implementation of a new approach to NGB funding and planning to further promote independent, modernised NGBs. As a result, from April 2005 modernisation will be mainstreamed into the One Stop Plans agreed between UK Sport and the NGBs of UK-wide priority sports. From April 2005, Sport England will operate Whole Sport Plans with the NGBs of England-wide priority sports. Whole Sport Plans will provide a blueprint for the sport from grass roots right through to the elite level.

Horse Racing

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her policy on funding of horse racing. [197904]

Mr. Caborn: Parliament has just enacted the Horserace Betting and Olympic Lottery Act on the expectation that horseracing should be able to finance itself without the need for a statutory levy.

Libraries

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many libraries she will visit in her official capacity in each of the next 12 months; [192668]

(2) how many libraries she has visited in her official capacity since 2001. [192672]

Tessa Jowell: In the last 12 months, in my official capacity, I have visited the Ideastore in Bow, the central library in Bournemouth, the Swiss Cottage library and the British Library. I have also visited the Carnegie library and Norwood library in my constituency.

My diary is currently being planned for next year.

Information for 2001–03 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Licensing Act

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the likely impact on community and amateur sports clubs of the licensing charges announced on 4 November; and if she will make a statement. [197449]

Mr. Caborn: The fee levels to be set by the Secretary of State under the terms of the Licensing Act 2003 have not been finalised. On 4 November, we announced the publication of a consultation on fee levels. We welcome the views of sports clubs as part of that public consultation, which ends on 23 December. All responses will be carefully considered before the fees are finalised. The proposal is that fees for grant of a club premises certificate will range between £80 and £500 and annual charges between £40 and £225. These fee levels have been proposed to ensure that licensing authorities are able to recover fully their costs of administration, inspection and enforcement under the terms of the Act and no more. In proposing fee levels and the allocation of premises to a band based on its non-domestic rateable value we have considered the impact of the approach on clubs, including community and amateur sports clubs. We do not therefore consider that the impact on such clubs would be significant. The Licensing Review that preceded the White Paper on licensing reform showed that alcohol licensing fees have been set too low for many years, and it would be wholly wrong for central or local taxation to continue to subsidise the consumption of alcohol. Consequently, we do not believe that the best way to promote sport is through Government subsidy of sports club bars. The Government's commitment to amateur sport is illustrated by the introduction in 2002 of a scheme which gives registered Community Amateur Sports Clubs mandatory rate relief at 80 per cent. and tax relief through Gift Aid on donations from individuals. So far the scheme has given amateur sports clubs an extra £5 million.

This is in addition to the £60 million we have put into the Community Club Development Programme.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) whether a regulatory impact assessment was carried out on the voluntary sports clubs sector in respect of increased charges arising from the Licensing Act 2003; [198052]

(2) whether a regulatory impact assessment was carried out on the voluntary sports clubs sector in respect of the increased charges from the Licensing Act 2003. [198310]

Mr. Caborn: Yes. Our estimates of fee levels were first publicised in the White Paper "Time for Reform: Proposals for the Modernisation of Our Licensing Laws" (CM 4696) on 10 April 2000, which included a regulatory impact assessment. A regulatory impact assessment, which also included estimates relating to fee levels, was also presented to Parliament with the Licensing Bill in November 2002, and was revised when the Bill entered the House of Commons in March 2003. In September 2004 a draft regulatory impact assessment was published with a consultation document on regulations to be made under the Licensing Act 2003. All of these documents are available in the Library of the House. For the purpose of the regulatory impact assessments, sports clubs are treated as members' clubs holding registration certificates under the Licensing Act 1964 and which expect to hold club premises certificates under the 2003 Act. Such clubs include as well as sports clubs, political clubs, working men's clubs, ex-services clubs, social clubs and others. There are approximately 20,000 such clubs. A further regulatory impact assessment will be presented with regulations relating to fee levels when they are made following the public consultation which began on 4 November. The consultation document enables any individual club to calculate precisely the fees it could expect to pay, under the proposals in the document, in respect of applications made for the grant and variation of a club premises certificate under the 2003 Act.

Minimum Pricing Scheme

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice she has received from the Office of Fair Trading regarding advice for local authorities on minimum pricing schemes in licensed premises; and if she will make a statement. [196767]

Mr. Caborn: Advice was taken from the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) in the preparation of the guidance issued under section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003 to licensing authorities, which was published in July 2003. Their advice was reflected in paragraph 7.79 of the guidance (available at www.culture.gov.uk <http://www.culture.gov.uk>) and includes "The promotion of price fixing or the creation of cartels is unlawful, and there would also be serious risks of breaching competition law." We understand that the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit and the Home Office have also consulted the OFT about this issue in connection with the Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy.

Mr. John Peel

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will hold discussions with national lottery distributors on the purchase of the late Mr. John Peel's music collection. [196342]

Estelle Morris: Lottery distributors work independently of Government and so we do not ask them to fund individual projects or ideas. However, it is open to anyone or any organisation to discuss ideas like this with the Heritage Lottery Fund or the Arts Council England.

Olympic Athletes

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to her answer of 4 November 2004, Official Report, column 379W, on Olympic athletes, what the names were of the competitors from Northern Ireland who competed for the Republic of Ireland at the (a) Sydney 2000 and (b) Athens 2004 Olympics; in which sports they competed; and how much Lottery funding each received. [197462]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 11 November 2004]: The following table provides the names, sports and funding awarded, through the governing body, to those Northern Ireland athletes who competed for the Republic of Ireland at the last two summer Olympics.

Sydney 2000

Olympic Games

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether training camps for the proposed London Olympics will be sited (a) in Scotland and (b) outside London. [194173]

Tessa Jowell: Decisions on the location of training camps will be taken by those National Olympic Committees choosing to hold them. As far as we are aware, no decisions have yet been taken about the location of training camps for a 2012 Olympics. We certainly hope, however, that venues across the UK will be chosen as training camps, should the London bid succeed. In promoting the bid, London 2012 are assembling information on the UK's facilities, and a UK Opportunities Conference on 17 January is designed to help all parts of the UK prepare to maximise the benefits a London games would bring them.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she has made an assessment of the level of support for the proposed London Olympics in (a) each country and (b) each region of the UK. [194210]

Tessa Jowell: London 2012 undertake regular polls, using a nationally representative sample of 1,040 12 to 65-year-olds, to gauge the levels of support for the bid, which are broken down by region. These suggest that support for the bid is least strong in Scotland.

Paralympic Games

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action the Government (a) has taken and (b) intends to take to influence the outcome of the International Paralympic Committee Extraordinary General Meeting to be held on 25 November, in Cairo, to prevent a permanent ban on the participation of learning disabled athletes in the Paralympic Games. [198017]

Mr. Caborn: The exclusion of athletes with a learning disability from the Paralympic Games is entirely a matter for the International Paralympic Committee (IPC).

The IPC has charged the international community of learning disability sporting organisations to come up with a satisfactory system of classification.

This Government are hopeful that a solution can be found that will secure a future for learning disability sport in the international sporting arena.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions the Government had held with (a) the International Paralympic Committee and (b) the International Sports Federation for People with Intellectual Disability about the future eligibility of learning disabled athletes to participate in the Paralympic Games. [198018]

Mr. Caborn: The future of learning disability sport within the Paralympics can only be decided by the International Paralympic Committee (IPC). The international community of learning disability sporting organisations has to provide a satisfactory response to the request from the IPC for an international system of classification.

I sincerely hope that the IPC discussions at the meeting in November prove satisfactory to the International Sports Federation for People with Intellectual Disability.

DCMS officials are in regular contact with the English Federation for Disability Sport and I have every confidence in the EFDS (EPDS) continuing to do everything it can to improve sporting opportunities for people with learning disabilities.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action the Government has taken to seek to ensure that learning disabled athletes will be able to participate in future Paralympic Games. [198019]

Mr. Caborn: This Government are committed to ensuring that everyone has the opportunity to participate in sport and physical activity and we fully support all efforts to involve people with disabilities.

The Government is also aware of the complex issues of classification within disability sport and the need for the international community of learning disability sporting organisations to provide the International Paralympic Committee with a satisfactory international classification system.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on reports she has received on progress in negotiations between the International Paralympic Committee and the International Sports Federation for People with Intellectual Disability on the future participation of learning-disabled athletes in the Paralympic Games. [198020]

Mr. Caborn: The future participation of people with learning disabilities within the Paralympics is strictly a matter for the International Paralympic Committee and the international community of learning disability sporting organisations.

This Government are hopeful that a system of classification will be found that will see athletes with a learning disability return to compete in the international sporting arena.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether it is her policy to ensure that learning disabled athletes would be eligible to take part in Paralympic Games if they were to be held in London in 2012. [198021]

Mr. Caborn: The participation of athletes with a learning disability at the Paralympics can only be decided by the International Paralympic Committee and not by the Government of the host nation of the Games.

Sports Clubs (Licensing Fees)

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made of the effect of the new fees for licensing on sports clubs. [197459]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 11 November 2004]: The fee levels to be set by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State under the terms of the Licensing Act 2003 have not been finalised. On 4 November, we announced the publication of a consultation on fee levels. We welcome the views of sports clubs as part of that public consultation, which ends on 23 December. All responses will be carefully considered before the fees are finalised. The proposal is that fees for grant of a club premises certificate will range between £80 and £500 and annual charges between £40 and £225. These fee levels have been proposed to ensure that licensing authorities are able to recover fully their costs of administration, inspection and enforcement under the terms of the Act and no more. In proposing fee levels and the allocation of premises to a band based on its non-domestic rateable value we have considered the impact of the approach on clubs, including sports clubs. We do not therefore consider that the impact on such clubs would be significant.

The Government's commitment to amateur sport is further illustrated by the introduction in 2002 of a scheme which gives registered Community Amateur Sports Clubs mandatory rate relief at 80 per cent. and tax relief through Gift Aid on donations from individuals. So far the scheme has given amateur sports clubs an extra £5 million. This is in addition to the £60 million we have put into the Community Club Development Programme.

Sports Participation

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of people in England who participated in sport in each of the past 10 years. [197458]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 11 November 2004]: Year-on-year figures for the number of people who participated in sport in England in the past 10 years are not available.

Figures taken from the General Household Survey (CHS) for 2002 show that 43 per cent. of adults participated in at least one activity, excluding walking in the four weeks before interview compared to 46 per cent. in 1996. The figure, including walking, was 58 per cent. in 2002 and 64 per cent. in 1996. The apparent drop in participation may, in part, have resulted from a change in the wording of the question in relation to walking between the 1996 and 2002 surveys. Although in both surveys walks of two miles or more were asked about, the 2002 survey only asked for 'recreational walks.'

Figures taken from Sport England's Young People and Sport in England Survey (2002) shows that 86 per cent. of young people between the ages of 6 and 16 participated in at least one sport at least 10 times outside of school lessons in a year, compared with 87 per cent. in 1994.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Directors of Children's Services

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the responsibilities are of Directors of Children's services. [195490]

Margaret Hodge: Directors of Children's Services will be crucial to creating the clear line of accountability for services for children called for by Lord Laming, and will lead transformational change in the delivery of these services at the local level. The Director's responsibilities are set out in clause 18 of the Children Bill. These are: the local authority's education and social services functions for children, functions in relation to young persons leaving care, any functions relating to children delegated to the local authority by an NHS body under section 31 of the Health Act 1999, and some new functions conferred on authorities under the Bill, for example preparing a Children and Young People's Plan, and making arrangements to promote co-operation among local agencies to improve children's well-being. Formal consultation on statutory guidance on the role and responsibilities of the Director will begin shortly.

Admission Procedures

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his policy is on the use of pre-11-plus tests by the parents' associations of wholly selective state secondary schools; how many such parents' associations have held such tests following the introduction of co-ordinated admissions procedures for secondary schools; and if he will make a statement. [195109]

Mr. Miliband: It is for individual parents to decide what assessments they wish to make of their child's ability in order to inform later decisions on school choice and suitability for entry into the 11-plus. We do not have data on the number of parents' associations initiating such tests. However, pre-11-plus tests are not a requirement of coordinated admission schemes.

CAFCASS

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether (a) business managers, (b) regional managers and (c) frontline staff in the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service were awarded extra payments for duties during 2003–04. [194215]

Margaret Hodge: Regional managers, business managers and frontline staff were given additional payments during 2003–04.

These additional payments are termed 'Additional Responsibility Payments'.

Payments were made for two main reasons:

1. To individuals who transferred to CAFCASS with honoraria; and

2. To staff who undertook additional responsibilities: temporary promotion or providing cover for short/long term vacant posts.

Additional responsibility payments continue to be paid to staff who have taken on higher grade or additional responsibilities.

A total number of 35 CAFCASS staff members were awarded Additional Responsibility Payments during the period 1April 2003 to 31March 2004. The total sum paid by CAFCASS is £27,480.

CAFCASS is currently integrating terms and conditions for all staff transferred from the 117 predecessor organisations. During 2003–04, CAFCASS completed the harmonisation of frontline, administrative and first tier management staff.

All other posts, including Business Managers and Regional Managers who were employed on a fixed salary (not related to a pay scale) in 2001 were made an extra payment, pending the outcome of harmonisation.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of separation and divorce cases involving children aged under 16 years were resolved without a court hearing during (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [194216]

Margaret Hodge: Statistics are not available to show the percentage of separation and divorce cases involving children aged under 16 years that were resolved without a court hearing during (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03.

The Office for National Statistics publication, Population Trends, shows that the numbers of divorcing couples with children under 16 were 79,277 in 2001; 80,997 in 2002 and 83,809 in 2003. However, there is no corresponding data for cohabiting couples who separate, nor is there any information about the ending of relationships of unmarried parents who are not cohabiting.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the level of staff sickness in the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service during 2003–04. [194217]

Margaret Hodge: I understand from the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service that the level of staff sickness absence for 2003–04 is estimated to be 3.6 per cent. CAFCASS is undertaking a review of the sickness levels to establish a more accurate figure for 2004–05.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) public and (b) private cases had been unallocated in each of the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service regions as at 31 August. [194223]

Margaret Hodge: CAFCASS' foremost priority is to reduce further the number of unallocated cases, and the service is currently developing a strategy across England and Wales to do so. The information requested for the Regions and Wales is as follows:

Public Law unallocated at 31 August 2004:

East Midlands—2
Eastern—6
Greater London—117
North East—31
North West—92
South East—17
South West—14
West Midlands—34
Yorkshire and Humberside—54
Wales—1
Total: 368 (3.2 per cent. of total workload)

The number of public law live (allocated and on-going) cases at the end of August 2004 was 11,136.

Private Law unallocated less than 10 weeks before filing date at 31 August 2004:

East Midlands—0
Eastern—0
Greater London—82
North East—27
North West—24
South East—37
South West—98
West Midlands—55
Yorkshire and Humberside—45
Wales—1
Total: 369 (4.2 per cent. of total workload)

The number of private law live (allocated and on-going) cases at the end of August 2004 was 6,952.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the period of delay was in allocating public law cases in the Children and Family Court Advisory Support Service in each of the last three financial years. [197072]

Margaret Hodge: CAFCASS does not collect information in the form requested. CAFCASS was set six key objectives when it was established in 2001. Key performance indicators (KPIs) were subsequently devised to measure CAFCASS' performance against these objectives.

For 2002-03 and 2003-04, the public law allocations KPI was as follows:

> In public law no less that 80 per cent. of cases should be allocated within seven days.

In 2002-2003, 69 per cent. of cases were allocated within seven days, and in 2003-04, 65.5 per cent. of cases were allocated within seven days.

For 2004-05, the CAFCASS objectives and KPIs were revised, as follows:

> By March 2005, 70 per cent. of allocations during the month for section 31 (care and supervision) cases should be within two days from receipt of request.

For the first six months of 2004-05, the average achievement was 52.7 per cent.

> At least 98 per cent. of all public law allocations each month for all case types should be within 28 days from receipt of request.

For the first six months of 2004-05, the average achievement was 92.3 per cent.

> No more than 3 per cent. of the public law workload should remain unallocated at month end.

For the first six months of 2004-05, the average achievement was 2.3 per cent.

CAFCASS has made progress in reducing the backlog of public law cases. In July 2003 there were 718 unallocated cases (5.7 per cent. of the workload); in September 2004 there were 281 unallocated cases (2.3 per cent. of the workload). A new board was appointed in April 2004 and a new chief executive was appointed on 1 September. CAFCASS has been given an additional £12 million this year and we expect to see improvements in performance.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress the Children and Family Court Advisory Support Service is making in preparing guidelines on contact; and when they will be published. [197073

Margaret Hodge: A draft version of CAFCASS guidelines, entitled "Contact Principles, Practice Guidelines and Procedure", was issued on 16 August 2004 for public consultation. This consultation period ends on 22 November 2004. CAFCASS will then consider the responses to the draft document and it expects to publish a final version in the first half of 2005

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many weeks it was taking to complete private law cases in each CAFCASS region on 31 July (a) 2001, (b) 2002, (c) 2003 and (d) 2004. [197135

Margaret Hodge: Prior to 2004/05 CAFCASS did not collect data about the time taken to complete particular cases. However, there is now an expectation that private law reports are completed within 10-12 weeks of the request date to CAFCASS. In general CAFCASS teams that are unable to meet this requirement make arrangements with their courts to extend the timetable for preparing reports in specific cases.

At regional level and for Wales the times taken to complete reports, for the period 1 April to 31 June 2004 were as follows:

> East Midlands—four teams met the 10-12 week standard and one team met the extended 13-14 weeks timetable;
> Eastern—three teams met the 10-12 week standard and two teams met the extended 15-16 weeks timetable;

Greater London—four teams met the 10–12 week standard, one team met the extended 13–14 weeks timetable, one team met the extended 15–16 weeks timetable, one team met the extended over 17 weeks timetable;

North East—one team met the 10–12 week standard, two teams met the extended 13–14 weeks timetable and one team met the extended over 17 weeks timetable;

North West—two teams met the 10–12 week standard, four teams met the extended 13–14 weeks timetable, four teams met the extended 15–16 weeks timetable and one team met the extended over 17 weeks timetable;

South East—five teams met the 10–12 week standard, one team met the extended 13–14 weeks timetable and six teams met the extended 15–16 weeks timetable;

South West—two teams met the 10–12 week standard, three teams met the extended 13–14 weeks timetable, one team met the extended 15–16 weeks timetable, two teams met the agreed extended over 17 weeks timetable;

West Midlands—three teams met the 10–12 week standard, two teams met the extended 13–14 weeks timetable and three teams met the extended 15–16 weeks timetable;

Yorkshire and Humberside—10 teams met the 10–12 week standard and two teams met the extended 13–14 weeks timetable;

Wales—nine teams met the 10–12 week standard.

On a case-by-case basis timescales may be extended by the courts where the needs of the case require it. This approach would apply across all regions and is not related to resource issues.

CAFCASS has been given an additional £12 million this year to improve performance. A new Board was appointed in April 2004 and a new Chief Executive was appointed on 1 September. They are committed to driving forward improvements in the Service.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total costs for the running of CAFCASS were in each financial year for which figures are available since 2000. [197137]

Margaret Hodge: The total costs for the running of CAFCASS in each financial year for which figures are available since 2000 are as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	81
2002–03	89
2003–04	99

We have increased CAFCASS's budget to £107 million for the financial year 2004–05.

Child Care

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care places there have been in the Dagenham constituency in each year since 1997. [196449]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the form requested.

Figures for 2003 and 2004 are shown in Table 1.

The figures for 2003 and 2004 are not directly comparable with the figures for 1997–2001 because the figures for 2003 and 2004 were derived from the Ofsted database of registered child care providers and the figures for 1997–2001 were derived from the Children's Day Care Facilities Survey, which was discontinued in 2001. There are no figures for 2002.

With the introduction of the National Day Care Standards and the transfer of responsibilities for registration and inspection of child care providers from local authority social service departments to Ofsted in September 2001, child care places were classified according the type of day care provided: full day care, sessional day care, childminder, out of school day care or crèche day care. Ofsted have produced figures based on this classification on a quarterly basis from March 2003. Their latest figures were published on 21 October 2004 in their report "Registered Childcare Providers and Places, 30 September 2004", which is available on their website, www.ofsted.gov.uk/publications.

Up until March 2001, child care providers were classified according to the type of provider: day nurseries, playgroups and pre-schools, childminders, out of school clubs and holiday schemes. Figures based on this classification were published in a series of statistical bulletins, which are available from the Department's website, www.dfes.gov.uk/statistics.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care places there have been in Pendle in each year since 1997. [197033]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the form requested.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much expenditure his Department has incurred in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [195455]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The spend on Public Relations activity the Department since 2002 is as follows:

	£ million
2002–03	1,944,457
2003–04	2,699,280
2004–05	year to date (as at 4 Nov) 760,946

The Department has not incurred expenditure on press relations consultants in this period.

Departmental Publications (Access)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of publications issued by his Department are available in (a) Braille, (b) autoprint, (c) large print and (d) easy read format. [194286]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Department follows the advice given by Her Majesty's Stationery Office in their Guidance Note number 16 "Official Publications and Extending Availability for Disabled People".

The Department will respond to any request for access to publications in alternative formats and will in principle make all publications available in the formats mentioned. It is not possible, without disproportionate cost, to give the details requested of numbers and proportions of the numbers produced of each format for each publication.

The Department does not have a standard formula for the numbers or proportion of alternative formats to produce for its publications. A large number of publications are produced, to a wide range of target audiences, and requirements are considered on an individual basis according to the subject topic, target audience and potential demand.

Departmental Salaries

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in his Department earn more than a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,485 per year. [195333]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I would refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by Cabinet Office on Thursday 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 856W.

Free School Meals

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the take-up rate of free school meals. [196994]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools[1]: school meal arrangements[2,3]

January 2004 England

	Maintained nursery and primary	Maintained secondary
Number on roll	4,293,180	3,326,800

Free School Transport

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the School Transport Bill will allow local authorities to introduce free or concessionary fares for pupils over 16 years old remaining in full-time education. [196966]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: All pilot schemes must aim to cut car use on the home to school journey. Beyond that, they should be designed to meet local priorities. This might, for example, include a trial which creates closer links with post-16 transport policies leading to more consistent provision for older pupils.

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in the City of Manchester receive free transport to school provided by Manchester city council. [196908]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We do not routinely collect that information. However a joint survey of school transport policies, expenditure and pupil numbers transported, conducted in 2003 by DfES and the Confederation of Education Service Managers (ConfEd), reported the following for Manchester local education authority.

Number of pupils receiving free or assisted home-to-school transport by category—Manchester local education authority

Graffiti

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment his Department has made of the role to be played by schools in tackling graffiti; and if he will list examples of best practice in this area. [197243]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Teaching honesty, respect for the individual and social responsibility is part of school life and in every curriculum particularly in the citizenship education curriculum. Allowing pupils to help manage a part of the budget earmarked for combating vandalism can encourage a sense of responsibility and produce a reduction in criminal damage. This may be done through a school council or youth action group. Various agencies can help. For example, most police forces have a school liaison officer. The success of this approach depends on it being sustained over the full age range. Intermittent, one-off projects, however attractive or successful they appear, will have little effect over the longer term. DfES has not carried out an assessment of the role schools can play in tackling graffiti but has produced guidance on graffiti in Managing School Facilities Guide 4 "Improving Security in Schools", and in Design Note 48 "Removal and Control of Graffiti", see www.teachernet.gov.uk/schoolbuildings. We do not know of examples of best practice in this area.

Integrated Children's Register/System

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many hours' training each social care practitioner will receive before they can use the Integrated Children's Register. [195319]

Margaret Hodge: The Department for Education and Skills has developed a training pack for Councils to use when training staff on the Integrated Children's System. Each Council will need to do an audit of their staff's training needs and decide on the nature and duration of their training before providing it.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what training will be made available to (a) social workers and (b) others expected to use the Integrated Children's Register. [195320]

Margaret Hodge: The Integrated Children's System training pack is available on the Integrated Children's System website, which can be found at www.dfes.gov.uk/integratedchildrenssystem

However, it is for local authorities and partner agencies do an audit of their staffs training needs and decide on the nature and duration of their training before providing it.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money each local authority will be given to run the Integrated Children's System in the first year of operation. [195324]

Margaret Hodge: The LASSL(2003)7 Children's Social Services Funding 2004/05 set out the main aspects of the 2004/05 local government finance settlement which is relevant to the funding provided for children's social services. It announced a capital grant of £10 million to support the development of information technology systems for children's social services. The £10 million is the first tranche of a total grant of £30 million payable in 2004/5 and 2005/6.

LAC(2004)22 provided more detailed guidance. It required the grant to be spent on building the information technology systems required to support the implementation of the Integrated Children's System (ICS). This grant is therefore primarily concerned with enabling staff to record and manage electronically case record information about children being served in the context of the Children Act 1989.

The grant is allocated in a way that reflects the size of local children's social services operation. The FSS formula is used for this purpose. This grant is in addition to the Capital Grant for Improving Information Management supporting Information for Social Care described in Local Authority Circular LAC(2003)17. £25 million was paid in 2003/04 to local authorities with social services responsibilities for the purposes of the developmental, improvement or acquisition of systems for improving information management.

In total, we provided an extra £90 million this year to support councils in improving their services to safeguard children including responding to the recommendations made in Lord Laming's report and the Joint Chief Inspectors' report "Safeguarding Children". No conditions have been attached to this money to enable councils the freedom to choose how to target the extra resources so that they can maximise the outcome for children's services in their area.

It is for local authorities to decide how best to provide support and services for all children in need in its area. There is no current specific earmarked funding for services, instead, Government funding is allocated to councils with social services responsibilities on the basis of the needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each body's target fair share of available resources. It is, therefore, for councils, working in partnership with relevant local stakeholders, to determine their spending priorities on the basis of local needs.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in which year planning for the Integrated Children's System began. [195339]

Margaret Hodge: Planning began in 2000. The development of the Integrated Children's System was first signalled in 'Learning the Lessons' (Department of Health, 2000) the Government's response to the Waterhouse report, 'Lost in Care'.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills who has been involved in the planning of the Integrated Children's System. [195341]

Margaret Hodge: The Department of Health and the Welsh Assembly Government developed the system. The Department for Education and Skills is now responsible for the project together with the Welsh Assembly Government. There was extensive public consultation on the Integrated Children's System during the winter of 2002/03, and further discussion at regional seminars held early in 2004. Feedback from children and families is also informing the development of the system. A full list of participants in the planning and development of the Integrated Children's System can be found in the consultation document, "Integrated Children's System—Working with Children in Need and Their Families" published in December 2002. The list of participants includes relevant Other Government Departments, the Association of Directors of Social Services, the Local Government Association, the relevant royal colleges, academics, researchers, practitioners and managers.

Nursery Inspections

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will introduce random unannounced inspections of nurseries. [197317]

Margaret Hodge: Following consultation, the Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted) has announced its plans to introduce unannounced inspections for group day care providers from April 2005. I have asked HM Chief Inspector for Schools, David Bell, to write to my hon. Friend with any further information he may wish to add, and place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Nursery Places

Claire Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the availability of nursery places for (a) three-year-olds and (b) four-year-olds in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004. [196572]

Margaret Hodge: Prior to 1997 the availability of nursery education was largely dependent upon geographical location and figures were not available. We have since invested more than £11 billion as part of an unprecedented expansion of early years provision. All four-year-olds have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since 1998. From April 2004 this entitlement was extended to all three-year-olds. Currently 93 per cent. of three-year-olds and virtually all four-year-olds are benefiting from free provision in the private, voluntary, independent and maintained sectors in England compared with 44 per cent. of three-year-olds and 98 per cent. of four-year-olds in 2000, the earliest year for which figures for all sectors are available.

School Absenteeism

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the school absence rate was in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) York, (ii) Yorkshire and Humber and (iii) England (A) in 1997 and (B) at the most recent date for which figures are available. [191164]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is as follows:

Percentage of half days missed due to total absence in primary schools

	Academic year (September to May)
	1998	2004
York	5.28	4.78
Yorkshire and Humber	6.30	5.38
England	6.21	5.49

Percentage of half days missed due to total absence in secondary schools

	Academic year (September to May) 1998	2004
York	7.37	7.98
Yorkshire and Humber	9.80	8.39
England	9.01	8.07

Note:

The PQ shows information for 1998 and 2004 as the 1997 figures are unavailable.

School Exclusions (Managed Moves)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he has taken to monitor the (a) number and (b) effectiveness of managed moves of children between institutions. [196944]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: This information is not available centrally. The Department's exclusions guidance encourages the use of managed moves as a positive alternative to exclusion and evidence from regional exclusions workshops shows that they are most effective when support is provided to the pupil during their first few weeks at the new school.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many local education authorities in England have a policy of using managed moves as an alternative to permanent exclusion. [196945]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: This information is not held centrally. I do know, however, that many local education authorities have adopted this policy, and find it most successful for pupils when appropriate support, both financial and otherwise, is provided.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his policy is on managed moves for children threatened with permanent exclusion. [196946]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We encourage the use of managed moves as a positive alternative to exclusion. However, we have made it clear in our guidance that parents should not be pressured into removing their child from school under the threat of permanent exclusion.

Schools (Fire Safety)

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will issue guidance on fire safety in schools. [R] [197633]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Managing School Facilities Guide 6, "Fire Safety", is the Department's current guidance to schools on fire safety issues. This was published by the Stationery Office in 2000 and can be viewed on www.teachernet.gov.uk/fire.

The Department is now in the process of producing new guidance for fire safety in schools. Building Bulletin 100, with the working title "Designing Against the Risk of Fire in Schools", will give guidance on the design of new schools as well as the refurbishment of existing schools to at least the current standards of the Building Regulations. The guide is comprehensive and stresses the value of using risk assessments as the basis for determining, for example, the types of fire alarm and detection systems needed in particular school buildings. It will be aimed at schools, local education authorities, design consultants, building control bodies and the fire and rescue service. We will shortly be going out to public consultation on it and expect to be able to publish the final, agreed guidance before the middle of next year.

Sixth Forms

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he plans to issue the guidance on the establishment of new school sixth forms proposed in the Five Year Plan; what account this guidance will take of the effect of the establishment of new school sixth forms on (a) further education colleges and (b) sixth form colleges in the area; and if he will make a statement. [197316]

Mr. Miliband: We are currently consulting on the regulations and guidance for the Schools Organisation Committee that relate to this issue. Later this month we will issue to representative organisations non-statutory contextual guidance. This will set out how we envisage that partners, including the LSC, LEAs and providers will work together to ensure that the pattern of provision in their area provides real learner choice of learner programmes and learning setting.

Teaching Software

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to encourage the development of appropriate software to assist teachers in monitoring and evaluating pupils' progress; and what advice he has given to (a) schools and (b) local authorities on the use of such software. [197639]

Mr. Miliband: My Department produces the Pupil Achievement Tracker software which schools can use to review their overall performance and that of individual pupils, identify their strengths and weaknesses and set targets for future progress. Commercial software suppliers are encouraged to develop similar features in their own products. The Department provides schools and LEAs with information about the Pupil Achievement Tracker and encourages them to use this and other software where it facilitates analysis of pupils' progress. General guidance, details of packages that provide assessment capability, together with some "good practice" case studies are also available on the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (Becta) website.

University Funding

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 26 October, Official Report, column 1158W, on university funding, how much funding has been made available to universities from the Aimhigher programme in each year since its inception. [194831]

Dr. Howells: The information for the years 2001–04 is provided in the table.

Financial year	Amount £million
2001–02	10
2002–03	10
2003–04	19
2004–05	6.6

Notes:
From August 2004, Aimhigher merged with Partnerships for Progression, a university outreach programme funded by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) and the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). In academic year 2004/05, a further £71.7million is being distributed to local partnerships. It is not possible to say how much of this is being spent by universities.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abandoned Vehicles

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who is responsible for recovering abandoned vehicles left out on the sands of Morecambe Bay. [196499]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Under Section 3(1) of the Refuse Disposal Amenity Act 1978, local authorities are under a duty to remove vehicles that are abandoned in their area on any land in the open air or on any other land forming part of a highway. However, under Section 3(3) of the same Act, local authorities are dissolved of this duty regarding vehicles that are situated otherwise than on a carriageway if it appears to them that the cost of removing them to the nearest convenient carriageway would be unreasonably high.

Instances of vehicles abandoned on sands and in some cases swept out into the sea will no doubt fall under Section (3)3 of the Act.

Aircraft Emissions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Department for Transport regarding the reduction of emissions around Heathrow. [195089]

Mr. Morley: Officials in the Department are playing an active role and are in continuous contact with officials in the Department for Transport (DfT) as part of the DfT work under the Project for the Sustainable Development of Heathrow. This project takes forward the commitment made in the Government's White Paper "The Future of Air Transport" to examine how to make best use of Heathrow's existing two runways, and whether a third runway could be added after a new runway at Stansted, while complying with strict conditions on air quality, noise and improved public transport access (paragraph 11.63 of the The Future of Air Transport White Paper).

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the effects on emissions of mixed-mode runway operation at Heathrow. [195091]

Mr. Morley: The Department has not commissioned any work on the effect on emissions of air pollutants from mixed-mode runway operation at Heathrow.

The Future of Air Transport White Paper mentioned mixed mode as a possible way of making best use of Heathrow's existing runways, and included some preliminary assessment of the air quality impacts. However, it acknowledged that the issue would require detailed study and that full public consultation would be necessary before any decisions were reached. My officials will be working with officials in the Department for Transport to consider the issues, in the context of the work on the Project for the Sustainable Development of Heathrow.

Albatross

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate has been made of the impact of long-line fishing nets on albatross populations; and what progress she has made in eliminating these nets. [193671]

Mr. Morley: It is estimated by Birdlife International that 270,000 albatrosses and petrels die annually from long-line fishing. We are working with our international partners to address the threats these birds face from it. For example, the Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) has an international action plan on seabirds which contains measures to reduce the incidental catch from this type of fishing.

The Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels (ACAP), which came into force in February this year, requires its parties to support the FAO plan. The first meeting of parties is taking place this month and we will play an active part. We are also keen to encourage other range states to follow our example by ratifying the agreement.

The FAO also has another international plan, which the UK was instrumental in negotiating, to tackle threats from pirate fishing; and we lead an international taskforce, drawn up under the auspices of OECD, looking at how best to take this forward.

The Convention on the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR), to which we are a party, supplements these international efforts, requiring all vessels operating in the Antarctic seas to attach a bird "scarers" to their fishing lines, sink their lines, and fish at night, as most birds fish during daylight hours. The vessels also have an observer on board to monitor compliance.

Arable Area Payments

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been paid out under the Arable Area Payments Scheme in each county in England in 2003–04; and if she will make a statement. [193515]

Alun Michael: After allowing for modulation and other adjustments the following payments have been sent to addresses in English counties in respect of claims made in 2003 under the Arable Area Payments Scheme (AAPS).

County	Payment (£)
Avon	4,495,056
Bedfordshire	16,700,325
Berkshire	10,475,642
Buckinghamshire	14,179,308
Cambridgeshire	50,521,681
Cheshire	7,332,649
Cleveland	3,586,360
Cornwall	11,769,296
Cumbria	6,400,085
Derbyshire	8,397,207
Devonshire	18,933,104
Dorset	16,024,764
Durham	11,171,783
Essex	49,070,236
Gloucestershire	21,349,171
Greater London	1,094,642
Greater Manchester	1,347,715
Hampshire	29,414,868
Hereford and Worcester	25,922,440
Hertfordshire	17,789,399
Humberside	50,426,973
Isle of Wight	2,386,338
Kent	29,894,148
Lancashire	4,566,930
Leicestershire	27,921,568
Lincolnshire	88,075,155
Merseyside	2,213,356
Norfolk	59,511,949
Northamptonshire	30,009,355
Northumberland	23,399,447
Nottinghamshire	24,605,907
Oxfordshire	30,905,216
Shropshire	22,925,473
Somerset	12,597,967
Staffordshire	12,787,076
Suffolk	48,889,561
Surrey	3,964,111
Sussex, East	7,505,715
Sussex, West	11,771,394
Tyne and Wear	2,174,018
Warwickshire	20,232,260
West Midlands	1,575,935
Wiltshire	31,743,734
Yorkshire, North	55,370,557
Yorkshire, South	10,647,164
Yorkshire, West	6,087,891

Payments in respect of AAPS claims made in 2004 are due to start being issued on 16 November. As indicated in Defra News Release 368/04, priority will be given to farmers in the areas worst affected by wet weather during the summer harvest.

Beak Trimming

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the readiness of the poultry and egg industries for the ending of beak trimming in 2010. [196113]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra set up the Beak Trimming Action Plan Group to monitor progress on the issue of beak trimming. Defra is working with industry, breeders and animal welfare groups to discuss alternatives to enable industry to adapt to the ban without comprising bird welfare. This work is ongoing.

Biodiesel

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government plans to promote (a) the wider use of and (b) research into the benefits of biodiesel. [195989]

Mr. Morley: The Government are promoting the use of biofuels through cuts of 20 pence per litre in the duty rate for biodiesel and bioethanol. The Government are currently considering the UK's indicative targets for the use of biofuels under the EU Biofuels Directive. Measures being considered to help meet these targets include a renewable transport fuel obligation, input-based taxation for biofuels and enhanced capital allowances for production plants. Regional support grants for capital investment in production plants are already available through the Regional Development Agencies.

The Government have sponsored promotional leaflets, such as "Drive cleaner, drive cheaper" and "The facts on biodiesel and bioethanol". The locations of filling stations retailing biodiesel are available on the Energy Saving Trust's website at: http://www.cleaner-drive.co.uk/transportenergy.

A number of Government-funded research projects have established the benefits of biodiesel in terms of reducing carbon dioxide emissions. Cambridge University has recently been commissioned to review the economics of energy crops, including those used for biodiesel. The benefits of biodiesel will also be considered as part of the current review of the UK Climate Change Programme.

Birds of Prey

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs under what circumstances birds of prey may be impounded; and what facilities are available for keeping impounded birds. [193153]

Mr. Morley: A court shall order the forfeiture of any bird belonging to a person convicted of an offence under section 7 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 or Regulation 8 of the Control of Trade in Endangered Species (Enforcement) Regulations 1997. In certain other circumstances, birds may be seized if they were illegally imported or for the protection of evidence.

Furthermore, there are powers under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 for police to seize animals where they consider that they have been subject to unnecessary suffering (an offence under section 1 of the Protection of Animals Act 1911).

As regards suitable facilities, neither the police nor HM Customs and Excise have their own, but they ensure that suitable accommodation that can hold the animals is found.

Bovine Subsidy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many errors were found in bovine subsidy claims in 2003–04; and if she will break down by proportion the types of errors. [196111]

Alun Michael: Information can be provided on the number of producers, claims and animals with 2003 bovine scheme year errors that have resulted in the application of an administrative penalty. This is given as follows for all bovine schemes.

A breakdown by type of error is only available at animal level covering the Beef Special Premium Scheme (BSPS), Suckler Cow Premium Scheme (SCPS) and the Slaughter Premium Scheme (SPS). Such figures for the Extensification Payment Scheme (EPS) are not available.

Scheme	Claims with errors	Percentage of total claims
BSPS	452	0.5
SCPS	591	3.5
SPS	805	0.8
EPS	2,472	9.4

Notes:

Percentages have been rounded to one decimal place.

Figures do not include errors that have not resulted in the application of administrative penalties e.g. notified errors and obvious errors.

Information for the 2004 scheme year will not be available until August 2005 when the scheme year has officially closed, post payment checks are complete and data is compiled for submission to the European Commission.

Bovine TB

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the farmers who have agreed to take part in the gamma interferon TB test, broken down by area. [194284]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is not our practice to publish the details of herds affected with TB. To publish a list of the individual farmers who have agreed to take part in the gamma-interferon policy pilot could disadvantage those helping Defra with its research. However, summary figures are available. On 31 October 2004, 125 herds were actively taking part in the pilot. A breakdown by State Veterinary Service (SVS) Division is given in the table:

SVS animal health divisional office area	Number of herds recruited pilot
Stafford	14
Worcester	46
Caernarfon	8
Cardiff	18
Carmarthen	39
Total	125

In addition to the pilot, since November 2003 the SVS has used the gamma-interferon test in parallel with the skin test:

to resolve severe or prolonged confirmed TB breakdowns to assess the need for whole herd slaughter, and as a confirmatory test for non-specific skin test reactors and inconclusive reactors.

A breakdown of ad-hoc use of gamma-interferon by SVS Division is given in the following table.

Ad hoc use of the gamma-interferon TB test by SVS Division

SVS animal health divisional office area	Number of herds in which gamma-interferon used
Exeter	4
Taunton	5
Gloucester	3
Worcester	1
Carlisle	4
Leeds	1
Stafford	4
Leicester	1
Reigate	1
Reading	1
Carmarthen	8
Caernarfon	1
Cardiff	2
Ayr	1
Inverurie	1
Total	38

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which authority in the UK is responsible for maintaining a register of (a) farmed deer herds and (b) park or estate deer. [197323]

Mr. Bradshaw: Keepers of deer in England are not required to register their herd with any central authority. Deer must, however, be identified in accordance with the Tuberculosis (Deer) Order 1989, as amended, before they move. Movement of deer must be notified to the appropriate local authority within three days. The official identification mark required for the purposes of deer identification is either a Defra mark or a mark issued by the British Deer Farmers Association. Keepers can obtain the official Defra mark only through registration with Defra.

Brewing Industry

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assistance she offers to overseas brewers with manufacturing bases in the UK to encourage their use of UK-grown raw ingredients; [193718]

(2) what recent discussions her Department has had with overseas brewers with manufacturing bases in the UK to encourage the use of UK-grown raw ingredients. [193717]

Alun Michael: There is no financial assistance available for this purpose since this would be contrary to the principles of the EU single market and the WTO. We have had no discussions with overseas brewers on this issue.

British Overseas Territories

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Joint Nature Conservation Committee spent on work in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04 in (i) each of the UK overseas territories and (ii) the UK overseas territories collectively. [196306]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Joint Nature Conservation Committee spent the following sums on work relating directly to the UK Overseas Territories for the years in question. JNCC accounting does not enable the sums to be divided between the individual Overseas Territories nor, for the years before 2003–04, is it possible to separate all of the expenditure on Overseas Territories from expenditure in other programme areas. In those years, advice relating to Overseas Territories was generally supported from budgets for wider programmes of work, for example, those on Multi-lateral Environmental Agreements, rather than specifically on the Territories themselves. Accordingly, the figures in the following table should be seen to be indicative rather than definitive. However, to give a feel for JNCC activities relating to Overseas Territories, some key areas of work by the JNCC which relate to specific Territories, or to them all collectively, are summarised in Annex 1.

	Spend[1] (£000)
2003–04	39
2002–03	40
2001–02	43

[1] Including staff costs and associated overheads.

Annex 1: JNCC activities relating to Overseas Territories from 2001–04

2003–04

JNCC contributed to the development of priorities for, and the panel assessing bids to, the Overseas Territories Environment Programme.

We commissioned a review of invasive/non-native species in all UK Overseas Territories (completed in 2004) and held a UK workshop on the same.

We commented on management plans for Chagos Archipelago (British Indian Ocean Territory) and Henderson Island (Pitcairn).

We participated in a Cayman Islands workshop on green turtle management in the wider Caribbean.

We contributed to training, in Anguilla, of enforcement officials at the UK Caribbean Overseas Territories Wildlife and Trade Law Enforcement Workshop.

We supported Defra and FCO in development of an Overseas Territories CITES web-based network.

We continued to support a PhD studentship assessing the impacts of climate change in UK Overseas Territories.

We represented the UK at the 2nd meeting of the Parties to the Memorandum of Understanding on the Conservation and Management of Marine Turtles and their Habitats of the Indian Ocean and South East Asia.

We participated in the steering group for the review of the Ramsar site series in the Overseas Territories and Crown Dependencies.

We contributed to the review at the CITES Animals Committee of trade in queen conch Strombus gigas, a species of significant economic importance to the Caribbean Overseas Territories.

We represented the UK at the 2nd Meeting of the Scientific and Technical Advisory Committee of the Protocol concerning Specially Protected Areas and Wildlife in the Wider Caribbean region (SPAW) and contributed to the revision of the SPAW listing criteria.

2002–03

We continued to provide advice and support to FCO and other Government Departments on nature conservation issues in the Overseas Territories, including advising on sources of advice for Environmental Impact Assessments in the Falklands, on applications to the FCO Environment Fund, and on draft Overseas Territories legislation.

We provided advice and support concerning the Cayman Island's proposal to register the Cayman Turtle Farm as a captive breeding facility under CITES at the 12th Conference of the parties.

We participated in the conference on conservation in UK Overseas Territories and other small island communities in Bermuda.

We supported the UK delegation to the 2nd meeting of the CITES hawksbill turtle dialogue meeting for the wider Caribbean, held in the Cayman Islands.

We supported the UK delegation to the 2nd meeting of the CITES hawksbill turtle dialogue meeting for the wider Caribbean, held in the Cayman Islands.

We supported the UK delegation to the 7th Conference of the Cartagena Convention and the 10th meeting of the Caribbean Environment Programme.

We continued to provide consultancy advice to Falklands Conservation on seabirds.

2001–02

We supported the UK delegation to the 1st meeting of the CITES hawksbill turtle dialogue meeting for the wider Caribbean in Mexico.

We commented on draft CITES and other legislation for the Cayman Islands and others.

We supported the UK delegation at meetings (in South Africa and Australia) negotiating the Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels, directly relevant to the South Atlantic Overseas Territories.

We provided assistance to Defra into the specification and commissioning of research into exploitation of marine turtles in UK Caribbean Overseas Territories.

We supported the UK delegation to the 1st Conference of the parties to the SPAW Protocol and its Scientific and Technical Advisory Committee in Cuba.

We provided support to the UK delegation to a meeting on the Conservation and Management of Marine Turtles of the Indian Ocean held in the Philippines (prior to a formal memorandum of understanding being signed).

We concluded our work on Seabirds at Sea in the South West Atlantic (under contract to Falklands Conservation) with the publication of "Vulnerable Concentrations of Seabirds in Falkland Islands Waters", but continued to provide consultancy advice to Falklands Conservation on seabirds.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the sources of the funding is for the work carried out in the UK overseas territories by the Joint Nature Conservation Committee. [196309]

Mr. Bradshaw: The source of funding for the JNCC's work on UK overseas territories is predominantly through grant in aid received via the three GB country nature conservation agencies (English Nature, Scottish Natural Heritage and the Countryside Council for Wales). This is in line with the funding arrangements for the JNCC set out in the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Exceptions to this have been where the JNCC has provided advice on seabirds and cetaceans around the Falkland Islands in a consultancy role to Falklands Conservation (£3,000 in 2001–02 and £2,500 in 2002–03). In addition, small contributions to travel and subsistence costs (but not staff time) have occasionally been made by FCO to support attendance of JNCC officials at meetings relating to the overseas territories (e.g. CITES and wildlife law enforcement seminar for Caribbean overseas territories in Anguilla, 2003; hawksbill turtle range state dialogue meeting in Mexico, 2001).

BSE

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the recent Food Standards Agency findings on shortcomings in the Meat Hygiene Service in relation to BSE controls. [193294]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra accepts the conclusions of the FSA's independent inquiry into failure by the Meat Hygiene Service to test some 24–30 month casualty animals. We are addressing those recommendations that fall to Defra. The FSA Board agreed on 14 October that the FSA would work closely with all the parties concerned on an action plan to prevent further failures.

CITES Import Permits

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species import permits have been granted for (a) wild-caught and (b) captive-bred primates from outside the EU in the last five years, broken down by (i) species and (ii) purpose of import. [196811]

Mr. Morley: The following table shows the numbers and species of primates imported from 2000 to date.

Climate Change

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will examine the report, "Up In Smoke?", on the impact of global warming on human development, by the Working Group on Climate Change and Development. [196495]

Mr. Morley: The Department welcome the report "Up In Smoke?". The report, put together by leading environmental and development organisations, highlights how the impacts of climate change could undermine achievement of the UN Millennium Development Goals (MDGS) and that climate change could even reverse human development achievements. It reinforces the need for developed countries to take the lead in actions to mitigate climate change and calls for the provision of greater financial assistance to help developing countries to adapt to the impacts of climate change. It also identifies the need for nature conservation and development models that are both climate proof and climate friendly.

Climate change is already happening. Because of past and recent emissions of greenhouse gases, we are already locked in some degree of climate change. As stated in the report, it is the poor and vulnerable communities that are going to suffer the most. The report calls for urgent action from governments. We recognise the need to act now to effectively combat climate change. We fully recognise the need to work with developing countries to help them assess their vulnerability to climate change and adapt to the inevitable changes.

One of the recommendations of the report is to "work toward a better understanding of the threat". The Department works with developing countries to help them improve their understanding of the effects of climate change. Defra has undertaken collaborative research projects with India and China to help these countries assess the likely impacts of climate change. This work involved the development of new approaches to assessment of vulnerability as well as capacity building. New bilateral research projects with China and India are currently being developed.

As highlighted in the report, Africa is one of the most vulnerable countries to the adverse effects of climate change. The report reads: "Africa already has a highly variable and unpredictable climate and climate change is making it worse". The Department and the Department for International Development, DFID, have commissioned a joint study on climate and climate change issues relevant to Africa. The study will identify information gaps, key priorities for further research and options for collective international action for Africa. The results of this study will be made available to the Commission for Africa.

Climate change threatens livelihoods of poor people with long-term pernicious effects on development. The report calls for development models based on risk reduction and incorporating adaptation strategies. The Department is actively involved in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) Working Party on Global and Sustainable Policies, which aims to identify the linkages between climate change and development. This work will also be useful in informing the UK's G8 focus on both climate change and Africa.

DFID is supporting developing country efforts to integrate climate change into mainstream poverty reduction agendas. DFID is working with other donors, NGOs, developing country partners and the disaster risk reduction community to better understand how climate risks can be managed. For example, DFID is engaged in a multi-agency effort to identify linkages, complementarities and areas of divergence between disaster prevention and climate change adaptation.

Coastal Defences

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she has discussed the weighting given to heritage in the calculation of need for coastal defences with her counterpart in the Dutch Government. [193487]

Mr. Morley: I have had informal discussions with ministerial colleagues in the Netherlands on matters relating to coastal defences but have not discussed this specific point with them.

Officials from our two countries meet on a regular basis. Recognising the benefits to be gained by shared experiences both in respect of policy and engineering solutions, officials from the Netherlands, Germany, Belgium, Denmark and England agreed to meet on an annual basis more than five years ago and so formed the North Sea Coastal Managers Group. The English delegation is led by my Chief Engineer.

Meetings of the group have proved an invaluable forum for the exchange of information. However, it is important to recognise that there are differences between the Netherlands and England both in terms of the geography of the coastline and the proportion of the economic wealth at risk of flooding.

Commercial Fishing Licences

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many UK commercial fishing licences are on issue. [196613]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 November 2004]: The number of UK commercial fishing licences on issue at 1 November 2004 was 6,406.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many UK commercial fishing licences are held by nationals of other EU member states. [196614]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 November 2004]: The number of vessels with UK licences owned by nationals of other EU member states at 1 November 2004 was 107.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the cost per person per week of the Common Agricultural Policy in the United Kingdom in the most recent year for which figures are available. [196376]

Alun Michael: Using figures from 2002, we estimate that the Common Agricultural Policy costs around £8 per week for a family of four. This includes the cost of increased food prices and a notional estimate of the taxpayer cost of financing the policy, though in practice the UK contributes to the whole EU budget rather than specific components. It remains the Government's objective to bring the down the cost of the Common Agricultural Policy and secure better value from it.

Community Energy

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which schemes have been awarded (a) capital grants and (b) development grants under the Community Energy Programme. [195944]

Mr. Morley: To date we have awarded capital grants totalling £47,422,329 and development grants totalling £1,776,253. The following tables provide a full list of both. Of the capital grants, 5,762,382 will be re-allocated to new schemes in a further bidding round due to the withdrawal of some schemes.

Composting

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether organic material derived from the mechanical biological treatment of compost qualifies as suitable for composting for the purposes of local authority targets. [196812]

Mr. Morley: Only the production of compost which meets the definition stated in Government guidance can count towards Best Value Performance Indicator 82b. This is available from the Defra website at www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/management/guidance/mwms/10.htm. With the standard of current technology it is unlikely that the product of a Mechanical and Biological Treatment process will meet that definition, in which case it would not be permissible for local authorities to count it towards meeting their recycling targets.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria are used to determine whether material produced for composting constitutes controllable waste. [196813]

Mr. Morley: The definition of waste in force in the United Kingdom is the definition in Article 1*(a)* of the Waste Framework Directive (as amended). Whether or not a substance is discarded as waste, and when waste ceases to be waste, are matters which must be determined on the facts of the case and the interpretation of the law is a matter for the Courts. The European Court of Justice (ECJ) has issued several judgments on the definition of waste which are binding on member states and their "competent authorities".

Composting is classified as a waste recovery operation under the Directive. This means that, in England and Wales, composting must be carried out under the terms of a licence issued by or a licensing exemption registered with the Environment Agency.

The ECJ has ruled that

> "..whether [a substance] is waste, must be determined in the light of all the circumstances, regard being had to the aim of the Directive and the need to ensure that its effectiveness is not undermined."

In practice, this means that waste does not cease to be waste until it has been fully recovered within the meaning of the Directive and there is certainty of its use as a product without undergoing a further recovery operation. The Environment Agency considers that (a) source-segregated waste which, after composting, meets a recognised and suitable quality standard (e.g. BSI PAS 100) is likely to meet the first criterion; and (b) mixed waste which is composted is likely to remain waste until it is used in a further recovery operation (e.g. land treatment resulting in agricultural benefit or ecological improvement) subject to control by the Agency under a licence or registered licensing exemption.

Consultants/Advisers

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the top 20 consultancy firms by contract value used by her Department in each of the last five years. [196883]

Alun Michael: Consultancy expenditure is part of the Department's expenditure on professional services. As part of its preparations for and implementation of the Gershon value for money agenda in Defra, a detailed analysis of departmental expenditure on professional services is being undertaken currently, and I will place a copy of the analysis in the House of Commons Library in due course.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much expenditure her Department has incurred in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004 to date on employing external consultants; and if she will make a statement. [196386]

Alun Michael: Consultancy expenditure is part of the Department's expenditure on professional services. As part of its preparations for and implementation of the Gershon value for money agenda in Defra, a detailed analysis of departmental expenditure on professional services is being undertaken and I will place a copy of the analysis in the House of Commons Library in due course.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the contracts awarded by her Department to external consultants in each of the last seven years, stating in each case (a) the name of the consulting company, (b) the value of the contract, (c) the purpose for which the contract was awarded and (d) whether the contract was completed. [196690] nsultancy expenditure is part of the Department's expenditure on professional services. As part of its preparations for and implementation of the Gershon value for money agenda in Defra, a detailed analysis of departmental expenditure on professional services is being undertaken currently, and I will place a copy of the analysis in the Library of the House in due course.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) maximum rate per day paid to private sector consultants and professional advisers employed within her Department, (b) average rate per day paid to consultants and professional advisers employed within her Department and (c) average rate per day paid to civil servants employed by her Department is in 2004–05. [197188]

Alun Michael: The average rate per day paid to civil servants employed by the Department is £75 per day if the average salary is divided by 365 days. The rate is £105 if the average salary is divided by the number of working days (including leave and public holidays for which civil servants are paid). These figures refer to permanent staff in core Defra.

The maximum rate and average rate per day paid fo externally provided professional services within th Department are being calculated currently as part of detailed analysis of expenditure on professional service of which consultancy is a part.

Comparing rates for externally provided professiona services with rates per day* paid to civil servants misleading as the professional services rates include variety of overheads including the need to make commercial return. Overheads for directly-employed sta are allowed for elsewhere in the Department's budget.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State fo Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the us of private sector consultants and professional adviser employed by her Department are subject to extern audit. [19722

Alun Michael: All public expenditure on goods, servic and works are subject to audit by departmental auditor the National Audit Office, the European Commission auditors and various other Government and public bodi having regulatory and investigative functions connect with the probity and propriety of public expenditure.

Information given to auditors would be available Ministers if required subject only to consideration Defra's Audit and Risk Committee, which is chaired the Permanent Secretary as Defra's Accounting Officer.

Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State f Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the avera cost of processing (a) a Convention on Internation Trade in Endangered Species jmport licence, (b) Article 10 certificate, (c) a licence under the Ba Directive and (d) a Dangerous Wild Animals licence w in the last year for which figures are available; and if s will make a statement. [1964

Mr. Morley: The average cost of processing CITES a Article 10 certificate applications in the financial ye 2002–03 was £120 (this figure includes import, export a re-export applications).

Approval of a premises under the Balai Directive dealt with on an individual basis. The average cost to t Department for an approval is £500.

The Department does not hold detailed information the cost of processing Dangerous Wild Animal A licences as this licensing function is carried out at lo authority level. Licence fees are set by each local author at a level sufficient to cover its costs.

Countryside Agency

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether, appointing a new head of the Countryside Agen shortlisted candidates were asked their views on (a) fi sports and (b) hunting. [1933

Alun Michael: The interviews of shortlisted candida for appointment to the Chair of the Countryside Agen were based on the advertised criteria. These included strong grasp of the challenges facing rural England a the English countryside and evidence of a stro commitment to the English countryside and the social and economic well-being of rural society, as well as the ability and experience to lead an organisation such as the Countryside Agency. Candidates were not asked their views on field sports and hunting because these matters are nothing to do with the Agency's core business.

Dangerous Wild Animal Licences

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many dangerous wild animal licences have been granted for primates in the last five years, broken down by species. [197185]

Mr. Morley: Licensing keeping of dangerous wild animals in England and Wales is carried out at local authority level and so there is no central record of the number of licences granted.

However, a review of the Dangerous Wild Animal Act, published by my Department in 2001, provides some relevant information. This reported that a total of 375 dangerous wild animal licences were granted in England and Wales in 2000, covering 11,878 animals. Of these, 655 of the animals licensed were primates (the figures were not broken down by species or by the number of animals held under each licence).

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Article 10 certificates have been granted for primates in the last five years, broken down by (a) species and (b) purpose of import. [197186]

Mr. Morley: The following table shows the number of Article 10 certificates issued on a species by species basis for the period in question. Details concerning the purpose of import are not recorded. Not all of the specimens were imported into the UK.

Departmental Offices/Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196149]

Alun Michael: The information requested is as follows.

(a) Decoration work carried out to the Department's London offices in each of the last four years was as follows.

		£000
2001-02	Nil	—
2002-03	Eastbury House—External	200
2003-04	Nil	—
2004-05	Nobel House—Fine Rooms[1, 2]	200
	55 Whitehall—External[1]	300

[1] Work still in progress

[2] Rooms affected by the Grade II listing of the building

(b) Refurbishment work carried out in the Department's London offices in each of the last four years was:

2001-02	Ergon House	3.75
	Cromwell House	1.3
2002-03	9 Millbank	2.5
2003-04	3-8 Whitehall	1.3
	Nobel House	6.0
2004-05	Nobel House[1]	13.0
	55 Whitehall[1]	3.3

[1] Work still in progress

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the staff in her Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196123]

Alun Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly), on 9 November, Official Report, column 619W.

Disposable Nappies

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of (a) the number of disposable nappies used in each of the last five years, and (b) the costs in each of those years of disposing of those nappies. [193832]

Mr. Morley: We do not collect information on the number of disposable nappies used. Nor of the costs associated with their disposal.

A number of Waste Disposal Authorities have estimated the costs are incurred from the disposal of disposable nappies, which range from £500,000 to over £1 million per year.

Dogs

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance her Department gives to local authorities regarding the implementation of effective penalties against individuals whose dogs foul public highways, pavements and parks. [196855]

Alun Michael: We do not provide guidance to local authorities for implementation of effective penalties for dog fouling offences but do offer advice wherever consulted.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance her Department gives to local authorities regarding the provision of dog waste bins. [196856]

Alun Michael: We do not provide local authorities with guidance on the provision of dog waste bins. Local authorities decide on the placing and quantity of dog waste bins in light of local circumstances.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what initiatives her Department is promoting to local authorities for combating dog fouling on public highways, pavements and parks. [196857]

Alun Michael: On our behalf ENCAMS run campaigns to raise awareness of local environmental issues, including dog fouling. The 2002/03 Local Environmental Quality Survey of England recorded a 27 per cent. drop in dog fouling, which followed a successful campaign in the summer of 2002. This trend has continued and figures from the survey indicate that fouling is less socially acceptable than has previously been the case.

We are looking at several measures relating to dog fouling, including allowing local authorities to set the level of fixed penalty for dog fouling offences, and we will look to take them forward into legislation at the earliest available opportunity.

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many puppies were imported into the UK from the Republic of Ireland in each of the past 10 years, broken down by breed; and if she will make a statement. [193516]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 27 October 2004]: Under Single Market rules no records are kept of the number of puppies imported into the UK from the Republic of Ireland. There are no rules that restrict the trade in accompanied pet animals.

Eels

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the numbers of eels in England; and what assessment she has made of the impact of recent changes in numbers on (a) rivers and (b) the Severn, with specific reference to elvering. [192331]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 October 2004]: There is no comprehensive monitoring of the numbers of eels in England, but surveys on three rivers and catch data for a number of other rivers indicate no significant decline in stocks of yellow eels or changes in population structure over the last 20 years. However, elver recruitment in England and Wales has declined from peak values in the late 1970s, mirroring the changes seen elsewhere in Europe.

There is no evidence for a large change in eel numbers in the Severn over the last 20 years, though there is a significant reduction (approximately 50 per cent.) in the proportion of small eels (under 150 mm) in the lower Severn which reflects the decline in recruitment of glass eel. The elver catch over recent years in the Severn is around 30 per cent. of the 1980/84 average.

The decline in eel stocks is problem across the European Community and we support the need for a Community-wide rebuilding plan, and for the introduction, as soon as possible, of a coordinated framework of international management measures. We are actively involved with the Commission, and other Member States, in drawing up proposals to improve the conservation of eel stocks.

In recognition of the poor state of stocks in England and Wales, new Environment Agency byelaws will soon be passed, introducing a new licensing system, and other controls on fishing for eels, other than by rod and line.

Elephants

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress is being made internationally on improving the protection for African elephants. [197791]

Mr. Morley: The African elephant is protected under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) and all trade in raw ivory is currently suspended. Some elephant populations have recovered sufficiently to allow a one-off sale of existing ivory stocks but this will not take place until we are satisfied that the trade can be properly regulated and that the baseline data for monitoring the impact of such sales on the illegal killing of elephants (MIKE) are in place. The Elephant Trade Information System (ETIS), which is funded by Defra, is also helping to monitor the number of ivory seizures and identify the patterns of illegal trade. In addition, the CITES Secretariat has been directed to develop an action plan for dealing with the global market in ivory, focusing in particular on the unregulated domestic markets in Africa. It will also look at the markets in South East Asia, where the increased demand for ivory is thought to be fuelling the illegal killing of elephants.

Endangered Species

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress is being made in increasing protection for endangered species internationally. [197603]

Mr. Morley: Endangered species are protected internationally under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). Proposals to increase the protection afforded to a number of different plant and animal species were adopted at the 13th Conference of CITES Parties, which was held in Bangkok, Thailand, at the beginning of October.

Endangered species such as the Irrawaddy dolphin, sulphur-crested cockatoo and spider tortoise were added to Appendix I of CITES, which means that all commercial trade in them is now prohibited. Others such as the great white shark, humphead wrasse and Chinese yew were added to Appendix II, which means that trade in these species will now be more strictly regulated than was the case before. Proposals to improve the enforcement of, and compliance with, CITES were also adopted, as were initiatives to address the illegal trade in great apes, Asian big cats and bushmeat.

Energy Efficiency (Newcastle)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people have benefited from the Home Energy Efficiency and Warm Front Scheme in the city of Newcastle upon Tyne since 1997. [194751]

Mr. Morley: Since the beginning of Warm Front in June 2000, approximately 2,100 households have been assisted in the constituency of Newcastle-upon-Tyne Central.

Under the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme information was not collected on at constituency level. However it is estimated that from April 1997 to May 2000 around 5,000 households in Newcastle-upon-Tyne Central were assisted by the Scheme.

Environment Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Environment Council on 14 October; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting records; and if she will make a statement. [192659]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Environment Council held in Luxembourg on 14 October. No Ministers from the devolved administrations were present.

Council reached political agreement on two dossiers, involving three legal measures. Each represented a successful outcome for the UK.

On the proposed Directive on the Management of Waste from the Extractive Industries, discussion was primarily on the scope of the proposal. Hungary wanted the requirement for a financial guarantee to extend to land surrounding a waste facility. The UK argued that such a move would be impractical, overlap unhelpfully with the Environmental Liability Directive, and place unwarranted burdens on the extractive industries. Council reached agreement by a qualified majority which included the UK, on the basis of the compromise text tabled by the Presidency for the meeting, with Austria and Hungary abstaining.

The proposed Regulation on Certain Fluorinated Greenhouse Gases aims to make a contribution to our Kyoto Protocol target by introducing mitigation measures in relation to these gases, developed to replace the much more damaging (to the ozone layer) CFCs and HCFCs. Some of these fluorinated gases have a high global warming potential and therefore action is needed, across the EU. This measure is intended to deliver reductions in emissions equivalent to some 20 million tonnes of CO_2 per year by 2012.

The original proposal for a Regulation has been split into two parts, with a separate Directive relating to mobile air conditioning systems (MACs) fitted to cars and car-derived vans. Both were considered at Council, and much of the discussion related to the legal base. Austria and Denmark were particularly concerned that the environmental legal base provided in Article 175 should be used for the Regulation, allowing them to maintain tighter existing standards of their own without having to notify them to the Commission. Sweden also supported this view, wishing to preserve the flexibility to go further in future. For the UK, the Secretary of State put the view, also supported by the Commission and several other member states, that a dual legal base was the best means to avoid possible undermining of the single market, while achieving important environmental gains across the EU. The Directive includes a ban on the use of fluorinated gases with high global warming potential in MACs from 2011 (new vehicle types) and 2017 (all new vehicles). Both the Regulation and the Directive had additional text added providing for a future neutral review of the Community provisions (in the Regulation and Directive) concerning global warming potential of fluorinated gases.

Political agreement on both the Regulation and the Directive was reached by qualified majority which included the UK, with Denmark and Austria voting against, and Belgium, Sweden and Portugal abstaining.

Council adopted Conclusions relating to the Commission's communication on flood prevention, protection and mitigation, and following on from discussions held at an informal meeting of environment Ministers in July. The Conclusions agreed to increase information sharing and co-operation in this field.

Council also adopted Conclusions entitled 'Clean, Clever, Competitive', noting the opportunities that environmentally efficient innovation offers within the Lisbon process, and the importance of working with stakeholders to realise these opportunities.

A third set of Conclusions, adopted without discussion in Council, related to the Commission's communication on its work on the thematic strategy on the Urban Environment. While welcoming the communication, Council urged the Commission to review the justification for some of its emerging proposals in the light of the principle of subsidiarity and current legislation and procedures in member states.

The final set of Conclusions adopted was in preparation for the 10th Conference of the Parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change, in which Council welcomed President Putin's decision to refer the Kyoto protocol to the Russian Duma for ratification, and reaffirmed our commitment both to maintain EU leadership internationally on climate change, and to engage constructively with others.

Council held an exchange of views on sustainable road transport, during which there was widespread support for encouraging production of cleaner and more efficient vehicles, with significant reductions in emissions of both particulates and nitrous oxide (NOx).

There was also a lengthy exchange of views on the future financing of the Natura 2000 network of protected natural sites. Some 10 member states, with Spain and Portugal in the lead, submitted a joint statement focused on their desire to establish a system of comprehensive community co-financing for these sites. The Secretary of State spoke in support of the Commission's approach in its recent communication, which is to focus on providing for the financing of these sites through the principal existing community financial instruments where they are applicable. She also noted that the Habitats Directive which established Natura 2000 sites is clear in giving primary responsibility for financing them to member states, and stating that co-financing should be in exceptional circumstances. Overall decisions on financing would be taken in other Council formations, and our decisions must be taken in the light of those. The Presidency noted general support for the idea of integrating Natura 2000 funding into other community instruments, but that there was widespread concern to ensure that these provided sufficient coverage.

There was a short exchange of views on the EECCA environment Ministers conference ('Kiev + 1') to be held in Tblisi on 21–22 October. The Secretary of State spoke to stress the importance we put on this in taking forward delivery of the EU and UNECE's commitments from the Johannesburg World Summit on Sustainable Development.

Under Other Business, Council noted information items on progress on the Aarhus dossiers, the forthcoming conference of the parties to the Basel Convention and the report from a German conference on impact assessment. Finally, the environment Ministers expressed their thanks to Margot Wallstrom, who was attending her last Council as Environment Commissioner.

Environmental Protection Policies/Specialists

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what mechanisms are in place to ensure policies she assesses as vital for environmental protection purposes cannot be overruled by (a) the Department for Trade and Industry and (b) the Department for Transport. [196846]

Mr. Morley: There are frequent discussions between Ministers and officials of the relevant Departments about issues with a bearing on the environment. All Departments are committed to the vision of sustainable development set out in our strategy, "A Better Quality of Life" (Cm 4345), and therefore to the appraisal of their policies for environmental, social and economic impacts.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of her Department's annual budget was spent on the payment of external environmental specialists in each year since June 2001. [197189]

Alun Michael: The information requested is not held centrally. Expenditure on external environmental specialists is part of the Department's expenditure on professional services. As part of its preparations for and implementation of the Gershon value for money agenda in Defra, a detailed analysis of departmental expenditure on professional services is being undertaken currently. I will place a copy of the analysis in the House of Commons Library in due course.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times during the Greek Presidency of the EU the committee (a) on implementation of the Directive establishing a Community policy regarding water, (b) for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the Directive on water intended for human consumption and (c) for the adaptation to technical and scientific progress of the directive on methods of measurement and frequencies of sampling and analysis of surface water intended for the abstraction of drinking water in the member states met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [193397]

Mr. Morley: The information is as follows:

(a) The Committee on implementation of the Directive establishing a Community policy regarding water

The EU Committee on the implementation of the Directive establishing a Community policy regarding water met in Brussels on 6 May 2003 during the Greek Presidency. A representative from Water Quality Division, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs attended the meeting on behalf of the UK. Issues discussed at the Committee included work priorities for 2003 and 2004, and implementation of Directive 2000/60/EC. The EU used the outcome of the meeting to take forward the Common Implementation Strategy including intercalibration. The UK used the outcome of the meeting to aid its implementation of the Directive.

(b) The EU Committee for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the Directive on water intended for human consumption

The Drinking Water Directive Management Committee met in Brussels on 8 May 2003 during the Greek Presidency. Representatives from the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the Drinking Water Inspectorate and an observer from the Northern Ireland Drinking Water Inspectorate were present.

Technical issues considered included sampling and monitoring for radioactivity, lead, copper and nickel, and studies on drinking water. The outcome of the meeting was an agreed text of a draft Common Decision to amend technical Annexes to the Directive. Interim guidance for water companies issued by the Drinking Water Inspectorate already includes advice on these issues.

(c) The Committee for the adaptation to technical and scientific progress of the Directive on methods of measurement and frequencies of sampling and analysis of surface water intended for the abstraction of drinking water in the member states

The Committee did not meet during the Greek Presidency.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Scientific Review Group for the protection of species of wild fauna and flora by regulating trade met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [193399]

Mr. Morley: The Scientific Review Group (SRG) met twice during the period of the Greek Presidency, on 30 January 2003 and 22 May 2003, on both occasions in Brussels.

UK representation normally comprises a representative from each of the two independent Scientific Authorities: the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (for animals), and the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew (for plants). Government officials do not attend these meetings. The two independent Scientific Authorities both act in relation to each of their specialisms as single voices representing the wider UK scientific perspective in meeting responsibilities to examine scientific questions relating to the application of Council Regulation 338/97. The SRG examines scientific questions relating to the application of Council Regulation 338/97 and introduction of species to the EU. The decisions of the SRG are referred to as opinions.

The UK representatives raised the following technical issues at the meeting on 30 January 2003: application of Article 4 in relation to Pulsatrix melanota from Peru, and the inclusion of Oxyura jamaicensis on Annex B under the provisions of Article 3.2.d. At the meeting of 22 May 2003 the UK raised the following issues: Psittacus erithacus from Cote d'Ivoire; Geochelone pardalis from Zambia; the Article 4.6.c Working Group, and the listing of Gonystylus spp. on Annex B to Council Regulation 338/97. No financial issues were raised by the UK at either meeting.

The following opinions were agreed by the SRG at the respective meetings:

30 January 2003

Positive opinions for import of specimens from the following species/countries combinations:

Tridacna maxima Vietnam

Negative opinions for import of specimens of the following species/countries combinations

Canis lupus Belarus (hunting trophies)

Ursus arctos Slovenia (hunting trophies)

Geochelone pardalis Uganda

Blastomussa wellsi Indonesia

Tridacna crocea Vietnam

Tridacna squamosa Vietnam

No opinion for import of specimens of the following species/countries combinations

Panthera leo Ethiopia species.

The SRG concluded that the Commission should consider adding the following species to Annex D of Council Regulation 338/97:

Bird species:

Amandava amandava

Carduelis ambigua

Carduelis atrata

Cosmopsaurus regius

Cryptospiza reichenovii

Estrilda quartinia (often traded as Estrilda melanotis)

Hypargos niveoguttatus

Lonchura griseicapilla
Lonchura punctulata
Mino dumontii
Pyrrhula erythaca
Serinus canicollis
Serinus hypostictus (often traded as Serinus citrinelloides)
Sitta yunnanensis
Reptile species:
Melanochelys trijuga
Teratoscincus microlepis
Teratoscincus scincus
Carettochelys insculpta
Chinemys nigricans
Geomyda spengleri.

The SRG recommended that the Commission should delete the following species from Annex D:

Casuarius bennetti
Casuarius casuarius
Pelecanus philippensis
Mycteria leucocephala
Stictonetta naevosa
Chrysolophus amherstiae
Chrysolophus pictus
Tragopan temminckii
Treron sieboldii
Eubucco tucinkae
Megalaima rafflesii
Andigena cucullata
Andigena hypoglauca
Andigena nigrirostris
Zoothera monticola
Anthreptes reichenowi
Arachnothera clarae
Zosterops palpebrosus
Latoucheornis siemsseni
Tangara varia
Pitta angolensis
Pitta brachyura
Pitta moluccensis
Pitta oatesi
Pitta sordida
Pycnonotus jocosus
Cinclidium frontale
Copsychus malabaricus
Cyanoptila cyanomelana
Garrulax milleti
Luscinia pectardens
Paradoxornis heudei
Terpsiphone atrocaudata
Turdus mupinensis
Lonchura nevermanni
Euplectes jacksoni
Sturnus sericeus
Cissa thalassina
Platysmurus leucopterus.

The SRG concluded that the Commission should consider adding the following species to Annex B of Council Regulation 338/97 on the basis of Article 3.2*(d)*:

Oxyura jamaicensis
Chrysemys picta.

22 May 2003

Negative opinions were formed for import of specimens from the following species/countries combinations:

Balearica pavonina Guinea
Paleosuchus trigonatus Guyana
Ramphastos toco Paraguay
Amazona aestiva Paraguay
Caiman yacare Paraguay
Psittacus erithacus Congo DR
Acipenser schrenckii Russian Federation
Huso dauricus Russian Federation
Blastomussa wellsi Indonesia, Fiji
Hydnophora microconos Indonesia
Nemenzophyllia turbida (Plerogyra turbida) Indonesia
Scolymia vitiensis Indonesia, Fiji
Trachyphyllia geoffroyi Indonesia
Hippopus hippopus Tonga, Vanuatu, Vietnam
Tridacna crocea Fiji, Tonga, Vanuatu
Tridacna derasa Fiji, New Caledonia, Vanuatu
Tridacna gigas Tonga, Vietnam
Tridacna maxima F.S. of Micronesia, Fiji, Marshall Islands, Mozambique, New Caledonia, Tonga, Vanuatu, Vietnam
Tridacna rosewateri Mozambique
Tridacna squamosa Fiji, Mozambique, Vanuatu
Tridacna tevoroa Tonga
Wellsophyllia radiata Indonesia
Goniopora lobata Indonesia—(SRG recommended that the Commission should consider an import suspension of this species under article 4.6*(c)* of Council Regulation 338/97)
Catalaphyllia jardinei Fiji
Euphyllia yaeyamaensis Fiji
Hydnophora rigida Fiji
Plerogyra simplex Fiji
Plerogyra sinuosa Fiji
Trachyphyllia geoffroyi Fiji
Geochelone pardalis Zambia (source "F" and "R")

Negative opinions for import of specimens of the following species/countries combinations confirmed after 3rd countries' consultation to be formalised in the Suspensions regulation:

Poicephalus gulielmi Ivory Coast
Trigonoceps occipitalis Ivory Coast
Phelsuma dubia Comores
Phelsuma laticauda Comores
Psittacus erithacus Guinea
Agapornis pullarius Guinea
Phelsuma comorensis Comores
Phelsuma v-nigra Comores
Hippopotamus amphibius Togo

Negative opinions changed to positive:

Guaiacum sanctum Mexico (this opinion only applies to applications relating to already felled stocks)

Positive opinions:

Corythaeola cristata Congo

Psittacus erithacus erithacus Ivory Coast

Psittacus erithacus timneh Ivory Coast

Positive opinions changed to negative:

Chamaeleo senegalensis Togo (source "W" and "R")

No opinion for import of specimens of the following species/countries combinations

Tridacna derasa Papua New Guinea (Any application to be brought to the Group)

Tridacna maxima Papua New Guinea

Tridacna squamosa Papua New Guinea

Tridacna gigas Papua New Guinea

Tridacna tevoroa Papua New Guinea

With reference to Testudo graeca terrestris, member states are requested to refer any import applications from Lebanon for captive bred or ranched reptile species (source "F", "R" or "C") back to the SRG.

All import applications for Leucocephalon yuwonoi from Indonesia are to be considered by the SRG.

The SRG decided to maintain the positive opinion on the hunting trophies of Ursos arctos from British Columbia subject to evidence of adequate progress with the implementation of the recommendations made by the BC Government's second Independent Scientific Panel in time for the 2004 hunting season.

The SRG concluded that the Commission should consider deleting the following reptile species from Annex D of Council Regulation 338/97:

Geckolepis maculate

Acanthosaura armata

Zonosaurus laticaudatus

Zonosaurus madagascariensis

Tiliqua gerrardii

Tiliqua gigas.

The SRG requested the Commission to list Harpagophytum spp on Annex D of Council Regulation 338/97.

Action of the European Commission and UK Government

As a result of the opinions taken, negative opinions for several species were formalised (as recommended above) by the European Commission by their inclusion in Commission Regulation 776/2004 of 26 April 2004 suspending the introduction into the Community of specimens of certain species of wild fauna and flora.

Changes to the Annexes of Regulation 338/97 were made by the European Commission (in line with recommendations above) through Commission Regulation (EC) No 1497/2003 subsequently superseded by Commission Regulation (EC) 834/2004 amending Council Regulation 338/97 on the protection of species of wild fauna and flora by regulating trade therein.

The UK Government approved these changes and implements the recommendations of the Scientific Review Group by taking account of this advice when considering applications for import permits for any of the species/country combinations referred to above.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times during the Greek Presidency of the EU the committee (a) for the adaptation to technical and scientific progress and implementation of the Directive on urban waste-water treatment and (b) protection of water against pollution caused by nitrates from agricultural sources met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [193402]

Mr. Morley: The information is as follows:

(a) The Committee for the adaptation to technical and scientific progress and implementation of the Directive on urban waste-water treatment

There was no technical and adaptive Committee of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive held during the Greek Presidency.

(b) The Committee for the adaptation to technical and scientific progress and implementation of the Directive for the protection of water against pollution caused by nitrates from agricultural sources

The technical and adaptive Committee for the Nitrates Directive met in Brussels on one occasion during the Greek Presidency on 27 March 2003. Representatives from the Scottish Executive and Water Quality Division, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs were present at the meeting on behalf of the UK.

Issues discussed at the Committee included grassland fertilisation and nitrates, potential techniques for tracing the origin of nitrate, draft monitoring guidelines for groundwater and surface waters, and the linkages between good farming practice and support for rural development from the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund.

The EU proposed to use the outcomes of the meeting to advise its consideration of member states' requests for a grassland derogation, and to further develop the draft monitoring guidelines. The EU requested written comments on each item discussed. The UK Government provided written comments as requested.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of the directive on (a) bathing water and (b) the quality of fresh water needing protection or improvement in order to support fish life met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [193403]

Mr. Morley: The information is as follows:

(a) The Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of the directive on bathing water

This Committee did not meet during the Greek presidency. Therefore neither the question of current UK representation on the Committee nor that of actions proposed or taken as consequences of Committee recommendations arose.

(b) The Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of the directive on the quality of fresh water needing protection or improvement in order to support fish life

This Committee did not meet during the Greek presidency. Therefore neither the question of current UK representation on the Committee, nor that of actions proposed or taken as consequences of Committee recommendations arose.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times during the Greek Presidency of the EU the Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of the decision establishing a common procedure for the exchange of information on the quality of surface fresh water in the Community met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [193404]

Mr. Morley: This Committee did not meet during the Greek presidency and has not met for more than seven years. Therefore, during this time, neither the question of current UK representation on the Committee nor that of actions proposed or taken as consequences of Committee recommendations has arisen.

Falconry

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions the Department has held with non-governmental organisations in respect of falconry. [193150]

Mr. Morley: Discussions concerning falconry occur with English Nature on a case-by-case basis, prior to, and throughout the open season. The most recent discussions took place this October.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has held with the Joint Nature Conservation Committee on falconry. [193151]

Mr. Morley: Defra officials liaise with the JNCC on a daily basis, as they are the UK's scientific advisors on fauna.

However, JNCC advice on falconry matters is generally related to the trade in the falcon species concerned. Advice on other falconry matters is provided by English Nature.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Government's policy on falconry; and what assessment has been made of the effects of falconry on conservation. [193152]

Mr. Morley: The use of birds of prey for the purposes of falconry against protected species is permitted under various legislation.

All wild birds in Britain are protected by the 1981 Wildlife and Countryside Act, but the Act does enable the issue of licences to take small numbers of birds for various purposes including falconry. The Department consults fully with its statutory scientific advisers before any licences are issued, on the species, and number of each species, that falconers should be permitted to hunt each season. These procedures ensure that the number of birds allowed to be killed by falconers is limited strictly to small numbers and only to species whose populations can sustain such slight losses.

English Nature monitors the population numbers of various species. The small number of birds taken under licences granted under section 16 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 does not affect the conservation status of the species concerned.

Fallen Stock

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list postcodes in which there is no coverage for the collection of fallen stock under the Animal By-Products Regulation. [190725]

Mr. Bradshaw: Although information regarding the location of Animal By-Product Regulation approved premises is available (such as those which collect fallen stock), the Department does not record the extent of the areas in which they operate.

However, as part of the tender process for collectors for the National Fallen Stock Scheme the National Fallen Stock Company requested information from collectors about the geographical area in which they intend to operate. The information provided indicates that the scheme should have full nationwide coverage, other than for those areas where no service was either expected and/or required i.e. remote areas and urban conurbations.

This does not necessarily mean that those areas, which are not covered by the scheme, have no fallen stock service. There may be collectors in those areas which have chosen not to participate in the scheme.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when it is expected that the subsidy provided for farmers to dispose of fallen stock will be discontinued; and if she will make a statement. [192210]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are making available £20 million over the first three years of the National Fallen Stock Scheme.

Fisheries

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely changes in United Kingdom fisheries management which will result from the introduction of the Community Fisheries Control Agency. [197576]

Mr. Bradshaw: The proposals for creation of a Community Fisheries Control Agency are still subject to negotiation. However, they will not alter the responsibilities of the United Kingdom or other member states to ensure effective policing of fisheries activity: we will want to be satisfied that the final regulation is compatible with our national arrangements.

The creation of an agency is intended to assist in, for example, joint planning for the deployment of inspection resources. This might involve member states contributing resources to agreed monitoring programmes for specific fisheries. In many respects this would be little different from ad hoc arrangements for joint working in which the UK has participated over recent years.

Flood Defence/Management

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the flood defence projects started since May 1997 in England; and what the cost of each was to the Department. [195852]

Mr. Morley: Defra provides grant aid to the flood and coastal defence operating authorities to support their improvement projects (works and related studies) to reduce flood risk. These improvement projects must meet specified criteria and an appropriate priority score to attract Defra funding but decisions regarding which projects to promote and their timing rest with these authorities. The principal operating authority for flood risk is the Environment Agency but local authorities and, in areas with special drainage needs, internal drainage boards also carry out works on a much smaller scale overall.

I will be placing in the House Library a list of flood defence (including flood warning) projects approved for Defra grant aid, which have started since 1 May 1997.

The approved cost for each project is shown—an estimated £840 million in total. For local authorities and drainage boards, and for the Environment Agency up until March 2004, Defra grant-aided these projects at rates of between 15 per cent. and 80 per cent. of the approved cost with the balance being met by a variety of funding streams according to the type of body. From April 2004, Defra has grant-aided the full cost of Environment Agency projects.

Projects carried out by local authorities to reduce risk of coastal erosion often also have significant flood defence benefits but I have not included these projects in the list.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) flood warning and (b) post-flood management systems are in place in the Wiltshire section of the Hampshire Avon catchment; and if she will make a statement. [196021]

Mr. Morley: The Government are committed to ensuring a seamless, integrated and continuous service of flood forecasting, warning and response delivered by the Environment Agency. Defra has recently approved the Agency's new £226 million flood warning strategy.

For Wiltshire, the Agency's regional flood forecasting and monitoring team in Exeter works with the Meteorological Office to provide the Flood Warning team at Blandford with information on weather conditions. The Blandford team considers this against the condition of the catchment and monitored river levels. When river trigger levels are exceeded, warnings are sent from Agency area office to the media, civil authorities, emergency services and those at risk of flooding who have chosen to be on the Agency's Automated Voice Messaging (AVM) system. The Agency has also written to those identified from flood maps as being at risk of flooding. Both the maps and those on the AVM are reviewed regularly taking account of any new information.

Due to the characteristics of the chalk geology in the Salisbury catchment, groundwater can be a source of flooding and the Agency aims to provide an accessible, self-help groundwater flood warning service to all of the affected local parishes.

The Agency has a comprehensive post-flood management system which reviews their response to events, the impact and sources of flooding. The Agency addresses issues within its responsibility and provides review information to all responsible organisations as a starting point for future work. Solutions, such as improvements to flood warning, enforcement, development control, maintenance of main rivers, improvement works and possible new defences, are prioritised within the Agency's work programmes.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans are in place to help areas, which suffer from flooding during the next year. [195979]

Mr. Morley: Local authorities and emergency services have contingency plans in place to cope with the range of emergencies in their areas, including flooding. These plans operate alongside those of the Environment Agency who provide flood warnings to both the public, local authorities and other emergency services. The Environment Agency and the other operating authorities also monitor stretches of watercourses when flooding is likely. Should national level response be required, Defra maintains contingency arrangements in a Lead Department Plan for flooding from rivers or the sea, which foresees coordination of the central Government response, including by Cabinet Office.

Local authorities are also responsible for responding to the effects of flooding. In addition, where applicable, the Bellwin Scheme is available to local authorities as a means of obtaining financial assistance in clearing up and recovery immediately after a local disaster or emergency. This scheme is administered by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Fly Tipping

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on police duties in respect of fly tipping. [197743]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency and local authorities are currently responsible for preventing, detecting and enforcing offences involving the illegal disposal of waste, or fly tipping. Under a voluntary agreement between the Agency and the Local Government Association, the Agency deals with fly tips of large amounts or hazardous waste and local authorities deal with smaller, local incidents of mainly household waste. The police have no formal duties with respect to fly tipping, although they do sometimes participate in joint investigations of offenders, for example, where organised crime is involved. The police are also frequently involved in stop and search operations as only a police constable in uniform is empowered to stop a vehicle on a road.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps she is taking to establish the original source of the 2001 foot and mouth epidemic; [196521]

(2) if she will hold a further public inquiry into the sources and cause of the 2001 foot and mouth disease epidemic. [196587]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra considers that the origin of the FMD outbreaks in 2001 was the unprocessed waste food fed to pigs on Burnside Farm run by Robert Waugh and he was convicted of this offence. The Lessons to be Learned Inquiry carried out by Dr. Iain Anderson supported this conclusion, which was based on a thorough epidemiological investigation. The Origins of FMD report submitted by Defra to the inquiry was based on wide-ranging evidence and rigorous investigation and was published by Dr. Anderson. There is no new evidence that indicates that the disease was present anywhere else earlier than at Burnside Farm.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the reports from James Dring that some of the evidence of foot and mouth disease discovered on Burnside Farm constituted old lesions. [196531]

Mr. Bradshaw: Mr. Dring, accompanied by an Animal Health Officer, visited the farm on 22 February 2001, as part of the investigation into the cause of the outbreak in Essex and saw the presence of FMD, clearly well established with old lesions in many pigs. Disease was confirmed on these premises on 23 February 2001. On 24 February the experts' opinion was that some pigs had 12 day-old lesions. This implies that disease was probably present on 12 February 2001 and with an incubation period of two-14 days it could have been present from as early as 29 January 2001.

Jim Dring's previous visit before 22 February was on 24 January, on which date he closely inspected the herd and found no visible signs of FMD.

This is all set out in the report on the Origins of FMD submitted to and published by Dr. Anderson.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what tests were made on the dead sheep shown in the Burnside Farm video taken by trading standards officials on 24 February 2001 to determine their cause of death; and what the results were of those tests. [196532]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra found no dead sheep on Burnside Farm either on 24 February or on any other date in 2001.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria were used by (a) the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and (b) her Department when deciding which documents and evidence should be made available to Dr. Iain Anderson for the inquiry he chaired into the 2001 foot and mouth disease outbreak. [196681]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department's approach was that Dr. Anderson's inquiry should be granted access to all relevant papers.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers have been asked to sign the Official Secrets Act 1989 in respect of matters connected with the 2001 foot and mouth disease outbreak. [197500]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 November 2004]: To the best of our knowledge no farmers were asked to sign the Official Secrets Act in connection with the 2001 foot and mouth outbreak.

However, farmers undertaking a range of services on behalf of the Department, such as the provision of secondary cleansing and disinfection (C&D), may have been asked to sign a contract based on the Department's standard terms and conditions at the time, which included reference to the Official Secrets Act.

Due to concerns over the applicability of such clauses, contracts for farmers undertaking C&D on their own premises were subsequently amended to remove any reference to the Official Secrets Act.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the foot and mouth disease virus was in the national sheep flock prior to 20 February 2001. [197638]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 November 2004]: A group of 26 sheep at Prestwick Hall Farm, Pontiland, Northumberland are believed to be the first sheep in the national flock to have become infected with foot and mouth disease in the 2001 epidemic. They most likely became infected sometime between the 2 and 14 February 2001 as a result of windborne spread from diseased pigs at Burnside Farm. There is no evidence of FMD predating the outbreak at Burnside Farm in the vicinity of the farm or on the premises that supplied it with pigs, or for that matter, anywhere in the UK.

Fuel Poverty

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures her Department has assessed as the most effective in addressing fuel poverty in homes in tower blocks. [195940]

Mr. Morley: There is no single solution to tackle such properties, which can prove challenging due to structural issues. We continue to explore the most effective solution for individual households and community solutions such as providing district heating with combined heat and power.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the reasons are for the delay in publishing the Fuel Poverty Implementation Plan; and when it will be published. [196492]

Mr. Morley: The final version of the Fuel Poverty Plan will be published before the end of the year. A decision was taken to delay publication until announcements on fuel poverty spending as part of the Spending Review 2004.

Glass Industry (Emissions Limits)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the emission levels permitted under Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control regulations are for newly constructed glass factories. [197005]

Mr. Morley: New glass factories which are listed for control under the Pollution Prevention and Control (England and Wales) Regulations are subject to two general principles. That they should be operated in such a way that all appropriate measures are taken against pollution, in particular through application of the best available techniques, and that no significant pollution is caused. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has issued statutory guidance to assist local authority regulators in determining what those measures should be, which can be found at www.defra.gov.uk/environment/ppc/laippc/laippc.htm

Table 3 in the document contains guidance on emission limits, including limit values for nitrogen oxides (annual average 500mg/m3—milligrams per cubic metre—daily average 700mg/m3) and particulate matter (30mg/m3). The guidance was drawn up in consultation with a technical working group, comprising among others representatives of the trade association (British Glass), and of various glass-making firms (Pilkingtons, Rockware and United Glass).

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the cost to the glass container industry of new emission limits applicable from January 2005; [197037]

(2) what assessment she has made of the increased cost of energy to the glass container industry as a consequence of new emissions limits. [197038]

Mr. Morley: The limit values contained in the guidance referred to in answer to PQ UIN 197005 are derived from the Best Available Techniques Reference document produced by the European Commission's 'European Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Bureau', which can be found at: http://eippcb.jrc.es/pages/FActivities.htm This document, which contains a review of costs and energy impacts, includes emission limit values similar to those contained in the guidance we published: for example, the BAT emission level associated with specified techniques is given as between 5 and 30mg/m3 (milligrams per cubic metre) and that for nitrogen oxides as 500–70mg/m3. As regards energy, it states on page 134 that the use of an electrostatic precipitator to tackle particulate matter emissions involves an increase in energy consumption, but the increase is low in relation to the consumption of the glass furnace (less than 1 per cent.).

Greyhound Racing

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons the regulations for greyhound racing in the draft Animal Welfare Bill are not proposed to be brought in until 2010. [196984]

Mr. Bradshaw: No final decision has been taken concerning the date when I anticipate introducing regulations for greyhound racing. I am currently consulting the industry on the extent and timing of proposed internal reforms. I will review the proposed regulation under the Bill in the light of the response from the industry.

The duty of care (welfare) and cruelty provision of the draft Bill will apply to greyhounds irrespective of the timing of secondary legislation on regulations.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Green Ministers her Department and its predecessors has had since 1997. [197676]

Mr. Morley: Defra was created in June 2001 from the then Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) and from the environmental and countryside business areas of the then Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR).

There have been two Green Ministers in Defra since its formation and there were two Green Ministers from 1997 in both the DETR and MAFF as detailed in the table:

Department	Green Ministers
MAFF	Jeff Rooker, Elliot Morley
DETR	Glenda Jackson, Beverley Hughes
Defra (since 2001)	Alun Michael, Lord Whitty

Hazardous Waste (Substitute Fuels)

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the safety of burning hazardous waste in cement kilns. [196437]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Cement kilns in England and Wales are regulated for environmental purposes by the Environment Agency under the Pollution Prevention and Control (PPC) system. Cement kilns that burn hazardous waste are subject to additional regulatory controls under the Hazardous Waste Incineration Directive and the new Waste Incineration Directive. Any PPC permit granted by the Agency includes conditions designed to ensure that the installation is operated in such a way that all the appropriate preventative measures are taken against pollution, in particular through the application of the best available techniques, and that no significant pollution is caused.

The Environment Agency's Substitute Fuels Protocol, originally published in 1999, sets out detailed consultation requirements for PPC permit applications by cement kiln operators wishing to use waste as substitute fuels. It also sets out detailed monitoring requirements and controls on the constituents of the substitute fuel.

The Environment Agency recently conducted a three-month public consultation on proposed revisions to the Substitute Fuels Protocol. The outcome was discussed at a meeting of the Environment Agency Board on 13 October and the Agency issued a News Release on the matter on 15 October.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list hazardous wastes that will newly qualify as substitute fuels for use in cement kilns following the changes to the Substitute Fuels Protocol approved by the Board of the Environment Agency on 13 October; and if she will list for each emissions level whether the listed wastes were disposed of in (a) cement kilns and (b) high temperature incinerators designed for hazardous waste disposal. [196438]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Under the revised Substitute Fuels Protocol, the Environment Agency will no longer exclude pentachlorophenol or wastes derived from the manufacture of pharmaceuticals, biocides, pesticides and explosives from being incorporated into substitute fuel. In addition, any new waste, including hazardous waste, proposed as a substitute fuel in cement kilns will have to comply with the following criteria:

(i) the main purpose of its use is the generation of heat;

(ii) the amount of heat generated, recovered and effectively used is greater than the amount of heat consumed in its use; and

(iii) the principal use of the waste is as fuel.

Given that the Agency's Board has only recently made its decision, the revised policy has not yet had an impact on the quantity of hazardous wastes recovered as fuel in cement kilns.

At present emission limit values for cement kilns that burn hazardous waste are calculated in accordance with a formula given in Annex II of Council Directive 94/67/EC of 16 December 1994 on the incineration of hazardous waste . The formula ensures that the fraction of gas produced by the incineration of hazardous waste in a cement kiln has the same emission limit values applied to it as it would have done had it been incinerated in a merchant waste incinerator. These emission limits are given in Article 7 of that Directive. However, the final emission limit values for a cement kiln also take into account the concentration of pollutants derived from the combustion of conventional fuels (e.g. coal, petroleum coke) and raw materials (e.g. limestone, clay) in the cement kiln.

From 28 December 2005, Directive 94/67/EC will be superseded by Directive 2000/76/EC on the incineration of waste. Emission limit values for cement kilns burning hazardous waste will, as a minimum, be set according to Annex II of that Directive.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the application of recent European Court of Justice judgements on trans-frontier shipment of wastes and criteria for waste recovery with regard to minimum calorific values for wastes that are incinerated as substitute fuels. [196439]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Judgments by the European Court of Justice are binding on Member States and their "competent authorities". Recent judgments which impact on the transfrontier shipment of wastes and the classification of operations as recovery or disposal under waste legislation include the following cases: C-6/00, C-228/00, C-458/00 and C-116/01. In relation to the criteria to determine recovery or disposal status, the Court ruled in case C-116/01 that:

> "The calorific value of waste which is to be combusted is not a relevant criterion for the purpose of determining whether that operation constitutes a disposal operation as referred to in point D10 of Annex MA to Directive 75/442, as amended . . . or a recovery operation as referred to in point R1 of Annex MB thereof. Member States may establish distinguishing criteria for that purpose provided that those criteria comply with those laid down in the Directive."

The Environment Agency are in the process of revising the substitute fuels protocol which will take account of the recent ECJ cases.

Hydrofluorocarbons

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her policy on HFC emissions remains as set out in paragraph 19, Section Two, Chapter One of Climate Change—the UK Programme, of November 2000. [196256]

Mr. Morley: Yes, HFCs should only be used where other safe, technically feasible, cost effective and more environmentally acceptable alternatives do not exist.

Good progress has been made in developing effective measures to reduce HFC emissions. Political agreement to an EC Regulation on certain fluorinated greenhouse gases, and a Directive amending Existing Vehicle Type Approval in relation to Mobile Air Conditioning (MAC) in cars was reached in October 2004.

The Regulation includes measures on: containment through responsible handling during use, recycling and end-of-life recovery; reporting on quantities produced, supplied, used and emitted; certain application specific bans on use and placing on the market. The Directive includes a ban on the use of fluorinated gases with high Global Warming Potential (GWP) in MACs from 2011 (new vehicle types), and 2017 (all new vehicles).

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the estimated volume of emissions of hydrofluorocarbons has been in each year since 1990; and what projections she has made for future years. [196817]

Mr. Morley: This information is provided in the following table:

Total UK emissions of HFC, RFC and SF_6
(ktonnes CO_2 equivalent)

	HFC	PFC	SF_6	Total
1990	11,375	1,394	1,082	13,851
1995	15,491	457	1,291	17,240
2000	9,081	541	1,852	11,475
2005	11,200	327	1,715	13,242
2010	9,912	267	1,300	11,480
2015	9,637	292	1,265	11,194
2020	9,072	314	1,262	10,648
2025	8,755	337	1,277	10,369

These figures are based on an AEA Technology report, Emissions and Projections of HFCs, PFCs and SF_6 in the UK and constituent countries 2nd Edition, June 2004. Defra has also commissioned from AEA a general review of any new information that may significantly affect the projected emissions for HFC, PFC and SF_6 to 2025.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on the phase-out of hydrofluorocarbons. [196818]

Mr. Morley: The UK policy on hydrofluorocarbons is set out in chapter one of "Climate Change, the UK Programme" (November 2000).

In addition, political agreement to an EC Regulation on certain fluorinated greenhouse gases, and a Directive amending Existing Vehicle Type Approval in relation to Mobile Air Conditioning (MAC) in cars was reached in October 2004.

The Regulation introduces provisions for: containment through responsible handling during use, recycling and end-of-life recovery; reporting on quantities produced, supplied, used and emitted; and certain application specific bans on use and placing on the market.

The Directive will amend existing Vehicle Type Approval legislation in relation to Mobile-Air-Conditioning (MACs) in cars (and car derived vans). The proposal includes a ban on the use of fluorinated gases with a high Global Warming Potential in MACs from 2011 (new vehicle types), and 2017 (all new vehicles).

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to discourage the fitting of hydrofluorocarbons in (a) domestic refrigeration and (b) air conditioning. [196819]

Mr. Morley: Hydrofluorocarbon technology in domestic refrigerators has already largely been phased out in the EU. All major UK manufacturers of domestic refrigerators now use hydrocarbon based refrigerants. A small amount of imported domestic refrigeration equipment uses hydrofluorocarbons.

Political agreement to an EC Regulation on certain fluorinated greenhouse gases, and a Directive amending Existing Vehicle Type Approval in relation to Mobile Air Conditioning (MAC) in cars was reached in October 2004.

The Regulation includes provisions for: containment through responsible handling during use, recycling and end-of-life recovery; reporting on quantities produced, supplied, used and emitted; and certain application specific bans on use and placing on the market. This requirement will cover the commercial refrigeration and air conditioning sectors.

The Directive will amend existing Vehicle Type Approval legislation in relation to Mobile Air Conditioning (MACs) in cars (and car derived vans). This proposal includes a ban on the use of fluorinated gases with high a Global Warming Potential in MACs from 2011 (new vehicle types), and 2017 (all new vehicles).

Incineration

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects of an increase in waste incineration upon the environment. [195990]

Mr. Morley: In May 2004 Defra published a Review of the Environmental and Health Effects of Waste Management which brings together the available evidence of the health and environmental effects of the main types of waste management facility.

The review concluded that incineration, along with landfill, is the waste disposal option with the greatest potential for environmental effects. Compared with other waste management technologies, it produces the largest emissions of oxides of nitrogen and hydrogen chloride per tonne of municipal solid waste. However the potential negative effects, such as dust, poor air quality and effects on flora/fauna, soils and water quality can be controlled under normal operating conditions.

The present generation of incinerators release much smaller amounts of dioxin that was the case five or 10 years ago and the report noted that less than 1 per cent. of emissions of oxides of nitrogen, which reduce air quality, come from municipal solid waste management, while 42 per cent. come from road traffic.

Incinerators are normally operated with energy recovery, resulting in the generation of electricity, which can reduce the need to generate electricity from other sources. Any increase in the overall environmental burden caused by emissions from new incinerators should be set against both the reduction in the requirement for electricity to be generated elsewhere and the reduction of emissions to air and groundwater from the waste being deposited in landfills.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the benefits of waste incinerators. [195991]

Mr. Morley: The principal benefits of incineration are reduction in the volume of waste landfilled, the generation of electricity or heat from combustion and the production of ash which can be recovered as a construction material.

The Review of the Environmental and Health Effects of Waste Management enables comparison of the environmental effects of all waste management options including incineration and landfill. It also sets out the energy generated by incinerators and the reduction in the requirement for electricity to be generated elsewhere.

Industrial Fisheries

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to improve management of industrial fisheries within UK waters. [197209]

Mr. Bradshaw: Industrial fisheries are managed under the Common Fisheries Policy. In the light of recent scientific advice that Norway Pout and sandeels in the North Sea are outside safe limits, the UK will support measures to recover these stocks at the December Fisheries Council.

Landfill

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on the use of landfill sites for the disposal of waste. [195971]

Mr. Morley: The Government are committed to reducing the UK's reliance on landfill for the disposal of waste, in order to reduce its environmental impact and because landfilling is a missed opportunity to recover value from waste. This is part of the UK's commitment to more sustainable waste management in line with the objectives and policies set out in Waste Strategy 2000.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many new waste facilities she estimates will be required in the UK to fulfil the requirements of the EU landfill directive. [190377]

Mr. Morley: The Strategy Unit Report, "Waste not, Want not", quotes from the Ernst and Young Local Authority Waste Management Survey, 2001. It says that "Ernst and Young have estimated that additional investment of £600–700 million per annum over the next 10 years will be required to reduce the volume of waste sent to landfill, sufficient to meet the Article 5 targets of the EU landfill directive."

The exact number of facilities will depend on the size and mix of facilities chosen by each local authority.

Estimates on available capacity of existing hazardous waste treatment infrastructure were prepared for the Hazardous Waste Forum in September 2003 and posted on the forum's website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/hazforum/031021/enviros.pdf

The forum continues to keep this information under review as it becomes aware of changes to waste industry plans.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many new waste disposal facilities will be required in the UK by 2010 to fulfil the requirements of the EU landfill directive. [197683]

Mr. Morley: The Strategy Unit Report, "Waste not, Want not", quotes from the Ernst and Young Local Authority Waste Management Survey, 2001. It says that

> "Ernst and Young have estimated that additional investment of £600–700 million per annum over the next 10 years will be required to reduce the volume of waste sent to landfill, sufficient to meet the Article 5 targets of the EU landfill directive."

The exact number of facilities will depend on the size and mix of facilities chosen by each local authority.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the landfill sites in the Greater London area that are able to accept hazardous waste. [197128]

Mr. Morley: There are no landfill sites in the Greater London area that are licensed/permitted to accept hazardous waste. The names and locations of all hazardous waste landfills are available on the Environment Agency website (www.environment-agency.gov.uk).

LFA Support Scheme

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been paid out under the Less Favoured Areas Support Scheme in each county in England in 2003–04; and if she will make a statement. [196198]

Alun Michael: The figures for payments under the Hill Farm Allowance in 2004, by counties in England, are listed in the following table:

Livestock Auction Markets

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which livestock auction markets (a) operated in 1997, (b) operated before the foot and mouth outbreak in 2001 and (c) operate now. [196687]

Mr. Bradshaw: The list of livestock auction markets operating in 1997 is not readily available. However, based on information provided by the Livestock Auctioneers Association the lists of livestock auction markets for England and Wales which operate currently and the closures between 1997 and 2001 and those closed since 2001 are as follows:

Milk (Farmgate Prices)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the farmgate price of milk in Lancashire was at the most recent date for which information is available. [194761]

Alun Michael: The average price for milk delivered in August 2004 (the most recent month for which figures are available) is 18.43 pence per litre. This figure is for the whole of the UK as we do not hold milk price information for specific areas of the UK.

Nappies

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the tonnage of disposable nappies used in England in each of the last five years; and whether disposable nappies will be eligible to be disposed of in landfill sites when EU restrictions on landfill use are introduced. [196967]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Defra does not collect information on the amount of disposable nappies used.

The Strategy Unit report, "Waste Not Want Not", estimated that in 2000–01 nappies comprised around 2 per cent. of household waste, equivalent to 350,000 tonnes.

Nappies are considered to be bio-degradable waste so can still be disposed of in landfill. The Landfill Directive requires progressive reductions in the amount of biodegradable municipal waste landfilled until 2020—in the UK.

New Forest

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on (a) commoning in the New Forest and (b) the character and landscape of the New Forest of the single farm payment regime; and if she will make a statement. [194673]

Alun Michael: In discussing how best to apply the new single payment scheme on commons, we have been mindful of the effects on commoning and environmental effects in general and on the specific situation of the New Forest.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what account she plans to take of the inspector's recommendation for specific safeguards for verderers when she publishes her circular on the New Forest National Park; and whether this circular will be published before the park authority begins work; [197815]

(2) when she will publish a circular specific to the New Forest National Park in accordance with the recommendations of the inspector's report; whether the guidance in the circular will inform the process by which appointments are made to the park authority; and if she will make a statement. [197817]

Alun Michael: I intend to write to the New Forest National Park Authority, giving guidance on the way it might approach its responsibilities in good time for the formal commencement of its role in April. My letter will be made public and will be and sent to local organisations.

Local authorities and parish council nominations will be sought shortly, while the recruitment process for Secretary of State members of the Authority is already under way.

Night Flights

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions (a) she and (b) her Department has held with counterparts overseas on the environmental effects of night flight arrangements at airports overseas; and if she will make a statement. [196033]

Mr. Morley: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, nor Defra officials have held discussions with counterparts overseas on the environmental effects of night flight arrangements at overseas airports.

The specific environmental impacts of air transport fall under the remit of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport. The DfT are currently reviewing the night flight restrictions at airports designated under s.78 of the Civil Aviation Act 1982 (Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted) and this review will no doubt consider the wider implications of such restrictions.

The DfT's stage 1 consultation on night restrictions from 30 October 2005 closed on 29 October and the second stage of this consultation process will be undertaken in due course.

Nitrates Directive

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department or its predecessor applied to the EU Commission for a derogation from the Nitrates Directive to allow applications of 210 kg/ha on arable land and 250 kg/ha on grass land. [193442]

Mr. Morley: The Nitrates Directive permits member states to allow applications of 21 kgN/ha for the first four-year action programme. Member states do not have to submit an application to the EU Commission in this regard.

Member states may allow a different application limit than the baseline of 170 kgN/ha set by the Nitrates Directive, though they must justify that decision to the Commission. As a result of earlier discussions with the Commission, the Department has initiated research to support the UK justification for the inclusion of a higher application limit within its action programmes.

Organic Fertiliser

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons the Government did not apply for a derogation on the spreading of organic fertiliser in nitrate vulnerable zones within the deadline specified; and what the implications are of not applying within the specified deadline. [193461]

Mr. Morley: Directive 91/676/EEC concerning the protection of waters against water pollution caused by nitrates from agricultural sources does not specify a deadline within which member states are required to submit any application for a derogation on the spreading of organic fertiliser in nitrate vulnerable zones.

Pesticide Residues

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Department takes to ensure that pesticide residue levels on fruits are within (a) UK and (b) EU standards. [196907]

Alun Michael: We undertake an extensive programme of surveillance for pesticide residues in food. The programme involves the collection of 4,000 samples from retailers or other points in the distribution chain and their analysis for up to 149 different pesticides, at a cost of approximately £2.2 million a year. The programme covers around 40 different commodities each year. In 2003, 25 different fruits were surveyed.

The surveillance programme is overseen by an independent advisory committee—the Pesticide Residues Committee (PRC). The results are all published each quarter on the PRC website, at www.prc-uk.org, along with the names of the suppliers of the relevant produce. The UK surveillance programme contributes to a wider EU residues surveillance programme.

If residues are found above statutory maximum residue levels (MRLs), then a scientific risk assessment is carried out to check that there is no concern for consumers. These risk assessments are also published by the PRC. The supplier is informed and, for imported produce, the relevant authorities in the exporting country.

In cases where there are persistent exceedances of the MRL, or evidence of the use of non-approved products, an enforcement programme is undertaken, involving the collection of samples with a view to prosecution if breaches of the regulations are found.

Pet Shops

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what legislation governs the inspection of pet shops in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [192616]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under the Pet Animals Act 1951 all pet shops in Great Britain have to be licensed by the local authority. The Act provides local authority officers with powers of inspection. Pet shops in Northern Ireland are similarly regulated under the Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 1972.

The draft Animal Welfare Bill would allow for secondary legislation to be introduced, to update the 1951 Act.

Radiation Risks

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the minority report of two members of the Committee Examining Radiation Risks of Internal Emitters; and if she will make a statement. [196497]

Mr. Morley: I am aware of a report published by two members of the Committee Examining Radiation Risks from Internal Emitters (CERRIE), although a copy has not been provided to the Department. I understand that those two members attended all of the meetings of CERRIE; that their views, which they have subsequently published separately, were discussed extensively during those meetings; and that the CERRIE report addresses the points that they have raised. CERRIE was set up jointly by Defra and the Department of Health under the auspices of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE), which is the Government's independent expert advisory committee in this area. CERRIE published its report on 20 October, and on the same day COMARE published its own report endorsing CERRIE's conclusions. We are currently considering with the Department of Health, COMARE, the National Radiological Protection Board and the Environment Agency how CERRIE's conclusions should be accounted for in future decisions on radiological protection.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she received the final report on the hazards of radiation from the Committee Examining Radiation Risks of Internal Emitters; what plans she has to take action on its recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [194911]

Mr. Morley: Ministers received copies of the Committee Examining Radiation Risks of Internal Emitters' final report on 20 October, along with advice on it from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment, whose report was also published on 20 October. These are complex reports on important technical issues, which we are currently considering in conjunction with colleagues in the Department of Health, the National Radiological Protection Board and the Environment Agency to ensure that the points made by CERRIE are fully taken into account in future assessments of radiation risks from internal emitters.

Raptors

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Department takes to promote the captive breeding of raptors in the UK. [193159]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is very aware of the beneficial conservation effects of captive breeding of raptors. The increase in numbers of non-hybrid captive bred specimens helps lessen the threat to the wild populations of those species. Her officials carry out a constructive dialogue with UK breeders over a range of issues which effect captive breeding operations within the UK, including the streamlining of procedures to aid them in complying with their registration obligations.

Recycling (Barking and Dagenham)

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much Government money has been provided to Barking and Dagenham council since 1997 to help pay for waste recycling. [196455]

Mr. Morley: The main source of funding for Barking and Dagenham council, as for all local authorities, is through the Environmental, Protective, and Cultural Services (EPCS) block of annual Government grant. It is for the local authority to decide what proportion of the block is invested in waste management services, including recycling.

The London borough of Barking and Dagenham is a constituent authority of the East London Waste Authority (ELWA), which was awarded £47 million in PFI credits for its integrated waste management service (IWMS) contract which was signed in the 2002–03 financial year.

As part of ELWA Barking and Dagenham council have also benefited from two joint kerbside collection projects which together were allocated a total of £1,030,000 from the London Recycling Fund for 2002–03 and 2003–04. The London Recycling Fund has approved three further projects to support Barking and Dagenham council for 2004–05 and 2005–06:

A multi material collection scheme allocated £600,000

An awareness campaign allocated £100,000

A green waste project allocated £80,000.

Barking and Dagenham council has also been allocated the following additional funding and support:

£46,700 from Defra to relieve spending pressures in the waste area for 2004–05;

As a member of ELWA, £74,453 in direct consultancy support in 2004–05 through Defra's Waste Implementation Programme to review ELWA's strategic planning for waste management.

Sodium Azid (Airbags)

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what regulations apply to the disposal of sodium azid present in airbags when cars are scrapped. [196720]

Mr. Morley: The End-of-Life Vehicles Regulations 2003 require the removal or neutralisation of all potentially explosive components, including airbags, when waste motor vehicles are treated.

Sugar Regime

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects the new EU sugar regime to be agreed. [195948]

Alun Michael: The current EU sugar regime is clearly unsustainable and the UK Government has consistently called for early decisions on reform to give all concerned time to adjust to the substantial changes needed to bring the arrangements into line with other parts of the Common Agricultural Policy and the EU's international obligations. The European Commission has tabled a Communication setting out its preferred approach to reform, but has not yet made formal legislative proposals for a new regime. It is for the Commission to decide when to put such proposals to the Council and for the presidency in office to bring discussions to a successful conclusion.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which agencies will be inspecting UK sugar farms under the new EU sugar regime. [195983]

Alun Michael: The requirements of a new EU sugar regime have still to be determined. If the regime is brought into line with other reformed CAP sectors, farmers growing sugar beet can expect to be subject to similar conditions to those growing other crops, for which inspections will be co-ordinated by the Rural Payments Agency.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the impact will be of the reform of the EU Sugar Regime on the UK quota; and whether there will be quota cuts for the UK. [195984]

Alun Michael: The European Commission's preferred approach to sugar reform envisages both price and quota cuts for all EU producers. In the absence of detailed legislative proposals it is not clear how quota cuts will be made or what their impact in the UK will be.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on how UK sugar growers will be affected by compensation arrangements under the EU Sugar Regime. [195985]

Alun Michael: The European Commission's preferred approach to sugar reform envisages decoupled direct income support for all EU sugar producers on a similar basis to payments under the June 2003 CAP reform arrangements. In the absence of detailed legislative proposals it is not clear how these arrangements will work or what their impact in the UK may be.

Terrorism

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many people are employed in the UK to protect reservoirs from terrorist attack; and what measures have been taken to protect reservoirs since 2001; [196294]

(2) how many people are employed in the UK to provide security for dams; and what measures have been taken to ensure dams are protected since 2001. [196307]

Mr. Morley: The safety and protection of dams and reservoirs is a matter for the dam owner or reservoir undertaker. The Reservoir Act 1975 provides a safety regime for large raised reservoirs and their dams and reservoir undertakers are required to engage specialist engineers to monitor and inspect them. The Department does not keep information about the people employed at these sites.

Veterinary Service

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on ensuring access by farmers to professional advice and prescriptions from those veterinary surgeons collaborating with veterinary pharmacists who are not providing an emergency clinical service; and if she will make a statement. [193880]

Mr. Bradshaw: A veterinary surgeon must operate within the terms of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons' Code of Professional Conduct. The Animal Health and Welfare Strategy recognises the importance of access by farmers to professional veterinary advice and to veterinary medicines that are necessary for the health and welfare of their animals. We also recognise the need to ensure that medicines are used safely and responsibly. That is why the supply of veterinary medicines is controlled by legislation. Some veterinary medicines may be supplied only in accordance with a prescription issued by a veterinary surgeon. For such medicines it is important that the prescribing veterinary surgeon has sufficient knowledge of the animals concerned and of the conditions under which they are kept to ensure that the medicine prescribed is appropriate and that it will be used safely and effectively.

It is lawful for a pharmacist to dispense a veterinary medicinal product as directed in a prescription issued by a veterinary surgeon.

Following a major review of the European veterinary medicines legislation, the Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD) is revising the UK legislation. The UK's policy in the negotiations was to seek to replicate our current distribution arrangements. After a round of informal consultation with interested parties the VMD has published a concept note setting out a proposal for revising the current veterinary medicine distribution categories to both comply with the changes to European legislation and allow the current distribution controls in the UK to continue. Comments on the concept note are still welcome and I am placing a copy in the Library. It is also available on the VMD's website (www.vmd.gov.uk) under Publications, Review 2001.

Waste Transport

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of London's waste was transported on the river Thames in the last year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [194914]

Mr. Morley: The Government does not hold this information.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Alzheimer's

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons Alzheimer's Disease is not included as a terminal illness in respect of claims for benefit; and if he will make a statement. [197792]

Mr. Spellar: The disability living allowance and attendance allowance "special rules" provisions for terminally ill people are not linked to specific diseases or illnesses. For the purposes of the "special rules", a person is considered to be terminally ill if they suffer from a progressive disease and their death, in consequence of that disease, can reasonably be expected within six months.

Autism (Teacher Training)

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what money has been ringfenced for the purpose of training classroom assistants and teachers dealing with children with autism in the Belfast Education and Library Board area. [197108]

Mr. Gardiner: Children with Autism represent one of the largest growth areas in special educational needs (SEN) in recent years.

In response to this, and following the publication of the report of the NI Task Group on Autism, the Department of Education (DE) has made several specific additional earmarked allocations to the Education and Library Boards (ELBs):

DE made £54,000 available in 2003–04 and £111,000 from 2004–05 onwards to each ELB to enable the establishment of an Inter-board Autistic Spectrum Disorder (ASD) Training Group, which will develop training needs and support measures in this area. This includes the development of cross-Board training for ELB and school staff in a range of ASD strategies ands interventions;

£100,000 was provided in 2003–04 to enable each ELB to provide training, related specifically to Autism, within the pre-school sector, to teachers, classroom assistants, playgroup leaders and assistants, qualified early years specialists and relevant Board staff.

An additional £80,000 has been provided to each ELB in 2004–05 to enhance provision for children with Challenging Behaviour and ASD.

DE has produced ASD-specific resource materials to support teachers, classroom assistants and parents. The Department is also supporting a 2-year project to develop and implement a programme of training and development for classroom assistants who are appointed to support pupils with statements of special educational needs, and to enhance the skills of teachers in deploying and managing classroom assistance. I will write to the hon. Member with additional information, which the BELB will supply, on other training organised through its education department, including courses offered to schools and also those which are specific to individual pupils. This information could not be provided in the time available.

Belfast Education and Library Board

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what timetable he has set for the Belfast Education and Library Board to produce a recovery plan. [197114]

Mr. Gardiner: It remains my intention to seek recovery of the amount overspent last year but I have not yet set a timetable for the Board to produce a recovery plan. My priority in dealing with the overspend in the Belfast Education and Library Board has been to seek confirmation that the Board has quantified the precise scale and scope of the overspend in 2003–04; is tackling the systems and other weaknesses that contributed to its occurrence and late discovery; and has plans in place to contain expenditure within budget in the current year. Once I am satisfied that these plans are in place and are working, I will want to address the issue of recovery.

Civil Service

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of civil service jobs which will be lost in East Antrim as a result of efficiency savings announced on 12 July; and what assistance will be provided to redundant civil service employees to help them find alternative employment. [196519]

Mr. Pearson: The details of where the reductions will take place is the subject of ongoing planning within individual Departments and will not be available until business plans for 2005–06 and subsequent years are finalised.

It is expected that the reductions and other workforce changes will be achieved through natural wastage and redeployment, without the need for redundancy schemes. Plans are being developed to support staff in moving to new posts.

Consultants

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many consultancy firms or companies have been retained by the Department since June 2001; what the projects are for which each has been retained; and what the total is of the fees paid or incurred in each case. [193422]

Mr. Pearson: Information about all consultancy contracts entered into by Departments in Northern Ireland is not held centrally and could only be obtained from individual Departments at disproportionate cost. Information on consultancy contracts awarded by the Central Procurement Directorate on behalf of Northern Ireland Departments in the last three financial years is held by that Directorate and a table listing these has been placed in the Library. These contracts were awarded to 166 consultancy firms or companies.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much his Department has spent in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [195447]

Mr. Pearson: The 11 Departments of the Northern Ireland Administration and the Northern Ireland Office have spent a total of £24,259.20 and £76,686.96 in the financial years 2002–03 and 2003–04 respectively on employing external consultants to deal with press and public relations. A figure for the current financial year is not yet available. Figures are in respect of core Departments only.

Disabled Pupils

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he is taking to prepare teachers and classroom assistants for the task of including children with disabilities in mainstream schools. [197109]

Mr. Gardiner: At present 60 per cent. of children with statements are already educated in mainstream schools or units. As part of the implementation of the proposed Special Educational Needs and Disability Order (NI) the Department will develop a range of information giving measures to support teachers and classroom assistants in making provision for children with disabilities in mainstream schools, including a revision of the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs. The Equality Commission will also produce two Codes of Practice on Disability Discrimination. These codes will provide practical advice to teachers and classroom assistants.

The Department is also continuing to develop programmes and materials to support teachers and classroom assistants in relation to specific areas of Special Education Need, and is working with the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI), the Regional Training Unit (RTU) and the Education and Library Boards to develop a strategic approach to the co-ordination of a comprehensive training agenda over a wide range of areas associated to inclusion.

Teacher education provision is also currently under review, the intention of which is to develop approaches that match more closely the needs of teachers entering the profession. In particular, the five teacher training providers in NI are reviewing their current practice in the light of the proposed Special Educational Needs and Disability Order.

Early Release

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners set free under the Belfast Agreement early release schemes are in (a) full-time and (b) part-time employment. [198293]

Mr. Pearson: The information requested is unavailable as the Northern Ireland Prison Service does not hold the employment details of former inmates.

Economic Output Statistics

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether a recent review of the reliability of GDP and Gross Value Added (GVA) output figures for Northern Ireland has been made by the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and Northern Ireland Statistics Research Agency; and what discussions he has had with the (a) Chancellor of the Exchequer, (b) Secretary of State for Scotland and (c) Secretary of State for Wales regarding the reliability of the GDP and GVA output date for other regions of the United Kingdom. [196863]

Mr. Gardiner: The Office for National Statistics (ONS) is responsible for producing the estimates of Gross Value Added (GVA) for the regions of the UK, including Northern Ireland. Statisticians in the Northern Ireland Statistics Research Agency (NISRA) work on an ongoing basis with the ONS to quality assure these and, with their colleagues in the Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment (DETI), have contributed to the recent Allsopp Review of Statistics for Economic Policymaking.

The Review recommended that the ONS develop new methods to produce estimates of GVA for the countries and regions of the UK. This will include the introduction of annual baseline data for GVA derived according to the production process in addition to the current income based measure of Regional GVA.

No specific discussions have taken place between the Secretary of State and Ministerial colleagues on this topic. However, both DETI and NISRA will work with ONS to implement the Allsopp recommendations as appropriate.

Education Action Zones

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the timetable is for the introduction of education action zones; and for what reasons the previously published schedule for their introduction has not been met. [197101]

Mr. Gardiner: In late 2003 the Department announced plans to introduce Education Action Zones (EAZs), aimed at tackling the root causes of social deprivation and educational underachievement on a multi-agency basis, and at that time it was indicated that the first EAZs might come into operation in September 2004. However, the introduction of the programme involved significant inter-Departmental and multi-agency working, and in summer 2004 the Department wrote to the education and library boards setting out the criteria for EAZs and inviting Stage 1 bids. These bids are currently being considered and it is now expected that the first Education Action Zones could come on stream by spring 2005.

Education Initiatives

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the reasons are for the rejection of the proposals to the Integrated Development Fund relating to education in Greater Shankill. [197102]

Mr. Gardiner: The Joint Working Group's bid to the Integrated Development Fund for resources to the address the educational recommendations made in the West Belfast and Greater Shankill task force reports has not been rejected. The level of funding available to the Integrated Development Fund is finite and in the light of the number and scale of other bids to the Fund, it was not possible to provide funds to meet the education bid in full. The Joint Working Group has been invited therefore to prepare a revised bid and the Department is meeting shortly with the two sponsoring education and library boards to take the bid forward.

Fair Trade Products

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether it is his policy to ensure that hospitality within his Department is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [197059]

Mr. Pearson: It is for each department to decide how best to meet its catering needs, taking account of any fair or ethical trading objectives. In so far as public procurement of catering services or supplies is involved the requirement must be consistent with best value for money and the EC Procurement Directives.

Genito-urinary Medicine

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recruitment to non-consultant grade posts in genito-urinary medicine. [196355]

Angela Smith: The Department has recently become aware of recruitment difficulties in the area of genito-urinary medicine. The Department understands that the trust which provides this service regionally to the people of Northern Ireland only received a limited response to a recent advertisement for medical appointments within this speciality.

In seeking to improve service delivery in this area, additional junior doctor training positions have been created within this speciality in recent years which will help over the course of time to increase the number of consultant grade doctors working in this area. In the interim, further consideration is being given to measures which might be taken to improve the recruitment position.

Medical Schools

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to increase the number of medical school places in the Province. [196353]

Angela Smith: I can confirm that it is my intention to increase the annual intake of medical students to 250, as soon as it is feasible to do so.

In the meantime the Department explored with Queen's University Belfast the possibility of a small increase in the medical student intake on a "one-off" basis in the 2004–05 academic year, in advance of completion of the formal process for the full expansion. As a result 33 additional places were awarded this year.

Midazolam/Oxygen Therapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance he has issued regarding whether staff can administer (a) midazolam and (b) oxygen therapy at schools for children with special needs in the Province. [196955]

Mr. Gardiner: No such guidance has been issued by the Department of Education, (DE). DE, in partnership with Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, (DHSS&PS), is currently preparing guidance to assist schools in the administration of medication to pupils, once such medication has been prescribed by a medical practitioner.

Should a child require midazolam, procedures would be established on an individual basis, through a dedicated Care Plan, to ensure safe practice in its administration.

The provision of oxygen therapy for children in Northern Ireland takes place on the basis of a protocol specifying the circumstances under which the oxygen can be administered which is signed by the senior clinical officer. The primary purpose in administering oxygen therapy is for post seizure management.

Milk

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of Northern Ireland dairy farmers received a milk price that failed to meet its cost of production in each of the last three years; and what support he provides to Northern Ireland dairy farmers. [197928]

Mr. Pearson: An estimate of the number of Northern Ireland dairy farmers who receive a milk price that does not cover the costs of production is not determined on an annual basis by DARD. The most recent estimate for milk production costs is for the year ended March 2002. Using the information from that analysis, it is estimated that the milk price received on 24 per cent. of dairy farmers would not cover the economic costs of milk production in that year.

DARD provides a range of educational courses at the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) including modules on dairy farming. Also, advice and information is available from locally based development advisors and technology teams based at CAFRE. This localised support is in addition to that provided under the Common Agricultural Policy of the EU.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to (a) make the Retailer Code of Practice more effective in protecting dairy farmers in Northern Ireland from price cuts imposed by retailers on their milk suppliers and (b) extend the Retailer Code of Practice to cover farmers who supply supermarkets via an intermediary; and if he will make a statement. [197929]

Mr. Pearson: Under the Northern Ireland Act 1998 the regulation of anti-competition practices and agreements and the abuse of dominant position in the market are reserved matters. Responsibility for the Supermarkets' Code of Practice therefore rests with the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Neutral Working Environments

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his policy is on a neutral working environment for Northern Ireland Government departments. [197104]

Mr. Pearson: The Northern Ireland Civil Service's Equal Opportunities Policy Statement asserts that

> "Everyone has a right to equality of opportunity and to a good and harmonious working environment and atmosphere in which all workers are encouraged to apply their diverse talents and in which no worker feels under threat or intimidated".

Pre-school Education

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many responses have been received relating to the review of pre-school education. [197099]

Mr. Gardiner: A total of 7,250 responses were received by the time the public consultation closed on 15 October.

School Leavers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of pupils left full time education at the age of 16 in Northern Ireland in the last year for which figures are available. [196163]

Mr. Gardiner: The latest available figure relates to those aged 16 at 1 July 2002. In autumn 2002, 22 per cent. of these young people were not in full-time education.

DEFENCE

1st Battalion the King's Regiment

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what postings the 1st Battalion the King's Regiment will receive in the next 12 months. [197886]

Mr. Hoon: The 1st Battalion The Kings Regiment (1 Kings) is due to remain in Catterick for the next 12 months, conducting a full training programme in preparation for a NATO standby commitment in 2006.

Army Annual Operating Costs

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit was for (a) an armoured regiment, (b) an armoured reconnaissance regiment, (c) a yeomanry regiment and (d) an army air corps regiment in financial year 2002–03; [196405]

(2) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit was for (a) an armoured infantry battalion, (b) a mechanised battalion, (c) an air assault battalion and (d) a light role battalion in financial year 2002–03; [196406]

(3) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit was for (a) a Northern Ireland battalion, (b) a Gurkha battalion, (c) a home service battalion, (d) a training centre battalion, (e) a medical regiment and (f) a military hospital in financial year 2002–03; [196407]

(4) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit was for (a) an artillery field regiment, (b) an air defence regiment, (c) a MLRS regiment, (d) surveillance and target acquisitions and (e) a commando regiment in financial year 2002–03; [196408]

(5) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit was for (a) an engineer regiment, (b) a signal regiment, (c) an EW regiment, (d) an equipment support battalion and (e) a logistics regiment in financial year 2002–03; [196409]

(6) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit of the (a) engineer regiment, (b) signal regiment, (c) EW regiment, (d) equipment support battalion and (e) logistic regiment regular units were for financial year 2002–03; [196485]

(7) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit of the (a) artillery field regiment, (b) air defence regiment, (c) MLRS regiment, (d) surveillance and target acquisition and (e) commando regiment regular units were for financial year 2002–03; [196484]

(8) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit of the (a) Northern Ireland battalion, (b) Gurkha battalion, (c) home service battalion, (d) training centre battalion, (e) medical regiment and (f) hospital regular units were for financial year 2002–03; [196483]

(9) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit of the (a) armoured infantry battalion, (b) mechanised battalion, (c) air assault battalion and (d) light role battalion regular units were for financial year 2002–03; [196482]

(10) what the average annual operating cost, broken down into direct Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit and indirect Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit of the (a) armoured regiment, (b) armoured recce regiment, (c) yeomanry regiment and (d) army air corps regiment regular units were for financial year 2002–03. [196481]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I am therefore withholding it under Exemption 9 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Army Deployment

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether other sections of the Army are expected to be deployed to undertake roles usually undertaken by the infantry. [191867]

Mr. Ingram: It is not unusual for the Royal Artillery and Royal Armoured Corps to deploy units in the infantry role. In addition, other parts of the Army, such as the Royal Corps of Signals and Royal Logistics Corps, undertake general infantry tasks as part of routine operations. This is made possible by the fact that every soldier in the Army is trained as an infantryman first, and as a specialist second.

On larger operations, such as that in Iraq, a complete brigade is usually deployed as an entity, including infantry, armoured and artillery units. This reflects the fact that the whole brigade will have trained together for a range of operations, and will be capable of switching rapidly between different roles as part of routine business in Iraq. For example, in Iraq, armoured regiments regularly switch between operating with their tanks, and operating in the infantry role. These flexible arrangements are expected to continue for the foreseeable future.

Basic Level Budget Holders

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the basic level budget holders subordinate to the (a) Fleet, (b) General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland), (c) Commander-in-Chief Land Command, (d) Field Army (Theatre Troops), (e) 1st (UK) Armoured Division, (f) 2nd Division, (g) UK Support Command (Germany), (h) 3rd Division, (i) Joint Helicopter Command, (j) 4th Division, (k) Land Support and (l) 5th Division management groups for financial year 2002–03; [196469]

(2) if he will list the basic level budget holders subordinate to the (a) 1 Group, (b) 3 Group, (c) 2 Group, (d) Deputy Commander-in-Chief, (e) British Forces Cyprus, (f) British Forces Gibraltar, (g) Permanent Joint Headquarters, (h) Sovereign Base Areas Administration and (i) British Forces Falkland Islands management groups for financial year 2002–03; [196470]

(3) if he will list the basic level budget holders subordinate to the (a) Defence Fuels Group, (b) Deputy Chief of Defence Logistics, (c) Defence Communication Services Agency, (d) Defence Logistics Support HQ, (e) Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency, (f) DG Equipment Support (Land), (g) Warship Support Agency, (h) DG Equipment Support (Air), (i) Defence Storage and Distribution Agency, (j) Director Land Service Ammunition, (k) Defence Transport and Movements Agency and (l) British Forces Post Office management groups for financial year 2002–03; [196471]

(4) if he will list the basic level budget holders subordinate to the (a) Flag Officer Training and Recruiting, (b) HQ, (c) Naval Secretary, (d) Adjutant General, (e) Army Personnel Centre, (f) Adjutant General, (g) Army Training and Recruiting Agency, (h) Army Programme, (i) Service Children's Education and (j) General Staff management groups for financial year 2002–03; [196472]

(5) if he will list the basic level budget holders subordinate to the (a) Personnel Management Agency, (b) Core HQ, (c) Training Group Defence Agency, (d) Internal Costs, (e) Programme Account and (f) Nuclear management groups for financial year 2002–03; [196473]

(6) if he will list the basic level budget holders subordinate to the (a) Personnel Director, (b) War Pensions Agency, (c) Pay and Personnel Agency, (d) Surgeon General, (e) Defence Vetting Agency, (f) Deputy Chief Defence Staff (Personnel), (g) Defence Export Services Org, (h) Defence

Secondary Care Agency, (i) Finance Director, (j) Defence Dental Agency, (k) Defence Analytical Services Agency, (l) Defence Housing Executive and (m) Defence Bills Agency management groups for financial year 2002–03; [196474]

(7) if he will list the basic level budget holders subordinate to the (a) Defence Medical Training Organisation, (b) Chief Constable MOD Police, (c) Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency, (d) Chief Scientific Adviser, (e) Defence Estates, (f) Policy Director, (g) Deputy Chief Defence Staff (Commitments), (h) Deputy Chief Defence Staff (Equipment Capability), (i) Director Special Forces, (j) Chief of Defence Intelligence, (k) Defence Geographic and Imaging Intelligence Agency and (l) Defence Intelligence and Security Centre management groups for financial year 2002–03. [196475]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Black Watch

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the composition is of the Black Watch Battlegroup serving in Iraq. [197548]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 November 2004]: The 1 Black Watch Battlegroup comprises:

1 Battalion Headquarters (1 Black Watch);

3 Rifle Companies (1 Black Watch);

a mortar and infantry Platoon (40 Commando (RM));

an Armoured Reconnaissance Squadron (Queen's Dragoon Guards); associated Combat Support and Combat Service Support Elements, including appropriate medical facilities.

Two Puma helicopters and one Lynx helicopter are supporting the Battlegroup specifically for this operation.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what duties 1 Black Watch will be returning in the UK. [197887]

Mr. Hoon: On return to the United Kingdom, the 1st Battalion The Black Watch (The Highland Regiment) will have a period of post operational tour leave before resuming its commitment as the Land Warfare Centre Battle group, providing support to the training of units and individuals across the Army.

Bowman Radios

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the testing of the Bowman radios being used by the Royal Anglian Regiment; and what action he is taking to ensure the radios are compatible with other equipment used by the armed forces. [196733]

Mr. Ingram: The Bowman tactical communications and information system is being delivered incrementally and is subject to a comprehensive test and trials programme, ranging from laboratory integration and analysis to operational field trials by the eventual users. 1 Royal Anglian is a significant constituent element of these trials. Successful integration with in-service equipment is part of the Bowman requirement and is being evaluated.

Within the team that is developing and introducing Bowman, there is a dedicated group pioneering a System of Systems management approach to ensure that the capability delivered by Bowman will develop over time as new platforms, communications and information systems, and battlefield applications are delivered over the coming years.

Cadet Transport

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what regulations govern the type of transport which may be used for transporting cadets (a) to training areas and (b) within training areas. [197899]

Mr. Caplin: The regulations governing the type and use of transport systems used in transporting cadets both to training areas and within those training areas, are found in "JSP(Joint Service Publication) 341, Defence Road Transport Regulations, Chapter 3, Article 3.052—"Vehicles to be used by Cadets".

The decisions reflecting the choice and suitability of transport of cadets both to and within training areas is based on a full "duty of care" risk assessment of the operation required. The regulations for producing the latter are contained in "JSP 375, the MOD Health and Safety Handbook", which contains within it, separate leaflets relating to all relevant "duty of care" health and safety situations.

Decommissioning

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which 10 (a) ships and (b) submarines have spent the shortest period of time in service since 1974 with the Royal Navy before decommissioning. [197481]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested will take some time to collate. I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Crisis Management Organisation

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) who the members were of the Defence Crisis Management Organisation in the lead up to the conflict in Iraq in 2003; [197197]

(2) on what date and for what reasons the Defence Crisis Management Organisation ruled that mobilisation of forces for Iraq could not begin before the political process had run its course. [197196]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 9 November 2004]: The Defence Crisis Management Organisation (DCMO) is responsible for the strategic level planning and execution of military operations, including operations in Iraq, and acts as a channel for operational briefing to Ministers and Chiefs of Staff. The DCMO comprises both civilian and military personnel and is made up of elements of Ministry of Defence Central Staff, the Permanent Joint Headquarters (PJHQ), single-Service front-line commands and other relevant Departments.

We do not release names of officials under Exemption 12 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (privacy of an individual).

The DCMO provides advice to the Chiefs of Staff and Ministers on a range of issues, including mobilisation and other military preparatory measures. Final decisions on these issues are made by Ministers. The Prime Minister stated on 24 September 2002 that there had to be genuine preparedness and planning to take action against Iraq if diplomacy failed and it proved impossible to bring Iraq into compliance with UN Security Council Resolutions by diplomatic means. It was made clear in a Commons Debate on 25 November 2002 and Defence Questions on 9 December 2002 that the Government was undertaking prudent preparations and planning in the event that military action was required. The decision to start mobilising reserves was made by Ministers in early January once it became appropriate to do so in order to further military preparations, and a call-out order under the Reserve Forces Act 1996 was put before Parliament.

The decision on the participation of UK forces in military action against Iraq was made following the Parliamentary debate on the 18 March 2003 on Iraq's continued non-compliance with UN Security Council Resolution 1441 and the Parliamentary vote in favour of military action to enforce the UN Resolutions.

Defence Exports/Imports

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value of defence (a) exports from the UK to the United States of America and (b) imports from the United States was in each of the last five years. [197651]

Mr. Ingram: The values of the physical export of defence equipment from the United Kingdom to the United States of America are reported in the Annual Reports on the United Kingdom Strategic Export Controls. The figures are derived by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise using specific tariff codes (see Annex C of Cm 6173, the Annual Report 2003, for further details).

The HMCE figures for equipment imports to the UK from the USA have been derived using similar tariff codes: they are provided in the following table.

£ million

	Export	Import
1999	86.9	660.4
2000	138.9	837.7
2001	349.8	1473.7
2002	162.2	867.1
2003	116.3	[1]272.7

[1] Changes to the HMCE quality assurance methodology may have contributed to the drop in this figure from that recorded in the previous year. HMCE have set up a review team to address issues concerning the provision of defence data. The 2003 figure is, therefore, provisional.

EU Defence White Paper

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the EU White Paper, "New Frontier for an Expanding Union"; and what effect he expects the action plan for implementing the European Space Policy will have on UK defence policy; [190055]

(2) what implications the EU White Paper "New Frontier for an Expanding Union" published in June has on the European Security and Defence Policy. [190076]

Mr. Hoon: The European Commission's White Paper proposes, amongst other things, a number of space-related initiatives aimed at improving the EU's crisis management capability. Whilst space-based assets and applications could play an important role in helping to meet the EU's security and defence needs, the provision of military capability remains a member state responsibility under the European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP). This will not be changed by the White Paper, and the White Paper does not therefore determine the priorities for UK Defence policy. The EU's future requirements for military space capabilities are being examined through the ESDP's European Capability Action Plan process.

EU member states, including the UK, are fully engaged in the development of the EU Space Policy that will follow on from the White Paper. The UK has emphasised that decisions on the defence and military aspects must be taken on an intergovernmental basis, where member states have a veto, and that implementation of the Space Policy must be driven by actual—rather than assumed—requirements.

EU Satellite Navigation Resources

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions were taken on integration of EU member states' civil and military satellite navigation resources at the meeting of the Council of the European Union's politico-military group on 8 September; and what action has been taken as a result. [190053]

Mr. Hoon: None.

Fishery Protection

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many fishery protection vessels are in service; and if he will list the areas in which these vessels are being used. [196728]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 28 June 2004, Official Report, column 141W, to the hon. Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle).

HMCS Chicoutimi

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) he and (b) his ministerial colleagues have been invited to give evidence to the inquiry into the fire on board HMCS Chicoutimi set up by the Canadian House of Commons. [196868]

Mr. Ingram: Two members of the United Kingdom project team working in support of the lease to sell four submarines to the Government of Canada have been interviewed by the Board of Inquiry convened by the Canadian Navy into the fire on 5 October on board HMCS Chicoutimi. The RN officer who was invited to observe as Royal Navy Special Adviser continues to be available to the inquiry in that capacity. UK Defence Ministers have not been asked to give evidence.

Infantry Regiments

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultation arrangements (a) he and (b) the Army Board have put in place to allow representations to be made opposing plans to amalgamate regiments. [197915]

Mr. Hoon: Both I and my Army Board colleagues are very aware of the level of interest in, and the strength of feeling aroused by, the decision to adjust the structure of the infantry. Following my announcement on 21 July, the Executive Committee of the Army Board (ECAB) tasked the Divisions of Infantry to consider how best to restructure themselves on the basis of large regiments of two or more battalions, with a view to putting forward recommendations. This process has involved a great deal of consultation both within the ranks of those serving and within the wider Army community. Ultimately, proposals will be put before the Army Board and Ministers for the final decision, but we have made it clear that we want a future infantry structure that takes full account of the considered response of those affected.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the proposals that he is considering on the amalgamation of English regiments in advance of further discussions at the Army Board. [197916]

Mr. Hoon: I am currently awaiting advice from the Executive Committee of the Army Board on how best to take forward the restructuring of the infantry.

Iraq

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated monthly cost to the UK of military operations in Iraq was in the last month for which figures are available; and what the estimated cost to the UK of military operations in Iraq over (a) the next three months and (b) the next six months is. [197264]

Mr. Ingram: Figures for the costs of operations, in Iraq and elsewhere, are published annually to take account of the need for physical stocktakes to establish accurate figures for some aspects of consumption and to allow for audit by the NAO. The annual cost of operations in Iraq in 2003–04, including some elements of the warfighting phase, was £1,311 million. Monthly expenditure within this figure would vary depending on troop numbers and activity, but it is not possible to break down the total by month. It is too early to provide firm figures for the costs of operations in Iraq in this financial year, but Parliament will be asked to vote the necessary funds in Supplementary Estimates.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart on the use of depleted uranium munitions by US forces against Iraqis in urban areas. [189756]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his reply of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1879W, to the hon. Member for Hull North, on Iraq, when the decision to print the aide memoire was made; when it was printed; and when it was first issued to UK service personnel on active duty. [194023]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 2004]: The decision to print the aide memoire card on the law of armed conflict was taken by 1 Division Legal Command. The cards were printed and issued between February and early March 2003, prior to the commencement of combat operations in Iraq.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what costs have been incurred by his Department in the employment of private security firms and personnel in Iraq since March 2003. [196377]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has not incurred any costs in the employment of private security firms in Iraq.

Manning Control Points

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions units have received lists of names for manning control point reviews in the last 18 months. [197082]

Mr. Caplin: Individual units may have received lists of names for manning control point reviews on up to 10 occasions in the last 18 months.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to conduct manning control point reviews in the next 12 months. [197083]

Mr. Caplin: The answer I gave to the hon. Member on 19 January 2004, Official Report, column 919W, is still applicable today.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to conduct discharges at manning control point reviews in the next 12 months. [197084]

Mr. Caplin: There will be no discharges under Queens Regulations for the Army 1975 Paragraph 9.413 in the next 12 months.

Nuclear Accident Response Group

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many (a) civil servants and (b) members of the armed forces are employed within the Nuclear Accident Response Group; [196296]

(2) what plans he has to expand the membership of the Nuclear Accident Response Group. [196303]

Mr. Ingram: The numbers of civil servants and members of the armed forces employed within the Ministry of Defence's nuclear accident response organisation will vary depending on the type, location and circumstances of any defence nuclear accident. It is therefore not possible to give precise numbers of civil servants and members of the armed forces employed.

Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many press releases have been issued by his Department in each month of 2004; and if he will make a statement. [195465]

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 857W.

Procurement

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of military equipment contracts are held by British companies. [196584]

Mr. Ingram: Taking British companies as entities employing workers in Great Britain and undertaking at least 25 per cent. of the relevant task, the percentages of Ministry of Defence military equipment contracts currently held by British companies are estimated by number to be some 96 per cent. and by value some 88 per cent.

RAF Kinloss/Lossiemouth

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flying days were lost due to bad weather at (a) RAF Kinloss and (b) RAF Lossiemouth in each month since January 1997; and if he will make a statement. [194893]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence does not hold records of whole flying days lost owing to bad weather, which are very rare. The following table presents the total number of lost flying hours by month since January 1997 at RAF Kinloss and RAF Lossiemouth when conditions were assessed as red. Red conditions are defined as when visibility is less than 800 metres or the cloud base is less than 200 ft above ground level. In these conditions, flying is unlikely to take place. Other weather conditions, for example high winds, might also preclude flying but their incidence is not recorded.

Notes:

1. Owing to the different nature of their flying operations, RAF Lossiemouth records colour states on a minute by minute basis while RAF Kinloss records the situation hourly.

2. The RAF Lossiemouth figures have been recorded over the time period 0750 to 2150 daily, which is the time period within which the majority of the flying programme takes place. The RAF Kinloss figures have been recorded over a full 24 hour period because the station remains open round the clock.

3. No records are available for January to July 1997 for RAF Lossiemouth.

RAF Menwith Hill

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the purpose is of the expansion and upgrade of RAF Menwith Hill. [196862]

Mr. Caplin: The current programme of works at RAF Menwith Hill is to upgrade and refurbish existing facilities to ensure that the base retains the highest level of technological capabilities available. The mission of the base remains unchanged.

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will undertake a public consultation exercise into the effect upon the local population of work being undertaken at RAF Menwith Hill. [197414]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence fully recognises the importance of working alongside local communities at all of its establishments, including RAF Menwith Hill, and encourages regular liaison and consultation with the local communities on a wide range of issues. There is therefore no reason to conduct a specific public consultation exercise.

Royal Navy

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his plans to strengthen the frontline of the Royal Navy in the next 10 years. [197372]

Mr. Ingram: To ensure that it will be capable of delivering and contributing to future joint effects-based operations, the Royal Navy will develop a versatile maritime force that will be expeditionary in focus, and sufficiently agile to meet the lull spectrum of future operational tasks. It must therefore be responsive, robust, flexible and adaptable. In addition to procuring the ships, submarines and equipment that will deliver a range of effects to ensure mission success, and which were described in last summer's supplement to the December 2003 White Paper, the Royal Navy will take other measures to enhance its frontline capability, including continued improvements to individual and collective training, and improvements in global logistic sustainability. Structural improvements are also planned which will focus on the delivery of front-line military effect, in particular to take advantage of network enabled capability.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the expected decommissioning dates are of the (a) destroyers, (b) frigates, (c) submarines and (d) minehunters identified in Delivering Security; when the (i) Chief of the Naval Staff and (ii) Commander in Chief Fleet agreed these decommissionings; and if he will make a statement. [197373]

Mr. Ingram: In addition to HMS Bridport, a Sandown class Mine Counter Measure Vessel (MCMV) which was withdrawn from service earlier this year, the planned decommissioning dates are listed. These decisions were taken following thorough examination as part of the department's planning process, including consideration by the Defence Management Board.

Type	Vessel	Decommissioning date
Type 42 Batch 1 Destroyers	HMS Cardiff	2005
	HMS Glasgow	2005
	HMS Newcastle	2005
Type 23 Frigates	HMS Norfolk	2005
	HMS Marlborough	2005
	HMS Grafton	2006
Attack Submarines	HMS Superb	2008
	HMS Trafalgar	2008
Sandown Class MCMV	HMS Sandown	2005
	HMS Inverness	2005
Northern Ireland Patrol Vessels	HMS Cottesmore	2006
	HMS Brecon	2007
	HMS Dulverton	2007

S-type Contracts

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers have been employed in the last six months on an S-Type contract that was signed within a week of the termination of an open engagement contract relating to the same soldier. [197218]

Mr. Caplin: None.

Sea Skua Missile

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to develop a successor to the Sea Skua missile. [189754]

Mr. Ingram: Sea Skua is currently planned progressively to leave service from around the 2012 to 2014 period. It is intended to be replaced by the Future Anti-Surface Guided Weapon.

Service Delivery Agreements

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the service delivery agreements between his Department's top level budget holders and head office for financial years 1999–2000 to 2003–04. [196579]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Skydive Ranch

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment the Department has made of the safety record of parachutes used at Skydive Ranch in Canada; and whether Skydive Ranch complies with all the Department's requirements for (a) safety and (b) instructor training levels. [194998]

Mr. Ingram: The Skydive Ranch in Canada is subject to an annual no-notice safety audit by the Ministry of Defence Joint Service Parachute Centre (JSPC) during which a thorough check of equipment and procedures is undertaken. During the inspection, an advanced instructor/examiner from the British Parachute Association assesses instructor performance and teaching ability at the Skydive Ranch.

The Ministry of Defence is satisfied that the Skydive Ranch is operating safely, and the risks to British military personnel are as low as reasonably practical.

Sonic Boom (North Norfolk)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the results of his Department's investigation into the cause of the sonic boom heard in North Norfolk on 8 November. [197947]

Mr. Caplin: The investigation into this reported sonic event is still ongoing; however, indications are that the aircraft that caused the event was a French Air Force Mirage operating in a military air-range over the North sea. It is believed that the aircraft was approximately 18 miles off the coast when the event occurred.

Submarines

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information the Government have been asked to supply to the Canadian Parliament concerning its inquiry into the purchase of four Upholder Class submarines from the UK. [194344]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has been asked for some background information to inform the Standing Committee on National Defence and Veterans Affairs of the Canadian Parliament, which is currently conducting a study on the acquisition of submarines for the Canadian forces.

Separately, the Canadian Board of Inquiry (BOI) convened to investigate the fire on board HMCS Chicoutimi on 4 October has sought and received documentation from MOD and BAE Systems.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who was responsible for signing off HMCS Chicoutimi as seaworthy prior to its handover to the Canadian Government. [194393]

Mr. Ingram: The submarine's clearance for sea was endorsed by the Royal Navy using the Royal Navy's acceptance procedures.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the refurbishment of the Upholder Class submarines sold to Canada had qualifications attached to the sale indicating they should not be operated in accordance with their original design specification. [194441]

Mr. Ingram: At the time of handover to and acceptance by Canada of each of the four reactivated Upholder Class submarines, none had any qualifications indicating that they should not be operated in accordance with their original design specification.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether HMCS Chicoutimi is to be refitted and made seaworthy in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [194442]

Mr. Ingram: Any decision with regard to the future of HMCS Chicoutimi is a matter for the Canadian Government.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many days each of the four Upholder class submarines spent (a) in service and (b) at sea with the Royal Navy before their decommissioning. [197480]

Mr. Ingram: The four Upholder Class submarines were taken out of service with the Royal Navy in 1994. Times spent in service and at sea with the Royal Navy are shown as follows.

Submarine	Service with the RN	Days at sea
HMS Upholder	December 1990 to July 1994	370
HMS Unseen	July 1991 to July 1994	269
HMS Ursula	January 1993 to July 1994	199
HMS Unicorn	November 1993 to October 1994	239

Unexploded Ordnance

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many unexploded cluster munitions deployed by UK forces there are worldwide; and if he will make a statement. [152747]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 3 February 2004]: It is not possible to quantify how many unexploded cluster munitions deployed by UK forces there might be worldwide. Air-delivered cluster munitions have been used in a number of recent conflicts. Their rates of failing to explode as designed can vary considerably depending on a variety of factors, including the terrain conditions on impact. By contrast, the modern artillery-delivered cluster munitions used in Iraq have secondary fuses that ensure a far smaller proportion is left unexploded. The quantity of unexploded munitions has also been greatly reduced by extensive clearance efforts in, for example, Kosovo and Iraq.

US Interceptor Missiles

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of the existing US-UK agreements allow for the siting of US interceptor missiles in Britain. [198035]

Mr. Hoon: None. United States/United Kingdom basing agreements are a matter for joint decision making between the two Governments, and any new proposals for basing would be the subject of negotiation before any agreement was made.

Warrior-equipped Battalions

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Warrior-equipped battalions will be deploying on operations in the next three months; and to where. [197885]

Mr. Hoon: We have no plans to deploy any further Warrior-equipped battalions on operations in the next three months.

Weapons of Mass Destruction

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) civil servants and (b) military personnel requested an impact assessment of the effect of weapons of mass destruction on (i) the physical well-being of allied troops and (ii) the morale of British troops. [191151]

Mr. Ingram: There is no universally accepted definition of the phrase "weapons of mass destruction", but it is generally held to refer to nuclear, chemical and biological weapons.

Planning for operations takes account of all relevant factors, including the weaponry that may be used against United Kingdom forces.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the viability of aerial crop spraying on areas of poppy cultivation in Afghanistan; and what impact this is likely to have on (a) the environment, (b) human health and (c) animal health. [196425]

Mr. Rammell: The UK supports the Afghan Government's National Drug Control Strategy. The viability of aerial eradication of the opium poppy crop is a matter for the Afghan Government. There are a number of issues to consider before a country decides to go down this path.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to publish figures for the poppy harvest in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [197619]

Mr. Rammell: We understand that the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime is planning to publish the results of its 2003–04 Afghan Opium Survey on 18 November.

Anguilla

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Anguilla's draft constitution. [197492]

Mr. Rammell: A Constitutional and Electoral Reform Committee in Anguilla was appointed and the review formally launched in February 2002. Public consultation was extensive but work is now on hold pending the general election due in March 2005.

Athens 2004

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the UK ambassador to Greece has been commissioned to write a report on the strengths and weaknesses of the Athens 2004 Olympic and Paralympic games. [196959]

Mr. MacShane: Her Majesty's ambassador to Greece has, over recent months and years, reported in detail on aspects of the 2004 Olympics relevant to the Government.

Bahá'i Community

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Iran on the treatment of the Bahá'i community; and if he will make a statement. [197368]

Mr. Rammell: We have serious concerns about the situation of the Bahá'i community in Iran, and have raised these concerns with the Iranian authorities on many occasions. With our strong support, the rights of Iran's religious minorities including the Bahá'is have been an important theme of the EU/Iran human rights dialogue, including the most recent round in June.

Colombia

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the human rights situation in Colombia; and if he will make a statement. [198079]

Mr. Rammell: Human rights form an integral part of our policy towards Colombia. We keep the human rights situation in the country under constant review. We recognise that there have been some improvements but much still needs to be done. We work closely with the Colombian Government, EU and other partners, including civil society, to try to achieve this further improvement. We regularly urge the Colombian Government to meet UN recommendations on human rights and are working with them to achieve this goal. As part of this co-operation, we were pleased to host the meeting of international support for Colombia held in London in July 2003. This resulted in the London Declaration, a key text that guides international support. We are working with the Colombians and other partners in the run-up to the follow-up meeting to the London meeting to be held in Colombia in February 2005.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many units of the Colombian military receive British training; and whether this training includes (a) education in respecting human rights and (b) training in humanitarian policing. [198080]

Mr. Rammell: British military training is predominantly provided to selected individuals from the Colombian military. However, we do provide explosive ordnance disposal (EOD) training to Colombian EOD units.

Professional training provided to Colombian officers routinely incorporates human rights education. Under the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Human Rights

Project Fund, we recently had a project to raise awareness of the armed forces on their role in the prevention of displacement and the protection of the rights of the internally displaced population. We also have an ongoing project on human rights training for the military through the Colombian military justice school.

The Colombian military receives no direct policing training from the UK although two Colombian officers attended a UK International Peace Support Briefing Programme which included humanitarian policing issues.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons his Department has not replied to the letter of 7 July to UKvisas from the hon. Member for Aylesbury about the case of Mr. S. M., husband of Mrs. S. K. of Aylesbury (reference numbers M1232921/3 and PO 4649/04); and when he expects to send a substantive reply. [198083]

Mr. Mullin: UKvisas replied to the hon. Member on 11 November.

Departmental Advertising/Estate

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197291]

Mr. Straw: As set out in my reply to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) on 20 July 2004, Official Report, column 171W, in FY 2002–03—the most recent year for which audited figures are available—separately identifiable expenditure by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) on UK advertising totalled £743,783. Of this, £716,234 related to media spend on advertising for recruitment purposes. The balance related to consular media advertisements, which aimed to raise awareness among the British public of the importance of being properly prepared before travelling overseas and to advertising of the FCO's public open days.

The FCO does not maintain separate records of expenditure for the creative, media, and administration components of its advertising activity. The FCO's overseas posts and its non-departmental public bodies also incur advertising costs. Information about these costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The FCO's records of expenditure on advertising for the financial years from FY 1997–98 are not held centrally. Figures for these years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the properties occupied by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004, showing (A) for each and (B) in aggregate the area; and what in aggregate the annual rental value was. [196369]

Mr. Rammell: The details given relate only to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) estate in the UK. The work involved in assembling similar data for all the properties that our posts lease overseas would incur disproportionate costs.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Green Ministers his Department has had since 1997. [197674]

Mr. Rammell: There have been four Green Ministers in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office since 1997.

Iraq

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his reply of 26 October 2004, Official Report, column 1177W, reference 191798, if he will list the UN sanctions that had collapsed by August 2001, referred to in paragraph 3, page 3 of ISG Regime Finance and Procurement. [195198]

Mr. Rammell: The former Iraqi regime worked hard to bring about an end to sanctions, and claims about their failure were part of the former regime's strategy to influence UN member states. The former Iraqi regime undoubtedly undermined sanctions, including by corrupting the Oil for Food Programme to generate illicit revenue, and by smuggling goods to and from Iraq. Such practices are being investigated by the independent inquiry appointed by the UN Secretary General in April 2004.

The UN Security Council lifted sanctions against Iraq under resolution 1483 of 22 May 2003, with the exception of the arms embargo and certain financial restrictions against individuals and entities of the former Iraqi regime.

Israel/Palestine

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made by the European Union of the cost of damage to EU-funded projects in the Palestinian Territories resulting from Israeli military action. [196575]

Mr. Rammell: The European Commission (EC) maintain an audit of damage to EC and member state financed projects as a result of Israeli security measures during the intifada. The value of damaged projects funded by the European Union (either bilaterally by member states or by the EC) is €26.5 million.

We have made representations to the Israeli authorities at the highest level expressing our grave concern at the damage sustained by Palestinian civilians and institutions as a result of Israel Defence Forces activity. The EU has also made representations to the Israeli authorities and has reserved the right to demand compensation from Israel for damage to EU financed projects.

Lisbon Agenda

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with Mr. Wim Kok in connection with his progress report on the Lisbon agenda. [197475]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary saw Mr. Kok at the European Council on 4 November, where Mr. Kok's progress report on the Lisbon agenda was discussed. My right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for Work and Pensions attended the Tripartite Social Summit earlier that day, where the report was also discussed. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister met with Mr. Kok on 26 August and at the European Council on 4–5 November.

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards the Lisbon agenda. [197477]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's Statement to the House on 8 November 2004, Official Report, column 570, following Wim Kok's presentation to the European Council on progress on the Lisbon agenda. The Government set out their priorities for European economic reform in their progress report in February and their vision for a more focussed, results-oriented Lisbon process in a paper submitted to Mr. Kok and EU partners in June. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

London 2012

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to publicise the London 2012 Olympic bid in (a) UK embassies, high commissions and consulate offices and (b) the offices of the British Council after 15 November. [196960]

Mr. Rammell: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Mr. Rammell) wrote to all British Heads of Mission whose host countries have nationals on the International Olympic Committee (IOC) on 27 September 2004 asking them to provide detailed action plans on how they intend to support and publicise the bid locally. These plans are currently being assessed and will be implemented on 16 November once the IOC rules of international promotion are relaxed. As a minimum posts will conduct public awareness campaigns using local media, post websites and displays of publicity material provided by London 2012.

Sir David Green, Director General of the British Council, will have written by 16 November to all British Council offices in countries with an IOC member to outline how they can support and publicise the bid. British Council offices will liaise with our posts on this issue to ensure our plans complement each other.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what briefing papers have been made available to UK ambassadors and high commissioners about the London 2012 Olympic bid; and if he will place all such papers in the Library. [196961]

Mr. Rammell: Foreign and Commonwealth Office missions whose host governments have nationals on the International Olympic Committee (IOC) have been provided with briefing papers on London's bid. These papers have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether a specific member of the Diplomatic Service has been earmarked in each of the bidding cities for the 2012 Olympics to follow the progress of their bids. [196962]

Mr. Rammell: Following the short listing of candidate cities on 18 May 2004 Paris, Madrid, Moscow and New York appointed a dedicated point of contact to follow progress on rival city bids. British diplomatic missions in countries with nationals on the International Olympic Committee, each have appointed a member of staff to monitor local perceptions of both London's and rival city bids.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many recommendations by parliamentary select committees have been adopted by his Department since June 2001. [197766]

Mr. Straw: Officials, Ministers and I all take seriously the recommendations of all relevant Select Committee reports, and seek to implement them whenever we can. No response to any such recommendations is made to Parliament without scrutiny by Ministers, normally me. However, the information requested by my hon. Friend is not held centrally and the cost of compiling such information would incur disproportionate costs.

Southern Thailand

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of (a) the extent of Islamic fundamentalism in southern Thailand, (b) the threat hat Islamic fundamentalism may pose to the security and stability of Thailand and (c) the possible mplications of Thai instability for British interests in he wider region. [197131]

Mr. Alexander: We are concerned by the separatist iolence and related deaths in southern Thailand. We emain in close contact with the Thai Government bout the situation.

The vast majority of Thailand's Muslims are opposed o extremism and terrorism. We believe, however, that here are a number of small domestic extremist groups nvolved in terrorist activity in southern Thailand. errorism is a challenge to the peace and security of hailand.

We believe that separatist violence is unlikely to move eyond the borders of Thailand. Our travel advice for hailand reflects our assessment of the implications r the security of British nationals. We currently commend against all but essential travel to the far uthern provinces of Pattani, Yala, Nathariwat and ongkhla. The travel advice is regularly reviewed.

Spain

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign d Commonwealth Affairs what representations has made to the Spanish authorities in relation to) Mr. Peter Devlin and (b) other Cornish divers aiting trial in Galicia. [195132]

Mr. Alexander: Peter Devlin and three other divers m Force 9 Salvage were arrested on 20 June 2002 and eased the same day. The Spanish investigation is continuing and the divers have not yet been formally charged. On 9 September 2002, our Honorary Consul in Vigo made representations on behalf of Peter Devlin and the other divers to the Court in La Coruna about the return of some of the company's diving equipment. The court agreed to release equipment not related to the investigation, but we understand not all the requested equipment has been returned. Our Honorary Consul in Vigo has also made enquiries, most recently on 5 November 2004, to the Spanish Navy Commander in Galicia and the President of the Supreme Court in Galicia. Consular officials will continue to monitor the case and provide all proper consular assistance.

Sudan

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Sudan about the alleged torture of five men belonging to the Missairiyah tribe by Musa Easa, Salah Eldin Shukry, Mounas Bashar and Tigany in July 2003. [185573]

Mr. Mullin: In the absence of the names of the alleged victims, neither we nor Sudanese human rights organisations, with whom we work closely, are able to trace these cases.

However, we make regular representations to the Government of Sudan about the need for them to respect the human rights of all prisoners held in its jails. During my visit to Sudan in September, I pressed Sudanese Justice Minister Yassin on the need to ratify the UN Convention Against Torture as soon as possible. I understand that a draft law is currently before the Council of Ministers.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the effects of the delay in deployment of additional ceasefire monitors by the African Union to Darfur; and if he will make a statement. [194827]

Mr. Mullin: On 20 October the African Union (AU) Peace and Security Council endorsed a plan to expand the current mission from less than 500 troops to more than 3,000 over the next four months. This deployment has been expedited, and in recent days a significant number of Rwandan and Nigerian troops have arrived in Darfur.

As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced in Addis Ababa on 7 October, the UK will provide £12 million to support the rapid deployment of the expanded mission. We are working closely with the AU and other donors to ensure that the infrastructure is in place to ensure these personnel can be fully deployed on arrival in Addis Ababa.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has received that African Union monitors are present in every administrative unit in Darfur. [196081]

Mr. Mullin: African Union (AU) ceasefire monitors are currently deployed across six sectors of operation (out of a total of 20) in all three states of Darfur.

Following expansion of the African Union force in Sudan, over 3,000 troops will be deployed across eight sectors covering the whole of Darfur. This substantial increase in troop numbers will allow the AU to carry out a more proactive monitoring role.

Terrorism

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the agreement signed between residents at Camp Ashraf and the multi-national forces in Iraq rejecting participation in, or support for, terrorism; and whether signatories to it are still proscribed under the Terrorism Act 2000. [197504]

Mr. Rammell: The US authorities, who provide security at the Mojahedin-e Khalq (MeK) base at Camp Ashraf, have informed us that most residents of Ashraf have signed a statement renouncing terrorism and pledging not to take up arms illegally. We have noted this. But it does not change our assessment of the MeK, which takes into account all the evidence, including the MeK's long history of brutal terrorist violence, and the fact that it did not disarm voluntarily.

Under the Terrorism Act 2000, it is organisations, not individuals, which may be proscribed. The MeK continues to be so proscribed. Among other provisions of the Act, a person commits an offence if s/he belongs to, professes to belong to, or invites support for a proscribed organisation.

Thailand

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Prime Minister of Thailand concerning the release on bail of Somchai Wisetsingha, who has admitted shooting Vanessa Arscott of Ashburton, Devon; and if he will make a statement. [198171]

Mr. Mullin: Our ambassador in Thailand raised our concern at the release on bail of Somchai Wisetsingh with the Thai Foreign Minister on 11 November.

Vanessa Arscott and Adam Lloyd were victims of a senseless murder and our sympathy remains with their families and friends. We hope the judicial process will proceed swiftly and that justice will be served. We remain in contact with the Thais on this case.

UK Detainees (United States)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how frequently on average members of the United Kingdom diplomatic staff visited British citizens detained by the United States Administration in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [197360]

Mr. Mullin: We do not keep statistics for the average frequency of visits carried out by our diplomatic staff to British nationals detained by the US authorities. Our prison visiting policy for the US obliges staff to make contact with detained British nationals in the US within 48-hours of notification of an arrest. Detainees are also visited—by both diplomatic and locally engaged staff—usually after sentencing and thereafter if a particular need arises.

British officials have also made nine welfare visits to the British nationals detained by the US authorities at Guantanamo Bay since January 2002.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens are detained by the United States authorities (a) in the United States and (b) in another country; and if he will make a statement. [197361]

Mr. Mullin: The number of British nationals detained by the United States authorities in the US as at 30 June 2004 (the latest date for which figures are available) was 717.

There are also four British nationals detained by the US administration at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Venezuela

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of human rights in Venezuela since the recall referendum in August. [197474]

Mr. Rammell: We constantly monitor the human rights situation in Venezuela and have continued to do so following the presidential referendum in August. Our ambassador in Caracas has regular meetings with his EU counterparts and human rights frequently form a significant part of the discussions. In common with EU partners, we are following carefully the potential human rights implications of the Venezuelan Government's proposals to adopt new legislation on the media, and to increase the number of judges in the Supreme Court. We work with the Venezuelan authorities, NGOs and other donors on human rights issues. More information on our in-country activities can be found on the British embassy Caracas web-site, http://www.britain.org.ve/. These pages contain summaries of recent human rights projects supported by the embassy.

Voting Rights

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Commonwealth countries grant rights to British citizens to vote in elections in their country equivalent to the rights available to Commonwealth citizens in the UK. [196398]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 11 November 2004]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has no information on the voting rights of British nationals in other Commonwealth countries. The voting rights of overseas nationals in Commonwealth countries are a matter for the country concerned.

War on Terrorism

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State r Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make statement on discussions with G8 members on a rategy to fight terrorism. [196775]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 10 November 2004]: ork on counter-terrorism will form an important ement of the UK's forthcoming G8 presidency. This ill include implementing commitments the G8 has ade at past summits, notably the Secure and acilitated Travel Initiative agreed at Sea Island in ne 2004.

Zimbabwe

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for oreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment of the political situation in Zimbabwe. [197963]

Mr. Mullin: The political situation in Zimbabwe ntinues to deteriorate in the run up to the March 2005 rliamentary elections. Opposition, independent media d civil society are subject to political intimidation and olence and are targeted by repressive legislation. We ll together with our international partners continue to ess the Government of Zimbabwe to end these olations and restore democracy and the rule of law.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plan he has to (a) strengthen and (b) extend sanctions in respect of named individuals associated with President Mugabe. [197964]

Mr. Mullin: We and our EU partners increased from 79 to 95 the number of Zimbabweans subject to targeted EU measures in February 2004. We continue to keep these measures and those subject to them under constant review.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) other Ministers have had over the last three months with African leaders in respect of the situation in Zimbabwe. [197965]

Mr. Mullin: We regularly make our concerns about Zimbabwe clear to African leaders. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Zimbabwe with President Mbeki of South Africa at the UN General Assembly in September and during his visit to South Africa in August. The Foreign Secretary discussed Zimbabwe with the Mauritian Foreign Minister, Cutteree, on 9 October. I discussed Zimbabwe with the Zambian Finance Minister, Magande, and with President Mutharika of Malawi on 20 September.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Consultants

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many consultancy firms or companies have been retained by the Department or its predecessors since June 2001; what the projects are for which each has been retained; and what the total is of the fees paid or incurred in each case. [193414]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Maples), 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 852W.

Criminal Offences (Convictions)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many convictions for criminal offences were determined by (a) magistrates and (b) other courts in York in each year since 1997. [192409]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

The information collected centrally via the Home Office Court Proceedings database on the number of offenders convicted of criminal offences by magistrates and other courts in York is contained in the table.

The number of offenders convicted of criminal offences by courts in York 1997–2002[1]

	Magistrates court	Crown court
1997	3,771	480
1998	3,957	466
1999	4,454	459
2000	3,195	510
2001	2,919	497
2002	2,425	509

Statistics for 2003 will be available in November.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196141]

Mr. Lammy: In the last four years, my Department has spent the following amounts on (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of our London offices.

	(a) Decoration	(b) Refurbishment
2000–01	79,610	234,640
2001–02	102,334	601,616
2002–03	165,870	488,880
2003–04	274,482	1,205,358

The response above covers the London offices of the DCA HQ, Court Service, PGO and DCA associated offices. It does not cover specialist Court buildings nor the House of Lords, which will be covered by the response from the Parliamentary Works Committee. The offices referred to are:

Selborne House, Southside (part), 81 Chancery Lane, Conquest House, Millbank Tower (part), 30 Millbank (5th Floor), Steel House, Clive House, Archway Tower, Roger Street, Red Lion Street, Grays Inn Road, Farringdon Road, Maltravers Street and New Cavendish House.

Departmental Staff

Tim Loughton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many people in his Department earn more than a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,485 per year. [195331]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 856W.

Legal Aid

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the total cost of legal aid was in each of the last 10 years. [197648]

Mr. Lammy: Net legal aid expenditure in the United Kingdom (England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland) over the last ten years was:

	£ million
1994–95	1,443
1995–96	1,542
1996–97	1,636
1997–98	1,691
1998–99	1,783
1999–2000	1,706
2000–01	1,823
2001–02	1,886
2002–03	2,089
2003–04	2,282

Note:
These figures are in cash.

Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many press releases have been issued by his Department in each month of 2004; and if he will make a statement. [195458]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office on the 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 857W.

TV Licences (Search Warrants)

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what standard of evidence is required for a magistrates court to issue a search warrant relating to television licensing under section 366 of the Communications Act 2003. [197834]

Mr. Leslie: A search warrant to allow authorised officials to enter a person's home or vehicle is issued by a Justice of the Peace on the basis of written information and where necessary verbal information provided to the court on oath. This written information must disclose reasonable grounds that an offence is being or has been committed under section 363 of the Communications Act 2003. The court also needs to be satisfied that the European Convention on Human Rights has been met.

The issue of a search warrant is a judicial decision made on a case by case basis on information presented to the court under oath. Justices of the Peace have discretion to grant or refuse the application.

Witness Intimidation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many persons were convicted of offences of intimidation or harming of witnesses in each year since 2001; and how many of those received a custodial sentence. [193613]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 26 October 2004]: I have been asked to reply.

Statistics of persons (a) convicted and (b) given a custodial sentence for offences of intimidation or harming of witnesses are contained in the table.

Statistics for 2003 will be published in November.

Number of persons found guilty and sentenced to custody at all courts for offences of Attempting to Pervert the Course of Public Justice England and Wales 2001 to 2002[1]

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Employment Rights

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to bring forward legislation to establish employment rights for migrant workers. [197685]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Migrant workers, working legally in the UK, have access to the same employment rights as equivalent indigenous workers.

Oil rigs

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the oil rigs which fall under UK jurisdiction; which police authority is responsible for each; and if she will make a statement. [194224]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Oil drilling rigs are active on the UK continental shelf (UKCS)—but by their nature are mobile. In addition to the drilling rigs there were 268 production installations in the UKCS as of October 2004. A full list is available and updated regularly on my Department's Oil and Gas website, www.og.dti.gov.uk. A copy has also been placed in the Library of the House. For the purposes of oil and gas activities all of these platforms and installations fall under UK jurisdiction. In the interests of security, the policing arrangements for the UK's offshore installations are not disclosed.

Binge Drinking

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received about the amendment of competition legislation to allow binge drinking to be curbed by the imposition of minimum alcohol prices. [197559]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In the context of inter-departmental discussions about tackling problems associated with excessive alcohol consumption, the Home Office has consulted the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) at both official and Ministerial level about competition law issues, including whether agreements on minimum prices for alcoholic drinks could be excluded from prohibition under Chapter One of the Competition Act 1998. DTI has received no separate representations on this issue.

ECGD (Anti-corruption)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which companies (a) she, (b) her Ministers, (c) her Department's staff and (d) Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) staff have met since January to discuss the anti-corruption procedures brought into force by the ECGD on 1 May; and on how many occasions meetings have been held in each case. [195937]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 8 November 2004]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 27 October 2004, Official Report, column 1241W. During the period in question representatives of BAES and Rolls-Royce were present at six such meetings; Airbus were present at five.

EU Presidency (Greece)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU (a) the Committee for the implementation of projects, actions and measures for the interoperability of trans-European networks for the interchange of data between administration and (b) the Standing Committee for veterinary medicinal products met; when and where each meeting took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [194345]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

The first committee referred to appears to relate to the European Commission's Interchange of Data between Administrations (IDA) programme, to which the Department has no direct input. This programme funds projects allowing Member State Governments to exchange data electronically in specified policy areas as required by European legislation and develops infrastructure to allow this. The Telematics between Administrations Committee (TAG) is the management committee for IDA. Advice for the TAG is prepared by the Working Group for Horizontal Actions and Measures, which meets on average six times each year and is not a decision-making body. The UK is represented by officials from the e-Government Unit, formerly the Office of the e-Envoy. As IDA is a Commission programme, the rotating Council Presidency bears no relevance to IDA work. Minutes are taken by the Commission's IDA unit within DG Enterprise. However, my Department has long been a key beneficiary of IDA projects and user of IDA services as EU member states are required to share information with each other relating to agricultural issues such as animal medicines and diseases.

The Standing Committee on Veterinary Medicinal Products for the Adaptation to Technical Progress on the Removal of Technical Barriers to Trade in the Veterinary Medicinal Products Sector is a regulatory committee and does not, therefore, make recommendations. It met three times during the Greek Presidency. Meetings were held in Brussels on 10 February 2003, 3 April 2003 and 9 April 2003 and were attended by officials from the Veterinary Medicines Directorate.

At the meeting on 10 February a proposed increase to the fees charged by the European Medicines Evaluation Agency for work related to European marketing authorisations was considered and approved. A Commission proposal to add entries to Annex III of Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2377/90, establishing maximum residue limits (MRLs) for three hormonal substances was considered. The UK argued that setting MRLs was not an appropriate way of controlling illicit use of the hormones but, in the circumstances, could accept the proposed entries for the synthetic hormones flugestone acetate and norgestomet as a one-off decision. However, the UK argued that it could not accept the proposed entry for progesterone as the proposal was not based on sound science and the proposed limit was below the level that could occur naturally. The Commission withdrew the proposal for progesterone. The proposals for flugestone acetate and norgestomet were approved and entries were subsequently added to Annex III to the Regulation.

The meeting of 3 April considered two proposed Commission Regulations intended to revoke and replace two Regulations setting out procedures for variations to marketing authorisations for veterinary medicinal products issued under the European centralised and decentralised authorisation procedures respectively. The UK argued for several textual amendments to the proposed Regulations, most of which were accepted. The Regulations, as modified, were approved by the Committee and were published in the Official Journal on 27 June 2003 as Commission Regulation (EC) No. 1084/2003 and No. 1085/2003. They took effect on 1 October 2003.

The meeting of 9 April considered a Commission proposal that member states should suspend all national marketing authorisations for veterinary medicinal products in the EU containing benzathine penicillin. This issue was triggered following suspension action by the UK because of safety concerns about residues of the substance at injection sites in food-producing animals. The UK supported the Commission proposal, which was approved by the Committee.

European Union (Economic Effect)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs in (a) Yorkshire and the Humber and (b) York she estimates are dependent on exports to or investment from other EU states. [192429]

Mr. Alexander: Information is not held in the form requested. However, international trade in goods accounts for 20 per cent. of the Yorkshire and Humber region's GDP, representing £9.1 billion per annum.

There are approximately 164,000 businesses in the Yorkshire and Humber region, of which 8,000–10,000 are estimated to export goods and services.

Gas

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the wholesale price of gas was in each month during the last two years. [196026]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The majority of gas is traded under individual commercially confidential contracts. However, National Grid Transco (NGT) publishes System Average Price data, which is the price set by all NGT and shipper trades on the wholesale gas on-the-day commodity market (OCM) on a given day. Monthly averages for the last two years are recorded in the table. Individual contracts may reflect factors other than this spot price.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what procedures are used to assess the risk of terrorist attack to the (a) Bacton to Zeebrugge and (b) St Fergus to Frigg gas interconnectors. [195067]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The assessment of the threat posed by terrorists to the UK is kept under constant review by her Majesty's Government. The review applies to the whole of the critical national infrastructure. The security of gas interconnectors and other pipelines is a key part of that work. It would not be appropriate for me to comment in further detail.

Internet Access

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of changes in UK productivity as a result of increased (a) dial-up and (b) broadband internet access. [197600]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The economic impact of increased internet access is difficult to separate from the impact of adoption of the full range of information and communication technologies (ICT). Indeed, there is a consensus both that the use of ICT has been and will continue to be a major contributor to productivity growth, and that its full value is realised by using a mix of the technologies to transform the way that organisations perform their business.

An assessment of the increase in business productivity associated with increased use of a range of ICTs was published in DTI Economics Paper No. 8: "Raising UK productivity—developing the evidence base for policy". This found that in 1995–2000 the growth in labour productivity in ICT-using industries was 3.72 per cent. p.a. compared with 0.20 per cent. p.a. for non-ICT industries. This study also showed that, based on results of DTI s "International Benchmarking Study: Business in the Information Age" and controlling for other variables, the average sales per employee was significantly and positively related to the intensity of use of connectivity technologies (including internet access).

The most recent International Benchmarking Study (2004) found that businesses that have upgraded their internet connection over the last two years reported a range of benefits. These included time savings through faster connection (79 per cent.), improved real time communication (17 per cent.), ability to use more applications (9 per cent.) and increased reliability (9 per cent.).

These results are consistent with a range of research and surveys conducted by other organisations over the past few years. For example, the recent survey by the Institute of Directors ("Broadband: its impact on British Business") found that 84.3 per cent. of respondents who used broadband saw a quantifiable increase in productivity and about two thirds felt able to predict an increase in profit.

Job Creation (Lancashire)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs have been created by the (a) Heysham Business Park, (b) Mellishaw North and (c) Luneside West developments; how many jobs have been created by each development to be taken up by residents of communities in need; and what the estimated cost per job created by each development is. [192936]

Jacqui Smith: Heysham Business Park, Mellishaw North and Luneside West are sites with development potential located within the Lancaster and Morecambe economic development zone. Lancaster city council has encouraged the private sector site owners of each site to come forward with the appropriate development proposals that will lead to job creation. To date no suitable proposals have emerged and consequently there has been no recent job creation on these sites.

The NWDA have maintained a regular dialogue with the site owners regarding the development of the sites. These discussions will continue, but much will hinge on the support of the private sector owners.

Until such time as a development proposal crystallizes and the public sector contribution (if any) is identified and compared to the anticipated job creation for that proposal it is not possible to estimate costs per job.

All sites identified are privately owned. With regards to Heysham Business Park, the NWDA, contacted the site owners about selling the site but this was not feasible. The owners of Luneside West are currently seeking to develop a planning application for housing which is not support by the NWDA. The owners of Mellingshaw North have expressed a wish to develop the site for alternate uses.

The NWDA will continue to discuss the development of these sites with the owners. However the final decision will firmly lie with private sector owners.

Loan Debts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment the Government has made of the judgment at Liverpool county court in the case of Meadows v. London North Securities; and if she will make a statement. [195771]

Mr. Sutcliffe: As the hon. Member is aware I am unable to intervene in individual cases such as this, which must be resolved by agreement between the parties or by recourse to the courts.

We have been paying close attention to this case and I have written to John Vickers, Chair of the Office of Fair Trading, alerting him to the complaints made to me about this lender by a number of hon. Members.

In order to ensure that in the future consumers are not faced with this situation we will be introducing the Consumer Credit Bill, once Parliamentary time permits. The Bill would widen consumer protections by replacing the current extortionate credit test with one of unfairness and introducing a compulsory Alternative Dispute Resolution scheme.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department has taken since 1997 to restrict unscrupulous lending. [195773]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Under Section 21 of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, a license is required to conduct consumer credit business or consumer hire business. To get a licence, applicants must satisfy the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) that they are fit persons to carry on licensed activities. If a licensee does not continue to act in a fit manner, OFT can revoke the licence.

A 2001 Labour manifesto commitment to 'toughen the laws on rogue traders, unfair terms in contracts, and loan sharks', prompted the Department of Trade and Industry to launch a full scale review of the Consumer Credit Act.

Following an extensive period of consultation with stakeholders—business, consumer groups and enforcement agencies, the Government produced a White Paper outlining proposals for reform.

I laid four Statutory Instruments in June 2003, aimed at increasing transparency in the credit sector, enabling empowered consumers to make informed lending decisions.

Manufacturing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much (a) was spent on business support by her Department in the most recent year for which figures are available, (b) spent on manufacturing support by her Department in the most recent year for which figures are available and (c) invested by the Government in manufacturing since 1997. [192570]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 October 2004]: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The DTI spent approximately £0.5 billion on business support programmes in the year ending April 2004.

(b) In addition to amount spent on business support, detailed above, the Department supports business through a number of different mechanisms such as regional selective assistance and initiatives on, for example, innovation, technology and best practice, for example SR 2004 allocated £320 million to the Technology Strategy. Whilst we will have aggregate data for each, collating how much was spent on manufacturing in total could be provided only at a disproportionate cost not least because of the complexity of the SIC codes.

(c) RSA grants worth £2.2 billion were offered in the period April 1997 to April 2004, approximately 80 per cent. to manufacturing companies, securing £19.2 billion investment and safeguarding/creating 378,000 jobs. There are no figures available for the Government as a whole.

Palantype Reporting Machines

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to promote the continued manufacture of Palantype speech to text reporting machines; and if he will make a statement. [191146]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The future of UK manufacturing depends on raising investment and applying science and innovation, best practice and skills to create even better products. In 2002 DTI published the Government's Manufacturing Strategy. In July this year we published "Competing in the Global Economy: The Manufacturing Strategy Two Years On"—an update on progress made against the key pillars that support manufacturing. We have provided strong macroeconomic stability; supported investment through changes to corporation tax, capital gains tax, Regional Selective Assistance, Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme and Regional Venture Capital Funds; launched the Manufacturing Advisory Service to ensure that manufacturers in every region have local access to practical advice from manufacturing experts; strengthened the UK's world class science base with the largest sustained increase in the Science Budget for over a decade, and enhanced knowledge transfer, so that manufacturers can capitalise upon the innovations it produces; implemented an innovation agenda extending the R&D tax credit to all companies, overwhelmingly benefiting manufacturers; put in place the Sector Skills Councils to lead the drive to significantly improved skills in industry, and strengthened the Modern Apprenticeship network; extended the Industry Forum best practice programme to new sectors—printing, process industries, general engineering, metals and food processing—increasing the reach of lean-manufacturing and world-class practices and set up Innovation and Growth Teams across key industries (including the automotive, aerospace, biosciences, and electronics sectors) to examine the factors affecting specific sectors, identify the challenges, and take action to respond to these challenges.

It is clearly Government policy to support manufacturing. Individual companies, however, must make decisions based on business criteria. It is not for the Government to determine that a particular product must be made here.

Post Office

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much it cost to set up the Post Office Card Account scheme. [192574]

Mr. Sutcliffe: These are commercial matters for Post Office Ltd.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices were recommended for closure under the reinvention programme in the South West region; how many were opposed by Postwatch; and for how many the recommendation for closure was dropped. [197511]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Implementation of the urban post office network reinvention programme is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to respond direct to the hon. Member.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which Crown Post Offices in Essex have been selected for possible closure. [197634]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government has no such list. Decisions on individual Post Office closures and conversions are operational and commercial matters for Post Office Ltd.

Post Office Ltd has clarified in a letter of 3 November to all Members of Parliament that the company is working with the trade unions to develop proposals that will help address the significant losses generated by the network of directly d directly managed branches are expected to be closed in 2005/06 throughout the UK. The company will continue to seek to transfer operation of Directly Managed post offices to franchise partners where suitable opportunities arise, whilst ensuring that products and services for customers remain unchanged.

Royal Mail

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate she has made of the cost to businesses of adapting or purchasing new franking machines to cope with the proposals of the Royal Mail to move to size-based pricing; [197520]

(2) what plans she has to inform consumers of the likely impact of the move to size-based pricing proposed by the Royal Mail; [197521]

(3) what estimate she has made of the cost to Royal Mail business customers of adapting to size-based pricing; and if she will make a statement; [197523]

(4) if she will assess the compliance of the Royal Mail's proposals for size-based pricing with paragraph 13, condition 19 of the Royal Mail's licence, with particular reference to the requirement that any alteration in pricing avoids unreasonable changes for users of the service; and if she will make a statement; [197525]

(5) what discussions she has had with Royal Mail concerning its proposals for size-based pricing; and if she will make a statement; [197526]

(6) what representations she has received concerning the Royal Mail's proposal to move to size-based pricing; and if she will make a statement. [197528]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Royal Mail's application to introduce size-based pricing is currently being considered by the postal regulator, Postcomm. The progress made in considering the application and the assessment of the effect of size-based pricing are matters for Royal Mail and Postcomm.

Postcomm is considering the large number of responses they received to their consultation on Royal Mail's proposals. In view of the complexity of the issues involved and the significant implications for many Royal Mail customers, Postcomm and Royal Mail have agreed that more time is required to assess the size-based pricing proposal. Accordingly, the earliest implementation date, if the application is allowed to proceed, will be April 2006.

Postcomm will assess Royal Mail's proposals against the criteria in Paragraph 13 of Condition 19 of its licence, and take account of its regulatory duties under the Postal Services Act 2000, and Royal Mail's other licence requirements.

Wind Farms

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what means will be used to connect wind farms constructed in North Yorkshire to the National Grid. [196747]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Applications to connect wind farm projects to the grid are treated in exactly the same way as any other form of electricity generation. Wind farm developers make applications to connect to either their local distribution network operator or to the transmission network operator and offers are made dependent on sufficient capacity being available on the grid.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Voluntary Sector (Hartlepool)

11. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much Government funding has been provided to the voluntary sector in Hartlepool since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [197739]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on Government funding of individual organisations within a local authority is not held centrally.

The Home Office's report, on Central Government Funding to Voluntary and Community Organisations, 1982–83 to 2001–02, which is published on Wednesday 17 November, shows that from the most recent figures available, the North East Region received £111,593,938 in funding. This is equivalent to £44.30 per person.

Drug Dealing (Bassetlaw)

12. John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests for drug dealing offences were made in Bassetlaw in the last three years for which figures are available. [197740]

Caroline Flint: Details of the number of arrests for drug dealing in Bassetlaw are not available.

International Students (Visas)

13 Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of increased visa extension charges on the number of applications by international students to study in the UK. [197741]

Mr. Browne: The Home Office has been conducting a review of charges for non-asylum immigration applications. We are currently consulting on new proposals to extend the principles of full cost recovery charging. The consultation document is available on the Home Office website and the deadline for responses is Wednesday 8 December 2004.

In addition, I have asked a joint project team—comprising representatives from the Department for Education and Skills, the Home Office and the British Council—to produce an impact assessment. Work is currently underway to improve the evidence base and our understanding of the factors which influence international students' decisions to study in the UK.

The outcome of the consultation and this work will be made available in the new year.

Knife Offences

14. Syd Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to undertake a review of the offence of carrying a knife without due cause. [197742]

Caroline Flint: The Crime Reduction Delivery Board has been tasked with undertaking a speedy review of action needed to tackle crime committed with knives. Legislative restrictions on knives and other pointed instruments forms part of that work. This will include the effectiveness of Section 139 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 which creates an offence of possessing an article with blade or point in public without good reason or lawful authority, with the exception of a folding pocket-knife with a blade not exceeding three inches.

Crime Reduction

15. Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what impact Local Police Teams are having on reducing crime. [197744]

Ms Blears: We are committed to implement a neighbourhood policing approach in all forces by 2008. In those areas where neighbourhood policing is already in place, such as Merseyside, Surrey and parts of London, the presence of local teams is having a positive impact on reported crime levels.

Immigration

16. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on co-ordination of activity between the immigration and nationality directorate and local police forces on effective enforcement of immigration law. [197745]

Mr. Browne: The relationship is governed by a joint protocol between the Immigration Service and the Association of Chief Police Officers. Currently there are 111 police officers across the country, funded by the Immigration Service, dedicated to supporting immigration enforcement operations.

While the Immigration Service are responsible for operational deployment, and the identification and removal of immigration offenders, the police retain primacy for maintaining and increasing the trust and confidence of local communities, including the right to veto operations if necessary.

Operational detail is discussed and agreed at a local level to reflect the particular requirements of individual police forces and the needs of local communities.

Road Accidents

17. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward proposals to create an offence of failing to identify the driver of a vehicle involved in a road traffic accident. [197746]

Caroline Flint: The Government have no plans to introduce an offence of failing to identify the driver of a vehicle in a road traffic accident.

The key to unlocking cases where persons refuse to identify who was driving is through effective evidence gathering at the scene.

Charging two or more people could lead to convicting an innocent person as well as a guilty one.

Prisoners (Suicide)

18. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have committed suicide in the past 12 months; and how many were in safe cells. [197747]

Paul Goggins: In the 12 month period, 1 November 2003 to 31 October 2004, there were 107 apparently self-inflicted deaths of prisoners in English and Welsh prisons. Of these, one occurred in a safe cell.

Police Malpractice

19. Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Independent Police Complaint Commission's ability to (a) carry out and (b) oversee independent inquiries into complaints of police malpractice. [197748]

Ms Blears: I am very pleased with the start made by the Independent Police Complaint Commission which has launched 17 independent investigations since it became operational on 1 April 2004. I have every confidence in them and I am satisfied that their funding for the first year, which has enabled them to recruit 72 independent investigative staff, is at an appropriate level.

Children (Exploitation)

20. Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to combat the trafficking and sexual exploitation of children within the UK; and if he will make a statement. [197749]

Paul Goggins: The Sexual Offences Act 2003, which came into force on 1 May, includes offences which criminalise trafficking into, within and out of the country for the purpose of sexual exploitation. The offences carry a maximum penalty of 14 years' imprisonment. The Act also introduces comprehensive offences covering the sexual exploitation of children.

These offences extend to England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Prisoners (Skills Awards)

21. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work and basic skills awards have been made to prisoners in the last 12 months. [197750]

Paul Goggins: The number of skills awards made to prisoners for the period 1 October 2003 to 30 September 2004 were:

53,152 for basic skills

140,907 for work skills

Identity Parades

22. Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the VIPER system for identity parades on police efficiency. [197752]

Ms Blears: We have continuously monitored the impact of video identification since its inception.

I am pleased to report that it has been an outstanding success and video identification systems now exist in all police forces in England and Wales.

The average time to conduct a parade has fallen from four and a half weeks to a matter of hours. The number of video identification parades is continuing to increase and is already three times the 2001–02 figure for live parades. In 2001–02, figure for live parades.

An average live parade cost £540 compared with £100 for a VIPER parade. This equate to a saving of £18.48 million in 2004–05.

Terrorism

23. Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals are detained on his order under anti-terrorist legislation. [197753]

Mr. Blunkett: Using Part IV of the Anti Terrorism Crime and Security Act 17 non British nationals have been certified as being a terrorist risk.

One of those is now being held under other powers; two have left the country; one has been judged, while having terrorist links, not to have associated with Al Qaeda so their appeal was upheld; one is being held under strict bail conditions; one has been released as no longer posing a serious threat; thus 12 remain in detention.

These powers have been used sparingly and remain necessary and proportionate to the threat that we face.

Parliament has always been kept informed by written ministerial statement where a certification has been made or revoked.

Adoption and Children Act

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to set a Government commencement date for those parts of the Adoption and Children Act 2002 which have not yet been brought into commencement, with special reference to section 112. [187980]

Paul Goggins: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Children, Young People and Families indicated in a written answer on 23 February 2004 that we planned to finalise the regulations, court rules and guidance required to implement the core of the Adoption and Children Act 2002 by the end of 2004 and expected the legislation to come fully into force in September 2005 after a period of preparation and training. Section 112 would be brought into force at the same time as the rest of the Act's main provisions.

During 2004 we have consulted extensively on a range of draft regulations, court rules and guidance. We are reviewing the consultation drafts and the implementation timetable in the light of the comments received. The proposed court rules will shortly be put before the new Family Procedure Rule Committee for consideration. We will announce the specific commencement date later this year when we have finalised our detailed plans for preparation and training on the Act.

Ammonium Nitrate

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many thefts of ammonium nitrate were recorded (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) from farms in (i) 2003, (ii) 2002 and (iii) 2001. [172744]

Mr. Blunkett: In England and Wales, numbers of thefts of ammonium nitrate are not collected separately from other thefts.

Information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 27 April 2004, Official Report, column 857W

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many tonnes of ammonium nitrate fertiliser were recorded by the police as having been stolen from farms in (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) 2003. [172746]

Mr. Blunkett: In England and Wales, numbers of thefts of ammonium nitrate are not collected separately from other thefts.

Information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 27 April 2004, Official Report, column 857W

Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are in place to assess the mental health condition of people detained within the Prison Service under provisions of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. [193661]

Paul Goggins: Those detained under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act are currently held either at Belmarsh or Woodhill prisons.

All new arrivals receive a mental health assessment. Should this assessment give rise to any cause for concern, the prisoner is referred to mental health services. At any time, a prisoner may be referred to the prison mental health services. Any member of staff or the prisoner himself can make a referral.

ASBOs

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the need for a full rehearing at circuit court level when an antisocial behaviour order is made in the magistrates court; and if he will make a statement. [197558]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply,

Under section 79(3) of the Supreme Court Act 1981 appeals against antisocial behaviour orders made in the magistrates court are by way of re-hearing in the Crown court. We have received no representations on this matter. My Department is however considering the implications of the Brent judgment.

Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted under section 35 of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act 2004. [192790]

Mr. Browne: To date there have been no prosecutions under section 35 of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act 2004, which came into force on 22 September 2004. This is because the offence is not committed until a person has first been required to take specific action under section 35, and then has failed to comply with that request without reasonable excuse. As a result, the time period is too short for any cases to have reached the prosecution stage.

Information on Prosecutions is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", copies of which are available from the Library of the House and on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate web site at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds.html.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of those who have been granted asylum in England and Wales received criminal convictions in 2003; and what proportion of the population of England and Wales received criminal convictions in 2003. [191271]

Mr. Browne: No data are available on the proportion of those granted asylum who have received a criminal conviction in 2003. However, under section 72 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 individuals who have committed a 'particularly serious crime' and pose 'a danger to the community' will lose their ability to rely on the Refugee Convention to remain in this country.

It is estimated that a maximum of 1 per cent. of the population of England and Wales (over the age of 10) received a criminal conviction in 2003 for a Standard List offence.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department how many asylum seekers are living in each borough in the greater London area. [191956]

Mr. Browne: Figures for asylum seekers (including dependants) supported in National Asylum Support Service (NASS) accommodation and those in receipt of subsistence only support from NASS in each local authority area in greater London as at the end of June 2004 are presented in the following tables. Corresponding figures for those not in receipt of NASS support are not available.

Numbers of asylum seekers placed in NASS accommodation and numbers who are in receipt of subsistence only support from NASS, are published on a quarterly and annual basis. The next publication covering the third quarter of 2004 (July to September) will be available on 16 November on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate web site at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department from which European countries asylum seekers entering the UK during the last 12 months originated. [193160]

Mr. Browne: Information on the date of entry into the UK, travel route, or the country of origin of asylum seekers is not available. Some applicants may travel clandestinely. The information available relates to numbers of applications made during the last 12 months and the nationalities of these applicants, and is given in the table.

[2] Provisional figures.

[3] Serbia and Montenegro (SAM) replaced Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) from 5 February 2003. SAM comprises the Republic of Serbia, the Republic of Montenegro, and the Province of Kosovo (administered by the UN on an interim basis since 1999).

Information on asylum applications by nationality is published in quarterly web pages and in the annual statistical bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom", copies of which are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) starting salary for and (b) period of training given to Home Office initial decision makers in asylum applications are. [193262]

Mr. Browne: Initial decision makers of asylum applications in Croydon generally receive a starting salary of £18,011 plus £1,470 London Location Allowance (£19,481).

Initial training for asylum caseworkers consists of an 11 day training course which covers all aspects of asylum casework and how to deal with human rights allegations raised by asylum seekers. Immediately following this training, caseworkers move directly to a Mentoring Unit where they remain for at least another 11 days to develop their casework skills through the consideration of 'dummy' and subsequently 'live' cases.

After formal training and mentoring, caseworkers will continue to receive support (eg from more experienced colleagues and senior officers).

Badgers

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records he has of the number of incidents of mistreatment of badgers in England and Wales for each of the last 10 years. [193729]

Ms Blears: No records are collected centrally on the number of incidents of mistreatment of badgers.

Belmarsh Prison

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place to monitor the mental health of prisoners held at Belmarsh Prison under anti-terrorism legislation; and on what dates he has received reports in the past two years. [193178]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 27 October 2004]: All prisoners arriving at Belmarsh prison, for whatever reason, receive a mental health assessment. Should this assessment give rise to any cause for concern, the prisoner is referred to mental health services. At any time while at Belmarsh, a prisoner may be referred to mental health services. Any member of staff or the prisoner himself can make a referral.

Mental health services were reviewed as part of the Commission for Health Improvement programme in February 2003.

The deputy director general recently commissioned the Department of Health to review the health care systems (including mental health) available to the detainees at Belmarsh prison. A team of independent health professionals undertook the review and concluded that the health care services available to the detainees were satisfactory and equitable to those available to other prisoners.

Mental health services are provided at Belmarsh by Oxleas NHS trust. These services have been awarded Beacon status as recognition of excellence.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will accede to the requests of prisoners being held at Belmarsh under anti-terrorism legislation for closer contact with their families. [193179]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 27 October 2004]: Detainees held under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001, in common with other persons held at Belmarsh prison, are able to receive regular visits from their families and friends, in addition to being able to contact them by telephone and through correspondence. While any request received for additional contact will always be considered, this has to be in the context of the operational requirements of the prison and prison rules. All those detained under part 4 of the ATCSA 2001 are free to leave the UK at any time.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about the mental health of prisoners at Belmarsh Prison under anti-terrorism legislation; and if he will meet the medical advisers appointed by their solicitor. [193180]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 27 October 2004]: None. All prisoners at Belmarsh, including those detained under anti-terrorism legislation, have access to a full range of mental health facilities. Any concerns raised about the mental health of a particular person at Belmarsh should be directed to the health care staff, who will then be able to consider the matter and take appropriate action as necessary.

Bogus Colleges

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reports of bogus colleges have been made to him in the last 24 months; and how many such colleges have been closed. [193250]

Mr. Browne: Details of the number of bogus colleges reported, or the number closed, are not currently collated centrally. The DfES Register of Educational Establishments will be launched in January 2005. Immigration and Nationality Directorate officials have visited over 1,150 establishments of concern so far this year, of which about a quarter have been found to be bogus. All applications for leave to enter or remain as a student are checked against this information, and applications relating to colleges known to be bogus are refused.

Category A Prisoners

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many category (a) A, (b) B and (c) C prisoners there were in England (i) in 1990, (ii) in 1995, (iii) in 2000 and (iv) at the latest date for which figures are available. [196462]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of Category A, B and C prisoners, as recorded on the central prison IT system, is provided in the table. Information is not available for 1990 or 1995.

Population of category A, B and C prisoners at prison establishments in England

	Category A[1]	Category B	Category C
30 June 2000	925	7,700	26,100
30 September 2004	903	8,000	32,000

[1] Figures for category A prisoners have been supplied by NOMS colleagues, and comprise all prisoners with a category A classification, including those on remand or awaiting extradition. The 2004 figure is for 1 October

Child Pornography

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions for the (a) production and (b) distribution of child pornography there have been during the last 12 months. [195378]

Paul Goggins: Prosecutions for producing or distributing pornography are not directly identifiable on the Home Office Court Proceedings database. Prosecutions for distribution, possessing with a view to distribution, taking or making indecent photographs or pseudo-photographs of children under the Protection of Children Act 1978 are recorded together in the Court Statistics. Simple possession is an offence under the Criminal Justice Act 1988, and possessing obscene material for gain is an offence under the Obscene Publications Act 1959.

The available information relating to England and Wales in 2002 is shown in the table. Statistics for 2003 will be available later in November.

The number of defendants prosecuted at the magistrates court and convicted at all courts for offences relating to child pornography England and Wales 2002[1]

Offence	Statute	Total prosecuted	Total convicted

Children (Court Appearances)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what special measures are available to support children who give evidence in court. [196636]

Paul Goggins: Witnesses aged under 17 at the time of hearing ("child witnesses") are eligible for special measures assistance to give their best evidence under the provisions of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999.

A primary rule in the Act provides that child witnesses in certain categories of offence, including violence and sexual offences, ("child witnesses in need of special protection") are entitled to have a video recording admitted as their evidence in chief and otherwise to give their evidence via a live link unless the court decides that this would be against the interests of justice. For child witnesses in cases not involving one of these types of offence there is a presumption that these measures will be provided unless the court is satisfied that they would not maximise the quality of their evidence.

The introduction of special measures is being phased to enable evaluation of how they are working and to provide time for agencies to prepare for full implementation. The range of special measures which are currently available to child witnesses in criminal proceedings across England and Wales is summarised as follows:

Screens—to ensure that the witness does not see the defendant—available to child witnesses in the Crown Court and magistrates' courts.

Live link—allowing a witness to give evidence from outside the courtroom—available to child witnesses in the Crown Court and to child witnesses in need of special protection in magistrates' courts.

Evidence in private—clearing the court of most people (legal representatives and certain others must be allowed to stay)—available to child witnesses in the Crown Court and magistrates' courts

Removal of wigs and gowns—by judges, advocates etc—available to child witnesses in the Crown Court (not applicable to magistrates' courts).

Video recorded evidence in chief—allowing an interview with the witness, which has been video recorded before the trial, to be shown as the witness's evidence in chief—available to child witnesses in the Crown Court and child witnesses in need of special protection in magistrates' courts.

Intermediaries—allowing an approved intermediary to help a witness communicate with the police, legal representatives and the court—available to child witnesses in Crown Court and magistrates' courts in pilot areas, currently Merseyside, Thames Valley and West Midlands.

Aids to communication—allowing a witness to use communication aids such as a symbol book or alphabet boards—available to child witnesses in the Crown Court and magistrates' courts.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of children were offered the choice of giving evidence outside court in each year since 1997; and how many and what percentage accepted this offer. [196637]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

A Home Office Research study "Are special measures working? " published in June 2004 found that the offer of live link away from the courtroom for children had almost doubled since implementation of the section from 43 per cent. to 83 per cent. in 2004. It would therefore only be in exceptional circumstances or where the statutory criteria was not met that a child would give their evidence in a courtroom.

In July 2004, Baroness Scotland announced a review of the way in which children's evidence is taken and presented in criminal courts with the aim of enabling measures to be more tailored to the individual witnesses' needs. A multi agency steering group led by the Home Office is taking this forward.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many intermediaries whose job is to rephrase the court's questions to child-friendly language are employed within the criminal justice system. [196638]

Paul Goggins: The function of an intermediary in criminal proceedings is defined by section 29 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999.

The use of intermediaries is currently being piloted to identify best practice in advance of full implementation. An Intermediary Register of trained experts has been established for the pilot. The Register currently contains details of 25 individuals whose area of expertise is mainly or wholly with children. An exercise to increase the number of registered intermediaries will be completed shortly.

Corporate Manslaughter Bill

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the draft Bill on corporate manslaughter will extend to Scotland. [196393]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The Government are currently developing proposals for reforming the law on corporate manslaughter and intend to publish a draft Bill this autumn. We are in close contact with counterparts in Scotland about this, where criminal law is a devolved matter.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter to him dated 13 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Alphonse Ngolo. [192040]

Mr. Blunkett: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 13 October 2004.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the letter to him dated 14 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. Kevin Andre Dunn. [193940]

Mr. Blunkett: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 21 October 2004.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he will reply to the letter to him dated 14 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Hanif Attiya; [197213]

(2) when he will reply to the letter to him dated 22 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. R. Faiz. [197214]

Mr. Blunkett: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 4 November, 2004.

Countryside Alliance (Demonstration)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints were received by the Independent Police Complaints Commission following the Countryside Alliance demonstration in Parliament Square on 15 September; and how many of these complaints were related to police violence. [196010]

Ms Blears: The Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) informs me that, as of 3 November, there were 402 complaints or issues of concern raised by individuals. The investigation has not concluded and at this stage it is not possible to give a specific breakdown regarding the total number that relate to police violence. However, 45 of the complaints are from individuals alleging assault upon them personally. The IPCC will be releasing further figures as they become available.

Crime/Sentencing Statistics

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of drug treatment and testing orders in reducing re-offending in York. [191245]

Paul Goggins: There has been no independently evaluated assessment of the effectiveness of drug treatment and testing orders (DTTOs) in reducing re-offending in either York or North Yorkshire since the order was made available to courts in England and Wales in October 2000.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were bailed before trial in each year since 1995, broken down by (a) gender, (b) age and (c) type of offence. [190888]

Paul Goggins: The following table gives information relating to the number of people who were bailed before trial by (a) magistrates' courts and (b) the Crown court in England and Wales. The figures include estimates for missing data.

Due to the poor quality of the data we receive we are not able to provide figures for the number of people bailed before trial broken down by gender or age.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average sentence length for people found guilty in each key offence area, as identified by Crime in England and Wales 2003–04, was in each year since 1997. [190939]

Paul Goggins: Information relating to the average custodial sentence length imposed on persons sentenced for the key offences is published as part of 'Crime in England and Wales, 2003–04'. A copy is held in the Library.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what links the Criminal Cases Review Commission has with other agencies; and how it uses these links to commission work which provides an understanding of the issues involved in historical sex abuse cases. [191291]

Paul Goggins: The Criminal Cases Review Commission has many links with other agencies in the criminal justice system because of the need to access information from public bodies under s17 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1995. It has not used any of these links within the criminal justice system to commission work on the issues involved in historical sex abuse cases. The Commission's working group on Child Sexual Abuse Cases did, however, request a report from a leading psychologist to identify research, good practice and guidance on the application of scientific methodology to the investigation of contemporary and historical allegations of abuse. This provided a helpful wider overview of the topic.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions the Criminal Cases Review Commission has commissioned research on historical sex abuse cases from other agencies. [191292]

Paul Goggins: The Commission has not commissioned any research on historical sex abuse cases from other agencies.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to bring into force section 174 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 requiring judges to give reasons for, and explains the effect of, sentences in ordinary language; and if he will make a statement. [193932]

Paul Goggins: Subsection (4) of section 174, which provides an order making power for the Secretary of State to disapply the need to give reasons in some cases, such as where a defendant is absent, was commenced on 1 April 2004. We expect to bring the remainder of the section into force in the first half of 2005.

Custody Plus/Minus

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will manage the introduction of Custody Plus and Minus under the reorganisation of the Prison and probation services. [180971]

Paul Goggins: Implementation of the Custody Plus Order, the Suspended Sentence Order (Custody Minus) and the other sentencing provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 is being managed within the Home Office by the Sentence Implementation Programme. Mr. Stephen Murphy, the director general of the National Probation Service, is the senior responsible officer for the programme, reporting to Mr. Martin Narey, the chief executive of the National Offender Management Service.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when (a) Custody Plus and (b) Custody Minus will be implemented; and how many additional (i) probation and (ii) prison staff will be recruited to administer it. [168465]

Paul Goggins: The Suspended Sentence Order (Custody Minus) will be implemented next year. We currently plan to implement the Custody Plus Order in 2006. The Prison Service does not require additional staff to implement these sentences.

Between 2001 and 2004 the number of probation staff increased by 21.2 per cent. Further increases will provide a total of 22,400 staff by 2005–06. This will be sufficient to deliver the Suspended Sentence Order and the other provisions in the 2003 Criminal Justice Act that will be implemented at the same time.

Cyber Crime

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cyber criminals have been prosecuted in the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [198061]

Paul Goggins: The available information, taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database, relates to England and Wales for the years 1998 to 2002 and is shown in the table. It covers defendants proceeded against under the Computer Misuse Act 1990.

It is not possible, from the data held centrally, to identify any other offences that may be connected with internet or computer crime, because the circumstances of any such offences are not collected.

Statistics on court proceedings for 2003 will be published on the 18 November.

Dalit People

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department recognises British South Asians who have their roots in the Dalit caste as an ethnic minority in their own right. [192594]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Race Relations Act 1976 prohibits discrimination on the grounds of colour, race, nationality national or ethnic origins in specified fields. It is for the courts, not the Government, to decide whether any particular group meets these criteria. We are not aware of any case law which would establish whether or not Dalits are an ethnic group within the meaning of the Race Relations Act.

Dangerous Offenders

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that hon. Members receive notification of a release of a dangerous offender before the release takes place. [192509]

Paul Goggins: Probation areas are required to notify the Public Protection and Courts Unit (PPCU) when dangerous offenders Critical Public Protection Cases (CPPC) are released into the community. When a release address of a CPPC is confirmed, the PPCU identify whether the local MP has indicated that they wish to be advised in confidence about the release of such a dangerous offender into their constituency. If so, I then write to the MP advising about the release with details of statutory supervision and licence conditions.

The purpose of this arrangement is to ensure the MP is aware of the arrangements to manage the offender's risk. It also enables the MP, if they wish, to make further inquiries of local police and probation services, as well as Ministers.

Departmental Database

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is contained on his Department's court proceedings database. [191524]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office Court Proceedings database contains records of all defendants prosecuted for at least one criminal offence in the magistrates' courts or the Crown Court, England and Wales.

In each case, the defendant's gender and age are recorded along with some limited information on ethnicity. The database holds a record of each offence for which each individual is prosecuted, indicating the nature of the offence and the outcome of the prosecution. For those offenders found guilty details are recorded of the sentence(s) they have received as well as a measure of the length or value of each sentence. Information about where the case was dealt with, covering court name, type of court and police force area is available.

The database also contains fields covering remand status and, in Crown Court cases, the type of plea.

Aggregate data from the Court Proceedings database are published in the annual command paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" along with four supplementary volumes. These give further breakdowns of the data in relation to offence, age, court, police force area and petty sessional area. The next editions of these publications covering the calendar year 2003 are due to be published in November.

Detection Rates

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures the Department will take to improve detection rates; and what assessment has been made of the reasons for changes in detection rates. [194943]

Mr. Blunkett: The Home Office Police Standards Unit is working with Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, the Association of Chief Police Officers, the Association of Police Authorities, the Office for Criminal Justice Reform and the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit, on a programme of work to improve performance on sanction detections.

Several schemes to improve detection rates are being developed and disseminated. These include efficient use of forensic techniques, Automatic Number Plate Recognition and studies on initial response (call-handling), screening and attrition in volume crime investigations. The Police Standards Unit will also issue shortly national good practice guidance on enhancing sanction detections performance.

Those factors that have contributed to recent changes in the detection rate have been explored by the Home Office Research Development and Statistics (RDS) Directorate. A summary of these issues can be found in chapter 7 of the RDS publication "Crime in England and Wales 2003/2004" published in July 2004.

Drugs in Prisons

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to reduce the amount of illegal drugs in prisons in England and Wales. [193155]

Paul Goggins: A comprehensive framework of measures is in place to reduce the amount of illegal drugs in prisons. Passive drug dogs are used to detect traces of drugs on visitors, and other dogs are used actively to search for drugs within prisons, as part of a general drug search strategy. Closed circuit television systems are installed in all visits areas to monitor behaviour, and fixed and low-level furniture is used in visits areas to make it difficult to pass drugs undetected. Sanctions are taken against visitors suspected of smuggling drugs, including visit bans and closed visits. Where there is adequate evidence they are prosecuted. Prisons and police share intelligence about drug routes into prisons.

A random sample of prisoners (5 or 10 per cent. depending on prison capacity) each month is required to submit to a drug test, and a positive test result will lead to disciplinary proceedings. All establishments use and contribute to a Drug Supply Reduction Good Practice Guide and a monthly security bulletin, both of which share information on ways of protecting against drugs.

The Prison Service works with the Police Scientific Development Branch to strengthen physical and technical barriers, particularly in prisons, such as those in city centres, where public spaces are close to the perimeter walls. The Prison Service has a Professional Standards Unit to help to identify staff who may be involved in or at risk of corruption. It will provide relevant information to facilitate investigations.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the value is of each of the new contracts for the electronic monitoring of offenders awarded by his Department to (a) Securicor Justice Services Ltd and (b) Premier Monitoring Services Ltd; and what the basis is of the estimate of savings to the Home Office of around 35 per cent. arising from the new contracts. [193993]

Paul Goggins: The value of the electronic monitoring contracts, based on a contract life of five years and assuming substantial volume growth over that timeframe, is approximately £500 million (excluding VAT). The electronic monitoring service has been divided into five geographical areas with roughly equal volumes of business, so the contract value for each area is approximately £100 million (excluding VAT) over five years. Premier Monitoring Services Ltd has been awarded two areas, and Securicor Justice Services Ltd has been awarded three areas.

The charges under the new contracts were applied to the workload under the existing contracts for the Financial Year 2003/04. The result indicated a saving of about 35 per cent. on the actual amounts paid in that year under the existing contracts.

Fines

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what percentage of cases where individuals were fined following a criminal conviction in England and Wales a means inquiry was commissioned in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04. [192728]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 25 October 2004]: Information on the number of means inquiries commissioned in England and Wales is not recorded centrally.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to link the ability to pay to the size of fine imposed following a criminal conviction in England and Wales. [192729]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 25 October 2004]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 7 June 2004, Official Report, column 178W.

Fireworks

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure the police service enforces the new regulations on fireworks. [196344]

Ms Blears: We have a comprehensive and robust package in place to tackle the misuse of fireworks. The Fireworks Regulations 2004 came into force in August, and in October we extended the Penalty Notices for Disorder Scheme (PND) to include three new firework offences. The new PNDs allow police to punish offenders immediately by issuing on-the-spot fines and offer an additional disposal that has been widely welcomed by police forces across the country.

I was keen to ensure all relevant agencies were aware of the new arrangements. In early October I wrote to all chief constables to provide guidance ahead of the fireworks season and to ensure the new arrangements were made an integral part of their fireworks strategies. We have published a TOGETHER factsheet on the misuse of fireworks and this has been widely distributed to practitioners. DTI are also in regular contact with individual police forces and other enforcement agencies, such as Trading Standards, to provide advice on the Fireworks Regulations 2004. They expect to publish comprehensive guidance shortly.

Early indications show that the new powers are being used effectively to tackle the misuse of fireworks.

Gang Rapes

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions he has had with the police and community groups over changes in the incidence of gang rapes; and if he will make a statement; [186385]

(2) what representations he has received on reported cases of gang rapes involving minors which have not resulted in convictions; and if he will make a statement; [186386]

(3) what discussions he has had on reported incidents of gang rapes involving minors where the case has not been brought to trial; and if he will make a statement; [186387]

(4) (a) what representations he has received and (b) what discussions he has had regarding suspected incidents of gang rapes involving minors where no official report has been made; and if he will make a statement. [186388]

Paul Goggins: Rape is a dreadful crime that deeply affects the lives of victims and their families, and which inspires fear in our communities. We are working to reduce the number of sexual offences occurring, to improve services to victims, and to increase confidence in the Criminal Justice System.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has not received formal representations on this issue. However, officials have met with representatives from the Metropolitan Police Service to discuss group rape, and are considering how to take forward action in this area in the context of wider work on rape and sexual assault.

Recorded crime statistics do not include data on group rape. A self-completion questionnaire included in the 2001 British Crime Survey revealed that in six per cent. of serious sexual assaults suffered by women since the age of 16, more than one perpetrator was involved. Research to be published in the near future is expected to throw more light on the prevalence and nature of group rape.

The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) does not have statistics on the number of reported cases of group rape involving minors that resulted in acquittals, or the number of cases that have not been brought to trial.

Since 2002 Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC)/Her Majesty's Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate (HMCPSI) inspection into the investigation and prosecution of cases involving allegations of rape, a great deal of work has been done to increase the number of cases both brought to trial and ending in conviction. On 30 June this year the CPS launched its public policy statement on rape which sets out what the CPS is doing to improve the way all rape cases are handled, including specialist rape prosecutors in all areas.

Furthermore, the Sexual Offences Act, which came into force in May this year, puts in place a number of measures to increase confidence in the prosecution of all rapes and sexual offences, including group rape. These include:

a new definition of 'consent';

the introduction of an objective element into the belief a defendant has in that consent; a set of circumstances in which it is presumed that the complainant did not consent unless it can be demonstrated otherwise, for example if the complainant was subject to violence; and a new category of offence to deal with sexual assault of children under the age of 13.

The Government take all sexual crime extremely seriously and are committed to tackling all types of sexual assault and improving services to victims. Over this current and the next financial year, the Government will provide £4 million of proceeds of crime money for services to victims of sex offending.

Gun Crime

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operations which have been introduced in areas with high levels of gun crime. [197175]

Caroline Flint: The Government supports the work of dedicated, intelligence-led gun crime operations in police forces around the country: Operations Trident and Trafalgar (Metropolitan police), Operation Ventara (West Midlands), Operation Stealth (Nottinghamshire) and Operation Xcalibre (Greater Manchester). These operations are producing excellent results:

Operation Trident

Trident was set up in 1999 to investigate shootings and murders in the black community in London, and also carries out pro-active, intelligence-led operations. From April to end October 2004, the number of Trident gun crime incidents is reported to be down 21 per cent.

Trafalgar was set up in January 2004 to investigate non-fatal shootings in London's other communities (mainly Asian and Turkish) following concerns expressed by those communities and also by the Metropolitan Police Authority. From April, Trafalgar-related gun crime incidents are reported to be down 18 per cent.

Operation Ventara

Ventara has been running in its current form for three years with a strategic focus of community intelligence, enforcement and partnership working. From April to September 2004, gang-related shootings have been reduced by 50 per cent., compared to the same period in 2003.

Operation Stealth

Operation Stealth was launched in 2002 by Nottinghamshire police to tackle drug-fuelled gun crime. Similar to Operation Trident, it has an Independent Advisory Group that monitors and observes the activity of this police operation. Since it was set up there have been over 900 arrests and the seizure of almost 300 firearms.

Operation Xcalibre

Xcalibre was launched in July this year and is a centralised investigative, focused approach to GMP's attack on the criminal use of firearms. It responds to intelligence of firearms-related incidents by actively targeting known offenders by disrupting their daily lives and investigating all confirmed incidents. As a result, in the year to date from April, the number of recorded crimes where a firearm has been discharged has fallen by one third compared to the same period last year.

These operations have helped to contribute to the reduction in the number of fatal shootings which, according to figures published on 21 October, fell from 82 in the 12 months to June 2003, to 70 in the same period to June 2004.

HMP Littlehey

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria were used to determine whether HMP Littlehey should be granted a local pay allowance. [195856]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 4 November 2004]: Local pay is determined following consideration of applications received from the establishment. The primary consideration is whether cost of living factors (predominantly housing and travel) provide an obstacle to the establishment being able to recruit and retain staff. It was determined by the Prison Service that Littlehay did not require the benefit of local pay to attract and retain staff at this particular time.

Inspectorates Merger

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the possible merits of a merger between the inspectorates of constabulary, prisons and probation. [194908]

Paul Goggins: The Government will consult early in the new year on more coherent arrangements for the end to end inspection of the criminal justice system. There is recognition of the need for inspection to better reflect the way services are delivered and to ensure a user perspective is properly built into the process.

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many juveniles held in custody are receiving education and training. [191368]

Paul Goggins: The Youth Justice Board commission and purchase custodial places for juveniles. The numbers receiving education are not collected centrally. However the board do require establishments to provide education, training and personal development for all trainees and they monitor compliance under the relevant contracts and service level agreement.

Kashmir

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the identification of Kashmiris as a separate group from Pakistanis in publications, information and statistics issued by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [192626]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 19 October 2004]: I wrote to the Kashmir National Identity Campaign on 24 May explaining that the Home Office follows Cabinet Office guidance and uses the Census categories for monitoring purposes and when using statistics in our publications. I advised them that the Office for National Statistics has responsibility for Census categories.

Licence Conditions (Non-compliance)

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders have been returned to custody for non-compliance with licence conditions (a) in each of the last 24 months and (b) in each year since 1992. [190144]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is provided in the table.

Information on recall of Automatic Conditional Release and Non-Parole prisoners was not recorded centrally on the prison establishment IT system until 1999. Information on the reasons why life licensees have had their life licences revoked is only available from October 2002.

Literacy/Numeracy

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to improve literacy and numeracy among offenders; and if he will make a statement. [196698]

Paul Goggins: Since April 2001 over 130,000 nationally accredited literacy, numeracy and English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) qualifications from entry level to level 2 have been achieved by offenders in custody in England—a major contribution to the Government's targets for improving basic skills. We have appointed Heads of Learning and Skills in all prisons to drive up standards for improving literacy and numeracy.

We are working closely with key partners to develop a new model for delivering a better and more integrated service for offenders, both in prison and in the community. The new service will be informed by development work in the north east, north west and south west regions, which will try out new models. To support this we are providing substantial additional investment to improve the quality and quantity of offender learning.

Lockouts

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 8 June 2004, Official Report, column 333W, what final figure for the cost of lockouts is in 2003–04, and what the (a) total cost and (b) number of lockouts was in each area in each of the last five years. [190060]

Paul Goggins: As explained in my answer of 8 June 2004, Official Report, column 333W, to question 172412, there were 791 lockouts in 2003–04.

The total expenditure on lockouts in 2003–04 was £188,353. This includes a proportion of lockout costs incurred in previous years.

Details of the number of lockouts and total costs for the financial years 1998–99 to 2002–03 are set out in the tables.

Money Payment Supervision Orders

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many money payment supervision orders were made in each of the last 10 years. [192727]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 27 October 2004]: The numbers of persons starting supervision by the probation service under a Money Payment Supervision Order in England and Wales are given in the table. The figures are for the last available 10 years.

	Number
1993	4,258
1994	3,928

Mountain Rescue Teams

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought against people who have assaulted members of a mountain rescue team sent out to rescue them in the last five years. [196872]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Ms Maliheh Sadeghi Bourojerdi

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what grounds he is seeking to appeal against the determination of the Immigration Adjudicator promulgated on 17 September in the case of Ms Maliheh Sadeghi Bourojerdi; and if he will make a statement. [192684]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 26 October 2004]: A copy of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's grounds of appeal to the Immigration Appeal Tribunal in this case were sent to my right hon. Friend on 19 October.

Multi-agency Public Protection Arrangements

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) probation officers are employed in monitoring high-risk offenders under the multi-agency public protection arrangements; and how many are engaged (i) full-time and (ii) part-time in these duties. [143393]

Paul Goggins: The Criminal Justice Act 2003 strengthened and extended the statutory responsibilities of the police, probation and the prison service in each of the 42 areas of England and Wales in respect of multi-agency public protection operational demands of this work there is no centrally collated information that allows arrangements (MAPPA). While police and probation areas are responding to the us to determine precisely how many staff from each agency are currently deployed. Within the national probation service there are currently 4,770 trained probation officers able to supervise high-risk offenders, though it is not possible to establish how many are specifically engaged in this activity at any one time.

Murder Law Review

Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the law on murder, with particular reference to the partial defence of provocation in domestic homicide. [195300]

Paul Goggins: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in a statement to the House on 28 October that the Government is setting up a review into the law on murder. This follows publication in August of the Law Commission report 'Partial Defences to Murder' (Law Com No 290) in which they identified the need for a fundamental review. Full terms of reference will be announced in due course.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the proposed review on the law of murder announced on 28 October will apply to Scots criminal law. [196248]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 4 November 2004]: Yes. The review will look at the law in England and Wales. The criminal law in Scotland is devolved. But we are, and will remain, in touch with the Scottish Executive to ensure they are fully aware of the review.

Murder/Manslaughter Charges

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been charged with (a) murder, (b) attempted murder and (c) manslaughter in England and Wales this year. [193566]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 26 October 2004]: Statistics on the number of defendants charged with an offence are not collected centrally.

However, the latest available information on the number of defendants[1] proceeded against at magistrates' courts, England and Wales, 2002 is:

Murder	713
Attempted murder	465
Manslaughter	112

Statistics for 2003 will be published in November.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional resources will be made available to the Probation Service in the event of its incorporation within the National Offender Management Service. [172841]

Paul Goggins: Under the National Offender Management Service, the allocation of additional resources to the Probation Service remains subject to the normal Spending Review and Home Office departmental planning round processes. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary recently announced that the total number of probation staff would be increased by 1,800 over the next two years.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will convene job specific selection boards for the posts of (a) human resources director and (b) director of standards for the National Offender Management Service. [175829]

Paul Goggins: Both Director posts have been filled, in accordance with Civil Service procedures, by Home Office officials who are in the equivalent grade.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people will be employed by each regional offender manager during (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; and what the overall cost of those staff will be. [190118]

Paul Goggins: The number of staff to be employed by the Regional Offender Management Service (ROMS) have yet to be determined. Offender managers, currently employed by probation areas, will support the ROM for their region.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the business case on the creation of the National Offender Management Service will be published. [194741]

---

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.

Paul Goggins [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The draft detailed business case is currently being prepared and will be completed shortly.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there has been a Gateway Zero Review in respect of the National Offender Management Service. [194742]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The pre Gateway Review was carried out during the summer and the Office of Government Commerce have been asked to perform a "Gateway Review 0-Strategic Assessment". We are still considering the most appropriate timing for this.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses to the National Offender Management Service consultation documents issued in (a) January and (b) May favour the concept of contestability. [194743]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 8 November 2004]: There have been two formal written consultation documents issued on the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) since January 2004. Over 400 responses were received in total. These responses have given very strong support for the vision behind the establishment of NOMS—namely the bringing together of prisons and probation to enable more effective management of offenders.

Respondents were not asked to express their support or otherwise for contestability and indeed many did not do so. More detailed analysis of this issue is included in the Government's response, announced to Parliament on Tuesday 26 October.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to increase the (a) confidence and (b) morale of (i) Probation and (ii) Prison staff in the National Offender Management Service. [194744]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The National Offender Management Board recognises the importance of engaging prison and probation staff in the introduction of the National Offender Management Service (NOMS). The Government's two consultation exercises on NOMS, the responses to which were announced to the House on 26 October, demonstrate a commitment to open and inclusive dialogue.

A Joint Consultative Council, to which all recognised prison and probation unions and staff associations have been invited, will provide a forum for consultation on NOMS-related issues affecting members of staff. The JCC will meet for the first time in November.

The NOMS Change Programme includes a Human Resources and Organisational Development Sub-Programme, specifically intended to create a sustainable organisation and culture at the heart of NOMS.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when job descriptions for Regional Offender Managers under the National Offender Management Service arrangements will be published; and if he will make a statement. [194776]

Paul Goggins: I set out the key roles to be undertaken by the Regional Offender Managers in my written ministerial statement of 20 July 2004. It is not current practise to publish individual job descriptions.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will (a) be responsible for and (b) speak on behalf of the National Probation Service under the National Offender Management Service arrangements. [194777]

Paul Goggins: Martin Narey, Chief Executive of the National Offender Management Service, is responsible for the National Probation Service. Appropriate officials will speak on behalf of the National Probation Service depending on the issues involved.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a business plan has been drawn up for the National Offender Management Service. [196703]

Paul Goggins: The case for the establishment of the National Offender Management Service is outlined in Patrick Carter's independent report "Managing Offenders—Reducing Crime" published along with the Government response "Reducing Crime—Changing Lives" on 6 January 2004. A draft business case is currently being prepared.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms will be put in place to measure the effectiveness of the National Offender Management Service. [196706]

Paul Goggins: The main aim of the National Offender Management Service is to reduce re-offending. There is a rolling programme of research to evaluate the impact of individual programmes. In addition, specific targets are set for the individual services within the National Offender Management Service, for example on the rate of escapes from prisons and escorts. These are published in the services' Business Plans and progress against the targets is published in their Annual Reports.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what risk assessment has been carried out on the consequences of (a) workers from across the Home Office, Prison and Probation Services and (b) stakeholders, with particular reference to (i) unions and (ii) hon. Members not being fully engaged and committed to the implementation of the National Offender Management Service; and what the results were; [197170]

(2) what risk assessment has been carried out on (a) the possibility of staff numbers and competencies falling below acceptable levels in front line services in the National Offender Management Service, (b) the complexity and scale and scope of the overall change programme of the National Offender Management Service and (c) the possibility of a high profile incident or industrial action in the National Offender Management Service; and what the results were in each case. [197171]

Paul Goggins: As part of the process of setting up the National Offender Management Service (NOMS), a comprehensive risk management strategy has been established, providing for the assessment, monitoring and managing of risks across the Change Programme.

Risk assessments have been carried out in detail and at strategic level across the Programme. The results have been agreed with the NOMS directors and reported to the NOMS board and to other governance bodies within the Home Office. In keeping with normal practice across Government, it is not intended to publish the findings of these assessments.

The assessments cover all aspects of the Programme, including policy, implementation, people and process issues. The risk registers are continually updated as the Programme evolves and the risks change.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the role of the market in the work of the National Offender Management Service. [162831]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 24 March 2004]: The role of the market in the work of the National Offender Management Service is based on the principle that best quality and best value for money in the supervision, punishment and care of offenders will be achieved by ensuring that services are opened up through competition to all potential providers.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the job description for regional offender mangers in the National Offender Management Service will be published. [198027]

Paul Goggins: I set out the key roles to be undertaken by the Regional Offender Managers in my written ministerial statement of 20 July 2004, Official Report, column 17WS. It is not current practice to publish individual job descriptions.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans there are for the public sector prison service to become self financing under the new National Offender Management Service structure. [168835]

Paul Goggins: The public sector prison service is financed from funds voted by Parliament and delegated to the Director General by the chief executive of the National Offender Management Service. It also receives funds for education, health care and juvenile establishments from Department for Education and Skills (DfES), Department of Health (DoH) and the Youth Justice Board (YJB) respectively. Plans to introduce commissioning of places in public sector prisons are currently being developed as part of the Correctional Services reforms.

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will be responsible for setting the categorisation of prison establishments under the National Offender Management Service. [168782]

Paul Goggins: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) has responsibility for monitoring the size and composition of the prison population, and for planning to meet overall need. Security arrangements for the categorisation of prisoners are being managed within the Prison Service on behalf of NOMS.

Security related decisions about the use of prisons include input from operational and security staff, property managers, estate planners and the senior management of NOMS. If a significant change in the function of a prison is proposed the good practice described in the Prison Services' Agency framework is followed and ministers are advised.

Through the changes brought about by the implementation of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and NOMS the focus on public safety and security will be maintained.

Non-custodial Sentences

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the criteria used by magistrates and judges when deciding between a custodial or community penalty. [191684]

Paul Goggins: The current statute which bears on the use of custodial and community penalties by sentencers is the Powers of Criminal Courts Sentencing Act 2000. This states that any penalty must reflect the seriousness of the offence for which it is imposed and the personal circumstances of the offender.

To impose a custodial penalty, the offence must be so serious that only such a sentence can be justified; or where the offence is violent or sexual, that only such a sentence would be adequate to protect the public from serious harm.

Seriousness and risk will remain the basis of sentencing decisions under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 provisions.

This legislation established the Sentencing Guidelines Council, which is responsible for issuing detailed sentencing guidelines to all courts. They have recently published draft guidelines on the assessment of seriousness. These are currently the subject of consultation and can be found at www.sentencing-guidelines.gov.uk/draftguidelines/index.

Overseas Corruption Offences

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many meetings officials in his Department have recently held with (a) companies and (b) industry bodies to discuss (i) legislation and (ii) enforcement relating to overseas bribery; and if he will list the companies or industry bodies with which officials from his Department met. [194719]

Paul Goggins: The most recent meeting involving the Confederation of British Industry and Home Office officials at which legislation on overseas bribery was discussed was on 27 October 2004. Home Office officials have not recently discussed this issue with any individual company. Enforcement of the legislation is a matter for law enforcement agencies.

Paddy Dixon

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance he is giving to the Police Service of Northern Ireland in locating Paddy Dixon for interview. [192978]

Mr. Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

I am advised that the Police Service of Northern Ireland has not sought assistance from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department with regard to this matter.

Police

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he intends to distribute the £50 million Neighbourhood Policing Fund. [190306]

Ms Blears: The £50 million which launches the Neighbourhood Policing Fund will allow police forces in England and Wales to increase the number of Community Support Officers (CSOs) to 5,500 by the end of March, 2005 and will be available to forces from January 2005. Forces have made bids under the fund and will be notified of their allocations shortly. In making distributions under the first round of funding we will consider a number of factors including current CSO numbers in each force.

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been employed by Thames Valley Police in each of the last 10 years, broken down by (a) local authority and (b) basic command unit. [195608]

Ms Blears: A table of police personnel strength for the Thames Valley police since March 1994 is set out in the table.

Year (as at 31 March)	Number of police officers	Number of police (support) staff
1994	3,908	1,522
1995	3,854	1,706
1996	3,674	1,738
1997	3,695	1,825
1998	3,776	1,827
1999	3,748	1,799
2000	3,740	1,786
2001	3,703	1,891
2002	3,762	2,061
2003	3,833	2,398
2004	4,034	2,589
2004 (31 August)	4,139	Not available

Information on strength at Basic Command Unit (BCU) level is collected annually and reflects the position at the end of March. Information on BCU strength is only available from 2002. BCU strength between March 2002 and March 2004 is set out in the table.

BCU	March 2002	March 2003	March 2004
Aylesbury Vale	177	194	196
Chiltern Vale	298	293	321
Milton Keynes	342	346	371
Northern Oxfordshire	281	301	296
Oxford	316	317	336
Reading and Wokingham	369	387	434
Slough and District	254	264	297
Southern Oxfordshire	253	255	267
Thames Forest	309	307	339
West Berkshire	160	159	185
Total BCU Strength	2,759	2,823	3,042

It is not possible to provide police numbers at local authority level.

The deployment of officers to BCUs is a matter for the Chief Constable (Mr. Peter Neyroud QPM) and within the Thames Valley Police Basic Command Units deployment of officers is a matter for divisional commanders.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will encourage police forces to have cheaper alternatives to alloy wheels fitted to police vehicles. [195770]

Ms Blears: Decisions regarding procurement are operational matters for the chief constable within policing plans set by the Police Authority.

Since 1992 the Police Information Technology Organisation, with the support of the National Association of Police Fleet Managers, has put in place a number of national frameworks for the purchase of vehicles by the police service, on which police authorities may draw. They deliver significant discounts on manufacturers prices.

Prison (Racial Incidents)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department what improvements have been made in procedures for investigations of racial incidents and complaints in prison. [191898]

Paul Goggins: Following a review of the racist incidents reporting system, a dedicated form for registering racist incidents is now available across the whole of the prison estate. This form can be completed by anyone who is a victim or a witness to an incident within the prison. The purpose of the revised form is to improve: the recording of racist incidents; the response to individual reports, thereby increasing the confidence of victims; the monitoring of the information available so that prisons can make improvements in race.

The form has a tear-off slip, which must be given to the person reporting the incident (victim or witness) as proof that a report has been submitted. This is intended to increase confidence in the system and to form part of an audit trail. The form also requires that any decision by a complainant or witness to withdraw a complaint is thoroughly explored and any possibility of intimidation is explicitly examined and ruled out.

The responsibility of ensuring that investigations are carried out effectively rests with the Governing Governor of each establishment, or the Head of Group for Headquarters units. As part of their responsibilities the Race Relations Management Teams in each establishment are required to monitor the investigation of racist complaints and their outcomes.

The training course for those carrying out investigations was revised and improved at the beginning of 2004. The course includes specific training on dealing with race related complaints.

The joint Prison Service/Commission for Racial Equality Race Equality Action Plan recognises that further improvements need to be made with regard to the quality and thoroughness of the investigations of racial incidents. The Service has begun to develop a rogramme of work to assess the feasibility of having xternal bodies such as Race Equality Councils, review he adequacy of racist incident investigations.

Prison and Probation Funding

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much of the increase in prison and probation funding announced on 29 September had ot previously been announced; [194778]

(2) how much of the uplift for correctional services nnounced in September is funding which had not reviously been announced. [194779]

Paul Goggins: Of the £312 million resource uplift for orrectional services referred to by the Home Secretary on 29 September, £72 million had not been announced reviously.

Prison Education Programmes

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Iome Department how many offenders were moved luring part of their NVQ course in 2003–04; and how nany of those were able to continue their courses in heir next prison. [198042]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not ollated centrally and could be collected from individual stablishments only at a disproportionate cost.

Prison Population

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Iome Department what contingency plans are in place f the expected reductions in the prison population utlined in Reducing Crime—Changing Lives are not ealised. [163983]

Paul Goggins: The impact of population pressures is ept under careful review. The National Offender anagement Service will continue to investigate ptions for further increases in capacity over the oming years.

In addition to the extra 2,400 places already planned, unding of around £100 million has now been provided or a new programme to create a further 1,300 prison laces. This will increase the total operating capacity of he prison estate to around 80,800 places by 2006–07.

The National Offender Management Service also has ptions and plans in place for the development of new rison sites, if required.

Prison Service

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for ne Home Department what technical qualifications ere held by the fire safety specialists who carried out ne in-house review of the Prison Service fire safety dvisers. [196707]

Paul Goggins: The review of fire safety in prisons was ocused primarily on organisational efficiency. As such, echnically qualified fire personnel were not required to ake part. The fire safety work was reviewed in the light f the needs of the Prison Service and appropriate legal dvice was received from Treasury solicitors.

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost in the Prison Service of staff sickness due to smoke inhalation caused by fires in Prison Service buildings in each of the past five years. [196709]

Paul Goggins: Information on levels of sickness by Prison Service staff due to smoke inhalation caused by fires is not available. Any staff that had suffered illness due to smoke inhalation are included within overall statistics of staff injured at work. The proportion of staff experiencing the effects of smoke inhalation is not known.

While staff may be affected during local incidents, Prison Service Health and Safety managers consider that the impact of smoke inhalation caused by fires on overall staff sickness rates is minimal.

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the (a) policy on and (b) levels of automatic fire suppression systems in prisons in England and Wales. [196713]

Paul Goggins: Automatic fire suppression systems are in place in the high fire risk areas of prisons, such as parts of kitchens and workshops, and at HMP Weare.

The Prison Service has recently commissioned a team from the Building Research Establishment (Fire) to carry out an independent survey into all aspects of fire safety in both the public and private prisons.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis a further Prison Service inquiry is taking place into the case of Gary Rowland, Malcolm Watkins and Shaun Kerry of Elmley prison. [193014]

Paul Goggins: Gary Rowland, Malcolm Watkins and Shaun Kerry have been subject to a Prison Service disciplinary investigation into a number of alleged breaches of the Prison Service Code of Conduct and Discipline. That investigation recommended that disciplinary charges should be laid against all three men and their cases have been referred to a disciplinary hearing.

The nature of the work of the Prison Service demands that all members of the service observe appropriate standards of conduct. Where it is believed they may have failed to do so, the disciplinary process may be invoked, as in this case.

The Code of Conduct and Discipline encompasses but is not exclusive to criminal offences, accordingly members of staff who are cleared of criminal offences may still find themselves subject to disciplinary investigation.

Prison Volunteers

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours of service were provided by volunteers from the community working in prisons in the last year. [182092]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of hours of service provided by volunteers from the community working in prisons is not collected centrally. There are 1,800 volunteers who are members of Independent Monitoring Boards and 1,400 Prison Visitors. In addition nearly 3,600 volunteers offer a wide range of support to prisoners and their families including: helping to run Visitor Centres and play facilities in prisons; providing refreshments in visits halls; training and supporting Listeners; one to one basic skills support; individual counselling and group work; language and cultural support. In addition a recent survey carried out by the Centre for Crime and Justice Studies has shown over 4,000 volunteers support the work of prison chaplaincies giving 11,450 hours per month.

Prisoner Rehabilitation

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on steps to encourage the rehabilitation of prisoners. [196620]

Paul Goggins: The Government set out its plans to reduce re-offending through more effective rehabilitation, in an action plan published on 19 July. Over 60 action points have been agreed across Government covering a number of key areas, including accommodation, employment, and drug treatment. The policy is set within the context of our plans to develop the National Offender Management Service and implement the new sentencing framework, both of which will radically improve the scope for rehabilitation of offenders. Copies of the Reducing Re-offending National Action Plan have been placed in the Library of the House.

Prisoner Visits

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the arrangements for long serving prisoners to receive escorted visits to terminally ill relatives; and what plans he has to review the criteria for such visits. [193688]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 4 November 2004]: Under the Temporary Release Policy, there are provisions for a governor to allow accompanied compassionate release for eligible prisoners to visit terminally ill relatives. The following are ineligible for compassionate release: prisoners who are in category A or on the escape list; unconvicted and convicted unsentenced prisoners; prisoners who are subject to extradition proceedings; sentenced prisoners who are remanded on further charges and those who are awaiting sentence following further convictions. The role of the member of staff accompanying the prisoner is to provide guidance and support to the prisoner, not to be a security escort. The prisoner has sole responsibility for compliance with the temporary release licence conditions and return to the establishment. Prisoners serving any length of sentence may apply for compassionate temporary release providing they are not listed in the excluded categories. Any temporary release may only be authorised following a successful risk assessment. A review of all temporary release policy is currently taking place. However, it is not proposed to change the arrangements for compassionate release.

In the case of prisoners who are ineligible for release on temporary compassionate licence, governors can authorise a visit to a terminally ill relative under security escort. In such instances the prisoner remains in legal custody and the escorting officer(s) have the power to physically detain them in the event of an escape attempt.

Prisoners

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions a prisoner has failed to return when on temporary licence from prison during each of the last three years. [193144]

Paul Goggins: The number of temporary release failures reported by the Prison Service Incident Reporting System for the last three calendar years are set out in the following table. The incidents reported include breaches of other licence conditions such as committing an offence while on temporary release or returning to the prison under the influence of alcohol. Data relating specifically to failure to return are not collated. The number of failures represents 0.1 per cent. of the total number of licences issued each year.

Calendar year	Number or reported temporary release failures
2001	278
2002	319
2003	367

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reason is for the difference in the public and private sector targets for the percentage of prisoners held in accommodation units intended for fewer prisoners in 2004–05. [181493]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 29 June 2004]: The difference in these targets reflects a number of differences between publicly and privately operated prisons. Prisons operated by the private sector are generally of newer design and construction and have larger cells that can accommodate extra beds: many older public sector prisons have smaller cells that cannot accommodate extra beds. Some privately operated prisons were designed with scope to increase regime facilities in case of overcrowding while many public sector prisons have limited capacity to increase regime services. The private sector has, proportionately, more local prisons, which have traditionally been more overcrowded than other types of prison.

Prisons

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the reasons for the change in the female prison population between 1998 and October 2003; and what assessment he has made of the effect of the change on community safety. [146020]

Paul Goggins: The female prison population increased from 3,157 on 31 October 1998 to 4,462 on 31 October 2003, with the remand population increasing by 289 (42 per cent.) and the sentenced population by 1,004 (41 per cent.). A major factor in the increase in the sentenced population has been the increase in those sentenced for drugs offences, with the population under immediate custodial sentence for drugs offences increasing from 794 in June[1] 1998 to 1,277 in October

03. Other factors influencing the increase in the male prison population are increases in the number of males received into prison on remand, increases in the mber of females received into prison under sentence, d increases in average sentence lengths for some fence groups.

There has been no specific research regarding the ects of changes in the female prison population on mmunity safety. We are concerned, though, about the der impact of women's imprisonment, in particular families and children who are separated from their others, and are therefore taking forward the Women's fending Reduction Programme to tackle women's fending specifically and reduce the numbers ending up custody.

igures for October 1998 are not available

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Home Department when vocational training will come a fully integrated part of the Sentence Planning ocess. [164394]

Paul Goggins: The Government is committed to proving offenders' learning and skills. A key element the new service we are developing in partnership with Learning and Skills Council will be an integrated proach to education and training where learning is bedded across regimes. The focus will be on meeting lividual needs through effective assessment as part of lividual Learning Plans. The new service will be roduced progressively from September 2005.

Enabling prisoners to gain skills and qualifications ich will help them secure employment on release is eady an important aspect of sentence management, d we expect individual needs and training objectives be reflected in the sentence planning process.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the me Department what measures he has taken to event further violent incidents at HMP Wormwood ubs; and if he will make a statement on the merits of tiating a public inquiry. [190235]

Paul Goggins: Wormwood Scrubs prison is a much proved prison. Recent management teams at ormwood Scrubs have worked hard to develop and plement wide reaching reforms that have radically ered its culture. Robust systems are now in place to ure that all complaints and, in particular, allegations unprofessional conduct by staff towards prisoners are oroughly investigated.

The most recent visit by Her Majesty's Chief pector in November 2003 confirms this progress. The ief Inspector found 'a greatly improved prison, dually implementing and consolidating fundamental anges'. Most noticeable of all was 'the change in itude and approach of Prison Officers". I am fident that such fundamental changes will prevent a urn to the kind of violent incidents witnessed in the 0s.

We are currently considering the request for a public quiry.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the me Department what the education budget for sons in England and Wales was in each of the last ee years. [190256]

Paul Goggins: Funding for the delivery of learning and skills to offenders rests in the request for resources of the Department for Education and Skills, and is administered jointly by DfES and the Home Office through the Offenders' Learning and Skills Unit. Prisons are allocated a total education budget and have flexibility to use this to purchase education to meet their learners' needs. Core funding for prisoners' education for the last three years was:

Financial year	Education expenditure (£ million)
2001–02	52.6
2002–03	59.4
2003–04	70.9

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what pay and job comparison has been carried out between prison officers employed in the Prison Service and administrative staff of his Department since 1997; and if he will publish the findings. [190288]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 13 October 2004]: There has been no direct comparison made between the pay and jobs of prison officers and administrative staff since 1997. Job Evaluations of Prison Service staff carried out in this period have all been in connection with the development, implementation and maintenance of its pay and grading review. Sample evaluations have been made of the jobs of almost all disciplines of staff, including prison officers and administrative grades, but none has been made for the purpose of direct comparison between different disciplines.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has (a) to expand the Full Sutton prison site in East Yorkshire and (b) to develop land adjoining this site; and if he will make a statement. [190920]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 14 October 2004]: There are no plans to expand the site at Full Sutton prison at this stage. The Prison Service owns a site adjacent to Full Sutton, and the possible development of this site has been under consideration, as an option for providing additional capacity as and when it may be needed. No final decision has been made on whether or not to proceed.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether prison video-link equipment has been used for the recording of an interview between a police officer and a prisoner. [191331]

Paul Goggins: Prison video-link equipment does not have the facility to record interviews.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of prisons have a visitors' centre. [191688]

Paul Goggins: On the latest information available, 112 prisons have access to a visitors' centre. This equates to 79 per cent. of the prison estate.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many strip searches have taken place in prisons in England and Wales during the last 12 months. [192673]

Paul Goggins: This information is not collated centrally and cannot be provided except at a disproportionate cost.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) state-run and (b) privately-run prisons there are in the UK. [193471]

Paul Goggins: There are 136 prisons in England and Wales (including young offenders institutions), excluding Dover and Haslar, which are managed by the Prison Service on behalf of Immigration and Nationality Directorate. 10 of the 136 prisons in England and Wales are run by the private sector.

Prisons in Scotland and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the Scottish Executive and the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively. There are 16 prisons in Scotland, one of which is operated by the private sector. Northern Ireland has three prisons, all of which are in the public sector.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the establishment of new prisons in England and Wales; and if he will list the proposed sites of these prisons. [193474]

Paul Goggins: HMP Peterborough, a new purpose-built prison, is expected to open in March 2005. This will provide a further 840 places. No decisions have yet been made regarding the construction of any other new prison establishments, but the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) keeps capacity within the prison estate under review. NOMS owns two sites, one in Merseyside and one in London, with outline planning consent to build two 600-place prisons.

The Budget 2003 settlement also provided funds to acquire at least two more sites in 2004–05 for the future development of large multi-function 1,500-place prisons. A search programme to identify suitable sites for purchase is currently taking place. It is not possible to list sites being considered for purchase, due to commercial considerations.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the intermittent custody pilots which have been taking place in two purpose-built prison units since January. [193927]

Paul Goggins: Intermittent custody (IC) originates from the Government's determination to avoid some of the negative outcomes (loss of employment, accommodation and family breakdown) which can accompany even relatively short periods of full-time custody.

An IC order is imposed by a court only on the basis of a stringent risk assessment by the national probation service and only those offenders assessed as being of lower risk to the public are suitable for IC.

Under the terms of the sentence, custody is served intermittently, either at weekends or on weekdays, for a number of days each week. Offenders spend non-custodial days under the supervision of the national probation service. This enables them to maintain their existing employment or caring responsibilities or to look for work.

IC pilots based at Kirkham, in Lancashire, for male offenders, and at Morton Hall, in Lincolnshire, for females, have been running since 26 January 2004. Up to 22 October, a total of 120 IC orders had been imposed, 82 on male offenders and 38 on females. There are currently 39 extant custody cases, 30 at Kirkham and nine at Morton Hall.

We are continuing to learn from the pilots, but the early indications are that IC is regarded as a valuable addition to the range of sentencing options, both by sentencers and offenders. This positive reaction to IC among offenders has translated into a high level of compliance, despite the onerous nature of the sentence.

It is already clear that there is a significant group of offenders for whom Weekend IC is an appropriate option. However, the take-up for Weekday IC has been relatively low. The disparity between the number of Weekend and Weekday IC orders was exacerbated by the need to clarify the benefit entitlements of IC offenders. This matter has been largely resolved and we are now seeking to promote the option of Weekday IC among probation officers and sentencers.

IC has been successful in enabling offenders to maintain their employment, accommodation and family ties. This has been particularly important for female offenders with caring responsibilities for dependant children. Male IC offenders have been able to retain their jobs and, in two cases, offenders operating small businesses were able to preserve the jobs of their employees.

On 29 September, the Home Secretary announced his intention to expand the use of IC and we are now working on the most effective ways of achieving this.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many category A prisoners who were (a) men and (b) women were detained in prisons in England and Wales on 1 October. [193968]

Paul Goggins: On 1 October there were 897 men and six women in prisons in England and Wales, with a category A classification.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison inmates who were (a) men under the age of 21 years and (b) women under the age of 21 years were serving a prison sentence in England and Wales on 1 March 2003. [193970]

Paul Goggins: On 28 February 2003, there were 8,111 male young offenders and 439 female young offenders in prison under sentence in England and Wales.

The figures include fine defaulters and young offenders who have turned 21 but who have not been reclassified as adults.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether all prisons in England and Wales have education facilities for inmates; and if he will make a statement. [194748]

Paul Goggins: All prisons in England and Wales have education facilities for offenders. Funding for offender learning in 2004–05 is £127 million and includes £10 million for the delivery of learning and skills to offenders under supervision in the community. In addition, offender learning and skills has benefited from investment of £20 million from the Treasury's Capital Modernisation Fund, £4.4 million in 2002–03 and 15.6 million in 2003–04.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) total and (b) average number of hours owed were for (i) principal officers, ii) senior officers, (iii) prison officers and (iv) operational support grades for each Prison Service establishment on the last Saturday of each of the last 12 nonths as shown on each establishment's SPAR F form. [194821]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is no onger collated centrally and has been devolved to stablishments to monitor and manage on an individual asis. The information requested could be collected only t a disproportionate cost.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Iome Department whether he plans further studies into ne relationship between diet and behaviour in prisons nd young offender institutions; and if he will make a atement. [195721]

Paul Goggins: Research into the possible link between utrition and offending behaviour in young offenders is urrently being considered by the Home Office. We are xploring the possibility of conducting research within a ommunity setting, both in relation to sentences served the community and to re-offending rates post-ustody. In addition the Prison Service has offered ccess to Natural Justice for research on the impact of et on behaviour.

Interest has been generated by an earlier 1996 study diet and behaviour at Aylesbury young offender stitution. The results appeared to show a positive fect on behaviour, although the number of prisoners volved was too small to make the drawing of wider nclusions possible. The study did not follow up the ung offenders once they had been released, so it was t possible to measure the impact on re-offending.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the ome Department what analysis he has made of the dy at Her Majesty's Young Offender Institution lesbury of connections between diet and behaviour; d if he will make a statement. [195769]

Paul Goggins: In 1996 the charity "Natural Justice", h the support of the Prison Service, conducted earch into the effects of diet on behaviour at lesbury young offender institution. This work was iewed by Home Office researchers who concluded t, while the results appeared to show a positive effect behaviour, the number of prisoners involved were small to make the drawing of wider conclusions ssible.

he study did not follow up the young offenders once y had been released so it has not been possible to asure the impact on re-offending.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners who began intensive drug treatment programmes in 2003–04 (a) completed and (b) dropped out of the programme; [196273]

(2) if he will list the prisons which run internal drug treatment programmes, broken down by type of programme. [196274]

Paul Goggins: In 2003–04, of the 4,703 prisoners entering intensive drug treatment programmes, there were 2,418 completions. The list of prisons that run internal drug treatment programmes is given in the following table. External contractors also run drug programmes in some of these and other prisons.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Prison Service's review of the Counselling, Assessment, Referral, Advice and Through-care Services (CARATs) for prisoners with drug misuse problems has been completed; and if he will make a statement. [196275]

Paul Goggins: The review of Counselling, Assessment, Referral, Advice and Through-care (CARATs) services has been completed. A new CARAT Practice Manual, based on the review, is now in preparation and will be published on the Prison Service website (www.hmprisonservice.gov.uk).

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the latest figures are for (a) capacity and (b) unused capacity in each prison in Wales. [197413]

Probation Boards

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the statutory requirements for probation boards in England and Wales in relation to (a) appointing a treasurer and (b) the Audit Commission's external audit of accounts. [193185]

Paul Goggins: We have no plan to change the statutory requirements for the Probation Boards in England and Wales in relation to the appointment of treasurers. The audit of probation Boards and the role of the Audit Commission is being discussed as we work to ensure that the audit arrangements are as efficient and effective as possible.

Probation Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on future funding of the Probation Service. [196704]

Paul Goggins: Future funding of the Probation Service remains subject to the normal spending review and the Home Office departmental planning round processes.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce regional pay scales for the probation service; and whether he intends to consult the relevant trade unions on the issue. [196998]

Paul Goggins: I have no plans at present to introduce regional pay scales in the national probation service (NPS). Region pay may be one of the issues covered in the ongoing discussions between the Employers' and Side of the NPS National Negotiating Committee (NNC) the trade unions in relation to new pay and grading arrangements.

We already pay allowances to staff working in high cost areas such as central London and the south east of England.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the 2004 pay offer to probation service staff includes (a) pay progression and (b) increments; and whether (i) pay progression and (ii) increments have been included in previous annual pay settlements. [196999]

Paul Goggins: At a meeting of the National Negotiating Council (NNC) for the national probation service on 5 October 2004 the employers made a formal offer of a 2.7 per cent. revalorisation of salaries to all staff covered by NNC terms and conditions of service. Separately, on 1 April 2004, incremental progression of up to 3 per cent. was paid to the majority of staff in the service.

The total cost, including the incremental progression element, is 4.2 per cent. which, if accepted by the trade union side, would be one of the highest public sector pay awards this year.

This two-stage approach follows the same pattern as in previous years.

Public Service Agreement 3

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he will introduce to fulfil Public Service Agreement 3 which aims to increase the number of crimes for which an offender is brought to justice by 1.25 million by 2007–08. [196592]

Paul Goggins: The Public Service Agreement (PSA) target is to bring 1.25 million offences to justice in the year to April 2008. A range of actions is being taken to improve the performance of the criminal justice agencies in order to meet this target, in particular by:

improving the rate of police detection of crime;

making the charging process more effective;

reducing the proportion of ineffective trials;

giving better support to witnesses.

We aim to increase the sanction detection rate from 19 per cent. to at least 25 per cent. by 2008. All police forces have been made aware of the detection rate improvement required by their Local Criminal Justice Board's current target for offences brought to justice.

The initiative to put Crown Prosecutors into police stations in order to provide early advice and guidance to the police on charging is being extended. By September, the charging initiative was operating in 361 of 373 sites, and the more extensive Statutory Charging Scheme arrangements were operating in 118 of those 361 sites. The new charging arrangements are already delivering considerable benefits, with prosecutors working closely with police to build robust cases for prosecution and helping to narrow the justice gap.

The Effective Trial Management Programme (ETMP) case management changes have already had a demonstrable impact on reducing ineffective trial rates in the Crown court and magistrates courts. We aim to reduce ineffective trials from 24 per cent. to 17per cent. in the Crown courts, and from 31 per cent. to 23 per cent. in the magistrates courts by March 2006. Latest performance information shows that we are on course to meet these targets.

Early indications are that the five pilot sites for the 'No Witness No Justice' programme (Gwent, North Wales, Essex, South Yorkshire and the West Midlands) are continuing to show improvements in the number of witnesses attending court.

Finally, a Performance Action Team has been set up, comprising central Performance Advisors, local practitioners, consultants and central PSA delivery teams. It is providing co-ordinated assistance across the Criminal Justice System targets to areas in need of support.

Rape Support Centres

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Rape and Sexual Abuse Support Centres have closed in (a) each of the last three years and (b) this year. [191878]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office does not collect this information. We are aware of reports that some centres have had to close or reduce service availability due to financial constraints. We are making available £4 million of additional funding over two years to support and develop a range of services for victims of sexual crime, including those provided by rape and sexual assault crisis/support centres.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his plans are for setting up the National Rape Crisis Helpline. [191879]

Paul Goggins: We have considered the findings and recommendations of an independent scoping study which looked at options for establishing a helpline service and involved key stakeholder groups. We have recently approved proposals for the helpline structure, service scope, and recommended core client groups. We are looking further at what information services may be required to support the helpline and will be developing a procurement strategy to enable us to select an appropriate service provider. While preparatory work on the helpline continues, our immediate priority is to support the development of a range of good quality, sustainable local services which will support the helpline and are critical to its success.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that abuse survivor groups and sexual abuse support centres are in place to provide counselling to clients referred to them by the National Rape Crisis Helpline. [191880]

Paul Goggins: We are providing an additional £4 million over two years to support the development of services for victims of sexual crime. Many of the services will support the helpline when it is opened. Some of the extra funding is being used to extend the network of Sexual Assault Referral Centres (SARCs) and some will be made available to develop a range of sustainable local services—often provided by voluntary and community sector organisations. We will be publishing further information and inviting applications shortly.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with colleagues in the Department of Health on the problems and needs of survivors of rape and sexual abuse. [191881]

Paul Goggins: We have established good links between the two Departments on these issues. A joint working group of Home Office and Department of Health officials has been set up to oversee the strengthening and extension of the Sexual Assault Referral Centre (SARCs) network in England and Wales. The development of SARCs has been discussed by the Interdepartmental Ministerial Group on Sexual Offending, which is chaired by the Home Office and includes a representative from the Department of Health. Officials are also working closely with Department of Health colleagues on plans to map and further develop non-statutory community-based services and to produce service guidelines in this area.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the planned National Rape Crisis Helpline will be available to adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse. [191882]

Paul Goggins: Yes. Although we have used the working title of a National Rape Helpline, evidence from the scoping study suggests very strongly that the helpline will need to cater for a wider group of core service users, including adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations he has made into possible links between adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse and the victims of rape. [191883]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office has not commissioned any work in this area.

Rapiscan Secure Apparatus

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what air kerma rate has been used to assess radiation doses associated with the use of the Rapiscan Secure 1000 apparatus. [188057]

Mr. Blunkett: The information sought is not in the public domain.

Reoffending

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what targets have been set for reducing reoffending. [196705]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office targets are as follows.

To reduce the rate of reconvictions by 5 per cent. for adult and young offenders by 2003–04 compared to a 1997 baseline (Home Office Public Service Agreement, 'Spending Review 2000: Public Service Agreements 2001–2004', published in July 2000 (CM4808)).

To reduce re-offending by 5 per cent. for young offenders and for adults sentenced to imprisonment or sentenced to community sentences by 2005–06 compared to a 2000 baseline (Home Office Public Service Agreement, published in the White Paper '2002 Spending Review, Public Service Agreements 2003–2006' in July 2002 (CM 5571)).

The Home Office Strategic Plan for 2004–2008: Confident Communities in a Secure Britain, published in July 2004 (CM 6287), gives a commitment that re-offending rates will have fallen by 5 per cent. by 2007–08 working towards 10 per cent. by the end of the decade against a baseline of 2002–03.

Repeat Offenders

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his latest estimate is of the proportion of overall crime committed by the core group of repeat offenders; and if he will make a statement. [191311]

Paul Goggins: Analysis based on data from the Offenders Index suggests that 10 per cent. of active offenders accumulate at least 50 per cent. of standard list offences. This figure was published in "Criminal Justice: The Way Ahead" (2001).

Secure Training Centres

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions young people have been admitted to hospital from secure training centres in each of the last three years. [190310]

Paul Goggins: The figures supplied by secure training centre operators are as follows:

	Admissions to hospital for any reason
Secure training centre	2001	2002	2003
Medway	2	2	2
Rainsbrook	2	4	3
Hassockfield	0	0	1
Oakhill	n/a	n/a	n/a

Sentencing Guidelines Council

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Department's target is for the timescale from issue of draft guidelines by the Sentencing Guidelines Council to issue of the final guidelines to be taken into consideration by the courts. [195857]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 4 November 2004]: Once the Sentencing Guidelines Council issues a final guideline the courts must then have regard to it when sentencing offenders. Where the guideline deals with new legislation it will become applicable on commencement of the relevant provisions.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors will be taken into consideration during scrutiny of (a) draft guidelines issued by the Sentencing Guidelines Council in September 2004 and (b) future draft guidelines. [195859]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 4 November 2004]: In considering draft guidelines issued by the Sentencing Guidelines Council we will have regard to our stated goal of reducing reoffending and our policy that custody should be used for the most serious, dangerous and seriously persistent offenders. Most other offenders will normally be punished more effectively in the community.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what process of parliamentary scrutiny will occur prior to the issue of final guidelines by the Sentencing Guidelines Council. [195913]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 4 November 2004]: Parliamentary scrutiny of the draft guidelines issued by the Sentencing Guidelines Council is undertaken by the Home Affairs Select Committee.

Sentencing Policy

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures (a) are in place and (b) will be introduced to encourage sentencers to make more use of fines. [196618]

Paul Goggins: The Government are committed to reinvigorating the fine to ensure it is a credible and effective penalty.

DCA is leading a major initiative to improve fine enforcement. This includes new enforcement powers in the Courts Act 2003, currently being piloted in six areas. Fine payments rates are already improving as a result of this effort. Performance in the first quarter of 2004 was 81 per cent. of monies due collected, up from 76 per cent. in the last quarter of 2003–04 and a significant improvement on the 69 per cent. baseline.

The Government have also accepted the proposal made in the Carter Report, "Managing Offenders, Reducing Crime", that there should be a day fine scheme. Such a scheme would link fines more closely to an offender's ability to pay so that fines should bear more equally on offenders of differing means. We are currently developing proposals, which will require primary legislation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the conditional cautioning pilots. [196619]

Ms Blears: The Conditional Caution is a statutory disposal for offenders aged 18 and over and can be given only on the authority of the relevant prosecutor. The scheme was introduced by the Criminal Justice Act, 2003, and the relevant provisions commenced on 3 July 2004. The use of Conditional Cautions is governed by a Code of Practice (SI 2004/1683).

Although the provisions of the Act have been commenced for England and Wales, use of the Conditional Caution is limited to the areas specified in the schedule to the Director of Public Prosecution's Guidance on the Administration of Conditional Cautions. This guidance will be issued shortly under section 37A of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984. Custody Officers must comply with this guidance when deciding how to deal with an individual.

Implementation of the new provision will be phased and initially limited to the following areas:

Thames Valley;
Northumbria;
South Yorkshire;
Lancashire;
West Mercia; and
Avon and Somerset

It is also anticipated that Conditional Cautions will be used in the Community Justice Centre in North Liverpool.

A significant amount of planning has already taken place in these areas and we expect the first schemes to be launched in November and December of this year. The use of Conditional Cautioning in these areas will be subject to a full evaluation, and all the documentation relating to Conditional Cautions will be reviewed prior to commencing national roll-out of the scheme, later in 2005.

Sex Abuse Cases/Investigations

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the changes to the operation instructions on disclosure in sex abuse cases. [191293]

Paul Goggins: As part of the implementation of the Criminal Justice Act 2003, the Government are currently consulting on two codes of practice which are required to implement Part 5 of the Act on Disclosure. Full details of this consultation exercise may be found on the Home Office website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/docs3/cja_consultation.html.
Changes to other operational guidance, the Attorney General's Guidelines on Disclosure and the CPS/ACPO Joint Operational Instructions on disclosure, will be made as appropriate to reflect the provisions of the 2003 Act. None of this guidance relates specifically to sex abuse cases.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines are in place to regulate trawling by the police in historical sex abuse investigations. [197442]

Paul Goggins: Guidance for police on appropriate techniques for investigating allegations of historical child abuse such as dip sampling is contained in "The Investigation of Historical/Institutional Child Abuse—Senior Investigating Officer's Handbook" produced by the Association of Chief Police Officers. This is currently being reviewed to ensure the guidance is kept up to date and includes lessons to be learnt from more recent cases.

Sex Offender Escape (HMP Prescoed)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the incident on 6 October when a convicted sex offender absconded from open conditions at HMP Prescoed near Usk; what assessment of risk was made of the prisoner (a) when he was transferred to HMP Prescoed and (b) after he absconded from HMP Prescoed; and what advice was given to local schools following the incident. [192865]

Paul Goggins: It is not the Government's policy to comment on individual prisoners. I can confirm that a prisoner did abscond from Prescoed prison 6 October. He was apprehended the following evening a short distance from the prison. Prior to his transfer from Usk prison to Prescoed he was assessed by a multi-agency public protection panel as presenting a low risk of re-offending. That assessment remained valid after his abscond and there is no evidence that he offended while at large. The police revised their assessment once he was at large and said, as is usual, that he should not be approached. The local education authority decided to advise schools to ensure that children were escorted to and from schools in the area. All the relevant agencies are in discussions to ensure that, should a further abscond of a sex offender take place, the local community receives appropriate advice.

Sex Offenders

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is his policy to apply for full planning permission from local authorities in relation to the location of new sex offender treatment centres; and if he will make a statement. [195748]

Paul Goggins: The provision of any new residential sex offender treatment centres will comply with planning law. It is anticipated that applications will be submitted to the appropriate local authority before any final decision is taken.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the reasons why convicted sex offenders choose not to participate in the Sex Offender Treatment Programme. [191685]

Paul Goggins: To inform policy and practice research has been undertaken into the reasons why offenders choose not to participate in the Sex Offender Treatment Programme in prison. Reasons for non-participation are complex but by far the most common reason is denial of guilt. Other reasons include a fear of disclosing the offence to other prisoners, the reaction of the family, concerns about what the treatment programme entails, the relationship with staff, and the prison environment. The Prison Service is implementing a strategy to address the issues identified by the research, with the aim of reducing significantly the numbers refusing treatment.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice was sought from the Children's Commissioner for Wales about the decision to transfer sex offenders to open conditions at HMP Prescoed; and if he will request an assessment of the risk to children from the Children's Commissioner. [195311]

Paul Goggins: All Sex Offenders who are transferred to HMP Prescoed are subject to a thorough risk assessment and have been judged suitable for open conditions by the Parole Board. The Children's Commissioner for Wales has been invited to visit HMP Prescoed. Should he take up that offer I would be happy to receive and consider his comments on the risk assessment process.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the legal definition is of a sex offender. [195495]

Paul Goggins: The term 'sex offender' is used in a variety of contexts—legal and otherwise—and there is not one legal definition.

Part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 sets out 'relevant offenders' for the purposes of the notification requirements (section 80). The notification requirements are often known as the 'sex offenders register' but the term does not appear in the legislation.

'Relevant offenders' for the purposes of the notification requirements are:

> offenders who have received a conviction, caution or finding for one of the offences listed in Schedule 3 to the Act, > offenders who have received a conviction, caution or finding overseas for an offence equivalent to those listed in Schedule 3 to the Act and who have been made subject to a notification order, > offenders who have received a conviction, caution or finding for one the offences listed in Schedule 3 or Schedule 5 to the Act and have been made subject to a sexual offences prevention order, > offenders who have received a conviction, caution or finding for breach of a risk of sexual harm order.

Section 327 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 sets out the 'relevant sexual or violent offenders' to whom the Multi-Agency Public Protection Arrangements in section 325 apply. These include all of the 'registered sex offenders' and also all offenders who have received a conviction or finding for an offence listed in Schedule 15 to the Act and received a disposal to a certain threshold.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the terms of reference are for the interdepartmental ministerial group on sex offending. [191523]

Paul Goggins: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced his intention to establish the Inter-Departmental Ministerial Group on Sexual Offending in July 2003. The Group has been set up to ensure that the implementation of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 is incorporated into wider work in tackling sexual offending. The Group's terms of reference are:

> To co-ordinate and promote action to reduce sex offending and improve services for victims of it.
> To send out clear messages about this to the general public and key target groups.
> To identify deliverable outcomes and monitor progress in achieving them.
> To co-ordinate financial resources so that these can have the maximum impact.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recommendations have been made by the interdepartmental ministerial group on sex offending as a result of their monitoring of the Press Complaints Commission regulations. [191525]

Paul Goggins: The Inter-Departmental Ministerial Group on Sexual Offending has not made any recommendations relating to the Press Complaints Commission regulations. The Group has considered preliminary arrangements for monitoring the impact of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 and decided to assess the situation after a full year of operation, that is after May 2005. Among the matters it will be considering at that point will be the impact of the Press Complaints Commission regulations.

Sexual Offences

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of sex offence cases brought to court resulted in a conviction in each of the last five years. [196634]

Paul Goggins: The available information, relating to defendants proceeded against and found guilty at all courts for sexual offences, England and Wales 1998 to 2002 is shown in the table. The conviction rate for all five years has also been provided.

Number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates' courts and found guilty at all courts for sexual offences, England and Wales 1998 to 2002[1]

	Proceeded against	Found guilty	Conviction rate[2]
1998	7,763	4,567	59
1999	7,817	4,304	55
2000	7,263	3,943	54
2001	8,424	4,043	48
2002	9,102	4,384	48

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.

[2] The proportion of defendants proceeded against who were found guilty.

Statistics on court proceedings for 2003 will be published on the 18 November.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether an assessment has been made of how suggestive interviewing, or the use of the recovered memories can lead to false allegations of sex offences against individuals. [196640]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office has not made a formal assessment of, or conducted research into whether suggestive interviewing or the use of recovered memories can lead to false allegations of sexual offences.

The Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) National Investigative Interviewing Strategic Steering Group has developed and delivered a dynamic interview strategy which includes a Practical Guide to Investigative Interviewing 2004. Amongst other things, this highlights the dangers of suggestive interviewing. The Investigative Interviewing Strategy underpins training on effective interviewing for police of all levels, including specialist interviewers who are employed in cases involving traumatised victims or witnesses.

Complementary guidance on interviewing vulnerable or intimidated witnesses, which includes victims of sexual offences, is contained in "Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings: Guidance for Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses, including Children" issued in January 2002. This guidance became operational in May 2002 when it superseded "Memorandum of Good Practice on Video Recorded Interviews with Child Witnesses for Criminal Proceedings". Achieving Best Evidence contains comprehensive guidance on planning and conducting interviews with vulnerable or intimidated witnesses and includes sections on style, content and types of questions.

This guidance document was produced as a result of a wider assessment by an interdepartmental working group of the treatment of vulnerable or intimidated witnesses, including the victims of sexual offences, in the criminal justice system. The working group's findings and recommendations were published in the Speaking Up For Justice report (Home Office, 1998).

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines have been issued on best practice in interviewing techniques for sex offence victims; what checks are in place to ensure that these techniques are used; and what estimate has been made of the percentage of interviews which deviate from this standard. [196641]

Paul Goggins: Guidance on interviewing vulnerable or intimidated witnesses, which includes victims of sexual offences, is contained in "Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings: Guidance for Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses, including Children" issued in January 2002. This guidance became operational in May 2002 when it superseded "Memorandum of Good Practice on Video Recorded Interviews with Child Witnesses for Criminal Proceedings".

While this guidance is advisory and does not constitute a legally enforceable code of conduct, it warns that significant departures from the guidance may have to be justified in the courts.

It is a responsibility of statutory agencies involved in the interviewing of witnesses in criminal proceedings to ensure that appropriate techniques are used.

Information about the percentage of interviews which deviate from standard is not held centrally and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to encourage sex offence victims to (a) report their abuse and (b) act as a witness in court. [196644]

Paul Goggins: The Government have implemented a range of measures with a view to encouraging sex offence victims to report abuse and to act as a witness in court.

In 2002, the Government published their Rape Action Plan including steps to improve the investigation and prosecution of rape cases and the treatment of victims and witnesses. The intention is that these measures will help to bring more cases to justice, increase public confidence and consequently encourage victims to report their abuse. Key elements of the RAP include:

specialist training of Sexual Offence Liaison Officers and Rape Victim Chaperones.

Specialist rape prosecutors, and rape co-ordinators in each of the 42 CPS areas.

Guidance on special measures such as allowing victims to give their evidence from behind a screen, or on video, helping to sustain cases which would otherwise stand no chance of getting to court, and encourage victims to act as witnesses.

An important recommendation from the Rape Action Plan is that forces support the development of Sexual Assault Referral Centres (SARCs)—integrated services where victims of rape and sexual assault can have their various medical, forensic, counselling and support needs met quickly and sympathetically, in one location, by properly trained staff. A recent evaluation of SARCs (Home Office Research Study 285: Lovett, J., Regan, L. and Kelly, L. (2004),) reported high levels of victim satisfaction. While victims may use the services of a SARC without reporting to the police, they are encouraged to do so, and if they do not wish to report immediately, they are still able to undergo a forensic examination in case they decide to report at a later date.

There are now 13 SARCs across England, with more under development. Over this and the next financial year, a proportion of the £4 million set aside from the Victims Fund for services to victims of sexual offending will help to extend and strengthen the SARCs network. Work is also underway to raise awareness about SARCs. If people who have been raped are confident that they will be treated with respect and dignity, they may be more likely to report to the police.

The remainder of the £4 million will be used to develop voluntary and community sector based services for victims of sexual offending. The services will be available regardless of whether a victim chooses to report the offence or testify in court but we hope more victims of sexual crime will have the confidence to report the offences and that more victims can be supported as their cases go through the criminal justice process.

Vulnerable or intimidated witnesses (VIWs) are being encouraged to testify by the range of special measures available to them under the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999. Home Office Research Study 283, "Are special measures working? Evidence from surveys of vulnerable and intimidated witnesses" (Home Office, June 2004) shows that:

> Around half of witnesses who did not have the opportunity to give evidence with the aid of special measures said that they would have found special measures helpful.
> Witnesses who used special measures were significantly more confident that the criminal justice system was effective in bringing those who commit crimes to justice and effective in meeting the needs of victims.
> 44 per cent. of victims of sexual offences said they would not have given evidence without special measures.

Additional steps have been taken to ensure that victims and witnesses, more generally, are willing to give evidence in court. In 2003, the National Criminal Justice Board asked each Local Criminal Justice Board to undertake work to increase public confidence in the Criminal Justice System—one of the key issues being victim and witness satisfaction. This work continues and on Monday 18 October the Office of Criminal Justice Reform published the Victim and Witness Delivery Plan "Improving Services for Victims and Witnesses", setting out the Government's seven priorities for victims and witnesses.

Local Criminal Justice Boards are also delivering the Criminal Case Management Programme which will ensure that charges are more appropriately brought, that trials are more effectively managed and that witnesses and victims receive proper care and information.

Increased public confidence and better criminal case management will encourage more victims and witnesses to come forward and give evidence in court.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alternatives to court attendance are available for witnesses in sex offence cases. [196645]

Paul Goggins: The Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 provides a range of measures to assist vulnerable or intimidated witnesses to give their best evidence. The special measures include video-recorded evidence in chief and live links. These provisions enable a witness to give their evidence from outside the courtroom and, in some cases, the witness may not have to attend the court building at all.

Sections 16 and 17 of the 1990 Act define the categories of witness eligible for special measures. Complainants in sexual offence proceedings are automatically eligible witnesses by virtue of section 17 unless they say that they do not want to be. All witnesses aged under 17 at the time of the hearing are automatically eligible witnesses by virtue of section 16. Other witnesses will be eligible for assistance if the court determines that the quality of their evidence would be diminished by reason of a mental disorder, or a learning disability or a physical disability or disorder (under section 16) or because of their fear and distress at testifying (section 17).

All child witnesses in sexual offence cases are entitled to have a video recording admitted as their evidence in chief and otherwise give their evidence via a live link unless the court decides that this would be against the interests of justice. For adults the court needs to be satisfied that the provision of special measures would improve the quality of the witness' evidence.

The introduction of special measures is being phased to enable evaluation of how they are working and to provide time for agencies to prepare for full implementation.

Video recorded evidence in chief is available in all cases in the Crown Court to all witnesses eligible under section 16, which includes all child witnesses. It is also available to child witnesses in sexual offence cases heard in magistrates' courts. Additionally, this measure is available to witnesses eligible under section 17 in a limited number of pilot courts.

Live links are available to all section 16 or section 17 witnesses in the Crown Court and to child witnesses in sexual offence cases in magistrates' courts. Live links are also available to adult witnesses as a pilot in West London Magistrates' Court.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of (a) interviewing and (b) therapeutic techniques used with sex offence victims. [196646]

Paul Goggins: Guidance on interviewing vulnerable or intimidated witnesses, including victims of sexual offences, is contained in "Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings: Guidance for Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses, including Children" issued in January 2002. This guidance became operational in May 2002 when it superseded "Memorandum of Good Practice on Video Recorded Interviews with Child Witnesses for Criminal Proceedings".

Guidance on therapy is provided in "Provision of Therapy for Child Witnesses Prior to a Criminal Trial: Practice Guidance" and "Provision of Therapy for Vulnerable or Intimidated Adult Witnesses Prior to a Criminal Trial: Practice Guidance" issued in 2001 and 2002, respectively. This guidance took effect immediately.

These guidance documents were produced as a result of a wider assessment by an interdepartmental working group into the treatment of vulnerable or intimidated witnesses, including the victims of sexual offences, in the criminal justice system. The working group's findings and recommendations were published in the Speaking Up For Justice report (Home Office, 1998).

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate has been made of the number of unreported sex offences. [196648]

Paul Goggins: The British Crime Survey (BCS) systematically collects information on rape, although due to the sensitivity of such questions in a face-to-face crime survey it is recognised that the subsequent results may provide an unreliable indicator. For this reason, they are not routinely published. However, self-completion modules on sexual victimisation put to respondents aged 16 to 59 have been included in the 1998, 2000, 2001 and currently in the 2004/05 BCS.

The 2001 results are published in Home Office research study 276 'Domestic violence, sexual victimisation and stalking: findings from the British Crime Survey'. This report showed that in only 12 per cent. of worst incidents of female serious sexual assault suffered since the age of 16 did the police come to know about it.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) support and (b) treatment is available for prisoners who disclose information to the police about historical sex abuse against them. [196649]

Paul Goggins: Prisons assist the police in making facilities available when investigating offences. Any information about historical sex abuse disclosed in these circumstances by prisoners to the police will be treated in confidence and not shared with prison staff. However, prisoners may choose to disclose such information to staff.

The support and treatment available for prisoners who have been sexually abused in the past varies between prison establishments, reflecting local circumstances. Prison psychologists, for example, may be able to offer one-to-one help in some cases, although the psychological and therapeutic work done with victims of sexual abuse can be a long slow process. Help may be limited to information or advice or referral to appropriate agencies in their local communities on release. Some prison programmes, such as anger management, may address the impact of abuse indirectly. Prisoners who have a history of sexual abuse are at a greater risk of suicide or self-harm and guidance to staff on managing prisoners who self-harm has been circulated to establishments.

Similar Fact Evidence

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of similar fact evidence. [197441]

Paul Goggins: At present, evidence of a defendant's bad character is generally inadmissible in criminal proceedings but the common law "similar fact" rule allows the prosecution to rely on a defendant's previous misconduct in certain circumstances. However the bad character provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003, to be implemented in December 2004, will abolish this and other common law rules governing the admissibility of such evidence in criminal proceedings. In their place the Act adopts an inclusionary approach to a defendant's previous convictions and sets out a number of "gateways" through which evidence of a defendant's bad character may be admissible, where relevant and probative. One of these is where such evidence is "relevant to an important matter in issue between the defendant and the prosecution". The Act makes clear that such "matters in issue between the defendant and the prosecution"

include the question of whether the defendant has a propensity to commit offences of the kind with which he is charged. Evidence of propensity could include similar fact evidence.

Spray Paints

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions a person has received a level four fine for selling spray paints to someone under the age of 16 years on Merseyside. [191326]

Paul Goggins: Selling spray paints to someone under the age of 16 years is an offence under section 54 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 which came into force on 31 March 2004.

Court proceedings statistics for 2004 will be published around November 2005.

Support Services (Funding)

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the recent changes in central funding for (a) survivor organisations and (b) rape and sexual abuse support centres on their ability to continue to provide services. [191977]

Paul Goggins: We have made no formal assessment but recognise that financial stability for local service providers and survivor groups is critical to ensuring their ability to deliver services to victims. We are making available £4 million additional funding over two years as a contribution to the development of services for victims, although we do not believe that central Government should bear sole responsibility for supporting local service delivery organisations. Local ownership and support—including financial support—is vital to ensuring the future of local provision.

Victim Support

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support he will provide to victims in North Devon following the closure of the Victim Support office in Barnstaple. [193962]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office has provided funding to Victim Support since 1979. Over the last few years this funding has nearly trebled, from £11.7 million at the start of 1997–98 to £30 million in 2004–05.

The Home Office-Victim Support Grant-in-Aid memorandum sets out the services that Victim Support are expected to deliver to victims and witnesses. However, decisions regarding the management of these services in Devon are the responsibility of the Victim Support Devon Board of Trustees.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what types of support and therapy are available to victims in sex abuse cases as their case advances through the criminal justice system. [195484]

Paul Goggins: Victim Support is the main organisation in England and Wales that provides support to victims and witnesses of crime, including victims of sexual offending. This year Victim Support have been offered £30 million grant-in-aid funding from the Home Office to enable them to provide this support.

All Victim Support volunteers complete a core training programme. Additional training is provided for those volunteers working with victims of sexual offending.

A number of specialist organisations exist to offer support and other services to victims of sexual offending. The Home Office has allocated an additional £4 million funding over two years to develop services for victims of sexual crime. Part of this funding will be used to support the development of local services, provided in many cases by the voluntary and community sector.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there are victim advocates to support victims in sex abuse cases. [195485]

Paul Goggins: Victim Support is the main organisation in England and Wales that provides support and practical help to victims and witnesses of crime, including victims of sexual offending. This year Victim Support has been offered £30 million grant-in-aid funding from the Home Office to enable them to provide this support.

Victim Support offers free and confidential support regardless of whether the crime has been reported to the police. Victim Support can help in dealing with other organisations and provide links to additional sources of help. If a victim attends court then Victim Support's Witness Service can provide support before, during and after a hearing.

A number of specialist organisations exist to offer support and other services to victims of sexual offending. The Home Office has allocated an additional £4 million funding over two years to develop services for victims of sexual crime. Part of this funding will be used to support the development of local services, provided in many cases by the voluntary and community sector.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of known child sex abuse victims received help from (a) sexual assault referral centres, (b) the National Association for People Abused in Childhood, (c) Family Matters, (d) Lifeline and (e) other victim support groups in each of the last seven years. [195727]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office does not routinely collect data on the percentage of known child sex abuse victims receiving help from these organisations, and has not carried out any specific research on this issue.

Witnesses (Video Recording)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the video recording of witnesses under section 17 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 is at the discretion of the individual. [191294]

Paul Goggins: Witnesses who fall within the scope of section 17 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 are those who because of age, personal circumstances and the nature of the alleged offence may qualify for Special Measures if the court is satisfied that the quality of their evidence is likely to be diminished by reason of their fear or distress.

In reaching a decision on whether Special Measures should be invoked, in this instance section 27—video recorded evidence in chief, the courts must take account of the wishes of the individual witness. It is imperative therefore that investigators establish at an early stage whether the section 17 witness is likely to qualify for a Special Measures Direction under the 1999 Act.

If so this will need to be discussed with the witness to ascertain their views. It is essential that the police, social workers, the prosecution and defence and also court officials take account of the individual circumstances of each witness, together with their expressed needs and wishes, in order to provide support sufficient to enable all witnesses to give their best evidence. The guidance "Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings" makes this clear to practitioners.

The Implementation of Special Measures is being phased to enable evaluation of how they are working before full roll out. Video recorded evidence in chief is not currently available to witnesses who would only be eligible by virtue of section 17 of the 1999 Act. Subject to the success of pilots currently under way this will be extended to these witnesses in May 2005.

Work Permits

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time taken from point of application to issue of a work permit was in 2003; and if he will make a statement. [193346]

Mr. Browne: The average length of time taken to issue a work permit from receipt of the application at Work Permits (UK) in 2003 was four days. This includes time spent gaining further information and checking references with posts overseas, where necessary.

Young Offender Institutions

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department what action he is taking to stop bullying and violence among inmates in young offender institutions; and if he will make a statement. [191957]

Paul Goggins: Reducing violence, in all its forms, is fundamental to the objectives of the Prison Service. By constructively and consistently taking action to prevent violence and promote fairness and decency, prisons can offer a structured environment in which to influence future behaviour, encourage positive communication and develop social skills that assist offenders with rehabilitation. Further, maintaining a safe environment reduces stress and anxiety, and promotes individual, organisational and public confidence.

All Prison Service establishments, including young offender institutions, are required by Prison Service Order 2,750 to have (by November 2004) a strategy to reduce violence. The Prison Service's definition of violence is 'any incident in which a person is, abused, threatened, or assaulted. This includes an explicit or implicit challenge to their safety, well-being or health. The resulting harm may be physical, emotional or psychological.' Moreover all prison establishments are required to have an anti-bullying strategy in place, under the umbrella of violence reduction. The Prison Service's desired approach to perpetrators is one where:

> Personal responsibility for incidents is based on an understanding of the causes, rather than allocating blame;
> Wherever possible, a responsive rather than a reactive approach from the organisation is taken; and
> While an assailant is left in no doubt that the behaviour is unacceptable and will not be tolerated, sustained, reasoned change in behaviour rather than retribution is sought.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what grounds it has been proposed to privatise Her Majesty's Young Offenders Institution at Wetherby; what consultation with the (a) governors, (b) staff and (c) Board of Visitors (i) there has been and (ii) is proposed for this proposal; and if he will make a statement. [192232]

Paul Goggins: There are no plans to privatise any public sector prisons or Young Offender Institutions.

We are considering how to take forward market within the National Offender Management Service. No decision has yet been taken.

HEALTH

Agency Temporary Staff

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many agency temporary staff have been working for his Department in each of the last five years, excluding those working for agencies for which no data are kept centrally. [195248]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 1 November 2004]: The number of temporary staff employed through employment agencies can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Department does not keep a central record of the number of temporary staff employed through employment agencies.

Alzheimer's

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the clinical effectiveness of anti-dementia drugs; [196931]

(2) when he expects the National Institute for Clinical Excellence to complete its review of drug treatments for Alzheimer's disease. [196932]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) issued guidance on the clinical and cost effectiveness of donepezil, rivastigmine and galantamine for the treatment of mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease in January 2001. It is conducting a review of its guidance and expects to publish revised guidance in May 2005. Memantine (for the treatment of moderate to severe Alzheimer's disease) is currently being appraised by NICE and the Institute's recommendations on the drug's use will be included in the review of the earlier appraisal. Full details are available on the website for NICE at www.nice.org.uk

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he last met representatives of the Alzheimer's Society; and what issues were discussed; [196933]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to improve the treatment and care of Alzheimer's patients; and what steps his Department is taking to support Alzheimer's patients' carers; [196934]

(3) what steps his Department is taking to increase public awareness of dementia; and if he will make a statement. [196935]

Dr. Ladyman: Ministers and officials at the Department have regular meetings with the Alzheimer's Society. I recently met with them on 10 November. They raised several issues associated with the development of a vision for adult social care.

The national service framework (NSF) for older people, which we published in March 2001, sets out a range of national standards and service models of care across health and social services. Standard seven of the NSF aims to promote good mental health in older people, and to treat and support people of all ages with dementia, including Alzheimer's disease.

In addition, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has appraised the use of anti-dementia drugs. NICE is also appraising the use of non-Alzheimer's dementia drugs. Finally, NICE is developing a comprehensive guideline on the management and treatment of older people with dementia, which will build on the medication appraisals. This will be available early in 2007.

It is essential that awareness of the needs of people with Alzheimer's disease, and of their carers is raised to help ensure that those needs are met. Through grants to the Alzheimer's Society, the Department has funded a range of projects to increase awareness and understanding of Alzheimer's disease. In 2004–05 the Society received £32,000 to support a project to promote awareness of vascular dementia.

Barnet and Chase Farm NHS Trust

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects on (a) costs and (b) services of the merger of Barnet and Chase Farm hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [197515]

Dr. Ladyman: The creation of a single trust in 1999 will have led to savings in management costs from the merger of the two organisations for reinvestment in patient services. Service developments and changes since the merger will have been the result of normal National Health Service management action, including the involvement of patients and the public.

Barnet Hospital

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients from Barnet had NHS operations and other treatment (a) overseas and (b) outside London in each of the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [197519]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of patients from Barnet and Chase Farm Hospital National Health Service Trust waiting for treatment who went on to receive treatment overseas under the London patient choice project is:

	Number
2004–05	13
2003–04	49

The information requested on the number of patients from Barnet who had NHS treatment outside London is shown in the table.

Bed Occupancy Rates

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the trusts operating with bed occupancy levels higher than the Department of Health's target of 82 per cent. [193455]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not have a target for bed occupancy. National health service organisation data including bed occupancy rates for 2000–01 to 2003–04, are available on the Department's website at www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/index.htm.

Birmingham Heartlands Hospital

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ask the management of Birmingham Heartlands Hospital to carry out an urgent investigation into levels of cleanliness and hygiene and to publish its findings. [193777]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There were 106 reported methycillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections at the Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull National Health Service Trust (Teaching) during 2003–04. This equates to 0.26 incidences per 1,000 bed days[1].

We are committed to reducing healthcare associated infections and we have set a new national target of year-on-year reductions in MRSA infection rates.

Birmingham and The Black Country Strategic Health Authority (SHA) is currently reviewing implementation in its area of the guidance contained in "Winning ways: working together to reduce healthcare associated infection in England", which was issued by the Chief Medical Officer in December 2003.

The SHA reports that the trust has a robust infection control plan, in line with the guidance, and has passed external inspections by the patient environment action team. The trust is also conducting its own inquiry, involving an independent investigator, into cleanliness and hygiene at the trust.

The findings of this inquiry will be made available once it is completed.

Bullying

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the financial cost resulting from bullying in the NHS in the last year for which figures are available. [196257]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not collected and held centrally, although it may be available from individual national health service employing organisations. The Government has made it clear that no form of bullying or harassment will be tolerated in the NHS. NHS employers are expected to take proactive action to prevent such behaviour and to take effective action to tackle it when it occurs.

Cancer

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health hat actions his Department has taken to improve the rly diagnosis of cancer since the publication by e National Audit Office of its report, "Tackling cancer England: saving more lives", HC 364, Session 03–04. [197217]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The cancer policy team within e Department is currently developing a programme of ork to raise public awareness of symptoms which ight result in the diagnosis of cancer and to encourage people with those symptoms to seek medical advice as early as possible.

This work is being undertaken in conjunction with a variety of key stakeholders, including clinicians, researchers, charities and patient representatives.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations for cancer were carried out in hospitals covering the constituency of Bolsover in (a) 1997, (b) 2000 and (c) 2003. [197094]

Dr. Ladyman: Information relating to those national health service trusts most likely to treat patients from the Bolsover constituency is shown in the table.

Notes:
Finished consultant episode (FCE)—A FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.
All operations count of episodes—These figures represent a count of all FCE's where the procedure was mentioned in any of the 12 (four prior to 2002–03) operation fields in a HES record. A record is only included once in each count, even if an operation is mentioned in more than one operation field of the record.
Diagnosis (primary diagnosis)—The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
Ungrossed data—Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Cardiac Rehabilitation

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances the provision of cardiac rehabilitation is a mandatory requirement for NHS trusts; and if he will make a statement. [196879]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Provision for cardiac rehabilitation is addressed in standard 12 of the national service framework (NSF) for coronary heart disease. Standards are quality requirements which describe the care that clinicians and others will use to guide their practice. Standard 12 states:

> "NHS Trusts should put in place agreed protocols/systems of care so that, prior to leaving hospital, people admitted to hospital suffering from coronary heart disease have been invited to participate in a multidisciplinary programme of secondary prevention and cardiac rehabilitation. The aim of the programme will be to reduce their risk of subsequent cardiac problems and to promote their return to a full and normal life."

Service models for the delivery of this standard are set out in the NSF.

Care Homes

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) England have been in (i) voluntary sector, (ii) local authority and (iii) private sector care homes in each year since 1997. [193606]

Dr. Ladyman: Information about the number of places in care homes is collected but information about the number of people in those places is not centrally available.

The number of care home places in Gateshead and South Tyneside, Newcastle and North Tyneside, Northumberland, and England at 31 March for the years 1997 to 2001 is shown in the table.

I understand from the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that figures for later years were collected by the National Care Standards Commission and now CSCI, but that comparable details are not available.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many new care homes have been built by local authorities in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) England in each year since 1997; [193607]

(2) how many new care homes are being built in the private sector in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) England in each year since 1997; [193608]

(3) how many new care homes have been built in the voluntary sector in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) England in each year since 1997; [193610]

(4) how many care homes have closed in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) England in each year since 1997. [193633]

Dr. Ladyman: Information about the total number of care homes is collected, but information about the number of care homes opening and closing is not centrally available.

Data are not available for the areas requested. The table shows the number of care homes for the nearest equivalent areas at 31 March for the years 1997 to 2001.

I understand from the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that figures for later years were collected by the National Care Standards Commission and now CSCI, but that comparable details are not available.

Care Records

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provision there will be for the care record system to be shared with private sector providers undertaking NHS work; [197281]

(2) what safeguards will be put in place by the national programme for IT to ensure information cannot be shared with organisations outside the NHS. [197282]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Care Records Service (NHS CRS) will incorporate stringent security controls and safeguards to prevent unrestricted or uncontrolled access to personal information. Access will only be available to authorised national health service healthcare professionals who must be registered and authenticated users of the NHS CRS. They must have a legitimate relationship with the patient, that is they must be directly involved with the delivery of their care and have a 'need to know' relevant to that role. A record will be kept of everyone who accesses a patient's record and alerts will be raised if anyone tries to access a record in contravention of predetermined system rules.

Breaches of confidence by staff working within or under contract to NHS organisations, or inappropriate use of health records or abuse of computer systems, may lead to disciplinary measures, bring into question professional registration, and possibly result in legal proceedings.

Where an NHS patient is referred for treatment to a private sector healthcare provider, or in another European Union state, relevant information will be made available where appropriate through the existing request mechanisms, but access to the information on the NHS CRS will be under exactly the same stringent conditions.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether a patient's right to opt out of having personal information on the care record system will include all information on the care record; [197283]

(2) what plans his Department has to notify individual patients of their right to opt out of having personal information on their care record shared within the NHS. [197284]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Westbury (Dr. Murrison) on 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 176W, and on 8 November 2004, Official Report, column 538W.

Community Health Councils

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the running costs of (a) community health councils in the last year of operation and (b) the replacement systems have been to date. [188237]

Ms Rosie Winterton [pursuant to her reply, 4 October 2004, Official Report, c. 1956–57W]: I regret my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows:

In 2002–03, the last year of the operation of community health councils (CHCs), the total running costs for CHCs was £13.981 million. By the end of 2004–05, the total running and set up costs of the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health (CPPIH) will be £66.76 million. This figure includes all costs associated with patients' forums. It also includes CPPIH set up costs of around £2.5 million in 2002–03.

Decontamination

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contaminated medical devices were submitted to the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency without having been suitably cleaned prior to decontamination in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [197288]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As part of the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency's (MHRA) investigation of an adverse incident it may be necessary to request submission of the device involved for examination by the Agency's medical device specialists. Where such a devices are submitted without sufficient evidence of adequate decontamination, those devices will, for the safety and protection of the Agency staff who may handle them, be decontaminated prior to examination.

Advice and warnings about the submission of contaminated items is clearly provided in MHRA printed publications and guidance. In particular, a special medical device alert on adverse incident reporting is updated and re-issued at the beginning of each year. The advice is also repeated on medical device adverse incident report forms, on the MHRA's website and on the MHRA on-line reporting system.

Dentistry

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) of 14 September 2004, Official Report, columns 1122–1123, on dental schools, what system of commissioning is in place to report the dental work force figures. [195118]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Next year we plan to check the assumptions upon which our expansion of the dental work force is based using data from the Dental Practice Board on dentists receiving remuneration under the national health service, from the General Dental Council on the registration of dentists and from NHS trusts on the number of salaried dentists.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to agree the new NHS dental contract. [192510]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are to implement the new contractual arrangements from October 2005 and are confident that there is sufficient time to complete the necessary preparatory work.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Altrincham and Sale, West (Mr. Brady) of 1 September 2004, Official Report, column 888W, on dentistry, when the Chief Dental Officer expects to report back on the findings of the working group on extra training places; who the members of the working group will be; and whether the remit will include assessment of the requirement for a new dental school. [195034]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Chief Dental Officer is due to report in January 2005. The working group, which is considering all the options for the allocation of the additional training places, comprises the following.

Member
Professor Raman Bedi	Chief Dental Officer, Chair
Mr. Gareth Cruddace	Chief Executive, Hampshire and Isle of Wight Strategic Health Authority (SHA)
Mr. Denis Gibson	Chief Executive, Hampshire and Isle of Wight NHS Workforce Development Confederation (WDC)
Professor Bill Hume	Higher Education Funding Council for England
Ms Rosemary Grant	Director of Education Commissioning Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire WDC
Professor Malcolm Jones	Dean, University of Wales Dental School
Professor John Murray	Former Dean of Newcastle Dental School and Co-Chair of General Dental Council Visiting Panel
Mr. David Noyce	Higher Education Funding Council for England
Mr. David Sissling	Chief Executive, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire and Rutland SHA
Mr. Derek Sprague	Commissioning Manager, Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire SHA
Mr. Martin Sturges	Department of Health
Mr. Martin Williams	Department for Education and Skills

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to change the guidance issued on the number of recommended visits by NHS patients to their dentists; and if he will make a statement. [195502]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 November 2004]: We are taking account of the recent guideline from the National Institute for Clinical Excellence on recall interval between routine dental examinations in preparing for new contractual arrangements for national health service dentistry to be introduced from October 2005.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what his Department's policy is on access to dentures on the NHS; [195524]

(2) what plans his Department has to ensure that older people can obtain dentures on the NHS; and if he will make a statement; [195527]

(3) what fees patients are charged on the NHS for dentures. [195594]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service statement of dental remuneration makes the following provision:

Dentures

	Full upper and lower	Upper or lower only
Patient's Charge	122.32	76.32
Dentist's fee	152.90	95.40
Total sum received by dentist	275.22	171.72

We are aware of problems with NHS dentistry in some areas and, as a result, some people may have difficulties in obtaining new or replacement dentures. We are undertaking the most wide-ranging reforms since the service began in 1948. Not only do the reforms include the recruitment of more dentists, but we are collaborating with the General Dental Council to provide for the registration of a new class of dental technician—the clinical dental technician—who would be able both to supply and fit dentures.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which staff are permitted to take impressions to make and fit dentures; which regulations apply to this; and if he will make a statement; [195532]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of dentures provided illegally in each year since 1997. [195533]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Taking impressions and fitting dentures are part of the practice of dentistry which, under section 38 of the Dentists Act 1984, may only be carried out by a registered dentist or, in the case of taking impression, by a registered dental hygienist or dental therapist working under the direction of a dentist. We will shortly be laying regulations before the House which would empower the General Dental Council to register a new class of dental technician, the clinical dental technician, who would be able both to supply and fit dentures.

Currently a dental technician who fits dentures is practising illegally. We do not have information on which to base an estimate of the number of dentures provided illegally. I understand that the General Dental Council has records of 41 cases it has prosecuted since 1997 involving dental technicians undertaking the practice of dentistry.

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 2001 to April 2002, (b) May 2002 to April 2003, (c) May 2003 to April 2004 and (d) May 2004 to the latest date for which information is available, indicating in each case (i) the values of the contracts and (ii) the companies with which the contracts were placed; [196896]

(2) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with his Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with his Department in each of the past four years; [196897]

(3) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies for which he is responsible in each of the past three years. [196898]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not hold centrally a record of individual contracts nor does it have similar details for its agencies. To secure such details could only obtained at disproportionate cost.

Diet

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what dietary guidance his Department gives to the section of the population who are (a) overweight and (b) clinically obese; and whether he plans to publish a consumer reference resource identifying different weight loss strategies and products. [196277]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government's advice is that people, including those who are overweight and obese and who wish to attain and maintain a healthy weight, should consume a balanced diet and become more physically active. Guidance covering different weight loss strategies and products can be sought from local general practitioners and health professionals. The White Paper on improving health, which is due out later this year, will contain the Government's strategy for tackling obesity.

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance his Department gives on carbohydrate-controlled diets; what plans he has to review that guidance in the light of recent research on the effectiveness of carbohydrate controlled diets; and if he will make a statement; [196278]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of carbohydrate-controlled diets; what studies his Department has conducted into the effects of carbohydrate controlled diets; and if he will make a statement. [196279]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government provide consumers with a wide range of information on nutrition aimed at improving their diet and health, which includes advice on consuming carbohydrates as part of a healthy balanced diet. Dietary advice, including the role of low-fat, low-carbohydrate and very low-energy diets will be considered in the forthcoming National Institute for Clinical Excellence guidance on the prevention, identification, assessment and management of overweight and obesity in adults and children, where there is good evidence of effectiveness.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meetings of the Ministerial Sub-Committee of Green Ministers were attended by the Department's Green Minister in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04. [190855]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It has been established practice under successive Governments not to disclose information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees. This practice is now formalised by Exemption 2 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Health Services (Bury, North)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the current waiting times are for patients in Bury, North for each of the 10 most frequent surgical procedures in elective admissions; and if he will make a statement. [195347]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 9 November 2004]: The information is not available in the requested format. However, information relating to waiting times per surgical specialty at the Pennine Acute Hospitals National Health Service Trust are shown in the tables.

Hospital Infections

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on (a) the incidence of MRSA at Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull NHS hospitals and (b) the remedial action which is being taken. [193597]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Sparkbrook and Small Heath (Mr. Godsiff), today.

Hospital Trusts (Press Releases)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is responsible for the content of press releases issued by hospital trusts. [190772]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Hospital trusts are themselves responsible for the releases they issue.

Independent Regulator of Foundation Trusts

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget is for the Independent Regulator of Foundation Trusts for 2004–05; and what it is projected to be for (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07, (c) 2007–08 and (d) 2009–10. [196197]

Mr. Hutton: Monitor, the statutory name of which is the independent regulator of national health service foundation trusts, is an independent corporate body established under the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003. The memorandum of understanding between Monitor and the Department, a copy of which is available in the Library, details Monitor's funding arrangements.

I am informed by the Chairman of Monitor that the budget for 2004–05 is £16.01 million. He has advised me that proposals for 2005–06 have yet to be fully developed, but that the budget is likely to be similar to that for the current financial year.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are employed in the delivery of mental health services in Plymouth. [198094]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not available centrally.

MRSA

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary [illegible] State for Health if he will make a statement on rates of MRSA at (a) Barnet, (b) Chase Farm, (c) Northwick Park, (d) Royal Free and (e) Edgware Hospitals in each of the last three years. [197629]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the rates of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections is only available for acute national health service trusts and these data are shown in the table.

Data are not collected centrally for Barnet, Enfield and Haringey Mental Health NHS Trust, of which Edgware Hospital is a part.

National Blood Service

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much donated blood was disposed of by the National Blood Service as the result of false reactions to blood tests in each year since 1997; [193407]

(2) how many people were informed by the National Blood Service in each year since 1997 of a false reaction to a blood test; and if he will make a statement; [193408]

(3) for what reasons the donation of blood which has given a false reaction to a blood test but has proved safe in subsequent tests is not permitted; and why a further test after an interval of several months is required before the person can donate blood. [193409]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The table shows the total number of donated units of blood that were disposed of by the National Blood Service (NBS) as a result of false positive results on blood screening tests.

Since 2000, it has been national policy to inform donors of false reactions in order to take a small blood sample for repeat testing of the donor. This avoids collecting full donations from this group of donors in a situation where the donations will not be used. The table shows from 2000 onwards the number of donors who were informed, which is the same number as the number of units disposed.

	Total units disposed (all markers)	Total donations tested
1997	6,161	2,553,387
1998	6,304	2,387,793
1999	6,861	2,442,122
2000	7,807	2,427,919
2001	5,372	23,379,521
2002	5,996	2,381,402
2003	3652	2,345,183
2004[1]	3,627	1,162,954

[1] January to June.

The matter of a false reaction on a blood donation which is subsequently determined to be safe is a matter of good manufacturing practice, with which NBS must comply because it produces components which are transfused in humans.

The interval of several months before the person can donate is a precautionary measure. It allows time to establish that there is not a true infection in the donor. This time is required because of the varying incubation periods of the infections for which screening is undertaken.

NHS and Departmental Salaries

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) the NHS and (b) his Department earn a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,485 or more. [195326]

Ms Rosie Winterton: 297 people in the Department of Health were earning a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,845 on 1 March 2004.

An estimated 3 to 4 per cent. of staff were on contracts on national pay scales in the national health service (excluding GPs) with a full time annualised salary of more than £57,485 in August 2003.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of dentists in each county in England undertake NHS work. [197031]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The numbers of general and personal dental service dentists in each county and in each local authority areas not defined as a county England are shown in the following tables.

Information is only available on national health service dentists and therefore the percentage of dentists in each county undertaking NHS work cannot be given. Relatively few dentists practise totally privately.

Dentists have been included by either county or local authority on the basis of their practice postcode. They have been counted in each county or local authority in which they practise.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate he has made of the number of people in the Portsmouth area who are unable to access an NHS dentist. [197367]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect information on the numbers of people who are unable to access a National Health Service dentist. However, the latest information from NHS Direct shows that, in March 2004, there were 296 calls from people in the Portsmouth city area, all of whom were referred to dentists accepting patients within local distance standards. The Department has allocated £1.5 million to the Hampshire and Isle of Wight Strategic Health Authority to improve access, choice and quality in NHS dentistry.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been allocated to each NHS trust in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight to improve access to dentistry in the last five years; and what criteria are used in allocating such funding. [197369]

Ms Rosie Winterton: From 1999 to 2003, the Department funded three schemes—Investing in Dentistry, Dental Care Development Fund and Modernising Dentistry. Their common purpose was to make grants to health authorities (HAs), which were furthest from the Government's targets for improving access to National Health Service dentistry, for extending dental practices or purchasing new equipment to enable them to treat more patients. Responsibility for administering the scheme was delegated to the HAs with advice that they imposed conditions on the use of the funds to benefit NHS patients. Information is not held centrally on which dental practices benefited from this scheme.

In 2004–05, the Department has allocated a total of £50 million to strategic health authorities (SHAs) to support access in 2004–05. Of this sum, £1.5 million has been allocated to the Hampshire and Isle of Wight SHA to improve access, choice and quality in NHS dentistry.

The criteria for distribution from the centre to the SHAs was based on weighted capitation reflecting population and deprivation. From then on, it is up to individual SHAs to decide how to distribute these funds at a local level.

In addition to this funding, Fareham and Gosport primary care trust (PCT), Isle of Wight PCT and New Forest PCT are also receiving support from the NHS dentistry support team, which is backed by a fund of £9 million, the break down of which is shown in the table.

(£000)

PCT	Recurrent	Non-recurrent
Fareham and Gosport	310,000	26,000
Isle of Wight	600,000	—
New Forest	490,000	—

The criteria for selecting the most challenged PCTs by the support team are:

severe access situation in absolute terms;

instability of the present situation;

lack of confidence in the local capacity to put convincing plans for improvement in place.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) dental decay and (ii) requirement for dental services in each of the NHS trust areas in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight; and if he will make a statement. [197371]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not commissioned any research or evaluation on dental decay or requirements for dental services in Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, but, as we move towards the delegation of contracting for National Health Service dentistry, primary care trusts are becoming increasingly involved in assessing the oral health needs of their populations.

At a national level, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence issued guidelines in October on recall interval between routine dental examinations. We are taking account of the guideline in preparing for the new contractual arrangements for NHS dentistry to be introduced from October 2005. A significant number of dentists are entering the new arrangements early, through the personal dental schemes.

In addition, dental epidemiological surveys of the dental health of children have been carried out annually since 1986, co-ordinated for the NHS by the British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry. This programme seeks to monitor the dental health of children and contributes to the national monitoring of service provision and targets, while providing data locally to aid in service planning and evaluation of oral health strategies.

NHS Direct

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) whether NHS Direct is providing advice to people who would not have otherwise sought medical attention and (b) the extent to which NHS Direct is diverting people away from their general practitioners. [196989]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on whether NHS Direct is providing advice to people who would not have otherwise sought medical attention is not collected centrally.

The National Audit Office found the best estimate that can be generated from available data suggests that NHS Direct is off-setting around half of its running costs by encouraging more appropriate use of NHS services. This includes advising a significant number of callers who would otherwise have visited their general practitioner on how to care for themselves instead.

NHS Foundation Trusts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much each of the first round of foundation hospital trusts spent on preparing its application for foundation status; and how much of this was paid to outside consultants; [194175]

(2) how much each of the first round of foundation hospital trusts spent on preparing for foundation status after they had been given the go-ahead to do so. [194176]

Mr. Hutton: The Department provides a centrally-provided programme of support and direct financial support to applicants preparing for national health service foundation trust status. It does not, however, hold information on the level of resources or the way in which resources are used by applicants in preparing for foundation status, as it is for each trust to determine how resources are best spent. Costs vary from trust to trust, depending on the individual circumstances of the organisation and its state of readiness.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much money, and to which organisations, each Foundation Hospital Trust paid in fees to outside bodies for help (a) with compiling registers of electors and (b) in the conduct of elections for boards of governors; [194178]

(2) how much each of the first round of Foundation Hospital Trusts spent on (a) compiling its register of electors for governors and (b) the conduct of their elections. [194180]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 15 June 2004, Official Report, column 896W.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 4WS, on ministerial accountability for NHS foundation trusts, in what circumstances a Minister from his Department will comment (a) in the House and (b) in the press on issues arising within an NHS foundation trust. [194364]

Mr. Hutton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said on 30 March 2004, Official Report, column 83WS, because of the independent status and separate and local route of accountability of national health service foundation trusts (NHSFTs), Ministers are not in a position to comment on the details of operational management within these organisations. The statement of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 4WS, confirmed that copies of replies by NHSFTs to such questions would be placed in the Library. Media inquiries on operational matters are treated in a similar fashion, being directed to the NHSFT in question.

The new arrangements also stem directly from the limits on information gathering set out in the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003. The Department holds only that information about NHSFTs that the Act (s19(1)(a)) allows. This precludes the collection of routine operational data and, where the Department does not hold information, replies based on such information cannot be given. Conversely, if the information is held centrally, then a substantive reply will be given in the usual way. Ministers will also continue to be responsible for answering questions on general policy for provision of NHS services where provision is through NHSFTs. Notwithstanding the advent of NHSFTS, matters of national policy, including the statutory framework for the NHS and its resources, standards and targets remain the responsibility of Ministers.

NHS Pay

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what pay band he anticipates the majority of (a) radiographers and (b) physiotherapists will be placed in under Agenda for Change. [196429]

Mr. Hutton: We anticipate that the majority of qualified radiographers and qualified physiotherapists will be placed on pay bands six and seven.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what effect Agenda for Change is likely to have on the hourly rate of pay of radiographers. [196430]

Mr. Hutton: We anticipate that for the majority of existing radiographers there will be an increase in the hourly rate of pay, both in the short term when hours will be unchanged and in the longer run when hours are increased.

NHS Professionals

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS acute trusts had signed up to use NHS Professionals on the latest date for which figures are available; and what proportion of acute trusts this represents. [196117]

Mr. Hutton: NHS Professionals has advised that, with effect from 1 November, a total of 76 national health service trusts have signed up to use its services. This is made up of 37 acute trusts, 30 primary care trusts and nine mental health trusts.

76 trusts represents 30 per cent. of NHS acute/specialist and mental health trusts.

NHS Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurses, (b) doctors and (c) professions allied to medicine he expects there will be in the NHS in England in (i) 2005–06, (ii) 2006–7, (iii) 2007–08, (iv) 2008–09 and (v) 2009–10. [197279]

Mr. Hutton: Delivering the NHS Plan included expectations for increases in the National Health Service workforce. By 2008 we expect there to be 35,000 more nurses, midwives and health visitors, 30,000 more therapists and scientists and 15,000 more doctors (consultants and general practitioners) employed in the NHS than there were in 2001. The expectation for increasing the nursing workforce has been met already, there are almost 46,000 more nurses than in 2001, and we are making considerable progress towards the others, as at June 2004, there were 6,719 more doctors and by September 2003, there were 11,825 more therapists and scientists than in 2001.

It is for local NHS organisations to determine the workforce it needs to meet service objectives and we are supporting the NHS in developing new and innovative ways of working, enabling organisations to develop the skill mix appropriate to local need.

The expectations for increasing the NHS workforce by 2008 have not been broken down by year.

Paediatric Care

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) paediatric beds and (b) paediatric wards there were in each strategic health authority area for each of the past five years. [195276]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 1 November 2004]: Data for strategic health authorities (SHAs) can only be provided from 2002–03, the year SHAs were introduced. These are shown in the tables. Data on paediatric beds in wards open overnight are collected by ward classification. The data in the table on overnight admissions include all ward classifications that involve children. Data on paediatric beds available during the day only are contained in the table on day beds.

Data on the number of exclusively paediatric wards are not collected centrally.

Patient Choice

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been made by his Department of the costs to the NHS of (a) general practitioner time and (b) advocacy support to implement the patient choice initiative; [197285]

(2) what provision has been made by his Department for advocacy support for patients under the new proposals for patient choice; [197286]

(3) what estimate has been made by his Department of the time needed per general practitioner consultation to make a choose and book referral. [197287]

Mr. Hutton: The level and targeting of patient support will be considered by primary care trusts (PCTs) as part of their implementation planning for choose and book. To support this we are developing best practice guidelines for PCTs on contracting with voluntary and community sector groups to provide advocacy and support to patients making a choice of hospital.

The Dr Foster research study on the implications of choice at referral, which was published in April 2004, found no significant difference in consultation time when offering choice (against a non-choice consultation leading to a referral). Extensive demonstrations and testing of the choose and book service have shown that booking an appointment with the patient takes approximately one minute to complete. Additional research has indicated that GPs make, on average, fewer than five referrals per week.

Local health communities are currently reporting on their state of readiness for the delivery of choice.

Patient Support Networks

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to support the development of voluntary sector support networks for patients. [197280]

Dr. Ladyman: A successful partnership with the Voluntary and Community Sector (VCS) is integral to the delivery of user centred health and social services. Community and voluntary groups already play important roles in the delivery of health and social care—they support service users and carers, acting as advocates and providing specialist information and advice as well as providing a range of health and support services directly to users. The Department supports this in a variety of ways including:

The Section 64 General Scheme of grants which is the Department's main support for national voluntary organisations working in the health and social care fields. Applications for funding are invited annually from the voluntary and community sector.

"Making Partnership Work for Patients, Carers and Service Users: A Strategic Partnership Agreement Between the Department of Health, the NHS and the Voluntary and Community Sector", published in September 2004, is the first Agreement exclusively between the Department of Health, the NHS and the Voluntary and Community Sector (VCS). It will benefit patients, carers and service users by providing them with real alternatives so that they can choose services that best suit their needs.

Pharmaceuticals

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the (a) expected change in the NHS drugs bill in England, (b) expected change in the Government allowance to the pharmaceutical industry for research and development and (c) net change in Government spending resulting from the new Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme in each of the next five years. [197274]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A price reduction of 7 per cent. in the prices of branded prescription medicines as part of the new Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme (PPRS) will save an estimated £370 million a year for the national health service in the community in England. This is more than £1.8 billion over the five years of the agreement. Additional savings are expected in hospitals.

The new PPRS includes greater incentives for the research and development (R&D) of new medicines, including those for children, with an increased R&D allowance, up to 28 per cent. of NHS sales. Under the current scheme it is up to 23 per cent. of NHS sales.

The net change in Government spending resulting from the new Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme taken as a whole, including the price reduction, changes to R&D allowances and other changes to the PPRS agreement, is expected to be at least £1.8 billion over the next five years.

Prescriptions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average number of prescriptions dispensed per person in the NHS was in England in the last year for which figures are available. [197275]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In 2003, there were on average 13.1 prescription items dispensed in the community in England per head of population.

This information is included in "Prescriptions Dispensed in the Community Statistics for 1993 to 2003: England". This bulletin is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: http://www.publications.doh.gov.uk/prescriptionstatistics/index.htm.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the proportion of patients paying prescription charges who had chronic diseases in the last year for which figures are available. [197276]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No such estimate has been made. Information is recorded about the number of chargeable items dispensed and about the medication dispensed. Information is not recorded about the number of individuals who pay charges nor the condition for which they are being treated.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the criteria are for eligibility for a prescription charge pre-payment certificate. [197277]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Anyone who has to pay prescription charges can purchase prescription charge pre-payment certificates. These are available at a cost of £33.40 and £91.80, covering four and 12 months respectively. People who have to pay for more than five prescription items in four months, or 14 items in 12 months, can save money by buying a pre-payment certificate.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people had prescription charge pre-payment certificates in each year since 1997. [197278]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The estimated numbers of people holding pre-payment certificates over the years 1997–98 to 2002–03 are shown in the table.

Estimated average number of holders of pre-payment certificates over the year, in thousands

	Pre-payment certificates
	4 month	12 month	Total
1997–98	170	300	470
1998–99	160	300	460
1999–2000	180	310	490
2000–01	190	350	540
2001–02	200	400	600
2002–03	210	450	660

Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press releases have been issued by his Department in each month of 2004; and if he will make a statement. [195444]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 857W.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total administration budget of primary care trusts is in real terms in each of the next three years. [191749]

Mr. Hutton: We do not set separate administration budgets for primary care trusts (PCTs). PCTs decide levels of investment in administration locally but are required to agree proposals with their professional executive committees and strategic health authority.

The latest round of revenue allocations to PCTs covered the period 2003–04 to 2005–06 and totalled in cash terms £148 billion. Allocations beyond 2005–06 have not yet been set.

Social Services

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to encourage the use of direct payments among clients of social services departments. [196978]

Dr. Ladyman: We have changed the law so that there is now a duty on councils to make a direct payment to individuals who can consent to have them. We have also strengthened the performance indicator to monitor the take up of direct payments in each local council. In addition, we are investing £9 million over three years to develop local support services, which are critical to the success of direct payment schemes.

We have produced a range of information, including, "A guide to receiving direct payments from your local council", which is also available in Braille and audio formats. We have produced material to encourage people with learning disabilities, parents of disabled children and people from black and minority ethnic communities to take up direct payments. We are also funding the production of a video targeted at older people.

Local councils should supplement this with local appropriate information.

Stem Cell Research

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding was given to stem cell research in the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available. [197098]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the 2002 Spending Review, the Government allocated £40 million for a major cross council investment in stem cell research. This is being made available in 2004–05 and 2005–06, with the allocations listed in the table:

	£ million
MRC	26
Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC)	1.8
Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC)	1.2
Council for the Central Laboratory of Research Councils (CCLRC)	0.4
Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council (BBSRC)	10.6

Student Grants Unit

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the NHS Student Grants Unit will be able to receive email correspondence; [196538]

(2) how many claims were handled by the NHS Student Grants Unit in Blackpool in each of the last three years; [196539]

(3) what targets have been set for payments of NHS bursaries; [196540]

(4) what the average grant for a final year medical student from the NHS Bursaries Unit was in the last year for which figures are available; [196541]

(5) how many staff are employed in the NHS Student Grants Unit in Blackpool; and if he will make a statement; [196542]

(6) whether there is a dedicated helpline for hon. Members to contact the NHS Bursary Unit in Blackpool; and if he will make a statement; [196543]

(7) what the target response time by telephone is for the NHS Student Grants Unit in Blackpool. [196980]

Mr. Hutton: Email inquiries to the national health service student grants unit can be sent to nhs-sgu@ukonline.co.uk. A technical problem resulted in the email account going off-line for a short period in the week commencing 1 November, but this issue has now been resolved.

NHS bursaries awards in each of the last three financial years are shown in the table.

	Number of cases
2002–03	80,260
2003–04	85,685
2004–05[1]	75,684

The target for bursary payments for first year students is six working days following course enrolment and correct completion of application form. The average NHS bursary awarded to medical and dental students in academic year 2003–04, the last year for which a figure is available, was £1,825. The student grants unit currently employs 73 staff on permanent or fixed term contracts. An additional 10 staff are employed on a casual basis. Hon. and right hon. Members can contact the student grants unit management team on telephone number 01253 393459. This separate British Telecom line has been set up specifically to deal with hon. and right hon. Member's constituent inquiries.

There is no specific target response time for telephone calls. The student grants unit telephone system can deal with 30 calls (in and out) simultaneously and 24 of the unit's staff routinely deal with these inquiries on a rota basis. If no officer is immediately available to deal with an inquiry, the caller is placed in a queuing system until one becomes available. Between January and September 2004, the unit has successfully dealt with 77,038 calls.

Timesheet Fraud

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prosecutions the Counter Fraud and Security Management Service and its predecessor the NHS Counter Fraud Service brought against bank and agency nursing staff for timesheet fraud since September 1998. [196435]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Since 1998, we have investigated a number of cases of suspected timesheet fraud by both bank and agency staff. These investigations have resulted in 39 criminal prosecutions. Additionally, during the same period there have been two prosecutions for false identity by a bank member of staff and for obtaining a pecuniary advantage by an agency member of staff.

Voluntary Sector Compensation

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to compensate the voluntary sector if statutory agencies do not meet the full cost of their public service provision by the 2006 deadline set by the Treasury's Crosscutting Review. [195287]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is fully committed to the recommendations in the "Treasury's Cross Cutting Review on the Voluntary and Community Sector in Service Delivery". The recommendation that Departments should ensure by April 2006 that their procurement policies recognise and reflect the full cost of services, including a legitimate portion of overhead costs, in the price of contracts for voluntary and community sector contractors is already reflected in the Department's procurement policies and practice.

The introduction of payment by results in the national health service will radically change the arrangements for funding providers of care. Comprising a national tariff for the majority of secondary care services, including services provided by voluntary providers when fully implemented, payment by results could in effect provide full cost recovery (FCR) for any contractor. FCR will take time to implement fully with contracts being assessed as they are agreed or renewed up to 2008. In achieving this, the emphasis is on effective negotiation between contracting partners rather than through compensation of one party by another.

Waiting Times

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were waiting for a referral to a specialist from their general practitioner at the latest date for which figures are available, broken down by (a) clinical area and (b) length of wait. [194959]

Mr. Hutton: Information on waiting times for general practitioner (GP) referrals is not collected. However, information on waiting times from GP referral to first out-patient appointment can be found on the Department's website at www.performance.doh.gov.uk/waitingtimes/2004/q1/index.html

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trusts have maintained maximum nine months wait for in-patient/day case admissions in (a) England and (b) Crosby since July 2003. [195492]

Mr. Hutton: Since the end of March 2004, when a maximum nine month wait for elective in-patient or day case admission became a standard national health service performance requirement, 144 NHS trusts (out of a total of 181) have achieved this standard in each of the reporting periods. Since the end of June 2003, before the standard applied, 22 NHS trusts have achieved a maximum nine month wait in each reporting period.

Since the end of March 2004, both trusts that cover Crosby (Aintree Hospitals NHS Trust and Southport and Ormskirk Hospital NHS Trust) have achieved the standard of a maximum nine month wait for elective in-patient or day care admission in each of the reporting periods. Between July 2003 and March 2004, both trusts reported some waits above nine months.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trusts have maintained the maximum 17-week wait for general practitioner referrals to see a consultant in (a) the UK and (b) Crosby since July 2003. [195494]

Mr. Hutton: Since the end of March 2004, when a maximum 17-week wait for a first out-patient appointment following general practitioner referral became the standard national health service performance requirement, 207 NHS trusts have maintained a maximum 17-week out-patient wait in each reporting period.

Since the end of March 2004, both trusts that cover Crosby (Aintree Hospitals NHS Trust and Southport and Ormskirk Hospital NHS Trust) have achieved the standard of a maximum 17-week out-patient wait in each of the reporting periods. Between July 1003 and March 2004, both trusts reported some waits above 17 weeks.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pensioners

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the Department's estimate is of the amount paid in rent rebate to pensioners in 2003–04; [197541]

(2) what the Department's estimate is of the amount paid in council tax benefit to pensioners in 2003–04. [197542]

Mr. Pond: The Department's estimate of the amount paid out in rent rebate to pensioners in 2003–04 is £2.316 billion in nominal terms.

The Department's estimate of the amount paid out in Council Tax Benefit to pensioners in 2003–04 is £1.684 billion in nominal terms.

These figures are consistent with data published at Spending Review 2004.

Benefit expenditure tables in relation to the Spending Review 2004 are published on the internet at: http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/expenditure.asp, table 7.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in receipt of (a) old age pensions and (b) pension credit are from black and minority ethnic backgrounds, (i) in total and (ii) broken down by ethnic group; and if he will make a statement. [198177]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available. Departmental records do not record a person's ethnic origin as this is not relevant to the benefit entitlement.

Benefit Claimants (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are claiming a working age benefit in Coventry. [197465]

Mr. Pond: As at May 2004, there were 29,600 working-age claimants of key benefits in the Coventry city council area.

Benefit Entitlement (Newcastle-under-Lyme)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many pensioners have benefited from the winter fuel payment in Newcastle-under-Lyme in each year since it was introduced; [198536]

(2) how many pensioners in Newcastle-under-Lyme will be eligible for the winter fuel allowance in 2004–05. [198599]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of pensioners in the Newcastle-under-Lyme constituency who have benefited from the winter fuel payment in each year since 1999–2000 is in the table. Information relating to the 1997–98 and 1998–99 winters is not available.

It is not possible to provide an estimate of the number of people in the Newcastle-under-Lyme constituency who are eligible to receive a winter fuel payment for winter 2004–05 as DWP administrative data do not contain complete information on household circumstances and payments are based on household composition. We expect the figure to be similar to that of winter 2003–04.

	Payments made
1999–2000	16,720
2000–01	18,450
2001–02	18,480
2002–03	18,630
2003–04	18,815

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his future spending projections on principal benefits are net of projected savings from his Department's targets to reduce fraud and error in income support, jobseeker's allowance and housing benefit. [197080]

Mr. Pond: Future spending projections are in part based upon the trends of spending in the past. These past expenditures are directly affected by, among other things, our success in detecting fraud and error and therefore future projections are influenced by this success.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of (a) operating and (b) advertising the benefit fraud hotline was in 2003; and how many people have been successfully prosecuted for fraud as a result of evidence from the hotline since its inception. [196851]

Mr. Pond: The operational cost of the national benefit fraud hotline (NBFH) for year ending 2002–03 (April-March) was £959,277, and for year ending 2003–04 was £1,038,505. The cost of advertising is not separately assessed.

Notes:

1. Since the Targeting Benefit Fraud advertising campaign started in 2003, the NBFH has been included in the campaign advertising and has not been the subject of its own advertising.
2. Operational costs include staffing and goods and service costs.
3. The operational costs of administering the NBFH include the costs of administering report-a-cheat-online. These costs cannot be separated.

Benefit Processing (Workington)

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the proposals for the ending of processing benefit claims in Workington have been subject to rural proofing. [196383]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Tony Cunningham, dated 15 November 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about whether proposals to end the processing of benefit claims in Workington have been subject to rural proofing. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

We are committed to ensuring that everyone is able to access our services, whether they live in urban or rural areas. Increased accessibility is one of our key objectives in modernising welfare delivery. This modernisation is helping us to deliver the commitment made in the Rural White Paper to ensure access to 'high quality public services—services often delivered in new ways, and through new outlets'.

The centralisation of benefit processing is part of the drive within Jobcentre Plus to modernise and improve services and meet the Government's efficiency challenge.

Benefit processing is one of the largest and most important business areas within Jobcentre Plus and for some time the Agency has been exploring ways of making it more efficient. Rationalising the number of sites from which benefits are processed will improve service to customers by bringing greater consistency to processes, allow staff to develop more in-depth benefit knowledge and experience, reduce costs (for example in management and overheads) and make better use of the estate.

In the case of Workington, the existing estate would not support an enlarged processing facility. The proposed move to Carlisle will allow us to capitalise on the facilities available at the former Social Security Office at Rufus House which is capable of being developed into a benefit processing centre housing up to 180 people. Rural considerations have been taken into account when making these planning proposals.

We hope that many of those currently employed at Workington will transfer with the work to Carlisle. Others may be re-deployed to alternative roles within the Department of Work and Pensions in West Cumbria. Carlisle is an accessible location for many residents in Allerdale and Copeland as well as being the centre for the large rural catchment area of Eden and Dumfries and Galloway. Centralising work in Carlisle should not mean an overall loss of employment opportunities in rural communities.

The decisions we make about where and how we deliver services are based upon consultation with our partners. These include local authorities and Regional Development Agencies, and reflect local circumstances and most importantly, the needs of the local community. The consideration of rural issues is an integral part of the consultation process. It should also be remembered that unchanged access to a full range of Jobcentre Plus services will still be available to the public through the Workington Jobcentre Plus office.

The Rural Proofing checklist produced by the Countryside Agency forms part of the initial planning process and, where appropriate, the Countryside Agency itself is consulted as a stakeholder. We produce an internal annual Rural Proofing Report for the Countryside Agency; this includes examples of how the department has addressed service delivery issues in rural areas. We also regularly discuss policy development and implementation with DEFRA (Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs) and the Countryside Agency.

I have asked the District Manager for Cumbria to keep you updated on developments and he can be contacted on 01539 795550.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefit Take-up (Hendon)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Hendon aged 18 to 25 years had been unemployed for six months or longer (a) in May 1997 and (b) on the latest date for which figures are available; how many people living in Hendon have benefitted from the New Deal for Young People since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [197517]

Jane Kennedy: The available information is in the tables.

Numbers of people aged 18–24 unemployed for six months or longer in Hendon

Period	Number
May 1997	310
September 1997	225
May 2004	155
September 2004	140

Notes:

1. Information for the age group 18–25 is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.
2. All figures are seasonally unadjusted. To take account of any seasonal fluctuation in the figures, latest data should be compared with the same month in 1997.
3. Data provided are claimant count figures.

Carer's Allowance

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make it his policy to end the treatment of carers allowance as earnings in the assessment of claimants of income support; and if he will make a statement. [196906]

Maria Eagle: Carer's allowance is not treated as earnings. However it is treated as an income in determining a customer's entitlement to income support. There are no plans to change this.

Carer's allowance is an income-maintenance benefit rather than a payment for services provided by the carer. Income support is also a benefit which is intended to provide for a person's day-to-day living expenses. For this reason, carer's allowance has always been taken fully into account in income support. To do otherwise would mean that provision would be made twice over from public funds for the same needs.

However, people in receipt of income support who are also receiving carer's allowance or who have an underlying entitlement to carer's allowance, are awarded a carer premium with their income support. The premium is paid in addition to other premiums, and, where both the claimant and their partner satisfy the conditions, two carer premiums are paid. The carer premium is currently £25.55 per week.

Child Maintenance

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his written statement of 28 October 2004, Official Report, columns 55–57WS, on the New Child Support Scheme: Progress Report, what assessment he has made of the reasons for the fall in the number of applications for child maintenance received by the Child Support Agency in the second quarter of 2004. [197355]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Helen Jackson, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his Written Statement of 28th October Official Report columns 55–57WS on the New Child Support Scheme: Progress Report what assessment he has made for the reasons for the fall in the number of applications for child maintenance received by the Child Support Agency in the second quarter of 2004.

I am unaware of any specific factors to explain the decrease in the reported number of new applications received by the Agency during the second quarter of 2004/05.

Child Poverty

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what strategy he has put in place to tackle child poverty. [197466]

Mr. Pond: The Government's strategy for tackling child poverty is set out in "Opportunity for all: Sixth Annual Report 2004" (Cm6239) which we published in September 2004 and further explored in the "Child Poverty Review", published in July 2004 by The Treasury. Both documents are available in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the average weekly maintenance (a) assessments and (b) payments for (i) one qualifying child, (ii) two qualifying children and (iii) three or more qualifying children for Child Support Agency cases on the (A) old and (B) new system. [193665]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will estimate the average weekly maintenance (a) assessments and (b) payments for (i) one qualifying child, (ii) two qualifying children and (iii) three or more qualifying children for cases on the (A) old and (B) new system.

The information requested is set out in the following tables. I should, however, say that the information is not directly comparable because of discrepancies in the way it is collected and collated for the different schemes—which are, of course, based on different computer systems. Our current best view of the position is:

Average weekly amount assessed	One qualifying child	Two qualifying children	Three or more qualifying children
New scheme	24	37	41
Old scheme	40	50	53

The above figures exclude cases with a nil assessment but include those cases were the non-resident parent is on benefit, and on which maintenance would consequently be collected on behalf of the Secretary of State.

The differences between the average weekly assessments for the old and new scheme was anticipated in the Government's White Paper, "A new contract for welfare: Children's Rights and Parent's responsibilities", published in July 1999.

Average weekly payments	One qualifying child	Two qualifying children	Three or more qualifying children
New scheme	34	47	56
Old scheme	37	46	50

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Child Support Agency cases are waiting to be calculated and paid on the (a) old scheme calculation and old IT system, (b) old scheme calculation and new IT system and (c) new scheme calculation and new IT system. [194270]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Frank Field, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many Child Support Agency cases are waiting to be calculated and paid on the (a) old scheme calculation and old IT system (b) old scheme calculation and new IT system and (c) new scheme calculation and new IT system.

As at 30 September 2004, there were around 288,000 applications awaiting a decision to be made—these may or may not result in a maintenance assessment. Of these applications:

(a) 12,000 are awaiting decision under the 'old scheme' on the old IT system

(b) 14,000 are awaiting decision under the 'old scheme' on the new IT system

(c) 262,000 are awaiting a decision under the 'new scheme' on the new IT system

Of the work in hand we are trying to trace the non-resident parent in approximately 20,000 cases, which cannot be progressed until we have an address. There is also an element of new intake that has not had sufficient time since the application was made to have progressed.

Typically around 40% of the cases will be closed before reaching the assessment stage. Applications close for a variety of reasons. The main reasons are that the parent with care withdraws the application, perhaps due to a reconciliation, or having agreed private arrangements with the non-resident parent.

The reference to the new IT system includes cases that, in the normal course of events would be held on that system but are instead being processed clerically.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 13 October 2004, Official Report, column 289W, on the Child Support Agency, for what reasons referrals for information to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency were unsuccessful in gaining the information sought. [194657]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his Answer of the 13 October, Official Report, column 289W, on the Child Support Agency, for what reasons referrals for information to the DVLA were unsuccessful in gaining the information sort.

The reason that the balance of referrals were unsuccessful is that there was no matching client and vehicular details held on the Driving and Vehicle Licensing Agency's database.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of change requests made by Ministers in relation to the CS2 computer system on the operations of the Child Support Agency. [195809]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Paul Goodman, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what assessment he has made of the effect of change requests made by Ministers in relation to the CS2 computer system on the operation of the Childs Support Agency.

All requests for change go through a rigorous process intended to give assurance that they are genuinely needed to permit the service provided by EDS to meet the original requirement in terms of reliability and functionality.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the average number of Child Support Agency staff who deal with each case brought to the Agency by parents with care. [195815]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Paul Goodman, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what estimate he has made of the average number of Child Support Agency staff who deal with each case brought to them by parents with care.

I am unable to answer this question as we do not record information on the numbers of staff who deal with each case.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) absence rates due to sickness and (b) turnover rates for Child Support Agency staff were for each month of the last calendar year. [195821]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Paul Goodman, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the (a) absence rates due to sickness and (b) turnover rates for CSA staff were for each month of the last calendar year.

(a) Absence rates due to sickness for CSA staff for each month of the last calendar year are as follows:

2003	Sickness percentage rate (in month)
January	5.9
February	5.2
March	4.9
April	5.4

2003	Sickness percentage rate (in month)
May	5.3

Anne Picking: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many non-resident parents are losing money as a result of not being transferred to the new Child Support Agency computing system. [195889]

Mr. Pond: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Wycombe (Mr. Goodman) on 18 December 2003, Official Report, columns 1089–90W.

Anne Picking: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much maintenance in total was received through the Child Support Agency by the child and resident parent in the financial years (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [195890]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Anne Picking, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how much maintenance was received through the Child Support Agency by the child and resident parent in the financial years (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03.

The total maintenance received through the Child Support Agency's Collection Service was:

£000

	2001–02	2002–03
Paid to the Parent with Care	375,199	423,680
Recovered for the Secretary of State	153,251	148,861
Was received in Total	528,450	572,541

Sources:
The Total received is published in the Child Support Agency, Annual Report and Accounts.
The amount paid to the Parent with Care and the amount recovered for the Secretary of State is sourced from the Agency's General Ledger.

Anne Picking: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the administrative cost of running the Child Support Agency was in financial years (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [195891]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Anne Picking, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the administrative cost of running the Child Support Agency was in the financial years (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03.

The net administration costs as detailed in the 2002–03 Child Support Agency Annual accounts were:

£294.286m for the year ended 31st March 2003

£290.413m for the year ended 31st March 2002

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his written ministerial statement of 28 October 2004, Official Report, columns 55–57WS, on the new child support scheme progress report, what the average weekly child support maintenance payment to parents with care for the month of October is; how many new scheme cases were not able to be progressed under the new system with respect to Quarter 4 2003–04 onwards and schemes to date; if he will list the reasons for the closure of applications; when the Child Support Agency (CSA) will start properly to manage performance in the area of compliance; and what the fundamentals of the special exercise to be employed to determine the CSA's achievement of its accuracy target at the end of March 2005 are. [196267]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Ms Annabelle Ewing, dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his Written Ministerial Statement of 28th October Official Report columns 55–57WS on the new child support scheme progress report what the average weekly child support maintenance payment to parents with care for the month of October is; how many new scheme cases were not able to be progressed under the new system with respect to Quarter 4 2003–04 onwards and schemes to date; if he will list the reasons for the closure of applications; when the Child Support Agency (CSA) will start properly to manage performance In the area of compliance; and what the fundamentals of the special exercise to be employed to determine the CSA's achievement of its accuracy target at the end of March 2005 are.

The headings below provide a summary of your questions.

Average weekly child support maintenance payment:

I am unable to provide the average weekly child support maintenance for October at this present time. However, I can provide the figures for September:

Average weekly payment: September 2004 (£)

One qualifying child	33.72
Two qualifying children	46.76
Three qualifying children	55.67

New Scheme cases that have not been progressed:

The information below shows the number of stuck cases that relate to our top ten most problematic classifications:

	Number
29 December 2003	63,746
26 January 2004	75,337
23 February 2004	47,725
22 March 2004	52,538
19 March 2004	39,126
17 May 2004	34,143
14 June 2004	34,614
12 July 2004	36,031
9 August 2004	37,703
6 September 2004	38,941
4 October 2004	40,009
1 November 2004	41,985

These figures are collated on a weekly basis not calendar month so, they are shown four weekly.

The reasons for closure of applications:

Applications close for a variety of reasons the main reason being that the parent with care withdraws the application, perhaps due to reconciliation, or having agreed private arrangements with the non-resident parent. Other reasons are if the parent with care moves off benefit and no longer wishes to pursue the application, or if the parent with care is unable to provide sufficient information to establish the identity of the non resident patent.

Management of Compliance:

The Agency now has the management information available from its new computer system to monitor its performance in respect of case and cash compliance on the 'new scheme'. We have developed our own payment tracking tool which will enable us to better manage our performance in this area. We are already seeing emerging evidence that performance is improving as a result of these initiatives.

Accuracy target:

In February and March 2005 a special exercise will measure a statistically valid sample of cases. This will determine the extent to which the last decision for all maintenance calculations is correct to the nearest penny.

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the proposed changes to the Child Support Agency service in Workington have been subject to rural proofing. [196382]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Tony Cunningham dated 15 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. I am providing this in Mr. Smith's absence.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the proposed changes to the Child Support Agency service in Workington have been subject to rural proofing.

The Agency has considered the rural proofing checklist and is content that the proposed changes to our service in Workington meet the challenges listed. Although we will no longer have face to face staff actually based in Workington we will continue to deliver equivalent levels of service to the rest of the country by staff based elsewhere.

I hope that this is helpful.

Consultants

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been spent by his Department on (a) advertising and (b) public relations consultants in (i) 1996–97 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available. [185532]

Jane Kennedy: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 and does not employ advertising or public relations consultants.

I also refer my right hon. Friend to PQ152855 of 24 May 2004, Official Report, column 1464W, and PQ191736 of 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 341W.

Departmental IT

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the Department's (a) implemented and (b) planned computer systems use open source software; and what plans are in place to raise this level. [195662]

Jane Kennedy: The Department for Work and Pensions does not currently use open source software in any of its current computer systems.

However, we have taken part in the recent Office of Government Commerce 'Proof of Concept' trials of open source software. As a result we are working on an IT strategy and enterprise IT architecture which will take into account the reducing risk in the marketplace and allow us to take advantage of open source software in the future.

Our procurement of software solutions follows Government OSS policy, which does not require the raising of levels of OSS usage in Government, rather that Government considers OSS solutions alongside proprietary ones in IT procurements and that contracts should be awarded on a value for money, case by case basis. The policy can be viewed at www.govtalk.gov.uk.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the staff of the Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196135]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office, on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 620w.

EU Commissions

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times during the Greek

Presidency of the EU (a) the Technical Committee on information processing, (b) the Committee for implementation of the action programme to promote gender equality and (c) the Committee for implementation of the action programme to tackle discrimination met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations each Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [194349]

Mr. Pond: There were two meetings of the Technical Commission on Data Processing during the Greek Presidency. The Technical Commission is created under Regulation (EEC) 574/72 Article 117c and is charged with modernising the exchange of data between social security institutions for the purposes of implementing Regulation (EEC) 1408/71. This Regulation, founded on Article 42 of the EC Treaty co-ordinates national social security schemes so as to protect the rights of migrant workers. Please note that "social security" in this context includes access to health care.

The two meetings were held in Brussels on 4 and 5 March and 3 and 4 June respectively. Officials from DWP attended both meetings and an official from the Department Health also attended the second meeting.

At the first meeting the agenda was dominated by issues concerning pension claims, in particular steps to accelerate awards where the pensioner had been insured in more than one EU state in the course of his or her working life via implementation of a long standing procedure (Administrative Commission Decision 118) providing for the early exchange of insurance records. This is in the process of migration from paper or magnetic tape format to electronic interchange. The UK has supported this change while at the same time minimising any consequences for national computer applications.

Other matters discussed included (1) the first draft of the Technical Commission's forthcoming work programme for 2004–08 (2) progress on the Co-webs project which aims to link national social security websites so as to provide a coherent and consistent information source for migrant workers, and (3) a report and discussion on pension clearance times reported by all member states. The UK has taken a particularly active part in this last mentioned as a means both of identifying bottle necks in the present processes and also so as to inform targets against which performance can be measured.

The second meeting covered progress on these issues but also certain technical matters concerning the (then) proposed introduction of the European Health Insurance Card (E-HIC). Specifically the meeting addressed the issue and maintenance of code lists for institutions which exchange data. The proposals adopted do not create any problems or issues for the UK.

Neither meeting addressed financial issues, any such question being outside its remit.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times during the Greek Presidency of the EU the Administrative Commission on Social Security for Migrant Workers met; how many working parties exist of the Administrative Commission on Social Security for Migrant Workers; how many times each of those working parties met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [196101]

Mr. Pond: The Administrative Commission on Social Security for Migrant Workers met twice during the Greek Presidency, on 26–27 March and 17–18 June 2003. Officials from the Department for Work and Pensions attended the meetings together with officials from the Department of Health and the Inland Revenue.

The Administrative Commission deals with all administrative questions and questions of interpretation arising from the provisions of Regulation (EC) 1408/71 on the application of social security schemes to employed and self-employed persons and to members of their families moving within the Community.

The Administrative Commission has one working party. It met on two occasions during the Greek Presidency, on 12 February when an official from the Inland Revenue attended, and on 9 April when an official from the Department of Health attended. The meetings of the Administrative Commission and its working party were all held in Brussels.

During the Greek Presidency the Administrative Commission agreed on decisions concerning: the introduction of the European Health Insurance Card; a uniform interpretation of the European Court of Justice judgment in the case of Elide Gottardo v. INPS; and on a revision of Administrative Commission Decision 118 of 20 April 1983 concerning the conditions for the early exchange of insurance records, following up work carried out by the Technical Commission on Data Processing. The Administrative Commission discussed several other matters, which required further deliberation at subsequent meetings.

UK officials raised issues relating to the need for a transitional period for the European Health Insurance Card during which the current E111 paper form and the new card would both be in circulation; requested clarification of the legal basis for the proposed Decision concerning the Gottardo case; informed the other delegations of the UK's new tax credit for children; and supported the European Commission proposal for better monitoring of the application of Community law. No specific financial issues were raised.

For general information on the Greek Presidency, I refer the hon. Member to 'Developments in the European Union, January to June 2003, the Greek Presidency' Cm6097, which was laid before Parliament in January 2004.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU (a) the Advisory Committee on the implementation of the Community action programme to combat social exclusion, (b) the Advisory Committee on the free movement of workers and (c) the Technical Committee for the implementation of regulations concerning the free movement and employment of workers met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations each Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of each Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [196677]

Mr. Pond: There were two meetings of the Advisory Committee on the implementation of the Community action programme to combat social exclusion during the Greek Presidency—on 5 February and 3 April 2003. Both took place in Brussels: the first was attended by a DWP official, the second by two DWP officials. At both meetings the main points raised by UK Government experts were on the Commission's proposals for an international peer review process. The UK sought to make the process more flexible in order to maximise the ability of this programme to meet its objectives—mutual learning on social inclusion matters. Points raised were largely technical but also impacted on the way that funds were to be spent.

Other matters on which UK representatives intervened included proposals for the development of new indicators of social exclusion; a suggested series of seminars on the future of social inclusion after enlargement; and the tendering process for the second round of transnational exchange programmes. Interventions on these matters covered both technical and financial issues.

During the Greek Presidency, the EU provided financial support to a range of projects and studies as a result of the deliberations of the Advisory Committee on the implementation of the Community action programme to combat social exclusion. During this period, the UK Government took no direct action as a result of the Committee's recommendations but it did begin preparations for a peer review supported by the action programme.

There was one meeting of the Advisory Committee on Freedom of Movement for Workers—on 9 January in Brussels. The Committee consists of representatives of Governments, employers and trade unions of each EU Member State. An official of the Department for Work and Pensions attended. The following matters were discussed on that occasion:

Enlargement of the EU, including transitional arrangement for free movement of workers from the new Member States.

The "SOLVIT" system of solving problems in the Internal Market.

The EURES (EURopean Employment Services) network, including the EURES charter.

European Commission proposals concerning the rights of third-country nationals.

Recent judgements of the European Court of Justice concerning freedom of movement.

A Communication from the European Commission: "Free movement of workers-achieving the full benefits and potential" (COM(2002)694 final).

The UK representative did not raise specific technical or financial issues at the meeting.

The Committee did not agree recommendations during the period of the Greek Presidency. The European Commission took into account the comments of individual members of the Advisory Committee on the matters discussed above.

There was one meeting of the Technical Committee on Freedom of Movement for Workers—on 8 January 2003 in Brussels. An official of the Department for Work and Pensions attended.

The same matters were discussed as at the Advisory Committee on 9 January, with the exception of European Commission proposals concerning the rights of third-country nationals, and with the addition of a proposed Directive on the rights of citizens of the Union and their family members to move and reside freely within the territory of the EU.

The UK representative did not raise specific technical or financial issues at the meeting.

The Committee did not agree recommendations during the period of the Greek Presidency. The European Commission took into account the comments of individual members of the Technical Committee on the matters discussed at the meeting and, at the suggestion of the UK Government representative, sought further written comments on the EURES Charter because a number of other Member States were not represented at the meeting.

For general information on the Greek Presidency I refer the hon. Member to 'Developments in the European Union, January to June 2003, the Greek Presidency' Cm6097 which was laid before Parliament in January 2004.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on incentives in the field of employment met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [194878]

Mr. Pond: There was one meeting of the Committee on Community incentive measures in the field of employment during the Greek Presidency, on 12 June 2003 in Brussels. An official from the Department for Work and Pensions represented the UK. The standard approach of the United Kingdom Government to the work of this Committee is to seek assurances that all the action being supported are in line with the agreed aims of the programme set out at Decision No 1145/2002/EC of 10 June 2002 and to contribute to the Lisbon reform agenda.

During the Greek Presidency the Committee provided an opinion on the implementation of activities under the 2003 work programme on incentive measures in the field of employment and on revision of the general guidelines for the implementation of the activities and the work programme for 2003. The European Commission carried forwards the implementation of the detailed measures within the work programme. Whilst the UK Government did not take any specific, significant action in response to the matters considered by the Committee, the work of the programme supports understanding of the effectiveness of a variety of measures that may support strategies to promote employment and employability.

For general information on the Greek Presidency I refer the hon. Member to 'Developments in the European Union, January to June 2003, the Greek Presidency' Cm6097 which was laid before Parliament in January 2004.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times during the Greek Presidency of the EU the Committee of the European Social Fund met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [194879]

Mr. Pond: The European Social Fund Advisory Committee met twice during the Greek Presidency. The meetings were held in Brussels on 21 March 2003 and 18 June 2003. At both meetings the UK Government representative raised a number of technical issues related to improving the effectiveness of European Social Fund programme management. No financial issues were raised. The Committee did not produce any recommendations.

For general information on the Greek Presidency I refer the hon. Member to 'Developments in the European Union, January to June 2003, the Greek Presidency' Cm6097, which was laid before Parliament in January 2004.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Technical Adaptation Committee on (a) the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health of workers at work, (b) the minimum safety and health requirements for improved medical treatment on board vessels and (c) the protection of workers from the risks related to exposure to chemical, physical and biological agents at work met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (x) the EU and (y) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [195571]

Mr. Pond: None of the bodies listed met during the currency of the Greek presidency of the EU.

Fair Trade

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether it is his policy to ensure that hospitality within his Department is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [197056]

Jane Kennedy: The Department for Work and Pensions policy is always to ensure that hospitality is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible and within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. In making commercial decisions, ethical and fair trade issues are considered across the whole supply chain.

Free Television Licences (Rhondda)

Chris Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households in each ward of the Rhondda are (a) entitled to free television licences and (b) have claimed free television licences. [198302]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available in the format requested.

The latest data giving the numbers of those aged 75 or over in each ward of Rhondda is shown in the following table. The number of over 75s in a ward will not match the number of free TV licences issued, since television licences cover households rather than individuals.

Ward name	Claimants aged 75 or over
Cwm Clydach	245
Cymmer	430
Ferndale	375
Llwyn-y-pia	195
Maerdy	245

Fuel Poverty

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with colleagues at the (a) Department of Trade and Industry, (b) Department for Environment, Food and

Rural Affairs and (c) Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the case for the welfare benefits system to assist fuel-poor households who cannot be removed from fuel poverty by energy efficiency improvements; and if he will make a statement. [196772]

Mr. Pond: We are working closely with colleagues across Government, particularly the Department of Trade and Industry, the Department for Environment and Regional Affairs and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, to establish how the Department for Work and Pensions can best contribute to the eradication of fuel poverty. The Department for Environment and Regional Affairs will be publishing the Fuel Poverty Action Plan before the end of the year which will set out the Government's strategy on fuel poverty for 2005 and beyond.

We have already seen good progress in reducing fuel poverty through the assistance provided by Warm Front. The Department for Environment and Regional Affairs has introduced Benefit Entitlement Checks for those who, at the time of application, do not qualify for assistance from Warm Front. These checks provide both the potential of increasing household income and enabling households to benefit from measures under Warm Front.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are claiming incapacity benefit in (a) the city of Manchester and (b) Manchester, Withington constituency. [196909]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

Numbers of incapacity benefits claimants at May 2004

City of Manchester	37,200
Manchester Withington parliamentary constituency	4,500

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.

2. Figures include all incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance claims (including IB credits only cases).

Incapacity/Severe Disablement Benefit

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants who relinquished incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowances in each year from 1997 (a) entered training and employment programmes other than Access to Work, Work Preparation and Workstep, (b) moved on to other benefits and (c) reached pensionable age. [191690]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

IB/SDA terminations[1] in a period, by whether entering a training/employment programme[2], another benefit[3] is claimed, or State Pension age is imminent

Period in which IB/SDA claim terminates:	All Terminations[15]	Entered training/ employment programme[16,2,4,5,6,7,8]	Moved to another benefit[15,3,9,10,11]	Terminated claim within six months of state pension age[15,12,13,14]
1 March 1996 to 28 February 1997	951,700	—	252,100	95,100
1 March 1997 to 28 February 1998	936,400	—	236,300	104,200
1 March 1998 to 28 February 1999	858,400	3,500	216,000	94,300
1 March 1999 to 29 February 2000	829,200	4,100	197,700	107,300
1 March 2000 to 28 February 2001	707,300	4,500	176,100	102,500
1 March 2001 to 28 February 2002	702,400	11,900	171,800	110,000
1 March 2002 to 28 February 2003	692,300	18,200	168,000	117,100
1 March 2003 to 29 February 2004	690,800	19,600	173,700	120,600

[1] Figures are based on persons claiming severe disablement allowance, long-term or short-term incapacity benefit, credits only cases, and those persons claiming IB but who have their benefit extinguished for reasons such as an overlap with another benefit, or because of hospitalisation.

[2] Training/employment programmes in this case are: New Deal for Young People (NDYP), New Deal for Long Term Unemployed (NDLTU), New Deal for Lone Parents (NDLP), New Deal for Partners Unemployed (NDPU), New Deal for Musicians (NDfM), New Deal Innovation Fund (NDIF), New Deal Disabled People (NDDP), Basic Skills, Joint Claims, Work Based Learning for Adults (WBLA), Employment Zones (EZs) and Action Teams. Data for employment/training programmes prior to 1998 is not available.

[3] Other benefits in this instance are income support (IS), jobseeker's allowance (JSA) and pension credit (Guarantee credit only/Guarantee and savings credit). Family credit and disability working allowance are excluded as "other benefits" as they were replaced in October 1999 by working families tax credit and disabled persons tax credit (subsequently replaced by new tax credits).

[4] Data for New Deal 50-Plus (ND50) is not included as the database for this programme is still under development.

[5] Movements to a training/employment programme include some people who have been on a programme at the same time as IB/SDA, but whose participation in the programme continues after the IB/SDA claim ceases.

[6] Only cases, which move to one of the listed training/employment programmes within 91 days from the end of their IB/SDA claim, will be counted. Some cases will move to training/employment programmes after 91 days: Such cases will not be counted as a move to a training/employment programme.

[7] Claimants shown as starting an employment/training programme may also appear in the 'Move to another benefit' column. For example they may have moved onto JSA and then almost immediately begun an employment/training programme.

[8] There will be some additional IB/SDA claimants who undertake training/employment programmes (e.g. New Deal for Disabled People) while remaining on IB/SDA for the whole period. These cases are not covered in the table, which only covers those who have ceased to claim IB/SDA.

[9] Movements to another benefit includes some people who have claimed IS/PC at the same time as IB/SDA but whose IS/PC claim continues after the IB/SDA claim ceases.

[10] Only cases that move to one of the other listed benefits within 91 days from the end of their IB/SDA claim will be counted. Some cases will move to other benefits after 91 days: Such cases will not be counted as a move to another benefit.

[11] Some of the cases shown as having moved to another benefit may have now terminated.

[12] State pension age is currently 60 years for women and 65 years for men.

[13] Claimants shown as terminating a claim within 6 months of state pension age may also appear in the "moved to another benefit" column, as they may have subsequently been awarded either IS or PC.

[14] IB/SDA claimant data is held on a computer system called INCAP; RP (and WB and BB) data is held on a computer system called PSCS; INCAP and PSCS are linked because both cover contributory benefits and require information on the claimant's NI contributions history. Once an IB claimant gets within six months of SPA, their RP award can start to be built on PSCS i.e. PSCS and its operators begin calculating how much RP will be payable once SPA is reached. At that point, the claimant disappears from the INCAP side of the system and appears on the PSCS side (though obviously they continue to be paid the relevant rate of IB via PSCS until they reach SPA when RP kicks in). Since our IB/SDA data obviously comes from INCAP, these claimants reaching SPA can effectively disappear from our IB/SDA data (from INCAP) any time in the six months before they reach SPA.

Notes:

1. Caseload figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
2. Figures based on a 5 per cent. sample, are subject to a degree of sampling variation.
3. Some IB/SDA end dates will have been estimated at the end of a quarter, where the true end date is not known.
4. A person is counted only once in each period, regardless of the number of times they claim and subsequently leave each benefit.
5. SDA is not available to new claimants from 6 April 2001. From this point, disabled people, whose period of incapacity begins before the age of 20 (or 25 if in education or training before the age of 20), may be able to receive incapacity benefit without having to satisfy the National Insurance contribution conditions. SDA recipients aged below 20 at the cut-off point will transfer on to IB at the long-term rate in April 2002. Existing recipients can continue to receive the benefit for as long as they satisfy the conditions of entitlement for the benefit.

Interim Benefit Payments

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of (a) the number of interim benefit payments and (b) gross public expenditure on those payments in each year since 1997 to cover delays in payments of social security benefits and tax credits. [194845]

Mr. Pond: Information on interim benefit payments to cover delays is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Interim payments are not benefit as such but are converted into benefit when a substantive benefit decision is made.

With regard to tax credits, interim payments are made when the usual payment methods have broken down and are part of the annual entitlement. Interim payments to tax credit claimants are explained more fully in the Comptroller and Auditor General's Standard Report 2003–04 [at paragraph 2.14] which was published on 26 October 2004

Jobcentre Plus Offices

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans there are to increase the number of services available to people from Jobcentre Plus offices. [194500]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from David Anderson to David Taylor, dated 15 November 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the number of services available to people from Jobcentre Plus offices. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus is continuously modernising and improving the services it provides to its customers. In the course of a four year programme, social security offices and Jobcentres are being replaced by Jobcentre Plus offices in which customers can make enquiries about their benefits and job opportunities in one place. The programme has currently rolled out a total of 537 sites, which is over half the eventual total.

In terms of office design and customer service, our emphasis has been on reducing waiting times and eliminating referrals between offices. New measures include increased telephone contact facilities, a new appointments system and nominated Personal Advisers offering advice and support on job readiness and benefit matters. As part of our modernisation programme, we are reinvesting in front line, customer facing services.

We are also providing improved customer access through telephone contact centres and the Internet. The staff at telephone contact centres are able to take applications for benefit over the telephone and deal with customer enquiries.

I hope this is helpful.

Natural Gas Infrastructure

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what targets have been set for the Health and Safety Executive in respect of time elapsing from application for approval of large scale natural gas infrastructure to the completion of assessment; what the performance against target has been in each of the last five years; and what steps he is taking to ensure timely assessments are carried out. [197637]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 11 November 2004]: A large scale natural gas infrastructure project would be subject to the Control of Major Accident Hazard Regulations 1999 (COMAH) which are enforced by the Health and Safety Executive and the Environment Agency acting jointly as the competent authority. These regulations require the operator to submit a "pre-construction safety report" to the competent authority for assessment three to six months before construction starts. Construction cannot begin until the competent authority has advised the operator of its conclusions and the operator is then required to produce a pre-operational safety report.

The competent authority's publicly available safety report assessment manual gives the timescale for completion of the assessment of the pre-operational safety reports as twelve months, but notes that there may be reasons where this cannot be achieved. There are no timescales for pre-construction safety reports.

The competent authority can confirm that no large scale natural gas infrastructure projects have been delayed, in the last five years, due to a failure to make timely assessments.

New Deal

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what targets have been set for the numbers of lone parents taking advantage of the (a) lone parent work premium and (b) in work credit (i) in each of the pilot areas and (ii) as a whole; [194991]

(2) for how long the proposed pilots of (a) lone parent work premium and (b) in work credit will last; [194992]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of lone parents who will benefit from the (a) lone parent work premium and (b) in work credit in each of the pilot areas; [194993]

(4) what steps he will be taking to make those lone parents living in selected pilot areas aware of the (a) lone parent work premium and (b) in work credit; [194994]

(5) in which districts the (a) lone parent work premium and (b) in work credit will be piloted. [194995]

Jane Kennedy: On 25 October 2004, the Department launched pilots of two new financial incentives to help lone parents. The incentives are a Work Search Premium (WSP) of £20 a week, on top of benefits, to assist lone parents during the search for work, and an In Work Credit (IWC) of £40 a week, on top of wages and tax credits, helping work pay during their first year back in full-time work.

The pilots are testing the effectiveness of the IWC in twelve districts across the country. In eight of these areas the credit is being tested alongside the WSP.

The aim of the pilot is to gather evidence about the proportion of lone parents taking up the credit and premium and the impact in terms of supporting more lone parents to move off benefit and into work. There is strong evidence, from the evaluation of New Deal for Lone Parents (NDLP), that nearly all lone parents would be more positive about considering work if the gains were over £40 per week. We have, therefore, not made prior assumptions about the impact of the IWC or WSP and have not set targets for take up of either the IWC or WSP in the pilot areas.

The table provides estimates of the number of lone parents in the pilot districts who meet the eligibility criteria for participating in the pilot.

Jobcentre plus districts	WSP and IWC	IWC only	Income support lone parents eligible
Bradford	Yes	—	6,000
Cardiff and Vale	Yes	—	5,000
Dudley and Sandwell	Yes	—	7,000
Edinburgh Lothian and Borders	Yes	—	7,000
Lancashire West	Yes	—	7,000
Leicestershire	Yes	—	7,000
South East London	Yes	—	14,000
West London	Yes	—	11,000
Central London	—	Yes	13,000
Leeds	—	Yes	8,000
North London	—	Yes	16,000
Staffordshire	—	Yes	7,000
Total	—	Yes	108,000

Notes:

1. Lone parents who have claimed income support for 12 months or longer are eligible for the pilot.

2. Lone parents who have claimed jobseeker's allowance for 12 months or longer are also eligible for the pilot, though there are very few lone parents with children under 16 on jobseeker's allowance in relation to those on income support.

Source:

Estimates based on DWP administrative data from the Working Age Statistical Database (Benefits), April 2004

Whilst we anticipate that many lone parents will take up the offer of this new financial help, we recognise that not all eligible lone parents will choose to do so. Payment of the work search premium is dependent upon them working closely with NDLP personal advisers and adhering to an action plan. Currently less than nine per cent. of lone parents claiming income support are on NDLP. Whilst our expectation is that the new incentives will encourage greater participation in NDLP, this will remain a voluntary programme and we accept that many lone parents will not yet feel that worksearch or full time employment are the right options for them.

The level of improved job entries as a result of the new incentives will not be measurable until the pilots have been running for some time. Independent experts will carefully evaluate detailed management information from the pilots and their findings will be published.

In all districts the pilots are planned to continue until October 2006 but payments to lone parents who join the pilot before that date will continue for some time beyond that; until the end of the payment period (26 weeks for WSP, 12 months for IWC).

Eligible lone parents will be made aware of these measures at interviews with NDLP personal advisors. The entire eligible population will be invited for interview at least once during the length of the pilot. In addition leaflets, posters and local publicity will be available from the selected pilot areas.

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents in Manchester, Withington have gained work through the New Deal Programme. [197883]

Jane Kennedy: 500 lone parents in Manchester Withington have gained work through the New Deal for lone parents since the start of the programme in October 1998. Figures for lone parents who have gained work through other New Deal Programmes are not available.

Offender Rehabilitation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what strategy his Department uses to re-introduce offenders into the work force. [197467]

Jane Kennedy: We are committed to providing help and advice to those likely to encounter barriers to getting back into work, including ex-offenders.

We work closely with the Criminal Justice Agencies to ensure, where possible, rehabilitation within the sentence connects to our employment support.

Through Jobcentre Plus, we provide 'Employment and Benefit Surgeries' in prison for pre-release prisoners and, where possible, we also work closely with the National Probation Service in assisting those supervised in the community.

Offenders released from prison without work who wish to claim Jobseeker's Allowance are offered appointments with their local Jobcentre as soon as possible after release. Ex-offenders can have early access to Jobcentre Plus help, including the New Deals. The help available covers a range of employability needs including: jobsearch and jobsearch techniques; basic skills and soft skills; through to some types of occupational and vocational skills. In addition, specialist progress2work provision helps those recovering from drugs mis-use, many of whom have an offending background, to get back to work.

We are also continually strengthening our existing employer links to encourage the employment of customers who have disclosed their criminal record. In doing so, we promote the wider gains to society in reducing re-offending.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will reply to the questions from the right hon. Member for Birkenhead (a) references 194278 and 194277 tabled on 25 October and (b) reference 193907 tabled on 22 October. [196889]

Mr. Pond: Replies were given to my right hon. Friend on 4 November.

Pension Service

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Pension Service can refuse direct payment at certain post office branches when a pensioner has designated that branch as their preferred account; and if he will make a statement. [197443]

Mr. Pond: The Pensions Service cannot refuse pensioners direct payment at certain post office branches.

If a customer chooses to have their benefit or pension paid direct into a post office card account they do not need to designate a branch, as payments through card accounts can be accessed at any post office branch during opening hours.

The Post Office also has arrangements with a wide variety of banks and building societies and depending on the account held, customers are able to withdraw money across the counter without being charged at any post office branch.

Primary Biliary Cirrhosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether primary biliary cirrhosis is a condition for which disability living allowance can be awarded. [197971]

Maria Eagle: Entitlement to disability living allowance is not linked to particular disabling conditions, but on the extent to which a severely disabled person has personal care needs and/or walking difficulties as a result of their disability. People with primary biliary cirrhosis can qualify for the allowance if they satisfy the rules which govern entitlement.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the aggregate annual cost to (a) business and (b) others obtained by adding up costs recorded in regulatory impact assessments is of the regulations introduced by his Department since 1997; [196564]

(2) what his latest estimate is of the cost in a year of compliance with regulations imposed by his Department. [196565]

Malcolm Wicks: All proposals which impact on business, charities or the voluntary sector require a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) which includes details of the costs, benefits and risks of the proposals. RIAs are subject to public consultation. Copies of final RIAs are available in the Library and on the Department's website.

Somalian Nationals

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what publicly-funded English language courses aimed at providing the language skills needed to gain employment in the UK are available to Somalian nationals. [195304]

Jane Kennedy: As part of our commitment to improving the employment rate of ethnic minority people, we offer up to 26 weeks of full time work-focused support through ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages). This support is available to eligible customers including Somali nationals, through the New Deal and Work Based Learning for Adults programmes. It aims to help participants move as far as possible towards Level 1 of the new national Skills for Life standards.

In addition, those who have difficulty with the English language, including Somali nationals, can access ESOL college provision funded through the Learning and Skills Council—as long as it does not conflict with the terms of their Jobseeker's Agreement.

People with basic skills needs—English for Speakers of Other Languages—have early entry to training and employment programmes.

Responsibility for government funded training in Wales and Scotland is devolved to the Welsh Assembly and the Scottish Parliament respectively and in Northern Ireland to the Northern Ireland Office.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Manchester, Withington have benefited from the winter fuel allowance in each year since its introduction. [197876]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of pensioners in the Manchester Withington constituency who have benefited from a Winter Fuel Payment in each year since 1999–2000 is in the table.

Information relating to the 1997–98 and 1998–99 winters is not available.

	payments made
1999–2000	12,220
2000–01	12,860
2001–02	12,705
2002–03	12,465
2003–04	12,340

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people of pensionable age have received the winter fuel allowance in the Easington constituency since its introduction. [198129]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of people in the Easington constituency who have received a winter fuel payment in each year since 1999–2000 is in the table. Information relating to the 1997–98 and 1998–99 winters is not available.

	Payments made
1999–2000	14,785
2000–01	16,625
2001–02	16,710
2002–03	16,805
2003–04	16,785

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people received the winter fuel allowance in the Wansbeck constituency in the last year for which figures are available. [198693]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of people in the Wansbeck constituency who received a winter fuel payment in winter 2003–04 was 18,210.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of people in Scotland who need to make a claim to receive the 2004–05 winter fuel payment; and how many claims were received on or before 24 September. [197343]

Malcolm Wicks: We estimate around 60,000 people in Scotland will turn 60 and become newly entitled to receive a winter fuel payment for 2004–05. In 2003–04 around 35,000 people in Scotland aged 60 received an automatic payment. We would expect the number to be similar in 2004–05. Those people who are not in receipt of certain benefits and therefore do not receive an automatic payment, will need to claim.

On 24 September, 37,705 completed claim forms for a winter fuel payment had been received from people in Scotland. Some of these were probably from people who would have been paid a winter fuel payment automatically.

The Government have publicised the availability of winter fuel payments and how to obtain a claim form. It is up to an individual, where a claim is necessary, to decide whether or not to make that claim. They have until 30 March 2005 to make a claim for this winter.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will extend eligibility for winter fuel payments to non-pensioner households who qualify for social fund cold weather payments; what estimate he has made of the likely cost of this policy; and if he will make a statement. [197538]

Malcolm Wicks: We have no plans to extend winter fuel payments to non-pensioner households which qualify for a cold weather payment. Winter fuel payments are made to pensioners because they are more vulnerable to the effects of cold weather during the winter months than other groups.

We estimate that the cost of extending winter fuel payments to non-pensioner households that qualify for the social fund cold weather payments would be £300 million in 2004–05.

Note:

Actual receipt of a cold weather payment depends on local temperatures as well as meeting qualification conditions. Here it is assumed that all eligible cases would receive a payment of £200.

Work-related Illness

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost to the economy of work-related illness in (a) England and (b) each region in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [196244]

Jane Kennedy: The information is not available in the format requested. The latest available figures for England are for the year 1995/96 and are presented in the table.

However, more up-to-date information does exist for 2001–02 but for Great Britain only. Estimates of the costs to the GB economy of work related illness for 2001–02 are £7.6 billion to £11.6 billion in 2001–02 prices[1]. The statistical data that supported the analysis of the 2001–02 costs provided insufficient detail to yield regional cost breakdowns.

Interim update of the 'Costs to Britain of Workplace Accidents and Work-Related Ill Health' Health and Safety Executive 2004

Cost to the economy of work related illness—1995 to 1996

	£billion
England	5.65 to 5.73
South East	1.44 to 1.52
East Anglia	0.06 to 0.08
South West	0.35 to 0.17
West Midlands	0.77 to 0.79
East Midlands	0.2 to 0.24
Yorkshire and Humberside	0.18 to 0.22
North West	0.81 to .85
North	0.33 to 0.34
London	1.51 to 1.52

The costs in the table are extracted from: "The costs to Britain of workplace accidents and work-related ill health in 1995–96", Health and Safety Executive, 1999 ISBN 07176 1709 2.

The cost to the economy is defined as the sum of the following costs: loss of output, administration costs, recruitment costs, medical treatment, and investigation costs to HSE and local authorities. This information relates only to 1995–96 and is in 1995–96 prices.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what change there has been in youth unemployment in the constituency of Bolsover since 1997. [197095]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Skinner, dated 15 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about youth unemployment in Bolsover. I am replying in his absence. (197095)

Between the twelve-month periods ending February 1997 and February 2003, the latest data for which information is available, the number of unemployed people aged 16–24 resident in the Bolsover Parliamentary Constituency fell from 2,000 to 1,000. The figures from the Labour Force Survey are rounded to the nearest thousand and are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

The Office for National Statistics also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance for local areas including Parliamentary Constituencies. The number of people aged 18–24 resident in the Bolsover Parliamentary Constituency claiming Jobseeker's Allowance fell from 660 in May 1997 to 385 in September 2004. The data are not seasonally adjusted.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Contingency Planning

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what contingency plans have been produced for the evacuation of London following a terrorist attack. [195846]

Mr. Raynsford: A basic plan has been developed for the mass evacuation of any part of greater London. The plan is scalable and flexible and any response will depend on the nature of an event. It has been developed in conjunction with the relevant emergency services, local authorities, transport operators, and other organisations in London and the surrounding regions. Mass evacuation will be the last resort and is most unlikely to be required. In most circumstances the generic advice would be to go indoors and listen to the media for further advice. It would not be appropriate to disclose the operational details of emergency planning.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library contingency plans for evacuating London in the case of a major terrorist attack. [195855]

Mr. Raynsford: I am unable to place the contingency plan for the evacuation of London in the Library as it contains confidential and sensitive operational details. It is standard policy that we do not place these types of plan in the Library.

Nottingham (Boundary Commission)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects the Parliamentary Boundary Commissioner's proposals for Nottingham to be submitted to the Department. [197897]

Mr. Raynsford: The Boundary Commission for England will put their proposal for Nottingham to the Government as part of the report of the fifth general review. The Boundary Commission for England is required to submit its final report by 12 April 2007. It is a matter for the Commission when, within that time scale, they do so.

Affordable Homes

Tom Cox: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many affordable homes have been built in the London borough of Wandsworth in each of the last five years by (a) Wandsworth council, (b) the Housing Corporation and (c) housing associations; and if he will make a statement. [196725]

Keith Hill: The numbers are of new build local authority and registered social landlord social dwellings for rent as reported in building control completions in Wandsworth are as follows:

	Number of dwellings for rent
1999–2000	76
2000–01	3
2001–02	0
2003–04	51

The figures exclude low cost home ownership schemes and acquisition of existing dwellings by registered social landlords.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures are in place to assist key workers to obtain affordable housing in Gloucester; and what discussions he has had with (a) local authorities and (b) housing associations in Gloucestershire on this. [198257]

Keith Hill: Housing assistance for key workers within the South West region is available through the key worker Challenge Fund scheme identified by the South West Regional Housing Board. The £10 million scheme will provide affordable housing for rent or home ownership by key workers.

The Housing Corporation invited bids from housing associations for proposals to assist key public sector workers in the region in sectors experiencing recruitment and retention difficulties. No bid for Gloucester was successful, but within Gloucestershire £809,000 has been allocated to provide 24 units for key workers and in South Gloucestershire £716,000 has been provided for a further 27 dwellings. These dwellings are being provided by Gloucestershire Housing Partnership and Sovereign Housing Association.

Key workers may also benefit from other shared ownership and homebuy programmes funded by the Housing Corporation to help existing social tenants and those on waiting lists into home ownership.

Building Regulations (Fuel Conservation)

Sue Doughty: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what studies he has made of the extent to which the minimum standards for the conservation of fuel and power required under the building regulations are adhered to. [197540]

Phil Hope: The current provisions for the conservation of fuel and power came into effect on 1 April 2002 and, in accordance with normal procedures, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has carried out tests on new dwellings, inspected applications received by a number of building control bodies for approval of proposed works covering all types of buildings, and interviewed contractors. The results are being taken into account in the further review announced in the Energy White Paper.

Census Data

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) when the Local Government Finance Settlement will include updated census data; [197039]

(2) if he will make a statement on the inclusion of updated census data in the Local Government Financial Settlement. [197040]

Mr. Raynsford: Government are working towards incorporating the 2001 Census data into the Local Government Finance Settlement for 2006–07.

Commercial Property Leases

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list those consulted regarding Commercial Property Leases: options for determining or outlawing the use of upward-only rent review clauses; and if he will place copies of the responses in the Library. [197487]

Keith Hill: The consultation on Commercial Property Leases: options for deterring or outlawing the use of upward only rent review clauses ended on 30 September. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister specifically consulted the following organisations and bodies:

Property Interests

Association of British Insurers
Association of Property Bankers
British Council for Offices
British Property Federation
CoreNet Global UK
Council of Mortgage Lenders
House Builders Federation
Investment Property Forum
National Association of Pension Funds
Property Managers Association

Professional/legal bodies

Chancery Bar Association
City of London Law Society
General Council of the Bar
Law Commission
Law Society
Royal Institute of British Architects
Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors

Other business interests

Alliance of Independent Retailers
British Chambers of Commerce
British Retail Consortium
Confederation of British Industry
Federation of Small Businesses
Forum of Private Business
Institute of Directors
National Association of Pension Funds
Small Business Bureau

Devolved bodies

National Assembly for Wales
Northern Ireland Executive
Scottish Executive
Greater London Assembly

Other Government bodies

Countryside Agency
Small Business Service

Local Authority Associations

Association of Chief Estates Officers
Local Government Association
Improvement and Development Agency
Society of Local Authority Chief Executives
Welsh Local Government Association

Consumer bodies

Consumer Congress Secretariat
National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux
National Consumer Council
Welsh Consumer Council

Environmental bodies

Entrust
Environment Council
Friends of the Earth
Greenpeace

Trades Unions

Trades Union Congress

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has also staged a series of well-attended seminars. A copy of the responses will be made available in the Library of the House in due course.

Community Hospital (Leighton Buzzard)

Andrew Selous: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will ensure that a community hospital is provided in Leighton Buzzard and Linslade as part of the infrastructure supplied under the Sustainable Communities Plan. [198201]

Keith Hill: Additional hospital capacity in the Milton Keynes and South Midlands growth area is one of the issues that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's funded "Planning for future of health and social care needs in the MKSM sub region" study is looking at. This study is due to report in summer 2005.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working closely with other Government Departments to ensure that funding allocations for major services, such as health, respond effectively to growth. In March 2004, the Department of Health announced a funding package for the growth areas which includes: a commitment to including a growth area funding adjustment in future allocations; additional capital funding of £20 million for 2005–06; and additional revenue funding of £20 million for 2004–05 and 2005–06 for primary care trusts (PCTs) in the growth areas. £2.244 million of this revenue funding went to PCTs in Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of the staff in his Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196119]

Phil Hope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton West on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 619W.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the consequences will be for the staffing of his Department of the rejection of proposals for an elected regional assembly in the North East. [198215]

Mr. Raynsford: Staff who had been working on the Regional Assemblies Bill and other preparations for elected regional assemblies are being transferred to other priority work within the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Education Authorities

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how each local education authority performed in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 against best value performance indicators 159 (a) to (d) , as defined in 2002–03. [196993]

Mr. Raynsford: Information on the performance of local education authorities against Best Value Performance Indicator (BVPI) 159 (a)–(d) for 2002–03 can be found on the BVPI website www.bvpi.gov.uk. The data for 2003–04 is currently being audited and will be posted on the website in mid-December.

Electrical Standards

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the time scale is for the harmonisation of electrical standards under part P of the building regulations; what the reasons are for the requirement for electricians to pay a registration fee; what that fee is expected to be; and who will determine the level of the fee. [197857]

Phil Hope: Part P of the Building Regulations (Electrical safety in dwellings) will come into force on 1 January 2005. The Government have introduced part P to reduce the number of deaths, injuries and fires caused by defective fixed electrical installations. The regulatory impact assessment showed that it would be both practicable and cost-effective to take this step.

From 1 January anyone carrying out notifiable electrical installation work in dwellings will need to demonstrate that such work meets the requirements in part P. There are two ways in which this can be done.

First, those with sufficient qualifications, knowledge and experience can choose to join a competent person self-certification scheme authorised under the Building Act 1984. Members of such schemes will be able to self-certify that their work complies with part P. There will be an annual fee to belong to such schemes, the fee level being determined by the scheme operator. For schemes already authorised the fee range is from £300 to £1,000. Fees can be set only to cover running and development costs of the scheme.

Electrical contractors who choose not to join a scheme and all carrying out notifiable work on a DIY basis will need to submit a building notice to a building control body for each job. In this case there will be a building control fee to be paid. The building control body will then be responsible for inspecting and testing the work to ensure that it is safe.

English Regions Network

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the functions are of the English Regions Network; what guidance has been issued governing its activities; and to whom it reports. [198157]

Mr. Raynsford: The English Regions Network (ERN) is the co-ordinating body for the eight regional chambers in England, co-ordinating policy responses and commissioning research relevant to all regional chambers.

The ERN submits its business plan and reports against agreed objectives direct to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Fire Authorities

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has given fire authorities on (a) minimum levels of provision and (b) response times in drawing up integrated risk management plans. [197689]

Mr. Raynsford: The old, national standards of fire cover, which set out the speed and weight of response to fire depending on building density, were insufficiently flexible to allow Fire and Rescue Authorities (FRA) to respond to the needs of their communities. Integrated Risk Management Planning allows each FRA to set its own local standards for provision and response in the light of local risk.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister produced guidance in 2003 on the development of Integrated Risk Management Planning to help FRAs determine the most effective and efficient use of their resources.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of fire authorities consultations on integrated risk management plans. [197691]

Mr. Raynsford: Under Integrated Risk Management Planning (IRMP) it is for each Fire and Rescue Authority (FRA) to assess the needs of its local communities. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is one of the consultees on the annual IRMPs. The Implementation Support Team, drawn from Her Majesty's Fire Service Inspectorate (HMFSI), provided guidance to FRAs throughout the year.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has issued to fire authorities on (a) minimum provision and (b) response times for specialist equipment carried on incident support units. [197692]

Mr. Raynsford: The minimum provision and response times for specialist equipment carried on incident support units is a matter for each individual Fire and Rescue Authority (FRA). Any change it proposes in its Integrated Risk Management Planning (IRMP) should form part of the consultation on their action plan. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has issued formal guidance on IRMPs and further guidance is planned.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether projected cost savings from integrated risk management plans for fire authorities include the cost of meeting (a) minimum levels of provision and (b) response times. [197693]

Mr. Raynsford: Under Integrated Risk Management Planning it is for each Fire and Rescue Authorities to carry out a full risk assessment of its area and decide on the appropriate levels of provision and response times. Any cost savings will reflect those decisions. Any changes to existing provision will be the subject of consultation.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what provision his Department has made for monitoring and assessment of performance against fire authorities' projected risk assessments following the introduction of integrated risk management plans; [197694]

(2) what provision his Department has made for external audit of fire authorities' projected risk assessments based on integrated risk management plans. [197695]

Mr. Raynsford: Fire and Rescue Authorities have been and will continue to be subject to an annual external audit.

Fire Safety

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes are planned in the size of the fire safety sector in England and Wales; what estimate he has made of the effects on the funding requirement; whether he has undertaken a risk assessment in respect of such plans; and if he will make a statement. [193186]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

Prison Service Fire Safety Section has been reorganised. Officials have taken full advice on the statutory implications of the restructure and provision of the service. This advice confirms that arrangements following reorganisation will not result in an increased risk to the service.

Reorganisation will reduce the size of the section, through early retirement, from five staff to three resulting in annual savings of approximately £150,000 a year.

Fire Service

Mr Mackay: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) staff and (b) consultancy costs were of the (i) Fire Research Department and (ii) HM Fire Service Inspectorate in each quarter since January 2002. [196079]

Mr. Raynsford: The costs are shown in the following table.

	(a) Staff pay costs		(b) Consultancy cost
	(i) FRD	(ii) HMFSI	(i) FRD	(ii) HMFSI
April to June 2003	174	757	5	0
July to September 2003	131	533	39	0
October to December 2003	154	674	135	0
January to March 2004[1]	169	619	273	0
April to June 2004	348	451	62	0
July to September 2004	351	472	86	0

[1] FRD staff pay costs includes staff from fire statistics section from April 2004.

Figures for January 2002 to March 2003 are not available in the form requested. Staff in these divisions were paid partly from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions and partly from the Home Office payroll. As a result of machinery of Government changes, complete data is not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has for a regional fire control centre for Nottinghamshire and the East Midlands. [197421]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister plans to have a national network of resilient fire control centres with one in each Government office region. East Midlands is in the first tranche of the implementation plan and its regional fire control centre should become fully operational early in 2007. A procurement exercise is currently under way for the location of the regional fire control centre and an announcement of the site should be made in the first quarter of 2005.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many Green Ministers his Office and its predecessors have had since 1997. [197672]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created in May 2002. Since then there have been two Green Ministers. Between 1997 and the creation of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister there were three Green Ministers; two in the Department for Environment, Transport and the Regions, and one in the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions.

Department	Green Ministers
DETR	Glenda Jackson, Beverley Hughes
DTLR	Alan Whitehead
ODPM	Chris Leslie; Phil Hope

High Hedges

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects local authorities to begin to accept applications relating to high hedges. [196963]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is now finalising Regulations and guidance and expects the system to be fully operational in early 2005, at which point local authorities will be able to process complaints about high hedges.

House Building (Growth)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance has been issued to local authorities about assumptions for the rate of growth of house building above the level set out in Regional Planning Guidance 9. [198049]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has issued no formal guidance to local authorities about assumptions for the rate of growth of house building above the level set out in Regional Planning Guidance 9, other than that already set out in RPG9. Officials do have regular discussions with the Regional Assembly's officers and committees, which include local authorities, covering the interpretation of Government policy and guidance.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions his Department has had with local authorities in South East England about the infrastructure funds that will be available if house building targets exceed those set out in Regional Planning Guidance 9. [198050]

Keith Hill: As part of the Regional Assembly's process of developing the regional spatial strategy for the South East that will replace the Regional Planning Guidance for the South East (RPG9), officials from the Government Office for the South East and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are involved in a range of discussions with the Assembly and local authorities relevant to that process. They have also worked with the Regional Assembly and local authorities in piloting a new approach on investment in transport infrastructure through the Regional Transport Board.

Housing (Disabled People)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what representations he has received on the draft consultation on the guidance to local authorities on best practice in the organisation and delivery of a housing adaptations service for disabled people; [197587]

(2) what plans he has for legislation to simplify the way in which grant aid for disabled adaptations are managed; [197588]

(3) what plans he has for legislation to end means testing as an instrument to assess applications for grant aid for disabled adaptations; [197589]

(4) how much was spent on disabled facilities grants in each of the last 10 years; [197590]

(5) what the average waiting time between assessment and completion has been in each local authority for people requesting disabled adaptations in their homes in the last 10 years. [197591]

Keith Hill: The consultation period for the delivering adaptations consultation documents ended in May 2003, 69 responses were received. The final version of the document "Delivering Housing Adaptations for Disabled People: A Good Practice Guide" was published on 3 November and copies are available in the Library of the House.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, jointly with the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills is undertaking a comprehensive review of the DFG programme. The review will look the operation and outcomes of the Disabled Facilities Grant (DFG) Programme and make proposals to improve its efficiency and fairness. This will include a review of the DFG means test. The review will report to Ministers in May 2005.

The Regulatory Reform (Housing Assistance) (England & Wales) Order 2002 came into force on 18 July 2002, and provides local housing authorities with wide discretionary powers to provide assistance for the repair, improvement or adaptations of housing. These powers can be used to provide additional help with adaptations over and above the mandatory entitlements under the DFG legislation.

Total Disabled Facilities Grant payments to local authorities in England by the Government over the last ten years are:

	£ million
1994–95	54
1995–96	59
1996–97	55
1997–98	66
1998–99	64
1999–2000	66
2000–01	77
2001–02	88
2002–03	95
2003–04	112

The Government does not collect data on the average waiting time for a DFG.

Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the Answer of 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1323W, on the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme, if he will list the range of measures in place to support local authorities with above average population growth in meeting the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme targets; and which local authorities are involved in meetings with officials from his Department and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs about the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme. [195830]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

Defra's Waste Implementation Programme Local Authority Support Unit has identified a number of common waste management issues where support is needed. Support includes guidance on waste composition analysis; a report of Household Waste Recycling Centre sites in England; an assessment of these sites as a resource and the infrastructure requirements for compliance with the WEEE Directive; good practice guidance on bulky waste management; procurement and bulky waste toolkits; good practice case studies on waste collection and bring systems; and the new recyclables capture toolkit. This information can be found on the Local Authority Support website address http://lasupport.defra.gov.uk/.

In addition the Local Authority Support Unit invited all local authorities to apply for targeted support to help them deal with specific local barriers to improved recycling performance. The scheme has had an excellent response and the Local Authority Support Unit and WRAP's ROTATE programme are providing consultancy support to 317 authorities in England. This support places considerable emphasis on strategic partnerships but also includes help with providing procurement expertise and waste composition analysis, tackling bulky goods, developing estates schemes and increasing diversion rates at Household Waste Recycling Centres.

The Spending Review 2004 included an overall increase in EPCS of £1.2 billion over 2006–07 and 2007–08 reflecting in part increased costs of waste management arising from EU obligations. Local authorities will also benefit from an extra £275 million of PFI credits over the same period for long term investment. And funds available through the waste Performance Reward Grant will rise from £45 million to £105 million in 2006–07 and £110 million in 2007–08.

This support, although not directly targeted at authorities planning for above average population growth, will help those authorities move towards more sustainable waste management practices.

The Authorities involved in the meeting with officials from ODPM and Defra are—Milton Keynes city council, Buckinghamshire county council and the East London Waste Authority. Officials from Defra also meet local authority representative bodies to discuss the operation of the Landfill Allowances Trading Scheme on a regular basis through the scheme's Stakeholder Group.

Local Authority Settlements

Phil Sawford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to ensure that local authorities in the growth areas will receive a settlement for 2005–06 in line with the funding formula. [197855]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the right hon. Member for Sleaford and North Hykeham on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 848W.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will give local authorities more flexibility on how they spend grant support. [197498]

Mr. Raynsford: In 2004–05 the Government reduced the proportion of ring-fenced grant by a further 2 percentage points to 11.1 per cent., by "unfencing" seven grants, worth some £750 million. For non-schools areas of spending, we continue to seek to give local authorities as much freedom and flexibility as we can.

Education is a key national priority and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister aims to give schools as much stability, freedom and flexibility in their funding as possible. We have already announced our proposals to provide, from 2006–07, funding for schools through a grant from the Department for Education and Skills to local authorities.

Details of the proposed funding allocations to each local authority will be announced as part of the provisional local government finance settlement.

Policy Changes (Worcester)

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely to the Worcester constituency, the effects of changes to his Department's policy since 1997 on the Worcester constituency. [197969]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is determined to develop policies to improve the lives of people across the UK, including the West Midlands.

In the local government finance settlements since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister took office we have been able to increase the amount of Government grant given to local authorities by £19.1 billion. This is a 30 per cent. increase in real terms and compares with a 7 per cent. cut in the previous four years before 1997–98.

Worcester city council has received an average annual increase in formula grant since 1997 of 3.4 per cent. Residents of Worcester have also benefited from Worcestershire county council's average increase in grant of 4.6 per cent. each year over this time.

The transfer of local authority stock to Registered Social Landlords is one of the options for delivering the decent homes programme. Since 1997, Worcester city council has transferred its total stock of 4703 dwellings, of which 2034 were non-decent, to Worcester Community Housing, an RSL. Similarly, since 1997, within Worcestershire county council, Bromsgrove transferred its total stock of 3096 dwellings, of which 255 were non-decent, to Bromsgrove District Housing Trust Ltd, an RSL; and Wyre Forest transferred its total stock of 6056 dwellings to Wyre Forest Community Housing, an RSL.

This year the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has provided £15.9 million in Supporting People grant to Worcestershire county council, to enable it to deliver housing-related support services to vulnerable people in the area. Currently this provides over 17,000 dwellings of support to a range of people, including homeless families, older people, people with learning disabilities, and young people at risk.

The Worcestershire Partnership was awarded a Liveability Fund grant worth a total of £3.4 million in March 2004. The Liveability Fund grant for Worcestershire includes funding for environmental service improvements and several park improvements in Worcester City.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./.

Post Office

Mr. Brady: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the post office branches that have benefited from grants from the Urban Deprived Fund, broken down by (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) local authority area, giving the amount of grant awarded in each case. [197482]

Phil Hope: The information requested has been made available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister by what criteria applications from Post Office branches for grant funding from the Urban Deprived Fund are assessed. [197483]

Phil Hope: Post offices must be located within the 10 per cent. most deprived wards as measured by the Indexes of Multiple Deprivation 2000. The application must demonstrate that:

> The post office is at risk of closure (due to financial and/or security issues) within two years without the support of the grant.
> The proposed work under the grant will have a significant beneficial impact upon the viability of the business within two years.

Clive Efford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 8 November 2004, Official Report, column 455W, on sub-post offices, whether Neighbourhood Renewal areas (a) are included in his Department's definition of the most deprived urban areas and (b) meet the criteria for the Most Deprived Urban Post Office Fund. [197627]

Phil Hope: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The Indices of Deprivation 2000 (ID 2000) were used to determine eligibility for the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (NRF). The ID 2000 aggregates ward level scores up to district level, using six different ways of measuring deprivation in different types of local authority districts. This includes deprivation in both urban and rural areas. Local authorities that fell within the top 50 most deprived on any of the six measures were eligible for NRF.

(b) Urban post offices in the 10 per cent. most deprived wards are eligible to apply for the Deprived Urban Post Office Fund (DUPOF). Not all of the 10 per cent. most deprived wards fall in NRF areas.

According to the ID 2000, two of the 88 most deprived local authorities do not contain wards that are in the 10 per cent. most deprived. Although many of the 10 per cent. most deprived wards fall into the NRF areas, there are some in other local authorities.

Red Ash

Ms Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations he has received on the use of red ash from pit waste as hardcore in house building. [197696]

Phil Hope: It is believed that no recent representations has been received by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister concerning the use of the pit waste known as red ash for use as hardcore in house building.

However, it is known that problems have been encountered when red ash material has become saturated and consequently expanded. Technical guidance is available of how to deal with this material when it is discovered. If the red ash fill remains in a dry condition then there are few difficulties with the material. Regretfully some individuals have been ill-advised and have suffered unnecessary disruption and expense when the material has been discovered in their dwellings.

Due to the high concentrations of sulphates in red ash, it is no longer recommended as a construction material under buildings.

Ms Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to alter guidance in respect of the use of red ash; and if he will make a statement on BRE 3613. [197697]

Phil Hope: The recently published Building Regulations Approved Document Part C—Site preparation and resistance to contamination and moisture—which comes into effect on the 1 December 2004 gives guidance where sulphates are encountered from natural sources, hardcore or other compacted fill material. Practical guidance on construction methods to avoid future problems are included in the document. It is intended to review the document at regular intervals to reflect any future research and investigations into the problem of building where high concentrations of sulphates are known.

Technical guidance material has also been published by the Building Research Establishment in various reports, namely; BR 424 Building on fill: geotechnical aspects, Digest 472 Optimising ground investigations, and particular reference should be made to Special Digest 1 Concrete in aggressive ground—parts 1 to 4.

Referendums

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the recent referendum in the North East cost in (a) expenditure by (i) national and (ii) local government, (b) civil service time and (c) local government officers' time. [197893]

Mr. Raynsford: The information is a follows:

(a) (i) The following expenditure was incurred by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister:

	£million
Information Campaign	1.22
Costs incurred by the counting officers in running the referendum	[1]2.9
Delivery of Yes and No campaign literature	0.5

[1] Approximately

In addition to this the Electoral Commission incurred some costs, in particular grants of £100,000 each to the Yes and No campaigns and the costs of their information campaign.

(a) (ii) Any expenditure by local government is a matter for local government.

(b) The Chief Counting Officer and his staff were responsible for the organisation and operation of the regional referendums. The costs incurred by counting officers are set out above.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's staff time was spent on developing policy and preparing Statutory Instruments related to the referendum, and on the Information Campaign. Detailed information about staff time could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

(c) Local government officers' time is a matter for local government.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the proposed referendum in (a) the North West and (b) Yorkshire and Humber cost before the decision to abort them was made in (i) expenditure by (A) national and (B) local government, (ii) civil service time and (iii) local government officers' time. [197894]

Mr. Raynsford: The information is a follows:

(a)(i) The only expenditure by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the proposed referendums in the North West and Yorkshire and the Humber was £2.02 million through the Information Campaign.

(a)(ii) Any expenditure by local government is a matter for local government.

(b) The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's staff time was spent on developing policy and preparing Statutory Instruments related to the referendums, and on the information campaign. Detailed information about staff time could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

(c) Local government officers' time is a matter for local government.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost has been of holding the north east referendum; how much has been spent on information products; what proportion of the total was spent by (a) the Government and (b) individuals and groups on either side of the campaign. [197927]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government spent £1.22 million on the Information Campaign in the north east.

By law, the designated organisations (the Yes and No campaigns) are entitled to a referendum mailing to electors. The delivery costs of this at £0.5 million, are met by Government. The Yes and No campaigns also received a grant of £100,000 each from the Electoral Commission.

The Electoral Commission also ran an information campaign. The costs of this are a matter for them.

Expenditure by the campaigners must be within limits prescribed by law. This expenditure is monitored by the Electoral Commission.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to ask the people of the Eastern Region whether they want an (a) unelected regional assembly and (b) voluntary co-operation between elected councils. [198073]

Mr. Raynsford: The East of England Region Assembly is a voluntary body recognised by Government for certain purposes. There are no plans to alter that position.

Voluntary co-operation between elected councils using well-being powers does not require formal public support.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations the Government have received concerning the conduct of the referendum in the north-east. [198165]

Mr. Raynsford: There have been a small number of complaints about the administration of the poll, which was generally seen to have been conducted with great efficiency.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 26 October 2004, Official Report, columns 1112–1113W, on regional assemblies, what estimate he has made of the total cost of (a) the free mailing and (b) the free television broadcasts. [198270]

Mr. Raynsford: The delivery costs of the referendum mailing will be paid for by Government and cost £0.5 million. Other costs associated with the mailing were paid by the "Yes" and "No" campaigns.

Airtime for the TV broadcasts was provided without fee by the broadcaster. The "Yes" and "No" campaigns met the production costs from their campaign funds.

Regional Chambers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the grants made to each of the regional chambers in the financial year 2003–04 by non-governmental organisations funded from public funds. [198155]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Any grants received from non-governmental organisations are a matter for individual regional chambers.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what reports have been made by regional chambers to his Department (a) directly and (b) through the Government offices for the regions accounting for the expenditure of central Government funding. [198158]

Mr. Raynsford: Regional chambers are required to prepare and submit to the relevant Government office an annual business plan containing objectives and targets to be met with the aid of Government grant. They are subsequently required to provide reports against those objectives on agreed dates throughout the year.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the most recent guidance issued to regional chambers on the expenditure of central Government funds. [198159]

Mr. Raynsford: Updated business planning guidance for regional chambers is being finalised. A copy will be made available in the Library of the House shortly.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) powers, (b) functions and (c) responsibilities are of each of the regional chambers; and which organisations held those powers, functions and responsibilities prior to the creation of regional chambers. [198160]

Mr. Raynsford: The voluntary regional chambers undertake a number of functions and responsibilities on behalf of their regions. The main ones are scrutiny of the work of the regional development agencies (RDAs), responsibilities as regional planning bodies, and acting as a regional voice or focal point on key issues of regional interest, such as integrating regional strategies.

Regional chambers were first designated in 1999 to provide scrutiny of the newly-created RDAs and had no predecessors in that role.

Regional chambers became the regional planning bodies in all regions in April 2003 with responsibility for preparing draft regional planning guidance. Previously this was the responsibility of non-statutory regional bodies known as regional planning conferences.

No recognised regional body or organisation provided a single regional voice or provided a regional focal point prior to the existence of regional chambers, though there were informal arrangements in some regions.

Regional Fire Control Rooms

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether existing fire control room staff will be employed in the new fire control centre for the south west; and whether the centre will be located outside the south west. [197357]

Mr. Raynsford: It is expected that staff in the new regional control rooms will be drawn from existing fire control room staff.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister plans to have a national network of resilient fire control centres with one in each Government Office region.

Regional Government

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff were employed by the West Midlands Regional Chamber in each of the last two years; and what the total staff costs were in each year. [197531]

Mr. Raynsford: At the end of the 2003–04 financial year the West Midlands Regional Assembly (WMRA) employed 11 staff. It currently employs 19 staff.

Salary costs during the 2002–03 financial year were £167,712. Salary costs during the 2003–04 financial year were £499,418.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the budget of the West Midlands Regional Chamber was in each of the last two years; and what its source was. [197533]

Mr. Raynsford: The West Midlands Regional Assembly was awarded Government grant of £1,062,500 in 2002–03, and £1,676,050 in 2003–04.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many members the West Midlands Regional Chamber has; and how much members are paid, including expenses; [197534]

(2) how many unelected representatives there are in the West Midlands Regional Chamber; and who appointed each unelected representative. [197532]

Mr. Raynsford: The West Midlands Regional Chamber has a total of 100 members of which 68 are councillors nominated by the 38 local authorities in the region and 32 are regional social and economic stakeholders. Members do not receive any remuneration in respect of their role in the West Midlands Regional Assembly. The total amount of expenses paid in 2003–04 and 2004–05 to date is £765.

The full list of bodies that nominate stakeholders to the chamber is as follows.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to transfer (a) power, (b) responsibility and (c) resources to a regional assembly from West Sussex county council. [197659]

Mr. Raynsford: There are no plans to transfer any powers, responsibilities or resources to a regional assembly from West Sussex county council.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the press release of 5 November on regional government, what plans he has to strengthen (a) the regional chamber and (b) the Government office in the north-east. [198271]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will continue to take forward the proposals we set out in "Your Region—Your Choice" for devolving greater responsibility to the existing bodies in the regions and encouraging them to work closely together.

Regulatory Compliance Costs

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what his latest estimate is of the cost in a year of compliance with the regulations introduced by his Department; [196557]

(2) what is the aggregate annual cost as measured by regulatory impact assessments is of compliance with regulations introduced by his Department since 1997. [196558]

Phil Hope: All proposals which impact on business, charities or the voluntary sector require a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) which includes details of the costs, benefits and risks of the proposal. RIAs are subject to public consultation and copies of final RIAs are available from the Library of the Houses and on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website.

Rushenden Link Road

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the proposed timetable is for the building of the Rushenden Link Road on the Isle of Sheppey. [197728]

Keith Hill: It is for Kent county council, as the Local Highway Authority, to bring forward any proposals for the Rushenden Link Road scheme. It has not been set out as a priority for the council during their current Local Transport Plan (LTP) period (to 2005–06). If the scheme is progressed it will be through developer funding and as such the time scale is dependent on the private sector.

Solar Electricity

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if his Department will introduce new building regulations obliging each new development to include solar electricity. [198229]

Phil Hope: The building regulations requirements are functional rather than prescriptive to enable compliance in practical and cost-effective ways, and to leave open the possibilities for innovation. It would therefore be inconsistent to prescribe particular technologies such as solar electricity. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is reviewing the energy efficiency requirements however and amendment proposals were published for consultation in July. The proposals include setting minimum overall building performance standards at levels much higher than at present and providing new technical guidance on low and zero carbon systems.

Victims Fund

Mr Battle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how the victims' fund set up by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Bill will be administered. [192631]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

The Victims' Fund will be funded by a new surcharge on criminal convictions and fixed penalty notices for criminal offences. The Fund will be used to support new and improved services for victims of crime at both local and national level. Criteria for making application to the Fund and the arrangements for administering the Fund are still being developed.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 16 November 2004

TRANSPORT

King's Cross

11. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the comprehensive review of phase 2 of the London Underground Limited and CTRL redevelopment of King's Cross St. Pancras station. [198112]

Mr. McNulty: I have been carefully considering the review report, which raises a number of complex engineering, operational and funding issues. I hope to make an announcement on the way forward shortly, and expect to publish the report at the same time.

Uninsured/Unlicensed Drivers

12. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the measures his Department is taking to ensure that (a) uninsured and (b) unlicensed drivers are kept off the road. [198113]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department commissioned Professor David Greenaway of Nottingham University to carry out a review of motor insurance arrangements in the UK, publication of the report was on 11 August and we set up an implementation board in September to see that action follows.

Working jointly with the insurance industry we now plan to introduce legislation, improve procedures and design education, publicity and enforcement programmes to drive down uninsured driving.

These build on measures we announced last year to tighten the vehicle registration and licensing system.

Public Transport Accidents

13. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving public transport occurred in (a) Coventry and (b) the West Midlands in the last year for which figures are available. [198114]

Charlotte Atkins: Figures are available in this form for bus accidents in 2003.

In Coventry there were 64 injury accidents involving buses, of which two were fatal and three serious. In the West Midlands region there were 844, of which six were fatal and 86 serious.

Comparable figures for rail are not available but in 2003 there were no passenger fatalities related to rail incidents anywhere in Great Britain.

A30

14. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will make an announcement on the decision on dualling the A30 Goss Moor section following the public inquiry. [198115]

Mr. Jamieson: We have received the Inspector's report of the local inquiry and I hope to make an announcement on the outcome shortly.

Railways

15. John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to reduce costs within the railway industry. [198116]

Mr. McNulty: The White Paper "The Future of Rail", published in July 2004 sets out a comprehensive package of reforms to provide a coherent and effective management structure for the railway and an effective control of costs.

Road Safety

16. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his plans are to improve road safety. [198117]

Mr. Jamieson: We will continue to develop and implement our wide ranging and successful road safety strategy which has already cut the number of people killed or seriously injured to 22 per cent. below the 1994–98 average and child deaths and serious injuries by 40 per cent.

Public Transport

17. Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on Government policy towards vulnerable public transport users. [198118]

Charlotte Atkins: Our aim is transport that works for everyone. We sponsor a wide programme of research and consultation on issues such as people's mobility needs and personal security. We have developed legislation and issued good practice guidance to assist planners and providers to deliver services that meet peoples' needs, including those of the most vulnerable.

Rail Estate Disposals

18. Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the disposal of land ancillary to railway stations. [198119]

Mr. McNulty: Network Rail is regulated by the Office of Rail Regulation. Condition 26 of Network Rail's network licence prevents the disposal of land, including that ancillary to railway stations, by Network Rail unless the Office of Rail Regulation consents to the disposal. Where consent is given the decisions on whether, when and how land should be disposed are commercial ones for Network Rail.

A303 (Stonehenge)

Mr. Terry Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish his response to the public inquiry into the planned A303 road scheme at Stonehenge. [198013]

Mr. Jamieson: The Secretary of State will issue a decision after the Inspector's report has been received and the Inspector's recommendations given proper consideration.

A555 Submission Documents

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made in evaluating the A555 submission documents received by his Department earlier this year; and when he expects to report his findings. [197891]

Mr. Jamieson: Ministers will make a decision on the A555 submission in time for the 2005–06 Local Transport Capital Expenditure Settlement.

Bus Services

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of improvements to accessibility to bus services for disabled people in the last 12 months. [198111]

Charlotte Atkins: Approximately 30 per cent. of full size buses operating in Great Britain as public service vehicles are low floor wheelchair accessible vehicles. The percentage operating in any given area will vary but in major cities it is likely to be considerably higher.

This increase in the accessibility of the fleet is delivering real benefits to disabled people.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Government is on course to meet its target for an increase in bus usage by 10 per cent. by 2010. [197222]

Mr. Darling: Local bus patronage grew by 6.0 per cent. from 2000–01 to 2003–04, ahead of the straight-line trajectory for 10 per cent. growth over ten years.

Compulsory Purchase Orders

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the transport projects in the last 10 years in which a single local authority has compulsorily purchased land outside its own boundaries; [198205]

(2) on how many occasions in the last 10 years a local authority has been granted power compulsory to purchase land outside its own boundaries. [198508]

Charlotte Atkins: In respect of compulsory purchase orders granted to local authorities by the Secretary of State for Transport, information is not held in that form.

Departmental Salaries

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people in his Department earn more than a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,485 per year. [195286]

Charlotte Atkins: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 856W. In addition, at 1 April 2004 the number of whole-time staff at the Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) whose salary exceeded £57,485 was eight.

Galileo Project

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the location of the EU Galileo Project in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [197429]

Mr. Jamieson: The Welsh Assembly and the East Midlands Development Agency have submitted proposals for locating the Galileo Supervisory Authority (GSA) in their region.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many departmental Green Ministers there have been since 1997. [197839]

Charlotte Atkins: I have been the Department's Green Minister since September 2004. I am the Department for Transport's third Green Minister since its formation in May 2002.

Level crossings

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many level crossings are in operation; and at how many, and at what percentage of these collisions occurred between rail and road traffic in each year from 1975 to date. [197890]

Mr. McNulty: The Health and Safety Executive's HM Railway Inspectorate (HMRI) have produced the following table detailing the information requested from 1 January 1990 onwards. The data are based on incidents reported under accident reporting regulations to HMRI.

	Number of crossings	Number of collisions	Percentage collisions per crossings
1990	9231	34	0.37
1991–92	9213	35	0.38
1992–93	9091	27	0.30
1993–94	8966	29	0.32
1994–95	8813	19	0.22
1995–96	8731	21	0.24
1996–97	8552	20	0.23
1997–98	8379	19	0.22
1998–99	8323	21	0.25
1999–00	8228	19	0.23
2000–01	8106	16	0.20
2001–02	8128	14	0.17
2002–03	8188	18	0.21
2003–04	7937	18	0.22

Information for the period 1975 to 1989 is not available in the format requested, however published copies of HM Chief Inspector of Railways Annual Reports on Railway Safety for the period do give details of all accidents at level crossings. These include trains striking level crossing barriers and gates, animals on the line and injuries to motorists and pedestrians. Copies of these reports are in the Libraries of the House.

Road Traffic Accidents

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many persons (a) died and (b) were seriously injured in road traffic accidents on 6 November. [197889]

Mr. Jamieson: Figures for 2004 will not be available until the summer of 2005. This is because there is typically a 12-week delay in receiving information from the police and a much longer delay if they are having any difficulties in collating the information. Once all data have been finalised they are made available for publication.

Roads (Lorry Bans)

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether on the completion of the Dunstable and Houghton Regis northern bypass, the extension of the A505 to the M1, there will be a ban on the use of the A5 through Dunstable by lorries not having business in the town. [198202]

Mr. Jamieson: The development of the proposed A5-M1 link (Dunstable northern bypass) is at an early stage and responsibility for the A5 through Dunstable on completion of the bypass has not yet been agreed. However, if the route were to be de-trunked, responsibility would pass to Bedfordshire county council, who could consider such a lorry ban.

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to institute a ban in Leighton Buzzard and Linslade on lorries not having business in the town. [198203]

Mr. Jamieson: This is a matter for Bedfordshire county council.

School Buses

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures the Government will put in place to ensure that high standards are maintained by companies charged with running yellow school buses. [198109]

Mr. Jamieson: We want all buses—including yellow school buses—to be safe and secure for their users. A range of safeguards is already in place to ensure that vehicles are safe and drivers are adequately trained.

Translink Guided Busway

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the latest estimated cost is of the Translink guided busway for Luton, Dunstable, Houghton Regis and the surrounding area. [198204]

Charlotte Atkins: The latest estimated cost of the Translink guided busway is £85.436 million.

Vehicle Licensing

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to reduce the costs of vehicle licensing. [197831]

Mr. Jamieson: The regime for vehicle taxation, i.e. vehicle licensing, is determined by HM Treasury and DVLA collect the vehicle excise duty on behalf of HM Treasury through a service level agreement held by the Department of Transport.

DVLA have efficiency targets set for their operations on an annual basis to ensure that productivity gains are made consistently. They have a good record in this, having returned efficiency gains of 21 per cent. over the last six years, and have challenging targets agreed as part of the Gershon review for the period up to 2007–08.

CABINET

Ministerial Responsibilities

22. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many hours on average he has spent per week on his Duchy of Lancaster responsibilities. [198123]

Mr. Milburn: I have regular meetings on Duchy business. The Chairman and CEO regularly brief me on current issues.

Strategy Unit

23. Andy Burnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the work programme of the Strategy Unit. [198124]

Mr. Milburn: The Strategy Unit undertakes projects on a wide range of issues, as well as working across Government to improve strategic capability, and providing leadership for Government social research. Projects may culminate either in a published report (including statements of future policy) or confidential advice to Ministers.

The five main current public Strategy Unit projects cover:

Countries at Risk of Instability
Deprived Areas
Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People.
Legal Aid
Engagement in Public Institutions

Parliamentary Ombudsman

24. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans she has to bring forward legislation to enable citizens to have direct access to the parliamentary ombudsman. [198126]

Ruth Kelly: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer provided by my predecessor to the hon. Member for Milton Keynes, North East, (Brian White) on Tuesday 9 March 2004, Official Report, columns 1377–1378.

Civil Service

25. Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what action is being taken to increase the number of women in the senior civil service. [198127]

Ruth Kelly: The Government are committed to increasing the representation of women in the Senior Civil Service. Some 27.8 per cent. of the Senior Civil Service are women, up from 17.6 per cent. in 1998.

Action in departments includes targeted development schemes for women with the potential to reach the SCS.

Attitude Surveys

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he receives copies of departmental attitude surveys in connection with his responsibilities for co-ordination of Government policy. [198762]

Mr. Milburn: I receive departmental papers as necessary, in order to undertake my cross-Government role in the co-ordination of Government policy, my responsibilities for the work of the Strategy Unit and my membership of Cabinet and Cabinet Committees.

Cabinet Committees

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which Cabinet Committees he (a) chairs and (b) attends in his capacity as the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. [195977]

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the Cabinet Committees of which he is a member. [197312]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 9 November 2004]: An announcement on the membership of Cabinet Committees will be made shortly.

Civil Servants (Pensions)

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the latest figure is for the average length of pension payout of the civil service direct benefit pension. [197795]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave her on 8 November 2004, Official Report, column 515W.

Civil Service Sports Council

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office under what authority the Civil Service Sports Council operates land belonging to the civil service for sporting purposes. [197854]

Ruth Kelly: The Civil Service Sports Council Ltd, a company registered under the Industrial and Provident Society Acts, encourages and co-ordinates the pursuit of sport and recreation throughout the civil service.

CSSC either owns or leases the sites it operates. Of 37 sports clubs, 21 are owned freehold by CSSC and 16 are leasehold. Five sites are leased from the Ministry of Defence. Rents are paid at a commercial rate.

Departmental Budget

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the budget for the (a) Delivery Unit, (b) Office of Public Sector Reform, (c) Charter Mark Unit, (d) Beacon Unit, (e) Media Monitoring Team, (f) Corporate Communications Team and (g) Strategy Unit (i) was for each year since 1997–98, (ii) is for 2004–05 and (iii) will be for 2005–06; and if she will make a statement. [197645]

Ruth Kelly: Resource Budgets for the Delivery Unit, Office of Public Service Reform and the Strategy Unit since their inception are as follows.

Unit	Delivery unit	Office of public service reform	Strategy unit
2001–02	1.4	1.4	n/a
2002–03	3.8	5.4	6.3
2003–04	3.8	3.8	4.8
2004–05	3.9	2.3	3.7

Notes:

1. All figures shown in £ million.

2. The figures for the Office of Public Service Reform (OPSR) from 2002–03 onwards include the budget for the Charter Mark and Beacon Scheme which was merged with OPSR in 2002.

Budgetary information for the Charter Mark Unit and the Beacon Unit for 2001–02 and or the Corporate Communications Team for the period 2001–02 to 2004–05 is not readily identifiable from the Cabinet Office's accounting system and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Media Monitoring Unit (MMU) has a nil budget and operates on a cost-recovery basis. The Unit's running costs are recovered in total through contributions from each of the departments and agencies that use MMU's services.

Budgets for 2005–06 will be finalised following completion of the Cabinet Office's business planning round.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196140]

Ruth Kelly: Costs of decoration are not held separately from overall maintenance costs and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The costs of refurbishment of London offices of the Cabinet Office are shown in the table.

	£000
2000–01	15,653,991
2001–02	21,177,067
2002–03	14,255,364
2003–04	3,720,380

Figures Include fees, furniture/office equipment and VAT.

E-Government

Jon Trickett: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment she has made of access to e-Government services for people living in disadvantaged areas of the UK. [198756]

Ruth Kelly: The Government are committed to providing access to their services in a way that best meets citizens needs and e-Government provides a range of delivery options to complement traditional channels.

The Government realise the internet is a key access technology for e-Government services and have invested in over 6,000 UK online centres which provide free or low cost access particularly in disadvantaged areas.

An assessment of internet availability, across England, found that that 99 per cent. of households are within 10 kilometres of a public internet access point. The full results can be found on page eight of the 2003 UK Online report at www.e- government.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/MediaCentre/NewOnSiteArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4006060&chk=rlWVHj.

EU Civil Protection Monitoring and Information Centre

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will make a statement on the role of the EU Civil Protection Monitoring and Information Centre; how many requests for assistance the UK (a) has made and (b) has responded to; and what UK assets have been made available to the centre's database. [197570]

Ruth Kelly: The Monitoring and Information Centre is a unit within the European Commission's Directorate General for Environment in Brussels. It was set up in 2002 as part of the European Union's Civil Protection Mechanism to act as a centre for collecting and distributing information on emergencies; to receive requests for assistance from any country; and to pass the requests on to member states that participate in the Mechanism. The countries participating in the mechanism are the 25 EU member states, the three European Economic Area countries (Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway) and the two candidate countries (Bulgaria and Romania).

The United Kingdom has not submitted any requests for assistance to the Monitoring and Information Centre. A total of 15 requests for assistance have been sent out by the Monitoring and Information Centre. The UK responded to all of them and in eight cases offered assistance either bi-laterally or through international organisations. Where the UK did not offer help that was either because the UK did not have the specialised resource required (for example, in responding to forest fires) or another country closer to the incident was able to assist.

The UK has offered the following assets to the Monitoring and Information Centre's database (subject to them being available at the time):

Type of asset sought	Asset offered
Staffed field hospitals	Medical assistance teams, clinical expertise, intensive care and burns beds
Experts, specialists and laboratory support	Medical assistance evaluation experts and doctors
Pharmaceutical stocks	Resources including antibiotics, vaccines, antidotes, laboratory facilities
Transportation, evacuation and shelter facilities	Airhead operations staff with air cargo handling skills. Drivers for large goods vehicles
Fire fighting capability	Staff with land and marine fire fighting capability
Urban search and rescue	Modular teams available with a range of search and rescue equipment.
Logistics support	Airhead operations staff with air cargo handling skills. Drivers for large goods vehicles

Freedom of Information Act

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment she has made of the likely costs to her Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [198766]

Ruth Kelly: The cost of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA) will depend on the number and complexity of the requests received. The resources of the Cabinet Office Openness Team have, however, been strengthened to cope with the anticipated demands of the FOIA and contingency arrangements are in place to further augment the team should the need arise. These additional costs are being met from within the existing Cabinet Office resource budget.

Frontline Civil Servants

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will make a statement on the methodology used to determine whether civil servants are classified as frontline. [198939]

Ruth Kelly: Frontline staff are usually defined as those who interact directly with the public or other customers for example, in jobcentres or tax offices. There is no centrally agreed civil service methodology to determine whether a post is designated as frontline it is for individual departments and agencies to decide on their own classification to meet their individual business needs.

Government Websites

Paul Holmes: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to her answer of 28 October, Official Report, column 1379W, on Government websites, whether it is the office's policy to deem Government websites to be covered by Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [198010]

Ruth Kelly: The Cabinet Office considers that the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 Part III, as explained in the Disability Rights Commission's supporting Code of Practice on Rights of Access—Goods, Facilities, Services and Premises (published in 2002) applies equally to all websites accessible to the public and therefore includes those owned and managed by or on behalf of the Government.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to her answer of 28 October, Official Report, column 1379W, on Government websites, what steps she has taken to ensure that all .gov.uk websites meet the World Wide Web Consortium's Web Content Accessibility Guidelines adopted by the Government in 2001. [198011]

Ruth Kelly: The Guidelines for UK Government websites (published in 2002) contains an extensive interpretation on the application of the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines. The Cabinet Office uses every opportunity available through public and private conferences and workshops to promote the Guidelines and raise awareness of web accessibility within both the Government web manager and web developer communities. We have recently updated the terms and conditions for the use of .gov.uk domain names to require all new websites to maintain the high level of accessibility detailed in the Guidelines for UK Government websites.

It is the responsibility of individual Government departments and agencies to ensure that their public facing websites are built and maintained to comply with the accessibility guidelines.

Internet

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) how much her Department has spent on the Delivering on the Promise internet content management system; and how much it plans to spend in the financial year 2005–06; [193266]

(2) which Government departments and agencies have made a commitment to use the Delivering on the Promise internet content management system; [193267]

(3) which Government departments and agencies have evaluated the Delivering on the Promise internet content management system against alternatives and decided not to use it; [193268]

(4) what standards for access by disabled people are incorporated in the Delivering on the Promise internet content management system. [193269]

Ruth Kelly: Since its inception, the Cabinet Office has spent the following on Delivering on the Promise (DotP) internet content management systems; £5.5 million in 2002–03, £18.3 million in 2003–04 and expects to spend £11.3 million in 2004–05. This includes development, implementation, hosting and operating costs of the system.

Planned expenditure for 2005–06 is not available as Cabinet Office is currently reviewing its budgets and plans for that year.

As at 1 October 2004 the following departments and agencies have committed to use the content management system Department of Health, Healthcare Commission, HM Revenue and Customs (specifically Child Trust Fund), Cabinet Office (specifically e-Government Unit and Directgov).

The use of DotP was evaluated against alternatives and not selected for four Departmental applications (Northern Ireland Departments, Department of Environment Food and Rural Affairs, Department of Trade and Industry (Businesslink). In addition DotP did not meet the particular technology requirements of four other Departmental applications (National Patient Safety Agency, Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency, Foreign Office EU Presidency Unit, ODPM Regional Co-ordination Unit) and HM Revenue and Customs (introductory overarching website), and alternatives have subsequently been sought.

The world wide web consortium develops and publishes internet standards by making recommendations, which were adopted by the Government in 2001. The design of DotP allows each individual website to meet its compliant obligations for accessibility under the Web Accessibility Initiative guidelines published by the world wide web consortium at www.w3c.org.

PCS Strike

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment she has made of the impact on the provision of Government services of the PCS strike on 5 November. [197892]

Ruth Kelly: The strike by members of the Public and Commercial Services union caused some inconvenience to the public but did not cause significant disruption to most Government services. This was partly because departments and agencies had effective contingency arrangements in place to protect services, particularly those essential to security or welfare, and partly because of low levels of support for the strike in a number of areas.

Public Service Agreements

Brian White: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office which senior civil servant has responsibility for each of her Department's public service agreements. [195181]

Ruth Kelly: Six Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets were agreed in the course of the 2002 Spending Review for the period to 2005–06. Details of the PSA targets can be found in the Departmental Report (Cm 6226), copies of which are available in the Library.

The Minister for the Cabinet Office is ultimately responsible for the delivery of the PSA. The Managing Director and Permanent Head of the Department, Colin Balmer, is responsible for assuring the delivery of each target.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer is jointly responsible for the delivery of target 2.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Balai Directive 92/65/EEC

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many premises in the UK are (a) registered and (b) approved under the Balai Directive 92/65/EEC. [197042]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 November 2004]: In the UK, there are 544 premises that are registered under the Balai Directive (Directive 92/65/EEC), of which 40 premises have the higher status of being approved.

Bees

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to consult the beekeeping industry on her proposals concerning future levels of support for the industry. [196970]

Alun Michael: My officials are already in touch with beekeeping associations on our future plans for the bee health programme. A meeting is taking place later this month.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the incidence of European foul brood in the bee population in England and Wales. [196971]

Alun Michael: The inspection programme is targeted towards areas and apiaries which are thought to be at greatest risk from European foul brood and other notifiable diseases. In 2004 the disease was confirmed in 691 colonies, 2.7 per cent. of the 26,000 inspected by the National Bee Unit's inspectors. Most of these cases were found in the Midlands and in southern areas of England and Wales.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what programme of inspection of bee colonies for (a) European foul brood and (b) American foul brood is planned following the proposed removal of statutory control on European foul brood. [196972]

Alun Michael: Following a firm decision to remove statutory controls on European foul brood inspections would no longer be targeted on this disease, although inspectors would continue to offer advice on its control as they do at present for other serious but non-statutory diseases. The inspection programme would be planned to maximise control of American foul brood which is more serious, less widespread and unlike European foul brood does not lend itself to control through husbandry techniques.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money has been allocated to the proposed Central Science Laboratory Training Scheme on identification of bee diseases. [196973]

Alun Michael: Training is an integral part of the National Bee Unit's work . Some £164,000 was spent in 2004 on 736 talks, demonstrations, lectures and apiary tours, benefiting more than 15,600 beekeepers in England.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will commission an independent assessment of the effectiveness of (a) shock swarming as a means of controlling foulbrood and (b) the proposed test kits for the diagnosis of European foulbrood. [196974]

Alun Michael: The National Bee Unit studies on the shook swarm technique have already been subject to independent scientific peer review, as will be the data on effectiveness of test kits for diagnosis of European foul brood.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of measures to combat European foulbrood since the change in the policy of compulsory destruction to one of treatment with antibiotics. [197181]

Alun Michael: The effectiveness of measures to control European foul brood is subject to continuous assessment by the National Bee Unit and details of the incidence and treatment of the disease are published annually on its website. The use of antibiotic treatment has proved successful in many circumstances and colonies have recovered which would previously have been destroyed. Experimental use of the "shook swarm" technique, which does not use antibiotics, shows considerable promise for future control.

Bird Populations

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research is being undertaken on the population of ground-laying birds in moorlands and heaths; and if she will make a statement. [192207]

Mr. Bradshaw: A wide range of survey and monitoring is being undertaken on ground nesting birds in upland areas. The Breeding Bird Survey (jointly funded by British Trust for Ornithology, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds) monitors annual trends of a number of upland species, while more detailed research on the ecology of grouse species being undertaken by the Game Conservancy Trust. Several studies on the ecology of upland breeding waders have been undertaken in recent years by RSPB and some universities.

Bovine TB (Deer)

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many comparative intra-dermal TB tests were carried out on (a) farmed and (b) park deer herds under the Deer Health Scheme in the last five years. [197319]

Mr. Bradshaw: To be eligible to join the Deer Health Scheme, applicants' deer herds must test negative to the tuberculin test and, to retain their membership, the herds must test negatively at 24 monthly intervals. Over the last five years, members' herds have been tested six times. The three deer herds currently in the Deer Health Scheme are all farmed.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) farmed and (b) park deer herds were (i) registered and (ii) not registered in the Deer Health Scheme in each of the last five years for which records are available. [197320]

Mr. Bradshaw: Over the last five years, membership of the Deer Health Scheme has declined from five members to three. Currently there are two members in Scotland and one in England. There are approximately 263 deer farms in England, 67 in Scotland and 33 in Wales. All the deer herds currently in the scheme are farmed.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what regulations apply to the import into the UK of cervine embryos in relation to bovine TB; and what enforcement measures her Department has put in place. [197324]

Mr. Bradshaw: In England, cervine embryos are imported by licences made under the Animal and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 2004 or the Products of Animal Origin (Third Country Imports) (England) Regulations 2004 and the Importation of Embryos, Ova and Semen Order (as amended) 1984. There is equivalent legislation applied to other parts of the UK.

The licence conditions include a request that the donor animals originate from a premises which, immediately prior to isolation at an approved collection centre, no clinical or other evidence has been recorded which leads to the conclusion that TB has occurred within the previous three years. Also, embryos intended for export to the UK must originate from a collection centre approved by an authorised veterinary officer of the competent authority of the exporting country.

In addition, all genetic material imported from a third country must enter the European Community via an approved border inspection post where the consignments undergo a series of veterinary checks.

The above statutory instruments are enforced by local authorities.

The likelihood of semen or ova from donor animals of domestic species being infected with TB is minimal. The World Organisation for Animal Health has published a "Categorisation of Diseases and Pathogenic Agents" by the International Embryo Transfer Society (IETS). The IETS has categorised Mycobacterium paratuberculosis (cattle) as a category 4 disease on which preliminary work has been conducted or is in progress. Category 4 is made up of diseases/pathogenic agents for which transmission is considered a low risk.

Centre for Environment Fisheries and Aquaculture Science

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what hourly rate of pay is payable to new employees under the pay offer being made by the Centre for Environment Fisheries and Aquaculture Science. [193177]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 27 October 2004]: Under the April 2004 pay offer for CEFAS, the new hourly rates of pay (for existing as well as new employees) will depend on the grade of individual members of staff, and their position in the pay band associated with their grade. These range from £4.85 per hour to £25.78 per hour.

The pay bands, before and after implementation of the offer, are as follows.

A further change was made to the minimum of pay band 1 in October, to reflect the change to the national minimum wage. Five members of staff were affected. They were notified of the change in writing, and the new rates were paid in their October salaries.

Cervine Embryos

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cervine embryos were (a) exported by and (b) imported to the UK in each of the past five years; and what the value was of the cervine embryo export industry in each of those years. [197325]

Mr. Bradshaw: Available information for the number of ampules/vials of cervine embryos exported from the UK is as follows:

	Number
1999	43
2000	306
2001	0
2002	2
2003	3

The available information for the number of ampules/vials of cervine embryos imported into the UK is as follows:

1999	0
2000	0
2001	0
2002	0
2003	37

These figures are derived from computer based systems relating to import notifications and export health certification. The figures are subject to updating and amendment.

It is not possible to gauge the exact number of embryos involved as a ampule/vial may contain more than one embryo collected from the same donor animal.

Information on the value of cervine embryo exports is not available.

Chewing Gum

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she is planning to tackle the problem of people dropping chewing gum. [197655]

Alun Michael: The experience of local government and other public bodies, working with the Government, has demonstrated that there is no simple and immediate solution to this problem. That is why we have taken a joined-up approach to making a real difference. Last year I established a Chewing Gum Action Group which brought together chewing gum manufacturers, the Local Government Association, the Chartered Institution of Wastes Management, ENCAMS (Environmental Campaigns—formerly the Tidy Britain Group), the Department for Education and Skills, the Improvement and Development Agency (IDeA) and others.

The remit of the group is to tackle the irresponsible disposal of chewing gum using an integrated approach based on new research which we commissioned and concentrating on campaign activity, education, dissemination of good practice and more effective enforcement.

We will launch a public awareness campaign in the coming year with the aim of delivering the behavioural change needed to prevent gum being dropped in the first place. The group commissioned an extensive round of market research in order to understand 'gum droppers' and to enable the campaign to be as targeted as possible. The research was published on 1 November and can be viewed at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/localenv/litter/index.htm.

The group is disseminating proven good practice, including innovative approaches to prevention and information sharing on tools and techniques for its removal, through the Improvement and Development Agency for local government website (IDeA).

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will penalise those councils who fail to implement the powers they have to clean up chewing gum. [197656]

Alun Michael: Chewing gum differs from normal litter in that it is very difficult and time consuming to remove once it becomes impacted onto a surface. Many authorities are doing an excellent job at finding innovative ways to remove gum and prevent its irresponsible disposal.

Under the current Code of Practice for Litter and Refuse, local authorities are under a duty to keep their land clear of litter and refuse. While chewing gum is included within this responsibility, it is clear that the difficulty and cost of removal is considerably higher in respect of gum that has been trodden in and has become a "stain".

The Government are looking at a variety of options to help local authorities tackle this problem. These include a public awareness campaign to be launched next year, and proposals in Defra's 'Clean Neighbourhoods' consultation to improve and streamline enforcement powers on chewing gum disposal.

CHP

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department will take to stimulate the market for micro-combined heat and power and domestic heat pumps as a result of the recent field trials. [195184]

Mr. Morley: In our Energy White Paper, we made a commitment to support field trials to evaluate the benefits of micro-CHP. The field trials are currently ongoing and are expected to produce meaningful results sometime in 2006. The results will help us determine the appropriateness of any further measures, if any, that might be necessary to support the development of micro-CHP.

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the results were of the field trials on micro-combined heat and power that her Department has been supporting. [195190]

Mr. Morley: In our Energy White Paper, we made a commitment to support field trials to evaluate the benefits of micro-CHP. The field trials are on-going and the earliest date we expect meaningful results to be available is sometime in 2006.

Community Councils (Wales)

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has held with community councils in Wales on the proposals to extend the scope of on-the-spot fines. [197751]

Alun Michael: The Prime Minister announced on the 28 October 2004, in his speech on antisocial behaviour, that the law would be changed as soon as possible to allow parish and town councils to levy fixed penalty notices for litter, graffiti or for noise nuisance. We hope to bring legislation forward at the earliest possible opportunity to enable parish and town councils to levy such penalties. It will be for the National Assembly for Wales to decide whether these powers will be made available to community councils in Wales and therefore any discussions should take place between them on this subject.

Compost

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs at what point in the processing cycle her Department ceases to define compost as waste. [197852]

Mr. Morley: The definition of waste in force in the United Kingdom is the definition in Article 1*(a)* of the Waste Framework Directive (as amended). Whether or not a substance is discarded as waste, and when waste ceases to be waste, are matters which must be determined on the facts of the case and the interpretation of the law is a matter for the Courts. The European Court of Justice (ECJ) has issued several judgments on the definition of waste which are binding on member states and their "competent authorities".

The ECJ has ruled that

> "... whether [a substance] is..waste..must be determined in the light of all the circumstances, regard being had to the aim of the Directive and the need to ensure that its effectiveness is not undermined."

In practice, this means that waste does not cease to be waste until it has been fully recovered within the meaning of the Directive and there is certainty of its use as a product without undergoing a further recovery operation. The Environment Agency considers that (a) source-segregated waste which, after composting, meets a recognised and suitable quality standard (e.g. BSI PAS 100) is likely to meet the first criterion; and (b) mixed waste which is composted is likely to remain waste until it is used in a further recovery operation (e.g. land treatment resulting in agricultural benefit or ecological improvement) subject to control by the Agency under a licence or registered licensing exemption.

Consultants/Advisers

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department maintains a list of the number of (a) private sector consultants and (b) professional advisers employed by her Department (i) at present and (ii) in the past. [197187]

Alun Michael: The Department do not have a single list of consultants and professional advisers employed because such lists can be classed as discriminatory under the public procurement rules. The public procurement rules, as well as general treaty principles, lay down both the criteria which may be used to select suppliers and the evidence which may be required for this process.

As part of its preparations for and implementation of the Gershon value for money agenda in Defra, detailed analysis of expenditure on professional services providers is being undertaken currently and I will place a copy of the analysis in the House of Common Library in due course.

Cross-compliance Arrangements (Fields)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what exemptions are being put in place to the new cross compliance arrangements for two-metre uncultivated field margins. [197907]

Alun Michael: Fields of two hectares and under will not need to have protective buffer zones around hedges and ditches as part of cross compliance measures. Hedges planted on or after 1 January 2005 will also be exempted from the requirement under cross compliance to have a buffer for the first five years of their existence.

Cuckmere Valley

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent to date by the Environment Agency on its plans to alter the nature of the Cuckmere Valley; what the budget for the preparatory stage of this project is; and if she will make a statement. [196834]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency confirms that the budget for specialist advice during the preparatory stage of this project is £284,000, of which approximately £200,000 has been spent to date. The Environment Agency also makes allowance for internal staff costs and has budgeted £84,000 for the completion of the preparatory work, £49,000 of which has been spent to date. This figure includes costs from previous years.

The work to date has involved undertaking baseline ecological surveys, landscape archaeology studies, fluvial/coastal geomorphology modelling, prediction of habitat losses and gains and recreation surveys. Much work has been completed for the western side of the valley and work is now underway for the eastern side, concluding with a preferred option. The current assessment considers the impact of any proposal on the upper reaches of the tidal Cuckmere River and follows the Government's current economic, technical and environmental appraisal guidance. Costs for the implementation phase will be established once the option which provides the most appropriate long-term solution has been identified.

The natural processes within the valley are complex and need to be understood so that, when changes occur, the consequences are known and the most appropriate solution identified. Since 1998, extensive work has been undertaken with relevant local authorities, key stakeholder groups and the general public. This is due to report in the summer of 2005.

Existing flood defences are reaching the end of their life and are increasingly ineffective against sea level rise. The Environment Agency spends between £30,000 and £50,000 per annum maintaining the defences in this area and ensuring that the river can adequately discharge into the sea. This is spent on recycling material from the river (carried by longshore drift) back to the western beach, and in maintaining a small number of groynes and breastwork which aim to prevent total blockage of the river.

Dairy Farmers

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's support for dairy farmers. [196852]

Alun Michael: UK dairy farmers benefit from aid under the CAP worth around £2 billion for the EU. From this year, for the first time this includes direct payments to dairy farmers in addition to market support measures.

The Government are also taking action in line with its Strategy for Sustainable Farming and Food to facilitate industry action to address the causes of low farmgate prices and to adapt to the new conditions created by the reformed CAP. For example,

> My noble Friend, the Lord Whitty, has been chairing meetings of a Dairy Supply Chain Forum, which has been looking at collaborative solutions to improve supply chain efficiency, as well as other issues.
> The Government have made a grant of nearly £0.5 million to the Food Chain Centre to examine how to improve dairy supply chain efficiency; and we have supported the establishment of English Food and Farming Partnerships to encourage co-operation and collaboration across all agricultural sectors.

Departmental Salaries

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people in her Department earn more than a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,485 per year. [195328]

Alun Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 856W.

Eastern Irish Sea Fishery

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make representations to the EU Commission (a) to close the sole fishery in the Eastern Irish Sea and (b) to make a minimum 110 mesh size for cod ends mandatory. [192941]

Mr. Bradshaw: No. UK fishermen land significant quantities of sole from the Eastern Irish Sea. There is no reason why they should not continue to do so. Mesh sizes in the Irish Sea—as elsewhere—vary between fisheries from small meshes used to catch shrimps to 100mm or more used to catch cod. I have no plans to make 110mm mesh mandatory in all these fisheries.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the sustainability of the plaice fishery in the Eastern Irish Sea. [192945]

Mr. Bradshaw: Assessments of plaice stocks around the UK are undertaken by the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea (ICES). The latest assessment, published on 22 October 2004, is that the Irish Sea plaice has full reproductive capacity and is harvested sustainably.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what reports she has received from the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science this year on (a) the operation of the Cod Recovery Plan and (b) the effects of the Cod Recovery Plan on the plaice fishery in the Eastern Irish Sea; and what action she has taken in response. [192952]

Mr. Bradshaw: Ongoing research and analysis on various aspects of the operation of the cod recovery programme, as undertaken by CEFAS, has been incorporated directly into this year's ICES advice process. The Fisheries Science Partnership has undertaken specific work on the level of bycatch and discards linked to the use of particular mesh sizes in the Eastern Irish Sea trawl fisheries. A full report on this work is expected later this year.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had within the Fisheries Council on introducing selective gear to reduce discards in the Eastern Irish Sea. [192958]

Mr. Bradshaw: A number of measures to introduce more selective gear into the Irish Sea have already been agreed as part of the cod recovery plan. These include a requirement to use square mesh panels in demersal trawls using 80–99 mm mesh and headline panels in nets with meshes of 70–99 mm. We expect the Commission to bring forward a further technical conservation proposal next year.

Departmental Expenditure

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of the Environment Agency's annual budget was spent on (a) international conferences, (b) summits and (c) fact-finding missions outside the UK in each year since June 2001. [197190]

Mr. Morley: Figures for expenditure on (a) international conferences, (b) summits and (c) fact-finding missions outside the UK are not collected by the Environment Agency and could be established only at disproportionate cost.

However, the Environment Agency's expenditure on all business visits outside the UK in the last three financial years (net of recoverable travel costs) was as follows:

2001–02	285,888
2002–03	298,046
2003–04	389,556

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will break down the budget set by her Department for public expenditure on (a) the Rural Development Service and (b) Rural Policy programmes and schemes for the financial years (i) 2004–05 and (ii) 2005–06 by programme. [196691]

Alun Michael: The information is as follows:

(a) The Department's plans for public expenditure on the running costs of the Rural Development Service are £37.6 million for both 2004–05 and 2005–06.

(b) The Department's plans for public expenditure on Rural Policy for the two years 2004–05 and 2005–06 consist of the following programmes:

£million

Programme	2004–05	2005–06
Payments to Regional Development Agencies	46.6	76.9
Sponsorship of the Countryside Agency	93.9	72.6
Rural economy development schemes	31.5	32.5
Total	172.0	182.0

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of her annual departmental budget was spent on international conferences, summits or fact-finding missions outside the UK in each year since June 2001. [197225]

Margaret Beckett: This information could only be provided at disproportionate costs as expenditure is not summarised by the Department under the categories requested.

Environmental Schemes (Payments)

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been paid out under (a) Countryside Stewardship, (b) Organic Conversion Scheme, (c) Environmentally Sensitive Areas Scheme, (d) Woodland Scheme and (e) Moorland and Habitat Scheme in each county in England in 2004; and if she will make a statement. [196302]

Alun Michael: Payments made under these schemes are administered by the Rural Payments Agency. In the current financial year to the end of October, payments made in England totalled:

	£ million
Countryside Stewardship Scheme[1]	28.863
Organic Farming Scheme	4.145
Environmentally Sensitive Areas Scheme	35.385
Farm Woodland Scheme	1.526
Farm Woodland Premium Scheme	7.067

[1] The Moorland and Habitat schemes are closed to new applicants and residual payments are included in the total for Countryside Stewardship

The RPA is amending its database to enable expenditure on these schemes to be broken down by county, and I shall write to my hon. Friend with the details he has requested as soon as they are available.

Foxes

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the prevalence of catching urban foxes and transporting and releasing them into rural areas; and if she will make a statement. [191138]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has made no assessment of this.

It is not unlawful to trap foxes in live capture cage traps and to release them at the same or a different location as long as this is done humanely and as long as the fox is not abandoned in circumstances likely to cause unnecessary suffering.

However, I should point out, that my Department advises against relocating foxes on welfare grounds, mainly due to their territorial nature.

Free Fruit (Primary Schools)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the rural proofing by her Department of the Government's scheme to provide free fruit to children in primary schools. [190664]

Alun Michael [pursuant to his reply, 21 October 2004, Official Report, c. 834W]: My answer contained the word "rival" three times in the final sentence. This was incorrect and should have stated "rural". The rest of the answer remains correct and is detailed in full as follows.

The National Free Fruit Scheme was launched in November 2000 and has been expanded upon since then. The scheme pre-dates the introduction of rural proofing, which was launched in the Rural White Paper, also of November 2000. It was not initially subject to rural proofing, but all new policy is subject to regulatory impact assessment, which includes an element of rural proofing. This would normally be done by the Department introducing the policy, in this case, the Department of Health. Clearly, the policy applies to both rural and urban schools and as well as providing health benefits it uses produce from rural areas and promotes consumption which is likely to help the rural economy in the long term.

Heating

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the potential for (a) combined heat and power and (b) community heating in the UK in the (i) residential, (ii) public and (iii) commercial sectors; and if she will make a statement on the amount of each which is being realised. [195943]

Mr. Morley: The Government's Strategy for Combined Heat and Power to 2010, which we published earlier this year, mentions several studies on the potential for CHP. None of the recent reports give a split against sectors. The Digest of UK Energy Statistics (DUKES) 2004 shows that installed CHP electrical capacity stood at 4,879 megawatts at the end of 2003. This figure attributes 128 megawatts to the commercial sector, 195 megawatts to the public sector, with the balance covering all other sectors, predominantly industry. There is no separate figure for the residential sector.

A study published as part of the Community Energy programme in 2003 estimated the cost-effective potential of community heating in the UK to be around 17,100 gigawatt hours of heat per annum (GWh/yr) by 2010. The figure is split: 3,300 GWh/yr in the domestic/residential sector; 2,500 GWh/yr in the public sector; and 11,300 GWh/yr in the commercial sector. We do not have figures for the current level of installed community heating.

Horse Exports

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many live horses have been exported for meat consumption into Europe in each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement. [196723]

Alun Michael: According to HM Custom and Excise, official overseas trade statistics show that there were no recorded exports of live horses for consumption during this period.

Horse Industry

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions the Minister of State for Rural Affairs had with the Henley Centre about the terms of reference for the recent report on research in the horse industry in Great Britain; and whether the impact on the horse industry of the abolition of hunting formed part of the terms of reference. [193483]

Alun Michael: The terms of reference for the Henley Centre research were set by Defra officials, in consultation with myself. They are set out in full in appendix G to the published report. The scope of the research was to map the horse industry, to address requirements for baseline data on it, and to identify the key issues to be considered in the preparation of the strategy for the industry. The terms of reference did not themselves identify these issues.

Landfill

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to ensure that wood otherwise destined for landfill is used in co-fired and non-coal burning power stations. [195799]

Mr. Morley: The Government are committed to reducing the UK's reliance on landfill, in order to reduce its environmental impact and because landfilling is a missed opportunity to recover value from waste. This commitment applies to waste wood as it does to any other waste material. Using wood as a fuel in power stations is one alternative to disposal in landfills and, under the forthcoming review of the Renewables Obligation, the case for amending eligibility rules regarding electricity generated from mixed wastes, including wood, will be considered. More details are available at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/renewables/policy/terms_of_reference.shtml]

There are other ways of diverting wood from landfill, such as re-using or recycling it as a raw material in construction or for manufacturing wood based products. To encourage this, wood is one of the priority materials under the Government-funded Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), which was established to create markets for recycled materials. By 2006 WRAP are aiming for a 150,000 tonne increase in the recycling of waste wood into added-value end markets.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the amount of wood going into landfill; and what action she plans to take to reduce this amount. [195800]

Mr. Morley: The Government have no basis for estimating the amount of wood being disposed of in landfills. However, it is committed to reducing the UK's reliance on landfill, in order to reduce its environmental impact and because landfilling is a missed opportunity to recover value from waste. This commitment applies to wood as it does to any other waste material. As a result, the Government encourages the re-use or recycling of wood as a raw material in construction or in manufacturing wood based products or used as a fuel, rather than being sent to landfill. In particular, wood is one of the priority materials under the Government-funded Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), which was established to create markets for recycled materials. By 2006 WRAP are aiming for a 150,000 tonne increase in the recycling of waste wood into added-value end markets.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's preparations to meet the requirements of the EU Landfill Directive. [197682]

Mr. Morley: The Government role in preparing for the requirements of the EU Landfill Directive is to ensure as far as possible that the legislative provisions are in place and that waste producers, the waste management industry and local authorities are aware of their respective obligations.

Since the terms of the directive came into force in July 2001, the Government have introduced a number of legislative instruments to implement the requirements, including:

The Landfill (England and Wales) Regulations 2002

The Landfill (England and Wales) Amendment Regulations 2004

The Waste and Emissions Trading Act 2003

The Landfill (Scheme Year and Maximum Landfill Amount) Regulations 2004

Legislation covering similar ground in Scotland and Northern Ireland.

In addition, the Landfill Allowances and Trading Scheme Regulations 2004 have been laid before Parliament and there will shortly be a consultation on the Landfill (England and Wales) Regulations 2005.

For over 10 years, representatives of waste producers and the waste management industry, among others, have been members of a landfill directive stakeholders group. Initially, this was to help develop the waste acceptance criteria and other aspects of the then draft directive and subsequently to advise on implementation issues. Also, the Hazardous Waste Forum was established by the Government in December 2002, to bring together key stakeholders, including waste producers, the waste management industry and local authorities, to advise on the way forward on the management of hazardous waste.

In addition, there has been six consultation exercises on different aspects of the Landfill Directive, with, as mentioned above, a seventh about to start. Ministers and Government officials have also spoken at many events, some organised by industry groups, some by independent organisations like the Parliamentary Sustainable Waste Group and Envirowise.

The Environment Agency, which is responsible for regulating this legislation, has issued a number of guidance notes covering many aspects of the various provisions.

Milk

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total milk quota was for (a) 1994–95 and (b) 2003–04 for (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) England. [195206]

Alun Michael: The information is as follows:

Total milk quota (litres)

	United Kingdom	England
1994–95	14,164,477,065	10,194,162,140
2003–04	14,186,064,337	9,660,415,381

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of the rules relating to the transfer of milk quota from one year to the next on farmers who marginally exceed their quota; and if she will make a statement. [195207]

Alun Michael: We consider the milk quota system to be an unnecessary burden on farmers and one which adds considerably to their costs. As a result we make the trading of quota as simple as possible in order to minimise that burden. For example, we have broken the link between quotas and land in order to simplify the system further for milk producers. Further reform of the dairy sector, including the removal of the quota system, remains our long-term aim.

National Parks

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the economic impact of the Single Farm Payment on National Parks (a) individually and (b) collectively. [197416]

Alun Michael: An assessment of the economic impact of the Single Payment Scheme in England has been placed in the House of Commons' Library (and is available on the Defra website). While data are not available to enable specifically on impacts within the National Parks, the report contains analysis relating to cattle and sheep farms in the less favoured areas, which is the predominant farm type in National Parks.

Orchards

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department will confirm the definition of orchards. [197451]

Alun Michael: Commercial orchards remain ineligible for the Single Payment Scheme as permanent crops. In August this year we commissioned the Central Science Laboratory to research possible criteria for inclusion of traditional (dual use) orchards in the Single Payment Scheme. On 2 November the report was published and the results are now available on the Defra website www.defra.gov.uk.

Based on this report we are drawing up simple criteria in conjunction with EN, RPA and RDS and we plan to share them shortly with interested parties. These criteria will need to be shown to the Commission before being finalised.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether a committee has been set up to determine the appropriate definition of a traditional orchard. [197452]

Alun Michael: In August this year we commissioned the Central Science Laboratory to research possible criteria for inclusion of traditional (dual use) orchards in the Single Payment Scheme. On 2 November the report was published and the results are now available on the Defra website www.defra.gov.uk.

Based on this report we are drawing up simple criteria in conjunction with EN, RPA and RDS and we plan to share them shortly with interested parties. These criteria will need to be shown to the Commission before being finalised.

Organic Farming

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how much has been paid to farmers in Yorkshire and the Humber to convert to organic farming since 1997; [192422]

(2) how many acres of land were farmed organically in Yorkshire and the Humber in 1997; and how many are now. [192423]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested for the years from 2000 to 2003 is set out in the following table. Information for earlier years is not available in the form requested.

	2000		2001		2002		2003
	Hectares	Claim value (£)	Hectares	Claim value (£)	Hectares	Claim value (£)	Hectares	Claim value (£)
Humberside	595	85,126	915	92,017	1,153	80,297	1,263	69,575
North Yorkshire	2,431	285,335	4,089	431,894	4,885	405,880	5,067	297,754
South Yorkshire	268	41,612	246	18,014	302	19,991	329	18,628
West Yorkshire	261	30,239	406	39,200	388	20,744	388	11,606
Total	3,555	442,311	5,657	581,125	6,727	526,912	7,047	397,563

Pesticides

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) reported cases of and (b) successful prosecutions for breaches of maximum residue levels from pesticides there have been in each of the last five years. [197581]

Alun Michael: The UK's surveillance programme for pesticide residues in food is overseen by the independent Pesticide Residues Committee (PRC). In 2003, 4,071 samples of imported or UK-produced food were tested for up to 149 different pesticide residues. The Maximum Residue Level (MRL) was exceeded in 27 (0.7 per cent.) samples. For previous years, the percentage of exceedances is similar, at around 1 per cent. All the results are available on the PRC's website at www.prc.org.

MRLs are not safety limits. Statutory Maximum Residue Levels (MRLs) have been established for many thousands of individual pesticides in individual crops. The purpose of MRLs is to regulate trade in treated food. They indicate that any pesticide was applied to crops or foodstuffs in accordance with the conditions of use set by the UK regulator, the Pesticides Safety Directorate, or equivalent organisations overseas. They are always set below, often far below, safety limits. The safety limit depends on many factors, which include the properties of the pesticide, the amount of residue, amount of food being consumed and whether this is in a single meal or over a longer period, and the body weight of the consumer (e.g. adult, child, infant).

In all cases where an MRL is exceeded, a risk assessment is carried out. The conclusion was that none of the exceedances in 2003 was likely to be of concern for consumer health.

Where there is evidence of repeated exceedances of an MRL or the use of a pesticide on a crop for which the pesticide is not approved, a targeted enforcement campaign is carried out. An enforcement campaign has been carried out for the last three years testing for MRL's on winter lettuce. Winter lettuce grown in the UK under glass is particularly prone to fungal attack during the cool damp winter months and there are only a limited number of products approved for disease control.

Over the last three years, the enforcement campaign has revealed that there have been 57 samples of lettuce containing pesticide residues over the MRL. This is made up of;

27 samples (18 per cent. of the total samples taken) in 2001–02,

16 (10.8 per cent.) in 2002–03, and

14 (8.7 per cent.) in 2003–04.

Although a number of enforcement actions have been taken including warning letters, educational visits and the issuing of enforcement notices, the evidence obtained (and in particular the risk to human health), has not supported any prosecution.

Press Officers

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many press officers are employed in her Department; and how many were employed in each year since 1996–97. [195359]

Alun Michael: Defra was set up in June 2001. Figures relating to numbers of press officers employed by the organisations whose functions were subsumed into the new department would not correspond accurately to the distribution and scope of the present work areas. Year-on-year comparisons since that date are as follows:

As at June:	Press officers
001	22
002	22
003	22
004	18

The numbers do vary within any year, and for nstance at 1 November 2004 the number was 23.

Public Bodies

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications for (a) the number of obs, (b) costs and (c) savings of integrating executive gencies and non-departmental public bodies within her Department. [196684]

Alun Michael: Our current focus in this area is on ringing together three bodies to create a new rganisation as a major element of Defra's Modernising Rural Delivery programme. This will lead to the stablishment of a new independent Integrated Agency hich will bring together English Nature, parts of the Countryside Agency and much of the Rural Development Service which is a part of core Defra.

This intention was set out by the Secretary of State in er statement in July on the Rural Strategy 2004. Work urrently in hand includes:

(a) development of a future profile of headcounts,

(b) work to refine initial estimates that put the total main investment costs required to implement the programme at approximately £40 million in total,

(c) preparation of detailed plans to realise the efficiency gains set out in the Department's recently published Efficiency Technical Note. These are planned to rise to £13 million per year by 2007–08.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the current EURATOM discussions on methods of disposal of radioactive waste in respect of its implications for the work of the Committee on Radioactive Waste Management. [197577]

Mr. Morley: The European Commission's draft directive on radioactive waste management is not currently under active discussion. The Government opposed the draft directive principally because it could have prejudiced the work of the Committee on Radioactive Waste Management which will make recommendations on the most appropriate long-term radioactive waste management option for the United Kingdom. A number of other member states also oppose the directive with the result that it does not command the necessary qualified majority.

Departmental Policy Announcements

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects further announcements to be made on (a) cross compliance, (b) use of the national reserve, (c) cross-border holdings, (d) common land, (e) SPS appeals procedures, (f) lost and delayed Rural Payments Agency information statements, (g) ex-gratia payments and historical claims, (h) the LWDS and Slaughter Premium Scheme, (i) EPS co-efficient in 2001 with reference to foot and mouth disease, (j) countryside stewardship and set aside and (k) detailed non-food crop and general set aside rules for 2005. [191109]

Alun Michael: Announcements on cross compliance and the use of the national reserve were made on 2 November. We will be making announcements on the other issues as soon as they are resolved, which in some cases is expected to be quite soon.

Rural Services Review

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many copies of Rural Services Review 2004 were printed; what the cost was of the (a) printing and (b) preparation, including design and writing of the review; how many copies were distributed (i) unsolicited and (ii) otherwise; at what cost in each case; and how many earlier editions of the review have been produced. [197724]

Alun Michael: The Rural Services Review, published on 1 November 2004, continues the commitment from the Rural White Paper "Our Countryside: the future" to inform rural people how they can ensure fair access to public services for their community. The Rural Services Review replaces the Rural Services Standard, a more formal and "official" document that was published in 2002 and 2003. It has already resulted in considerable positive responses at regional and local level, often in respect of examples quoted in the text which show how policies are often being delivered very successfully in rural areas. Our purpose is to spread good practice about "what works" and to stimulate innovation in rural areas.

The total cost of production and distribution of the Rural Services Review is set out in the following table:

Cost of Rural Services Review

	Supplier	£ Final Spend (+ vat)
Design	Stairway Communications	9,814 plus 383 Total = 10,197
Print (50,000 run)		17,800 (no vat charged)
Distribution RSR	Solicited—90 Unsolicited—30, 136	[1]14,000
Copywriting	COI	15,540
Photography	Various	[1]3,315
Proof reading	COI	324
Staff costs		[2]22,864
Total		[1]84,040

[1] These costs are based upon estimates as final invoices have not yet been received.

[2] Defra staff costs for this project were £22,864. This figure is based upon average pay rates, by grade and location and includes accommodation overheads.

The total production, distribution and staff costs give a unit cost for the Rural Services Review of £1.68 a copy.

The Rural Services Review came about as a consequence of the evaluation of the Rural Services Standard, which took place during 2003. The review builds upon the recommendations of the independent evaluation report produced by the University of Gloucester. A copy of this report is available on the Defra website at www.defra.gov.uk/rural/pdfs/rss_review.pdf.

The Rural Services Review identifies key standards that affect people living and working in the countryside and illustrates the difference the standards can make, through the use of case studies. Copies of the review are available through Defra publications (08459 556000) or online at www.defra.gov.uk/rural/services.

Salisbury plain

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when funding for the Salisbury Plain Life Project will cease; and what funding streams and programmes will succeed it. [196023]

Mr. Bradshaw: The project formally finishes 30 September 2005. All partner costs are paid in full at the time expenditure is incurred while match funding provided under the LIFE Nature regulation is paid in instalments, the final instalment (approximately 30 per cent. of the total funding) being paid following submission to the Commission of final project reports and audited accounts.

Future management work on the Salisbury Plain project may be eligible for funding under a number of funding streams and programmes, and although no specific funding has so far been secured discussions between English Nature and the relevant partners and agencies is on-going.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the expected annual expenditure by each of the partners is in each year of the planned life of the Salisbury Plain Life Project; and if she will make a statement. [196024]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following table shows the official project budget sheet figures derived from the life project bid document. Totals for each partner contribution have been divided by four to give an estimated figures for annual spend. The exchange rate when these figures were submitted was €1.69/£1.

Partner	Estimated annual costs per annum per partner (€)
1. Applicant's share of project costs (English Nature)	63,439
2. Community contribution requested	435,340
3. Defence Estates	298,354
4. Defence Evaluation Research Agency	51,154
5. Royal Society for the Protection of Birds	15,708
6. Centre for Ecology and Hydrology	1,600
7. Butterfly Conservation	5,085

Single Farm Payments

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the expected payment date is for the single farm payments in May 2005; and under what circumstances this payment would be delayed until April 2006. [R] [193776]

Alun Michael: The European Regulations designate May 2005 as the deadline for receipt of claims, not as a payment day. The regulations provide for the single payments for 2005 to be made between December 2005 and June 2006. Our objective is to make payments as early as possible within that period.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will make a decision about how the benefit of common rights will be allocated when calculating single farm payments to commoners; what further consultation she plans with (a) verderers and (b) commoners; and if she will make a statement. [197816]

Alun Michael: There is ongoing consideration of this complex issue and an announcement will be made as soon as possible. In August a meeting was held with commons interests, including representations from the New Forest, and those present were invited to submit further observations. No further formal consultation is planned.

Departmental Policies (South Dorset)

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the South Dorset constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on the South Dorset constituency. [194969]

Alun Michael: Since its establishment in 2001 Defra has put in place a comprehensive programme of action on issues including sustainable development, climate change and energy, sustainable consumption and production, natural resource protection, sustainable rural communities, and a sustainable farming and food sector. A summary of some our achievements to date can be found at http://defra/corporate/achievements.htm. I am confident that the South Dorset constituency will have benefited from these. For example, we are committed, through our national strategy for waste, to delivering a step change to more sustainable waste management, including tough national targets to recycle or compost 17 per cent. of household waste by 2003–04, and 25 per cent. by 2005–06. The county of Dorset, one of the early high performers on recycling, continues to make a substantial contribution to achieving national recycling targets. The county's recycling performance in 2002–03, the most recent year for which data are available, was 27 per cent., against the national average for that year of 14.5 per cent.

Bathing water quality has improved along the Purbeck and Weymouth/Portland coast over the last seven years. In 1997, only nine of the 14 identified bathing waters, stretching from Shell Bay in the east to Portland in the west, met the most stringent standards of the EC Bathing Water Directive. By 2004, all bar one passed these standards, which are necessary to fulfil the water quality criteria of the international Blue Flag award. These improvements reflect Defra's policy to improve coastal water and raise compliance with the EC Bathing Water Directive.

Last month I announced that Dorset would be one of seven rural pathfinders in England. The rural pathfinder initiative is a key part of the Government's Rural Strategy and reflects the Government's commitment to devolve decision-making and resources to the local level. The Dorset rural pathfinder will ensure greater co-ordination of rural delivery programmes as well as testing new and innovative methods to bring about improvements in the delivery of services to rural communities and businesses.

Defra provides comprehensive statistical information. The following web address will take my hon. Friend directly to the service: http://statistics.defra.gov.uk/esg/default.asp.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many unpaid special advisers the Department has; what their names are; and which Government (a) bodies, (b) committees and (c) strategy groups each unpaid adviser (i) belongs to, (ii) advises and (iii) works alongside. [194063]

Alun Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly) on 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1380W.

Sugar Regime

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to ensure that UK sugar producers will not be disadvantaged by the reform of the EU Sugar Regime. [195982]

Alun Michael: The Government's aim is to secure a more economically rational and market-based sugar regime consistent with our international trade and development obligations and our wider sustainability objectives. A sugar reform which meets these conditions ought to be to the advantage of everyone.

Sustainable Agriculture

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will break down by programme the budget set by her Department for public expenditure on sustainable agriculture and livestock products for financial years (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06. [196651]

Alun Michael: The Department's spend on sustainable agriculture forms part of the Government's Strategy for Sustainable Farming and Food, which includes the co-ordination of the programme to implement the Single Farm Payment in England.

A wide range of departmental activities contribute to the outcomes of the Sustainable Farming and Food Strategy. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 255W, which provided a breakdown of the new funding for this strategy.

Budgets have not yet been confirmed for 2005–06. For 2004–05, the programme budget directly focussed on the co-ordination of sustainable agriculture and livestock products is as follows:

Programme budgets	2004–05 (£000)
Livestock Industry Forums (Red Meat Industry Forum and Dairy Supply Chain Forum)	[1]2,228
Fertilisers and Nutrient Management Programmes	428
School Milk Top Up Scheme	[2]500
Meat and Livestock Commission (includes Commissioners' expenses and information provision)	465
Livestock Projects Support (for example Consultancy)	322
SFFS Regional Implementation	[3]1,670
CAP Reform Implementation (Single Farm Payment)	1,650
Sustainable Agriculture Policy/ Projects Support (for example Consultancy)	235
Total for Directorate	7,498

[1] This includes the Department of Trade and Industry contribution to the funding of the Red Meat Industry Forum. In 2004–05 this is £524,000.

[2] The School Milk Top Up Scheme is equally funded by Defra, Department of Health and Department for Education and Skills. This funding is the Defra element only.

[3] An additional £1,500,000 (outside the single pot) has been made available to the Regional Development Agencies during 2004–05. The other £170,000 provides top up funding for the Government Offices in the Regions.

Water Framework Directive

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely effects of the Water Framework Directive on the rural economy [197814]

Mr. Morley: The costs and benefits of the Water Framework Directive and likely effects on different sectors are examined in the updated partial regulatory impact assessment which was published in Defra's "Third Consultation Paper on the Implementation of the EC Water Framework Directive (2000/60/EC)" in August 2003. The assessment covers analysis of impacts on key sectors which contribute to the rural economy.

This partial regulatory impact assessment includes the current estimates of costs and benefits. However, the Water Framework Directive introduces a long term strategic planning process and many of the details are yet to be worked out. Monitoring of current water status and economic analysis on cost-effective measures to meet objectives will provide further information, and Defra will assess the scope for updating this RIA from 2005.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Regional Referendum

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what complaints the Electoral Commission have received concerning the conduct of the regional referendum. [198161]

Mr. Viggers: The Chairman informs me that the Electoral Commission has received representations on a range of matters relating to the north-east referendums. These include the role of the Commission in commenting on the questions and designating lead campaigners, and the activities of local and central government in the referendum campaigns. The Commission's statutory reports on the administration of the regional and local referendums will take into account the comments it has received.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission when the Electoral Commission intends to report on the conduct of the referendum in the north-east. [198162]

Mr. Viggers: The Chairman informs me that the Electoral Commission intends to publish the reports required by section 5 of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 on the administration of the regional and local referendums held in the north-east earlier this month in summer 2005.

TREASURY

Civil Service Job Cuts

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on proposed job cuts in the civil service. [198125]

Mr. Boateng: There will be an overall gross reduction in posts of 84,150 by 2008 and Departments will pursue these reductions in line with business need. Departments are currently developing their plans.

Departmental advertising costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor; [197290]

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (2) what the total expenditure on advertising by his Department was in 2003–04. [198194]

Mr. Timms: In relation to the years up to 2001–02, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 7 May 2002, Official Report, column 36W. In the last two financial years, HM Treasury's only spending on advertising has been for the purpose of recruitment. Detailed costs of advertising, as distinct from other recruitment expenses, or analysis by advertising contractor, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196607]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury, the Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise do not receive significant commercial funding for activities in the five categories to which the question refers. A review of accounting records indicates that, across the three departments, total income from outside commercial bodies in the five categories was less than £50,000 in each of the last two financial years. The detailed analysis sought could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Earnings

Mr. Moore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the distribution of earnings is for those earning (a) under the point below which 10 per cent. of earners fall and (b) the point above which 10 per cent. of earners exceed in (i) Scotland and (ii) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland, broken down by (A) male, (B) female and (C) all workers. [198285]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Michael Moore, dated 16 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the distribution of earnings is for those earning (a) under the point below which 10 per cent. of earners fall and (b) the point above which 10 per cent. of earners exceed in (i) Scotland (ii) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland, broken down by (A) male, (B) female and (C) all workers. I am replying in his absence. (198285).

Average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings and are provided for employees on adult rates of pay whose pay was unaffected by absence during the pay period, by their place of work. This is the standard definition used for Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings tables. The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

These data are available on the National Statistics web site:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_labour/ASHE_2004_inc/2004_work_LA.pdf

We recommend that you use data supplied for full time employees.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn schemes, but because of its sampling frame, it has difficulty capturing data on people with very low pay. It is therefore likely to under-represent relatively low paid staff earning below the tax threshold.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings publication criteria ensures that all estimates are undisclosive. A number of estimates have been removed from the published tables for these reasons.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) average and (b) median (i) weekly and (ii) hourly gross earnings (A) including and (B) excluding overtime is of (1) Managers and Senior, (2) Professional, (3) Associate Professional and Technical, (4) Administrative and Secretarial, (5) Skilled Trades, (6) Personal Service, (7) Sales and Customer Service, (8) Process, Plant and Machine Operatives and (9) Elementary occupational groups, broken down by (x) male, (y) female and (z) all workers. [198286]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Michael Moore, dated 16 November 2004:

European Union

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the research undertaken by his officials on the cost-benefit analysis of European Union membership; in which sections of his Department the officials concerned work; and if he will make a statement. [197918]

Mr. Timms: There is a broad consensus among academics that UK membership of the European Union promotes growth, competitiveness and employment through the operation of the internal market. The Government continually consider the direct and indirect costs and benefits of specific legislative proposals, in the context of European policy development.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with his colleagues in the European Union concerning the future of the UK rebate. [197794]

Mr. Timms: Discussion of EU economic and financial matters, including the EU Budget, formally occurs at ECOFIN meetings. The first discussion on the Commission's own resources report and proposals for revising the Own Resources Decision will be discussed at the ECOFIN meeting of Tuesday 16 November. The Government's position on this has already been made clear in the Explanatory Memorandum presented to the House on the Commission's proposals.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the discharge by the Financial Services Authority of its statutory objective of promoting financial literacy. [198183]

Mr. Timms: The FSA has been undertaking work to promote public understanding of the financial system since its inception and a number of resources have been developed and distributed, to contribute to this statutory objective.

Building on this, in November 2003 the FSA set up the Financial Capability Steering Group to oversee the development and implementation of a national strategy to improve financial capability. The Minister for Pensions and I are members of that group, along with representatives from the financial services industry, the consumer, voluntary and education sectors, employers and the media. The strategy is being taken forward through a series of seven priority projects, each of which is supported by a Working Group. To date, proposals for pilot work have been brought forward by three groups (Schools, Workplace and Borrowing), three are to make proposals to the Steering Group next month (Families, Young Adults and Retirement) and the final group (Generic Advice) will submit proposals early in 2005.

Fuel Duty

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much unrebated fuel duty was paid on fuel sold in each of the islands within the United Kingdom during the latest year for which figures are available. [198767]

John Healey: Hydrocarbon oils duty revenue figures are published by HM Customs and Excise in the Hydrocarbon Oils Bulletin, a copy of which can be found on the UK Trade Information website www.uktradeinfo.com. Figures are collected for the UK as a whole and are not available by region.

Guaranteed Minimum Pension

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the costs of indexing a guaranteed minimum pension for public sector schemes to the National Insurance Fund. [197998]

Mr. Timms: None—the National Insurance Fund has no liability for indexing Guaranteed Minimum Pensions (GMPs).

Incomes

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) women and (b) men are in the top five per cent. of income earners in the UK. [196017]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 16 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many (a) women and (b) men are currently in the top five per cent of income earners in the UK. I am replying in his absence. (196017)

Average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) and are provided for full-time employees on adult rates of pay whose pay was unaffected by absence during the pay period, by their place of work. This is the standard definition used for ASHE tables. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

There are 822,000 people in the top five per cent of gross weekly earners, of which 689,000 are males and 133,000 are females. The 95th percentile of gross weekly earnings in 2004 is £1060.7.

IT consultants (Southend)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 153W, on Customs and Excise, how long the contracts in place for IT consultants contracted to work for Her Majesty's Customs and Excise at Alexander House, Southend-on-Sea are; how much the IT consultants are paid; and if he will make a statement. [196919]

Dawn Primarolo: The average length of contract for IT consultants currently contracted to work for Her Majesty's Customs and Excise at Alexander House, Southend-on-Sea is four months. The average daily rate for these consultants is £551.

Life Expectancy (Pendle)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the life expectancy (a) was in (i) 1987 and (ii) 1997 and (b) is of (A) men and (B) women in Pendle. [197757]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 16 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the life expectancy (a) was in (i) 1987 and (ii) 1997 and (b) is of (A) men and (B) women in Pendle. I am replying in his absence. (197757)

Figures for life expectancy at birth for the United Kingdom and its constituent countries are published annually by the Government Actuary's Department. Figures for life expectancy at birth for English local authorities are published annually by ONS. Both sets of figures are based on three-year rolling averages and are calculated separately for males and females. The most recent available figures are for 2001–2003. Figures covering the years requested are given in the attached table.

Life expectancy at birth by sex, for England and Wales[1] and Pendle local authority[2]

	Life expectancy in years
Males	England and Wales	Pendle
1986–1988	72.37	71.2
1996–1998	74.73	74.1
2001–2003	76.17	74.9
Females
1986–1988	78.09	77.0
1996–1998	79.73	78.4
2001–2003	80.67	79.7

[1] Including non-residents.

[2] Usual residents of this area.

Lisbon Strategy

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the UK's progress in the implementation of the Lisbon Strategy. [197760]

Mr. Timms: The Government are committed to economic reform at home and in Europe, and my recent answers on 4 October 2004, Official Report, columns 1790–1791W) and on 21 October 2004 Official Report, columns 884–885W, summarised the measures the Government are taking to increase employment and productivity in Europe. These issues were also debated on the Floor of the House on 13 September 2004.

As set out during that debate, the UK Government remains a strong advocate of economic reform in Europe, and continues to work closely with other Member States and the European Commission to promote structural reform, including by taking forward the January 2004 Four Presidencies initiative on regulatory reform and the principal recommendations contained in the spring 2004 joint statements with France and Germany on promoting enterprise and innovation.

The Government produces a report each year summarising the progress made in reforming product and capital markets over the preceding 12 months, as part of the "Cardiff" process. Copies of the latest UK report "Report on Progress on Reform of Product and Capital Markets: United Kingdom 2003–04" were deposited in the Libraries of both Houses on 18 October this year.

The Government also produce an annual Progress Report on the UK's economic reform priorities, which sets out the measures and reforms the Government believe are required to deliver greater economic prosperity across Europe and deliver the aims of the Lisbon agenda. The latest version of this document is also available in the House Libraries.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [191408]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by the former Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Ruth Kelly) on 19 November 2003, Official Report, column 1097W, giving the costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials for the years 1997–98 to 2002–03. The costs for 2003–4 were £570 council tax and £162,858 running costs. 2003–04 running costs include £69,383 of rent paid to the Cabinet Office, based on capital charging which replaced Property Service assessed rents as the methods of accounting for Crown Freehold properties on 1 April 1998. There were no separate charges for maintenance and renovation.

New Jobs (Wandsworth)

Tom Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new jobs have been created in the London borough of Wandsworth since 1997. [198189]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 16 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about jobs created in Wandsworth. I am replying in his absence. (198189)

While statistics of new jobs created are not available explicitly, statistics from surveys enable comparisons to be made of net changes, in numbers of jobs, from year to year.

The attached table shows the information requested, relating to jobs in Wandsworth, for 1997 and the latest year available, 2002.

Number of employee jobs[1] with workplace in Wandsworth local authority: 1997 and 2002

	Total
Number of employee jobs
1997	91,800
2002	105,600
Change from 1997 to 2002[2]	13,800

[1] Excludes self-employed jobs.

[2] The 1997 to 2002 change has been rounded to the nearest hundred separately from rounded levels for 1997 and 2002.

Stamp Duty

Sue Doughty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 154W, on stamp duty, how many residential property transactions between £60,000 and £150,000 have qualified for disadvantaged area relief in each year since the relief was introduced. [198614]

Mr. Timms: The number of residential property transactions that have qualified for disadvantaged area relief in England and Wales are given in the following table.

Period	Number of residential transactions (thousand)
November 2001-March 2002	14
April 2002-March 2003	60
April 2003-March 2004	78

Tax Credits

Mr. Roy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend the tax credit system to parents of special needs young adults who move from five day a week schooling to two day a week college courses. [197767]

Dawn Primarolo: The child tax credit regulations do not impose any requirements regarding full-time education for children under the age of 16. Young people between the ages of 16–19 are required to engage in full-time education. The rules require a person to undertake on average at least 12 hours structured tuition during a week in normal term-time—there is no requirement to attend college for a specific number of days a week. There are no plans at present to review the rules defining full-time education for child tax credit purposes.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average time between HM Inland Revenue receiving and responding to an appeal against a notice of decision on (a) child tax credit, (b) working tax credit and (c) pension tax credit has been in 2004; and if he will make a statement. [198084]

John Healey: The Inland Revenue usually acknowledges tax credits appeals within two working days of receipt.

Matters relating to pension credit are for the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions.

Tripartite Social Summit

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the conclusions were of the Tripartite Social Summit. [197759]

Mr. Pond: I have been asked to reply.

The Tripartite Social Summit—co-chaired by Mr. Jan Peter Balkenende, President of the European Council and Mr. Romano Prodi, President of the Commission—was attended by the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, along with ministerial colleagues from Luxembourg and the Netherlands and representatives of the European Social Partners and the European Commissioner for Employment and Social Affairs. Wim Kok gave a presentation of key points from the recent report of the high level group he chaired, which was set up to identify priorities for action to meet the Lisbon targets for employment and economic reform. While there were no formal conclusions from the summit, the exchanges of views included agreement on the need to add a new impetus to the implementation of the Lisbon strategy, in line with the recommendations of the Kok report.

UK Competitiveness

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how his Department plans to promote UK competitiveness in the EU. [197822]

John Healey: The Government are committed to raising the rate of UK productivity growth over the economic cycle, improving competitiveness and narrowing the productivity gap with our major industrial competitors. Historically these have included the US, France and Germany, although on the output per worker measure, the gap with Germany has now closed. The Government's approach to achieving this target is set out in Productivity in the UK: The Evidence and the Government's Approach, which was published alongside the 2000 Pre-Budget Report.

The Government report on steps to increase productivity in every Budget and Pre-Budget Report.

VAT (Sports)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the VAT liabilities of national governing bodies of sports; and if he will make a statement. [197432]

Dawn Primarolo: In the last year a small number of letters from hon. Members have been received by Treasury Ministers about the liability of affiliation fees paid by sports clubs to their governing body.

Supplies of services closely linked with, and essential to sport are exempt from VAT where these services are supplied by a non-profit making body to individuals. Subject to these same conditions, VAT exemption also applies to sports governing bodies and the services they supply in return for the affiliation fees they charge to their members.

Where membership of a sports governing body consists of sports clubs, affiliation fees are exempt where the individual sportsman or woman is the most direct beneficiary of the affiliation, and where this is reflected in the basis on which the affiliation fee is calculated by the governing body. When this is not the case the affiliation fee is taxable at the standard rate of VAT.

Working Parents

Mr. Wills: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the percentage of people who are in employment who are parents of children aged (a) under five and (b) over five. [196029]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr Michael Wills, dated 16 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about parents in employment. I am replying in his absence. (196029)

Of the total population in employment in the three months ending May 2004: 12.3% had one or more children aged under five resident with them; 23.5% had one or more children over five; and among these two groups 5.2% of the total in employment had one or more children in both age groups.

Dependent children are those aged under 16 and those aged 16–18 who are in full-time education and have never married.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

SCOTLAND

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list local authority net current expenditure on asylum seekers for each local authority in Scotland in each year since 1991–92; [197230]

(2) if he will make a statement on how local authorities in Scotland have been compensated for expenditure on asylum since 1998. [197231]

Mr. Browne: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not available in the format requested. The Home Office took responsibility for payment of grants to local authorities supporting asylum seekers on 1 April 1999. Local authorities are able to claim grant from the Home Office within specified criteria to meet their costs of supporting asylum seekers.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much expenditure his Department has incurred in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [195457]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office has not employed any external consultants to deal with the press and public relations in the Scotland Office since 2002.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spent in each year since 2002 on employing (a) external management consultants and (b) external human resources consultants; and if he will make a statement. [195761]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office has not employed any external management or external human resources consultants since 2002. However, one company was employed in 2003–04 to organise a Senior Civil Service Assessment Centre, at a cost of £10,044.

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 2001 to April 2002, (b) May 2002 to April 2003, (c) May 2003 to April 2004 and (d) May 2004 to the latest date for which information is available, indicating in each case (i) the values of the contracts and (ii) the companies with which the contracts were placed. [196950]

Mrs. McGuire: The following contracts have been awarded by the Scotland Office:

	Company	Function
2001–02	Serco	Cleaning
2002–03	Tradition	Cleaning
2003–04	Group 4	Security

The value of these contracts is commercially confidential. No new contracts have been awarded in the current financial year.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with his Department won new contracts (a) at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) after a period of inactivity with his Department in each of the past four years. [196951]

Mrs. McGuire: Two organisations were awarded new contracts at the culmination of their existing contract:

Group 4—Security: contract awarded in February 2004

Serco—Cleaning: contract awarded in March 2002

No new contracts have been awarded to organisations after a period of inactivity.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with his Department in each of the past three years. [196952]

Mrs. McGuire: The following new contracts have been awarded in each of the past three years:

	Company	Function
2001–02	Nil	—
2002–03	Tradition	Cleaning
2003–04	Nil	—

No new contracts have been awarded in the current financial year.

Departmental IT

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the Department's (a) implemented and (b) planned computer systems use open source software; and what plans are in place to raise this level. [195664]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office has no Open Source Software (OSS) systems in operation at present.

The procurement of software solutions follows the 'level playing field' Government OSS Policy. This does not require the raising of levels of OSS usage in Government, rather that Government considers OSS solutions alongside proprietary ones in IT procurements; and that contracts should be awarded on a value for money, case-by-case basis. Version 2 of this policy was published on 28 October 2004 and can be viewed at www.govtalk.gov.uk

WALES

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list local authority net current expenditure on asylum seekers for each local authority in Wales in each year since 1991–92; [197228]

(2) if he will make a statement on how local authorities in Wales are compensated for expenditure on asylum. [197229]

Mr. Browne: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not available in the format requested. The Home Office took responsibility for payment of grants to local authorities supporting asylum seekers on 1 April 1999. Local authorities are able to claim grant from the Home Office within specified criteria to meet their costs of supporting asylum seekers.

Call Centres

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the effects on the Welsh economy of companies moving call centres from Wales; and what discussions he has had on this with Ministers in the Welsh Assembly. [197812]

Mr. Touhig: The Welsh economy remains in a healthy state with the employment rate at an historically high level and unemployment at its lowest for a generation. Around 24,000 people are employed in call centres in Wales, representing one of the largest employment groups in Wales. To help improve the competitive position of this important sector, the Wales Contact Centre Forum has been established with Assembly funding.

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department between (a) May 2001 and April 2002, (b) May 2002 and April 2003, (c) May 2003 and April 2004, (d) May 2004, and the latest date for which figures are available, indicating in each case (i) the values of the contracts and (ii) the companies with which the contracts were placed. [196937]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office has no executive functions. The National Assembly for Wales provided support service functions to the Wales Office until 31 March 2004, and DCA has provided these services since then. Accordingly, up to 31 March 2004 the Assembly awarded any required contracts on behalf of the Wales Office, and since then, DCA has done so. These contracts have been for works such as office cleaning, maintenance and minor building works.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with his Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with his Department in each of the past four years. [196938]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office has no executive functions. The National Assembly for Wales provided support service functions to the Wales Office until 31 March 2004, and DCA has provided these services since then. Accordingly, up to 31 March 2004 the Assembly awarded any required contracts on behalf of the Wales Office, and since, the DCA has done so. These contracts have been for work such as office cleaning, maintenance and minor building works.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with his Department in each of the past three years. [196939]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office has no executive functions. The National Assembly for Wales provided support service functions to the Wales Office until 31 March 2004, and DCA has provided these services since then. Accordingly, up to 31 March 2004 the Assembly awarded any required contracts on behalf of the Wales Office, and since the, DCA has done so. These contracts have been for work such as office cleaning, maintenance and minor building works.

Equine Passports

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with colleagues in the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on equine passports and the effect of the regulation on the population of wild Welsh cob ponies; and if he will make a statement. [195730]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with ministerial colleagues in the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

Implementation of the European Commission Decision on passports for equines is a matter for Defra in England. In Wales, this Decision will be implemented by the National Assembly for Wales.

I am advised that the ponies living on the hills and commons in Wales are semi-feral and are owned by individuals. It will be the responsibility of owners to ensure that they hold a passport for each of their ponies.

EU Maps

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make representations to the European Commission on ensuring that Wales is included in all relevant maps produced by the Commission. [197830]

Mr. Touhig: Wales Office Ministers, in our dealings with the European Commission, always ensure that European legislation and policies reflect the needs of Wales, as evidenced by the fact that Wales is currently benefiting from the largest ever package of support under the European Structural Funds Programme.

Public Relations (Expenditure)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money his Department has spent on public relations in each of the last three years; and how much is projected to be spent in each of the next three years. [197987]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office runs no publicity campaigns and hence has spent nothing on public relations in the last three years. This is also expected to be the case in the next three years.

St. David's Day

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the United States Administration regarding next year's St. David's Day celebrations. [197988]

Mr. Touhig: None. The former US ambassador has generously hosted a St. David's Day reception in London, which has been very well received since its inception.

Wales Office

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes in expenditure led to the changes in the total cost of the Wales Office between April 1999 and April 2004; and if he will make a statement. [196842]

Mr. Touhig: Detailed information about the cost of the Office since 1999 can be found in the Wales Office Annual Report 2004 (Cm 6228).

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Computer Workstations

Mike Gapes: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many computer workstations for staff there were in the Serjeant at Arms Department in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [198758]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Departmental records show that at the end of the 2003–04 financial year the Serjeant at Arms Department had 379 personal computers and 45 laptops. These figures exclude the number of personal computers and laptops used in the Parliamentary Communications Directorate (PCD) which is the main IT Directorate for both Houses of Parliament. Due to the nature of their work, some PCD staff have more than one personal computer or laptop and others are not allocated to specific individuals since they are either shared or used for system administration, management and testing purposes. Figures for years prior to 2003–04 are unavailable.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what cost benefit analysis has been carried out on the use of computer workstations by staff in the Library of the House. [198398]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Staff of the House of Commons Library have relied on the use of computer workstations since the introduction of on-line information retrieval systems in the late 1970s. Personal computers are now essential to all aspects of the work of Library staff, including information retrieval, preparation of written and on-line material for Library users, and for communicating with Library users as well as colleagues inside and outside Parliament. The Library's investment in the development and use of IS/IT systems is subject to formal appraisal.

A recent study of computer desktops in all House of Commons departments recommended that their life could be extended from three years to four years and the Board of Management has accepted this recommendation. Future spending on IT desktop equipment will reflect this decision.

Mr. Key: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what cost-benefit analysis has been carried out on the use of computer workstations by staff in the Finance and Administration Department. [198492]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Computer workstations are a vital part of the work of staff of the Department of Finance and Administration in connection with electronic processing, storage and retrieval of data on the House Administrative Information System (HAIS). This forms the core of the House's financial and human resource management, running payments, payroll and producing management accounts, for example.

A recent study of computer desktops in all House of Commons departments recommended that their life could be extended from three years to four years and the Board of Management has accepted this recommendation. Future spending on IT desktop equipment will reflect this decision.

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission whether value for money studies are planned in respect of computer workstation procurement for the use of staff of the House. [198829]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Personal computers and other IT equipment are currently purchased using one of two Government procurement frameworks which have been prepared to ensure value for money. As part of our plans for the future renewal of IT equipment, the House recently began an EU procurement project for the provision of computers to Members, their staff and staff of the House, to ensure that value for money continues to be achieved. Only those staff of the House requiring computer access to undertake their work are provided with one.

Department of Finance and Administration

Mr. Hogg: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many staff in the Department of Finance and Administration work from home. [198396]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The Department of Finance and Administration has seven members of staff whose working arrangements involve an element of working from home, under flexible working arrangements introduced from 6 April 2003 under the Employment Act 2002. No staff work from home full-time, as most tasks involve handling confidential information and/or providing services to those based on the Parliamentary Estate.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what plans there are to relocate staff in the Finance and Administration Department outside London. [198700]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The Commission has no plans to relocate the Department of Finance and Administration outside London. Such a move would inconvenience those who rely on the services provided by the Department, including Members and their staff.

Mr. Pound: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many computer workstations for staff there were in the Finance and Administration Department in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [198830]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: 207 computer workstations are currently in use by the Department of Finance and Administration: the figures in each of the two previous years are not readily available but will have been similar. This includes workstations for full-time and part-time staff based in the Department's offices, and additional workstations for training, development projects, contractors, auditors and the trade union office.

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will make an estimate of the potential savings of relocating staff in the Finance and Administration Department outside London. [198831]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: There are too many variables to be able to make a realistic estimate of the potential savings of relocating staff in the Department outside London; costs, such as loss of staff, recruitment of new staff and travel costs, and savings would depend heavily on the location. The House of Commons Accommodation Strategy includes an assessment of occupancy by administrative departments of space on the parliamentary estate, and usage of office space is kept under review.

Mike Gapes: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many staff were employed in the Finance and Administration Department and its predecessor in (a) 1974, (b) 2000 and (c) at the latest date for which figures are available. [198759]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Numbers of staff employed in the Department of Finance and Administration have been as follows:

1979[1]	60 (complement)
2000	131 (complement)
2004	147 (average full-time equivalent)

[1] No published data is available before this date. This figure is taken from the first Annual Report of the Commission, and refers to the then Administration Department.

Department of the Clerk

Peter Bottomley: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many staff in the Department of the Clerk of the House were directly recruited from the private sector. [198701]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: No records are kept of the previous employment of staff of the Department. Staff are recruited through open competition and national advertisement. Recruitment of committee specialists, for example, who typically serve from two to four years, reflects diverse experience and backgrounds, with such staff coming from the academic, public service, voluntary and private sectors.

Mr. Pound: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many staff were employed in the Clerk's Department in (a) 1974, (b) 2000 and (c) at the latest date for which figures are available. [198732]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Numbers of staff employed in the Department of the Clerk of the House have been as follows:

	Number of staff
1979[1]	[2,3]137
2000	[3]272
2004	[4]311

[1] No published data is available before this date. This figure is taken from the first Annual Report of the Commission.

[2] Includes 28 staff in the Vote and Sales Office, at that time part of the Library, but since transferred to the Department of the Clerk of the House.

[3] Complement

[4] Average full-time equivalent

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission whether an assessment has been made of the potential for hot desking in the Clerks' Department. [198832]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The pattern and nature of work activity in the Clerk's Department does not generally lend itself to hot desking. In those areas of activity where a hot desking style of working is appropriate, some provision is already made.

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many and what proportion of staff in the Clerk's Department work from home. [198424]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Tasks carried out by members of the Department normally require presence on the estate: as staff of the House of Commons Service, they are in the business of providing corporate services to all Members and to the House as a whole. No staff of the Department are employed on the basis of home-working. Staff may occasionally work at home on particular tasks, such as drafting.

Department of the Serjeant at Arms

Mr. Hogg: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many staff in the Department of the Serjeant at Arms work from home. [198397]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Some staff work from home on occasional days on particular tasks or by local agreement, with remote access to the parliamentary network. Tasks carried out by members of the Serjeant at Arms Department normally require a presence on the estate; as staff of the House of Commons Service, they provide corporate services to all Members and to the House as a whole.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Developing Countries

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he makes of the role of public services privatisation conditionalities in the provision of aid to developing countries; and if he will make a statement. [198055]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK has recently published a draft policy paper for consultation on the issue of aid conditionality, "Partnerships for poverty reduction: changing aid conditionality." This paper (produced jointly by DFID, HM Treasury, and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office) makes a commitment to reducing the burden of conditionality while recognising the continuing relevance of conditions. After a period of consultation, DFID plans to finalise this policy statement in the first quarter of 2005.

DFID supports a range of reforms to improve the way that public money is spent and accounted for, and the way that public services are provided, especially to poor people. We recognise the sensitivity and contested nature of many policy reforms, including the privatisation of public services. This highlights the need for careful country-specific analysis to ensure that reforms are appropriately designed, as well as strong country ownership of any such initiative. DFID's draft policy suggests that in future we should only support reforms where partner governments have had space to debate—including where appropriate in Parliament—the full range of policy options, and have made their own decision informed by clear evidence of the benefits to poor people. As the UK policy paper makes clear, aid terms and conditions must support, not "buy" reform.

To improve the quality of policy design and implementation around issues such as privatisation, DFID continues to press for increased use of analytical tools such as Poverty and Social Impact Assessment (PSIA). By mid-2004 some 150 PSIA activities were being carried out. The results of this work are already indicating the need for a more careful use of policies such as privatisation: both in the nature of the reform of organisations, and in the need to ensure that the social protection functions of these organisations are taken into account. DFID recognises that there is a need to increase the number, and to improve the quality of PSIA, and to ensure that the results of PSIA are used effectively in the policy process. The World Bank has committed to more careful consideration of the significant distributional consequences of policies that they support. This will include greater use of PSIA to inform the policy choice. The Bank has also committed to report at the next annual meetings in 2005 on progress in the use of PSIA.

Iraq

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he has taken to encourage partner governments operating in Iraq to employ more local contractors. [197910]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID has regular contact with other donors operating in Iraq, through the Iraqi Interim Government's donor co-ordination mechanisms, meetings of the Donor Committee of the International Reconstruction Fund Facility for Iraq, monthly teleconferences with major donors and direct contacts with other donors in Baghdad, Basra, Amman and elsewhere. DFID technical experts work closely to support the work of the US Project Contracting Office in south-eastern Iraq. Through all these contacts, DIFD stresses the importance of Iraqi leadership of the reconstruction process, and the benefits of employing Iraqi contractors to implement programmes where appropriate and feasible.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations he has received regarding delays in fulfilling contracts in Iraq due to operating restrictions under health and safety legislation; what his policy is in this regard; and if he will make a statement on the quantity of potable drinking water delivered to Basra in this context. [197917]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID is not aware of any representations made about delays in fulfilling contracts in Iraq due to operating restrictions under health and safety legislation.

Individuals and consultancy organisations contracted by DFID to work in Iraq are responsible for their own well-being and security arrangements. They are strongly advised to follow the same rules and procedures as DFID does for its own staff. This includes detailed security briefings prior to departure and upon arrival, the provision of body armour, and hostile environment training. DFID will take all reasonable steps to ensure that consultants are provided with secure accommodation in Iraq, and will provide them with suitable transport and close protection. DFID also aims to provide practical assistance on request.

A recent survey in April/May 2004, indicated that in the Basra Governorate, 97 per cent. of households have access to safe drinking water supplies but for 22 per cent. of households this access is unstable. This compares with national average figures of 91 per cent. and 30 per cent. respectively.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what study his Department has made of whether extra costs have been incurred in Iraq by donor countries through employment of non-local workers; and whether workers employed locally by UK and EU contractors are subject to European Union Health and Safety regulations. [197967]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID has not undertaken an assessment of whether other donor countries have incurred extra costs through the employment by donors of non-local workers in Iraq. DFID does, however, encourage other donors and contractors to employ Iraqis to help implement programmes where appropriate and feasible.

Local law and employment regulations normally take precedence over international regulations with regard to workers employed locally by the UK and EU contractors. Most international companies apply a corporate code, which tends to reflect EU/US standards of health and safety.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance he proposes to offer to the interim Iraqi Government to restore the (a) water, (b) sewage, (c) power and (d) telephone infrastructure, following recent military action against Falluja. [198012]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Interim Iraqi Government (IIG) is leading on reconstruction work in Falluja following the recent military action. A ministerial level co-ordinator has been appointed and significant funds from the Iraqi Government budget have already been set aside for this work. An Iraqi Ministry of Health assessment team visited Falluja hospital on 11 November and further assessments are planned, security permitting. The IIG is being supported by the Multi-National Force-Iraq, which also has considerable resources for immediate post-conflict reconstruction work including clearing rubble and the restoration of water, sewerage and electricity services.

DFID is in close contact with the Interim Iraqi Government and is ready to respond positively to requests from them for help or advice. DFID is also keen to see independent assessments of the situation once it is safe for agencies to enter Falluja.

Ivory Coast

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contribution the UK is making to the humanitarian needs of the people of the Ivory Coast. [198320]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: During 2004, DFID has provided £1.55 million for the following humanitarian assistance in Cote d'Ivoire:

£500,000 to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) for protection and tracing activities, water and sanitation, and basic health services;

£500,000 to the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) for basic healthcare and immunisation activities;

£300,000 to Medecins Sans Frontieres—Holland (MSF-H) for support to both primary and secondary healthcare;

£250,000 to the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) for regional coordination of humanitarian activities.

DFID is in close contact with agencies working in Cote d'Ivoire. Their current concerns are principally for the security of their staff. DFID will consider any proposals they put to us as the situation develops.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the condition of refugees from Sudan, resident in Chad, with particular reference to (a) security and (b) access to water and sanitation. [198319]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UN estimates that there are approximately 200,000 Sudanese refugees in and around 11 camps within eastern Chad. The UN High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) reports that conditions for these refugees in and around these camps continue to improve, and that the security situation is relatively calm. Security around the camps has recently been reinforced by the deployment of gendarmes from Chad. The UNHCR has complemented this deployment by providing appropriate training.

Access to water remains a problem for some refugees and host communities particularly in the north-eastern camps. In October, the UNHCR and the World Food Programme (WFP) concluded that the nutritional health of Sudanese refugees in eastern Chad has stabilised and that malnutrition levels among refugee children have declined since the start of a supplementary feeding programme in August, which DFID is supporting.

Since September 2003, DFID has committed and spent over £8.5 million to the UNHCR, the WFP, the WHO, and NGOs working in Chad for a variety of programmes. In addition, we have agreed over £1 million for provision of water and sanitation in the north-east of Chad.

ACP-EU Water Facility

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is in respect of the use of funds from the ACP-EU Water Facility to fund or support the (a) privatisation of water facilities and (b) private sector water projects. [197571]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The ACP-EU Water Facility is part of the 9th European Development Fund (EDF) and is managed by the European Commission. The EDF has specific rules about how its funds can be used, in particular how the private sector can use or benefit from such funds and the need for transparent public procurement. The ACP-EU Water Facility supports pro-poor, country supported initiatives to improve water and sanitation services and manage water resources. The funds for the ACP-EU Water Facility are to be used for increasing access to water and sanitation by the poor in Africa, the Caribbean and the Pacific.

The first call for proposals was issued on 12 November, and can be accessed through www.euwi.net or http://europa.eu.int/comm/europeaid/cgi/frame12.pl, and will provide further detailed information on how it can and cannot be used for the involvement of the private sector.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proposals are being (a) assessed and (b) discussed in respect of spending funds remaining in the ACP-EU Water Facility budget. [197573]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The preparation of the ACP-EU Water Facility by the European Commission as part of the 9th European Development Fund (EDF) has involved consultation with member states, NGOs and other interested parties. The EDF has specific rules about how its funds can be used, which have influenced the mechanisms elaborated for spending the ACP-EU Water Facility funds. The first call for proposals is currently being undertaken. Detailed information on how the funds can be spent is available on www.euwi.net or http://europa.eu.int/comm/europeaid/cgi/frame12.pl. It is too early to know the details of any specific proposals.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures he has proposed to alleviate the humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe. [197805]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In 2003–04, DFID provided £25 million for humanitarian programmes, under the auspices of the Consolidated Humanitarian Action Plan co-ordinated by the United Nations. The Government of Zimbabwe have declared that the country will not need international food aid in the period up to the next grain harvest. However, independent surveys do not support the Government's assessment that Zimbabwe enjoyed a bumper harvest this year. Although recent nutritional surveys by non-governmental organisations do not indicate a current crisis, food prices appear to be escalating in some parts of Zimbabwe, pointing to the possibility of food insecurity in coming months. Donors remain concerned and will continue to the monitor the situation closely.

While there is no apparent need for general food distribution at this time, DFID continues to provide funds to international NGO's and the UN to provide direct help targeted at approximately 1.5 million of the poorest and most vulnerable people in Zimbabwe. This Protracted Relief Programme, costing £18 million over the next two years, will include provision of seed, fertilisers and food (particularly to AIDS affected households).

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Compact Advocacy Programme

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the Compact Advocacy Programme. [197859]

Estelle Morris: The Compact Advocacy Programme, carries out good work in supporting and offering advice to voluntary organisations on using the Compact in their dealings with Government, and helping them where they think the Compact has not been implemented.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will publish her response to the Compact Advocacy Programme's criticisms of the merger of the Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund; [R] [197860]

(2) if she will publish her response to the recommendations of the Compact Advocacy Programme as they relate to her departmental responsibilities. [R] [197861]

Estelle Morris: We will learn from the recent Compact Advocacy Programme report, but we do not intend to publish a response to it. The Compact is important for DCMS. We value and support third sector initiative and volunteering, and a high proportion of our expenditure programmes goes to support voluntary sector activity. We are disappointed that the report has little to say about the many areas in which there has been fruitful cooperation and good practice.

English Heritage

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her plans are for long-term funding for English Heritage. [198421]

Mr. Caborn: No decisions have yet been taken within DCMS on individual funding allocations following the 2004 Spending Review.

Football Stadia Improvement Fund

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been granted by the Football Foundation in total under the Football Stadia Improvement Fund; how much each grant was worth; and what the name of the recipient was in each case. [198785]

Mr. Caborn: The Football Foundation's non-charitable arm The Football Stadia Improvement Fund (FSIF) provides grant aid to clubs in the Football League, the Conference and the National League system, that wish to improve their facilities for players, officials and for spectators.

£70 million has been invested by the Football Stadia Improvement Fund, in projects worth more than £100 million in the non-league and professional game.

In total 732 projects have received grants and there are a further 49 projects currently under consideration.

The Government monitors the decisions of the Football Stadia Improvement Fund and the Football Foundation through their representative on the Boards of these bodies. The annual accounts of the Fund and the Football Foundation are subject to internal and external audit, and are submitted to the Audit Commission.

Details of all stadium improvement grants made to individual clubs by the Fund together with details of all grants made since July 2000 by the Football Foundation from its grass roots and community/education funds, are deposited regularly in the Library of the House.

This information is also published in the Football Stadia Improvement Fund Annual Reports which can be accessed via www.footballfoundation.org.uk.

Gambling Bill (Hospice Lotteries)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what impact assessment she has carried out on the implications of the Gambling Bill for society lotteries, with particular reference to lotteries run by the hospice movement. [197699]

Mr. Caborn: I refer my hon. Friend to chapter 7 of the Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) published with the Bill. Copies of the RIA were deposited in the Libraries of both Houses on 18 October 2004.

Listed Buildings

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on plans to merge bodies that manage, fund and police the protection of listed buildings and sites. [198420]

Mr. Caborn: There are no plans to merge any of the bodies that manage, fund and police the protection of listed buildings and sites.

Lottery Funding/Grant Bodies

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what projects have benefited from (a) the New Opportunities Fund, (b) the Community Fund and (c) other National Lottery funding sources in Newcastle-under-Lyme in each year since 1997; and how much each project received. [198688]

Estelle Morris: 162 projects have benefited from Lottery money in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. I am arranging for a list giving their names and the value of each award received to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

This information is freely available from the Department's searchable Lottery award database at www.lottery.culture.gsi.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the merger of the Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund. [197858]

Estelle Morris: The New Opportunities Fund and the Community Fund have undergone an administrative merger and are now operating as the Big Lottery Fund. We intend to bring forward legislation to establish one new body which will replace the two existing Funds and the Millennium Commission and have responsibility for distributing out half the money from good causes from the National Lottery. A public consultation is currently taking place which will be used to help determine the direction and future funding policy of the Big Lottery Fund.

Video Games

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has held with (a) manufacturers, (b) distributers and (c) retailers of violent video games about accessibility to such games by children. [197978]

Estelle Morris: DCMS officials have had discussions with ELSPA, the video games industry trade association, and with the Video Standards Council, about recent concerns relating to violent video games. I understand that both these bodies have expressed a willingness to consider what might be done to help ensure that the relevant provisions of the Video Recordings Act 1984 are complied with, thus restricting access to these games to people of the legally specified age.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals she has for restricting the availability to minors of video and computer games containing gross violence towards humans. [198423]

Estelle Morris: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester East (Keith Vaz) on 21 October, Official Report, columns 992–93W.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many successful prosecutions have been made since 1997 under the Video Recordings Act 1984 regarding video and computer games. [198422]

Estelle Morris: The number of successful prosecutions brought under the Video Records Act 1984 in 2002 (the latest year for which figures are available) was 139. However, it is not possible to identify separately those offences which relate to computer games.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to redefine the criteria for classification of violent video games. [198624]

Estelle Morris: Under the Video Recordings Act 1984, the British Board of Film Classification (BBFC) is the body designated to classify those video games that come within the scope of the Act, including those which depict, to any significant extent, acts of gross violence towards humans or animals. The BBFC has established guidelines, which it uses in carrying out its duty under the Act. These guidelines take into account the law and public opinion and are revised periodically to ensure that they continue to reflect public concerns. Games that are exempted from the Act are rated under the voluntary PEGI industry scheme. The Government have no plans to amend the Video Recording Act 1984.

DEFENCE

Combat Clothing

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what company has won the contract to supply combat clothing. [195599]

Mr. Ingram: It is assumed that my hon. Friend is referring to Contract DC4BES/1002 for cut and sewn garments, which has been awarded to Cooneen Watts & Stone Ltd.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the company who won the contract to supply combat clothing is based. [195600]

Mr. Ingram: In view of his earlier Questions tabled on this day, it is assumed my hon. Friend is referring to Contract DC4BES/1002 for cut and sewn garments which has been awarded to Cooneen Watts & Stone Ltd., a United Kingdom company based in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) UK-based and (b) overseas companies his Department contract with for the production of (i) combat, (ii) operational and (iii) other clothing; how many it contracted with (A) five, (B) 10 and (c) 20 years ago; and if he will make a statement. [197663]

Mr. Ingram: Records are not maintained for contracts placed for clothing over the last 10 and 20 years. Combat and operational descriptions cover the same items and figures are provided as one category; footwear is separated, but could be added into "Other" category. The following table shows the available information held for the last five years:

	Number of clothing contractors	5 years
UK	Combat and Operational	109
	Other[1]	199
	Footwear[2]	25
Overseas	Combat and Operational	9
	Other[3]	14
	Footwear	6

[1] 26 of this total also supply combat and operational clothing.

[2] 3 of this total also supply to combat and operational clothing

[3] 4 of these contractors also supply to combat and operational clothing and 2 other types.

Defence Crisis Management Organisation

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the minutes of the meetings of the Defence Crisis Management Organisation. [198425]

Mr. Hoon: The Defence Crisis Management Organisation comprises elements of Ministry of Defence Central Staff, the Permanent Joint Headquarters, single-Service front-line commands and other relevant Departments. Where records of meetings are produced they fall under Exemption 1 (Defence, security and international relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who the members of the Defence Crisis Management Organisation are; and what positions they hold in the Organisation. [198426]

Mr. Hoon: The Defence Crisis Management Organisation comprises both civilian and military personnel and is made up of elements of Ministry of Defence Central Staff, the Permanent Joint Headquarters, single-Service front-line commands and other relevant Departments. It meets in a variety of configurations, and participation is not defined by positions held in the Organisation. We do not release names of officials under Exemption 12 of the Code of Practice on access to Government Information (privacy of an individual).

Fishery Protection

Syd Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is his policy that the Royal Navy should continue to provide the fishery protection service in the waters around England and Wales once the Department's existing agreement with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs comes to an end. [198430]

Mr. Ingram: The requirement for a fishery protection service beyond 2008 has yet to be discussed in detail with the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

Iraq

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reservists have been called up for duty in Iraq; and what percentage of the reserve force this represents. [196581]

Mr. Ingram: There have been some 10,840 successful mobilisations for service in Iraq. This figure includes members of the Volunteer Reserve, the Regular Reserve and Sponsored Reserves. As some individuals have been mobilised for service in Iraq more than once, it is not possible to derive from this figure the number or percentage of the reserve forces that have deployed.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the numbers and condition of conventional and improvised weaponry held by insurrectionist forces in Iraq. [196586]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 November 2004]: Insurrectionist forces in Iraq hold a wide variety of improvised and conventional weaponry, including improvised explosive devices and various light weapons. Age, maintenance and serviceability of such weapons varies greatly.

Missile Defence

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has held with (a) the US Administration and (b) others concerning the placing of US interceptor batteries in (i) the UK and (ii) Europe; and if he will make a statement. [190184]

Mr. Hoon: None.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on missile defence in each of the last three years; and what the spending plans are for future years. [190185]

Mr. Hoon: For the period up to 31 March 2004 I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 19 January 2004, Official Report, column 920W, to the hon. Member for Hereford (Mr. Keetch). For financial year 2004–05 expenditure on research specific to ballistic missile defence technology will be in the order of £6 million. The Ministry of Defence plans to spend similar sums in the following four years.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to brief Parliament on decisions by NATO to move forward on missile defence architecture; and if he will make a statement. [190186]

Mr. Hoon: Major decisions by NATO, which would include decisions on the acquisition of missile defences, are published in the form of communiques issued by meetings of Heads of State and Government and Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Defence. Such decisions are open to parliamentary scrutiny and debate in the normal way, and any significant decision affecting the United Kingdom would be notified to Parliament.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to allow the US to base interceptor batteries in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [191348]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1372W, to the right hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell).

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether parliamentary approval is required before a proposal for the siting of US interceptor missiles in the UK can be authorised. [198036]

Mr. Hoon: Any decision on the siting of interceptor missiles in the United Kingdom would be open to scrutiny and debate in the normal way. Specific parliamentary approval would not be required.

Naval Navigational Aids

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the outcome was of the Assessment Phase undertaken for a long-term public/private partnership or private finance initiative acquisition programme for the future provision of marine services; [197354]

(2) what research he has commissioned into the provision of naval navigational aids for (a) military ports and (b) other Ministry of Defence maritime installations in the UK; [197351]

(3) what discussions he has had with (a) other Departments and (b) Trinity House on the provision of naval navigational aids by providers other than his Department; [197352]

(4) what discussions he has had with (a) public and (b) private sector bodies on the provision of navigational aids for military ports by providers outside the UK; [197353]

(5) what plans he has to review the provision of navigational aids at naval installations in UK waters. [197350]

Mr. Ingram: The Assessment Phase for the future provision of marine services has not yet concluded. Discussions on the provision of naval navigational aids has centred on the UK companies. Two proposals from UK registered bidders, plus one from the MOD's Royal Maritime Auxiliary Service (RMAS) who, together with Serco Denholm, are responsible for the current services through a Government Owned-Contractor Operated (GOCO) arrangement, are due by the end of the year. It is planned that the design authority for navigational buoys, as well as the supply of related mooring materials, will be transferred to the successful bidder who will have commissioned their own research to determine a solution that offers best value for money. Provision for this forms part of the range of services included in the Invitation to Negotiate. Separate discussions have been held with the General Lighthouse Authorities (Trinity House, Northern Lights and Irish Lights), non-departmental public bodies sponsored by the DfT, to determine whether they could take over the maintenance and upkeep of navigational buoys but it was concluded that such an arrangement offered little benefit to the MOD.

Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures his Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake to comply with the Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order 2003. [194424]

Mr. Caplin: The Ministry of Defence is pursuing options for buying Combined Heat and Power (CHP) generated power from the electricity market. From April 2005 bids will be sought from licensed electricity suppliers that include a percentage of electricity sourced from good quality CHP. In line with Government targets, the percentage will start at 2.5 per cent. rising to 15 per cent. by 2010, subject to the market being able to supply the electricity at competitive rates.

The MOD's usage and occupation of its estate limit the options for the steady heat and power loads required to make CHP viable for self-generation. Nevertheless, the MOD intends to undertake a study, in partnership with the Carbon Trust, to examine the costs and viability of the use of on site CHP (in all its forms, sizes, and fuel types) on the Army Estate.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Free School Milk

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will ensure that milk is available in schools for all those pupils entitled to receive free school milk. [197780]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: There is no statutory requirement for milk to be provided in schools, but local education authorities (LEAs) and schools may decide to do so. The Government encourage LEAs and schools to make milk available for those pupils who want it. Where milk is provided, it must be made available free of charge to children eligible for free school meals.

Adoption Cases

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 5 July 2004, Official Report, column 460W, on adoption cases, when the Association of Directors of Social Services survey on past family cases concerning children and expert medical evidence will be placed in the Library. [194996]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 2 November 2004]: The Association of Directors of Social Services (ADSS) has now completed its survey, and I have today placed a copy of the results in the Library.

This is the second stage of the survey of family court cases concerning children and expert medical evidence, conducted by the ADSS this year following the judgment in the case of R v. Cannings. The first stage of the survey, the results of which are already in the Library, looked at the cases of children who were the subject of current care proceedings. Across the 130 local authorities who responded to first stage of the survey, disputed medical evidence featured, or was anticipated to feature, in only 47 out of 5,175 cases. Where the impact of this evidence was known, there was a change to the local authority's care plan in one case. The first stage of the survey did not consider children who were already the subject of a care or related order, which has been the subject of the second stage survey.

Across the 127 local authorities that responded to the second stage survey, which was conducted during July and August 2004, 28,867 children were the subject of care orders or freeing orders on 31 March 2004. 26 cases involved a serious disagreement between medical expert witnesses. Of these, five cases involved a serious disagreement between medical expert witnesses in which any doubt has been expressed about reliability of the evidence following the judgment in R v. Cannings. Of these five cases, the care plan remains unchanged in three cases. In one case the plan had been changed already in light of new information reviewed in 2003 and in one case further consideration of medical evidence by the court is being awaited.

The figures collected in this survey will not include any care orders which have previously been discharged through the courts on the basis that it is safe for the child to do so, quite independently of any specific review being undertaken by the local authority. Approximately 1,000 applications for discharge of current care orders are made each year, of which around 80 per cent. are granted. This survey only includes children who are currently under the care of the local authority—not cases where the care order has been discharged.

Expert witnesses' medical evidence is only one of the many factors in the complex and difficult decision-making process that surrounds the safeguarding of children through the courts. As the survey shows, very few cases where children are currently being looked after by local authorities depend on the evidence of medical expert witnesses.

The courts must have access to the best possible expert witnesses, and the Chief Medical Officer is currently leading a programme of work, expected to be completed by early 2005, to ensure the availability of competent, quality-assured medical expert resources to the family courts.

In addition, as I indicated in my statement to the House on 17 June, I am also now issuing a Local Authority Social Services Letter setting out key aspects of the recent Appeal Court cases of Re LB and Re LU, which make clear the implications of the criminal court judgment in R v. Cannings on family proceedings, and also details the case of Dr. Colin Paterson, currently suspended by the General Medical Council, pending an appeal, as a result of his activities as an expert witness.

Adult Literacy/Numeracy

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research his Department has commissioned regarding (a) adult literacy and (b) adult numeracy in England. [197811]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department for Education and Skills (DfES) has conducted a range of research on adult literacy and numeracy in England. This includes its own in-house research and analysis activities, and also a continuous programme of research led by the DfES funded National Research and Development Centre for Adult Literacy and Numeracy (NRDC).

Research undertaken by the Department has included "The Skills for Life Survey: A national needs and impact survey of literacy, numeracy and ICT skills" (DfES, October 2003). This research provides an up-to-date assessment of the level of basic skills need for literacy, numeracy and ICT among adults aged 16–65 years old in England. A copy of this survey has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

In addition the Department is currently undertaking a longitudinal panel survey of adult basic skills learners, tracking a sample of learners and non-learners with a view to identifying the returns to basic skills learning (early findings from this study will be published in 2005). The Department has also conducted evaluations of the literacy and numeracy pathfinders that were established to test the new Skills for Life learning infrastructure. This included a survey of learners who had received training in the pathfinder areas to explore their experiences of literacy and numeracy learning. More details of DfES research are available through our website: www.dfes.gov.uk/research.

The DfES also collects regular information on the number of basic skills qualifications that are achieved and count towards the Skills for Life PSA targets. We are confident that we are on track to achieve the 2004 target of 750,000 learner achievements.

Finally, the DfES funded NRDC was created in spring 2002 to lead a continuous programme of research and development activities to ensure that implementation and future development of the Skills for Life Strategy are based firmly on evidence. The NRDC have conducted a range of research on literacy and numeracy and a series of research reports are available from their website: www.nrdc.org.uk.

Crossrail

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will reply to the e-mail correspondence from the Romford Crossrail Action Group regarding the impact of the proposed Crossrail depot on local schools. [197490]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Mr. Diebelius, a member of the Crossrail Action Group, sent me an e-mail on 18 October about the impact of the proposed Crossrail depot on Westlands Playing Fields in Romford. I replied to Mr. Diebelius in a letter dated 1 November. We have no record of any other correspondence from the Crossrail Action Group.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on the training of (a) midwives, (b) dental practitioners and (c) chemists met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations each Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of each Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [196099]

Mr. Hutton: I have been asked to reply.

The advisory committees on midwifery, medical, dental, nursing and pharmaceutical training were set up to advise the European Commission and member states on matters relating to the training of workers whose professions come under sectoral directives guaranteeing free movement and automatic recognition of qualifications.

The advisory committees did not meet during the Greek presidency, have not met since and are unlikely to do so again.

The advisory committees were composed of representatives from each member state drawn from the relevant profession, the education establishments and the competent authority. Government officials did not attend.

Latchmere House

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the reason was for Reed Education losing the contract to provide education services at HM Prison Latchmere House; and whether there are plans to remove their contract to provide education at (a) HM Prison Blakenhurst and (b) HM Prison Brixton. [193994]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

Reed Education provided the education services at HMP Latchmere House from 1 July 2003 to 31 August 2004 as a variation to their education contract at HMP Brixton.

When Reed were offered an extension to the Latchmere House contract for the period 1 September 2004 to 30 June 2005 agreement on prices could not be reached and the contract was ended on 30 September 2004. This was in line with Reed's own condition that 30 days notice should be given if prices could not be agreed.

There are no plans to terminate the contracts for Blakenhurst or Brixton prisons.

Learndirect

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many venues responsible for the delivery of Learndirect have closed in (a) England and (b) each county in each month in the past year; and if he will make a statement. [196976]

Mr. Miliband: 422 Learndirect centres closed in England between November 2003 and November 2004. Over the same period 485 new centres have opened. The following table shows closures by individual county.

Learndirect makes an important contribution to the Government's targets of widening participation and meeting employers' skills needs through its use of new technologies and e-learning. Learndirect is successfully attracting 10,000 new learners each week and Ufi is responsible for ensuring its Learndirect network of over 2,000 centres is best placed to meet their needs. I fully support its approach of closing centres which consistently fail to meet quality standards or attract sufficient learners to be viable and of opening new centres to meet new or changing demand.

Pupil Referral Units

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of excluded children, broken down by key stage, have (a) received education in pupil referral units and (b) had one-to-one home tuition in each of the last five years. [196995]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Information on the provision made for permanently excluded pupils was first collected in March 2001 via the Education of Permanently Excluded Pupils (EPEP) Survey. There were two further updates in September 2001 and March 2002 before the survey was discontinued. However, figures from the most recent collection of this survey were incomplete and not sufficiently robust to provide a breakdown of the type of educational provision received by excluded pupils. The available information is given in the table.

EPEP survey

In 1999 the Government gained a commitment from LEAs to provide a full-time education for all permanently excluded pupils by September 2002. Findings from the EPEP survey indicated that on 30 September 2002, 143 LEAs were offering full-time education to pupils permanently excluded from school, and seven LEAs were not. Since this survey, better systems have been put in place to track pupils. Currently two LEAs are not providing full-time education for all their pupils. The Department continues to work through the Children's Services Improvement Advisers to support LEAs to sustain this commitment and provide high quality, full-time educational provision for all permanently excluded pupils.

School Meals

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children of (a) primary and (b) secondary school age were eating hot school meals in the latest period for which figures are available. [197931]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Department for Education and Skills does not collect this information.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance he has issued to schools to encourage (a) healthier option school meals and (b) healthier packed lunches to be brought into schools. [197932]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We introduced regulations setting minimum nutritional standards for school lunches on 1 April 2001. They allow children to choose healthy and enjoyable school meals. We also produced guidance entitled "Healthy School Lunches" for school caterers on implementing these standards. The guidance can be viewed on the website: www.dfes.gov.uk/schoollunches.

We are taking forward a number of projects following the recent publication of the findings of the Department for Education and Skills and Food Standards Agency (FSA) evaluation of secondary school meals and to help achieve the objectives outlined within the Healthy Living Blueprint which was launched on 6 September 2004. These projects aim to improve school food and reinforce healthy-eating messages taught in the classroom. The Blueprint and supporting website can be viewed at: www.teachernet.gov.uk/healthyliving.

This Department, together with the Department of Health (DoH), is jointly funding a Food in Schools (FiS) programme. The DoH strand comprises eight pilot projects one of which addresses healthier packed lunches. Good practice identified through FiS will help schools promote a clear and consistent message about diet and nutrition.

The FSA in September 2003 provided suggestions on healthy packed lunches. This can be viewed on their website: www.food.gov.uk/news/newsarchive/2003/sep/lunchbox.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many unpaid special advisers the Department has; what their names are; and which Government (a) bodies, (b) committees and (c) strategy groups each unpaid adviser (i) belongs to, (ii) advises and (iii) works alongside. [194054]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Cabinet Office on 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1380W. Hannah Pawlby has replaced Lisa Tremble.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Advantage West Midlands

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which projects and investments undertaken by Advantage West Midlands, including sale and leaseback, involving property and land (a) have incurred losses and (b) are projected to incur losses; and what the extent of those losses is. [198304]

Jacqui Smith: In 2003–04 Advantage West Midlands (AWM) had in excess of 50 active projects where it held an investment or interest in land and property to assemble sites, overcome market failure and bring sites back into productive use, which the private sector would otherwise neglect. As a result of these projects, AWM incurred £16.2 million of revaluation losses and £12.9 million of revaluation profits; though, since AWM was able to account for this on a portfolio basis, this produced an audited net property loss of £3.3 million. AWM is not able to provide a breakdown of losses on individual projects, as this information is commercially sensitive.

AWM values its property portfolio on an annual basis and is currently undertaking this exercise. Until this task is completed, AWM is unable to project potential revaluation losses for the current year. However, taking into account the fact that AWM now has to account for losses on an individual basis, rather than on portfolio basis, AWM has made a provision of £10 million to cover any valuation losses when they arise.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) target time is and (b) average time actually achieved in 2003–04 was for Advantage West Midlands approving new projects (i) in general, (ii) as regional cluster projects, (iii) as regeneration zone projects, (iv) as technology corridor projects and (v) as single regeneration budget projects. [198309]

Jacqui Smith: Advantage West Midlands (AWM) has a general target of 30 working days for decisions on new, fully completed, applications; this target includes Regional Cluster projects, Regeneration Zone projects, High-Technology Corridor projects, legacy SRB projects and Selective Finance for Investment (SFI) projects. Any time taken for the applicant to provide missing or supplementary information will be added to the target time.

Land and property applications are technically more complex and demanding, require more detailed scrutiny and development, and are therefore excluded from these time scales. However in such instances the AWM works closely with the applicant to overcome any issues that may arise and cause delay to the application.

AWM is not able to give a breakdown of the average time actually achieved by type of project. However, AWM has surveyed a number of projects received in 2003–04 and has identified that this process has on average taken a period of 10 weeks, though this time includes all types of projects and also includes time taken to seek additional information from applicants.

Business Angels

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many business angel deals have been concluded through the National Business Angel Network in each year since 1998; and what the total value of the deals was. [195169]

Nigel Griffiths: The National Business Angels Network was established to act as a national conduit through which any company seeking investment could be put in touch with investors. Each business angels network was responsible for progressing any potential deals.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to promote the business angel concept. [195170]

Nigel Griffiths: We are supporting the National Business Angels Network in its objectives of promoting the concept of business angels and, working through local businesses angels networks, improving the operation of the business angels market. We also operate the Enterprise Investment Scheme to provide tax incentives to encourage business angel investment.

Business Support

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what provision has been made for funding the business support products of (a) Access to Best Business Practice and (b) Support to Implement Best Business Practice in the current financial year. [197248]

Nigel Griffiths: For this financial year a total of £14 million has been allocated to the "Achieving Best Practice in Your Business" theme within the DTI's business support product portfolio. We expect to spend £6 million on Access to Business Practice, and £8 million on Support to Implement Best Business practice.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what provision has been made for funding the business support products of (a) Knowledge Transfer Networks, (b) Collaborative Research and Development, (c) Grants for Investigating an Innovative Idea, (d) Grants for Research and Development and (e) Knowledge Transfer Partnerships in the current financial year. [197249]

Nigel Griffiths: Provision for funding business support products in the current financial year (2004–05) (which includes funding for legacy schemes associated with the new products) is as follows:

	£ million
(a) Knowledge Transfer Networks	18.9
(b) Collaborative Research and Development	2.1
(c) Grant for Investigating an Innovative Idea	1
(d) Grant for Research and Development	36
(e) Knowledge Transfer Partnerships	19.2

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will break down spending on (a) business support products and (b) administration related to Small Business Service Investment in each year since 1997. [197255]

Nigel Griffiths: The Small Business Service was formed as an executive agency of the DTI in April 2000.

The expenditure on business support products and the administration costs of the Small Business Service's Investment and SME Finance Directorate, which covers the Small Firm Loan Guarantee as well as venture capital investments, is represented as follows (staffing levels have also been included as the corresponding expenditure in 2000–01 and 2001–02 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost):

	Business support (£ million)	Staffing	Administration (£ million)
2000–01	45.8	39	n/a
2001–02	39.2	45	n/a
2002–03	74.7	47	1.5
2003–04	83.759	49	1.6

Compensation Claims

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims for (a) chronic bronchitis and emphysema and (b) vibration white finger were concluded for the constituency of Bolsover in (i) 2000, (ii) 2001, (iii) 2002 and (iv) 2003. [197092]

Nigel Griffiths: The information is as follows:

	Settlements
	COPD	VWF
2000	196	121
2001	416	322
2002	757	535
2003	1,646	898
2004	1,485	783

Note:

1. Settlements represent claims settled by payment and by denial/withdrawn.
2. Figures for 2004 reflect the position to 31 October 2004.

Counterfeiting (Pharmaceuticals)

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department is taking to tackle counterfeiting in the pharmaceutical industry. [197472]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) investigates all allegations of counterfeit medicines in the United Kingdom, the vast majority of which are not associated with the tightly regulated legitimate supply chain. Action, in the form of legal proceedings, is taken when appropriate.

The MHRA's inspection and enforcement division continually reviews its counterfeit strategy in order to remain proactive in this area. Some of the key initiatives are:

> The MHRA, in association with the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, routinely carries out market surveillance by sampling and testing 'off the shelf' medicines on the UK market for authentication. The target products for this surveillance are based on intelligence and risk assessments. To date, none of the tests has identified a counterfeit product.
> Due to the global nature of the problem of counterfeit medicines, the MHRA continues to liaise closely with international regulatory partners, the pharmaceutical industry and international law enforcement agencies to ensure that the tackling of counterfeiting medicines remains a prioritised and co-ordinated activity.
> The MHRA is actively consulting with the pharmaceutical industry and technology the providers in the area of its work on technical developments in product security, which are aimed to further safeguard the integrity of the medicines supply chain. This includes work with the National Patient Safety Agency and the NHS Patient and Supply Agency on the potential use of bar-coding medicines and blood products to increase patient safety. In addition, work is being done with the United States Food and Drug Administration in the use of sophisticated 'fingerprinting' to identify active pharmaceutical ingredients as a means of product verification.
> The MHRA is developing an educational program for the public and other stakeholders on the dangers of counterfeit medicines and purchasing drugs on the internet.

Digital Standards

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of (a) the differences between the MHP and MHEG digital standards and (b) the implications of one being preferred for use in the UK. [198260]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: MHEG-5 and MHP are closely related open API (application programming interface) standards for interactive digital television.

MHP is a more advanced, complex and capable API which was developed several years after MHEG-5 was chosen by the UK free-to-air terrestrial TV broadcasters for the launch of their digital TV services. To enable the kinds of advanced interactive service which MHP can offer (but MHEG-5 cannot), the TV set needs to be connected to a telephone line, or other telecoms network.

MHP receivers are more expensive than MHEG-5 receivers; the MHP suite of standards is not yet complete or stable. To date, very few MHP applications have been developed and interoperability problems are beginning to surface in countries (eg Italy) which are early adopters of MHP.

MHEG-5 is much more mature. Almost all digital terrestrial TV receivers in the UK incorporate MHEG-5, whereas other countries are seeing their market split between relatively expensive MHP receivers and simple "zapper boxes" without any API at all.

A DTI-commissioned study on the technical issues of coexistence of MHEG-5 and MHP based services and on migration to MHP was completed in May 2002. Since then, further investigations, supported by DTI, have led to demonstrations of interactive services receivable on both MHEG-5 and MHP receivers. Work to align the two standards more closely is nearing completion. Manufacturers can now easily produce receivers supporting both standards. This MHP/MHEG capability is expected to be incorporated in "baseline" MHP receivers available across Europe.

The UK is well-placed to switch over to digital terrestrial TV, with MHEG-5 in the vast majority of receivers providing support for a raft of desirable interactive services. As MHP matures and becomes established in other markets, there is the prospect of the widespread adoption of MHP/MHEG-capable receivers in UK, particularly when the "main" TV comes up for replacement. This would open the way to an organic extension of simple interactive services based on MHEG-5 to advanced applications using MHP, taking advantage of a telecomms connection which users may well be persuaded to extend to their main receiver over the next few years.

East of England Development Agency

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the accountability of the East of England Development Agency to the people of the East of England. [190962]

Jacqui Smith: Section 18 of the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998 requires RDAs to be accountable to Regional Chambers. The East of England Regional Assembly (EERA) has been designated by the Secretary of State for this purpose. EERA members are drawn from elected local authority councillors, and the social, economic and environmental sectors in the region.

In developing the Regional Economic Strategy the East of England Development Agency (EEDA) consults widely within the region. It takes into account the views of EERA and of other regional and local stakeholders in drawing up the Strategy and its own Corporate Plan. These documents are published, as are EEDA's targets and its performance against these. The Agency publishes an Annual Report on its activities and holds a public meeting after publication of the Report.

Employment Tribunals

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the merits of giving employment tribunals power to enforce awards they make; and if she will make a statement. [194353]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

The White Paper "Transforming Public Services:Complaints Redress and Tribunals", published in July, contains a commitment that the current unsatisfactory arrangements for enforcing these awards will be reformed. A review between the Department for Constitutional Affairs and the Department of Trade and Industry is already under way, and we hope to make an announcement early in 2005.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employment tribunal cases there were in (a) West Derbyshire, (b) the East Midlands and (c) the UK in each year since 1997. [198353]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table shows the number of tribunal applications registered by the Employment Tribunals Service in the United Kingdom (excluding Northern Ireland) since 1997. We are unable to supply separate statistical information for the geographical areas of West Derbyshire and East Midlands.

	Registered tribunal applications
2003–04	115,042
2002–03	98,617
2001–02	112,227
2000–01	130,408
1999–2000	103,935
1998–99	91,913
1997–98	80,435
1996–97	88,910

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average amount of an employment tribunal cost award was in (a) West Derbyshire, (b) the East Midlands and (c) the UK in each year since 1997. [198354]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table shows the average amount of an Employment Tribunal cost award in the UK (excluding Northern Ireland) since 1997. We are unable to supply the average amount of an Employment Tribunal cost award for West Derbyshire and East Midlands.

	Average cost award (£)
2003–04	1,859
2002–03	1,524
2001–02	983
2000–01	295
1999–2000	1,155
1998–99	743
1997–98	546

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average award for compensation in employment tribunal cases has been in (a) West Derbyshire, (b) the East Midlands and (c) the UK in each year since 1997. [198355]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Employment Tribunals Service only collects compensation statistics for tribunal cases covering the jurisdictions of Unfair Dismissal, Race Discrimination, Sex Discrimination and Disability Discrimination. Therefore, the figures quoted in the table illustrate the average award for compensation in Employment Tribunal cases for the UK (excluding Northern Ireland) since 1997 in relation to the aforementioned complaints. We are unable to supply separate information for West Derbyshire and East Midlands.

	Average compensation award (£)
2003–04	8,361
2002–03	7,598
2001–02	7,306
2000–01	5,764
1999–2000	5,734
1998–99	4,449
1997–98	4,894

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employment tribunal cost awards have been made against (a) respondents and (b) applicants in (i) West Derbyshire, (ii) the East Midlands and (iii) the UK in each year since 1997. [198356]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table illustrates how many Employment Tribunal cost awards have been made against respondents and applicants in the UK (excluding Northern Ireland) in the last two financial years. The Employment Tribunals Service did not breakdown the statistics for applicants and respondents prior to 2001–02. We are unable to supply information for West Derbyshire and East Midlands.

	Costs awards against respondent	Costs awards against applicant
2003–04	332	644
2002–03	307	691
2001–02	169	467

Enron

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what investigation has been carried out on the British arms and subsidiaries of Enron; and what action has been taken as a result. [195124]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department does not comment on the affairs of individual companies.

Gas

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what comparative assessment she has made of the wholesale gas price in (a) the UK and (b) other major EU economies. [196037]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Because gas markets in other EU economies are less liberalised and competitive than those in the UK, there is not much open trading in wholesale markets and it is difficult to make meaningful price comparisons with those in the UK. On the Continent wholesale prices tend to be set through contract and linked to oil. However, unofficial data indicates that UK wholesale gas prices in October 2004 were comparable with wholesale prices at Zeebrugge in Belgium and the TTF trading hub in the Netherlands.

Jaguar

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what public funds Jaguar has received in each year since 1989; and for what purpose. [196442]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 9 November 2004]: I can confirm that Jaguar cars has received the following assistance from national and regional bodies since 1989:

1994

National Regional Selective Assistance scheme payment:

Grant paid: £7.87 million (offered in 1994, actually paid in 1997)

Plant: Browns Lane (to support introduction of new XK sports car)

Note:

All conditions of the offer have been met. Case is now closed.

1997

National Regional Selective Assistance scheme payment:

Grant paid: £40 million

Plant: Castle Bromwich (to support introduction of X200/S-Type saloon car)

Note:

Monitoring of offer conditions is ongoing.

Regional grants to promote and support Learning and Training from Birmingham TEC and Birmingham city council:

Combined total grant paid: £852,000

Plant: Castle Bromwich (to support introduction of X200/S-Type saloon car)

1998

Regional grants to promote and support Learning, Training and Enterprise from Birmingham TEC, Birmingham city council Coventry city council and Coventry and Warwickshire CCTE:

Combined total grant paid: £983,642

Plant: Castle Bromwich (to support introduction of X200/S-Type saloon car)

1999

National Regional Selective Assistance scheme payment:

Grant paid: £30 million (from a total of £40 million available)

Plant: Halewood (to support introduction of X400/X-Type saloon car project)

Note:

Grant payment process is 75 per cent. complete, hence payment of £30 million to date, with monitoring of offer conditions ongoing.

Regional grant to facilitate Skills Enhancement and Learning from Merseyside TEC:

Total grant paid: £2 million

Plant: Halewood (to support introduction of X400/X-Type saloon car project)

Regional grants to promote Training and Inward Investment Support from Birmingham city council and Birmingham TEC:

Combined total grant paid: £1.46 million

Plant: Castle Bromwich (to support introduction of X200/S-Type saloon car)

2000

Regional grants to promote Training and Inward Investment Support from Birmingham TEC, Birmingham city council and Coventry city council:

Combined total grant paid: £1.3 million

Plant: Castle Bromwich (to support introduction of X200/S-Type saloon car)

2001

Regional grant to facilitate Training from Birmingham city council:

Total grant paid: £200,000

Plant: Castle Bromwich (to support introduction of X200/S-Type saloon car)

In addition to these discrete national and regional packages, Jaguar Cars has also received support across a number of years for specific company research efforts under the auspices of the SMMT-led Foresight Vehicle programme. These have included the following specific initiatives:

Advanced Protection of Vulnerable Road Users (APVRU)	18,800
Road Origin and Direction Attained by Radar (ROADAR)	250,000
Short Range Sensors for Automotive Applications (SHORSEN)	202,500
Probe Vehicle Information for Traffic Management and Road Network Operations (PROBE-IT)	270,000
Controlled Homogenous Auto-ignition Reformed Gas Engine (CHARGE)	252,000
Controlled Homogenous Auto-ignition Supercharged Engine (CHASE)	260,000

Liquid Gas

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much liquid gas was used in the UK in the last year for which figures are available; how much was imported and from where; how much was used for domestic and industrial heating; and what her latest estimate is of the number of vehicles running on liquid gas. [195701]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 4 November 2004]: There are two types of liquid gas, liquid natural gas (LNG) and liquid petroleum gas (LPG). Natural gas is liquefied for storage or long distance transportation purposes. Currently there is little LNG used in the UK and its usage cannot be separately disaggregated from natural gas data. The latest annual figures for UK consumption of liquid petroleum gases (butane and propane) in 2003 were published in table 3.4 of the 2004 edition of the Digest of UK Energy Statistics. In 2003 UK consumption of LPG was 2.9 million tonnes of which 0.84 million tonnes were used by industry and 0.34 million tonnes by households. It is not possible to split this usage between heating and other energy uses such as cooking.

Total UK imports of LPG in 2003 were 0.36 million tonnes with 0.18 million tonnes from EU countries, 0.1 million tonnes from Norway, 0.06 million tonnes from Russia and 0.02 million tonnes from other countries.

Miners' Pensions

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the transfer of pension rights and benefits under TUPE for members of the Mineworkers Pension Scheme into the Industry-Wide Mineworkers Pension Scheme complied fully with Article 3 of the EU Acquired Rights Directive; and if she will make a statement. [192554]

Nigel Griffiths: I am advised that the transfer was in full compliance with the Directive.

Mobile Post Offices

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many mobile post offices there are in the United Kingdom; and what areas they serve. [198865]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on mobile post offices is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked David Mills, the Chief Executive, to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Oil Usage

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much oil was used in the UK in the last year for which figures are available; how much was imported and from where; how much was burned in power stations; how much was used for domestic and industrial heating; and how much was used by industry for purposes other than heating. [195699]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 4 November 2004]: The latest annual figures for UK consumption of petroleum products in 2003 were published in table 3.4 of the 2004 edition of the Digest of UK Energy Statistics. In 2003 UK consumption of petroleum products was 77.8 million tonnes of which 0.6 million tonnes was used in power stations, 6.7 million tonnes were used by industry and 3.1 million tonnes by domestic households. It is not possible to split the industrial usage between heating and other energy uses such as cooking. However recent studies by the Building Research Establishment show that around three-quarters of domestic oil consumption is used for space heating. Previous studies have suggested that less than five percent of industrial use of oil is for space heating purposes.

Total UK imports of petroleum products in 2003 were 17.3 million tonnes with 8.6 million tonnes from European countries, 3 million tonnes from the former Soviet Union, 4.5 million tonnes from the Middle East and 1.1 million tonnes from other countries.

Postal Services (Hendon)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the standard of Royal Mail deliveries in Hendon. [198736]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Improving the quality of postal services throughout the country is an operational matter for the Royal Mail Board. Ministers have been assured that this is the Board's top priority and Adam Crozier, Chief Executive of Royal Mail, has taken personal responsibility for this improvement. I have written to him and asked him to respond to my hon. Friend's specific question about Hendon.

Premium Rate Dialler Programmes

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints she has received in the last three years about the operation of the regulatory bodies for premium rate telephone companies; and if she will make a statement. [198175]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 15 November 2004]: The Department has received about 120 complaints about Premium Rate Services (PRS) in the past year of which about 100 have referred to the operation of the premium rate regulator the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Telephone Information Services (ICSTIS). None complaining about ICSTIS was received in the previous two years. The Government have asked Ofcom to carry out a review of PRS regulation which will include an assessment of ICSTIS' remif and whether ICSTIS has the right tools and resources to regulate the PRS industry. The review is expected to report later in November.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information she has received of the number of complaints received over the last three years by the regulatory bodies for premium rate telephone calls. [198176]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 15 November 2004]: The Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Information Services (ICSTIS) regulates premium rate telephone calls and has the following figures about complaints it has received about Premium Rate Services:

	Number
2002	11,572
2003	27,501
2004	[1]63,945
2004	[2]79,000

[1] January to October only.

[2] Estimated total for 2004.

Part of the increase in complaints is explicable by growth in the size of the market (services based on the premium rate charging mechanism are estimated to now be worth £1 billion a year in the UK) and by new and innovative technologies in the marketplace, but clearly not all. The 2004 growth is largely accounted for by PRS internet diallers.

DTI, Ofcom and ICSTIS all appreciate that the current level of complaints is not acceptable. This is why the Department has called on Ofcom to conduct a review of the regulation of premium rate services, with ICSTIS, to strengthen consumer protection.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the role of ICTSIS; and when she last met ICTSIS to discuss strengthening their role in consumer protection. [195567]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We recognise that the regulatory system for premium rate services enforced by ICSTIS is currently being stretched by the current problems around the abuse of Internet diallers. This is why the Government have asked Ofcom to carry out a review of Premium Rate Services (PRS) regulation which will include an assessment of ICSTIS' remit and whether ICSTIS has the right tools and resources to regulate the PRS industry. The review is expected to report later in November. Ministers and officials regularly meet with ICSTIS to discuss consumer protection issues.

Productivity

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate her Department has made of the changes in (a) labour and (b) multi-factor productivity in British industry in the course of (i) 2002–03 and (ii) 2003–04. [197473]

Jacqui Smith: Productivity growth is essential for long-term economic growth and prosperity. The Government focus on two main measures of labour productivity—output per worker and output per hour worked.

On an output per worker basis, labour productivity improved by 0.8 per cent. in the second quarter of 2003 compared with the same quarter in 2002, and by 2.9 per cent. in the second quarter of 2004 compared with the same quarter in 2003.

On an output per hour basis, it improved by 0.8 per cent. in the second quarter of 2003 compared with the same quarter in 2002, and by 3.5 per cent. in the second quarter of 2004 compared with the same quarter in 2003.

The Government do not produce estimates of Multi Factor Productivity (MFP) growth. MFP—or as it is sometimes called Total Factor Productivity—is a measure of how the economy combines its inputs—such as labour and capital—to produce output. In practice MFP is calculated as a residual and is therefore subject to significant measurement error. For example MFP can be influenced by the mis-measurement of inputs, especially of the capital stock. Consequently, estimates of MFP are subject to substantial variation.

Nevertheless, the Government do recognise the value of critically evaluating estimates of MFP when undertaking productivity analysis, and considers estimates produced by a range of bodies including the National Institute of Economic and Social Research, the University of Groningen and the US' National Bureau of Economic Research. This MFP data are used to provide contextual information to support the analysis of labour productivity growth.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many regional selective assistance grants have been made since 1997; what their value is; and how many jobs it is estimated they have (a) created and (b) safeguarded. [192571]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 October 2004]: Between April 1997 and 31 March 2004, 3,611 offers of RSA grant totalling £949 million were accepted by firms in support of projects in England. It is estimated that these projects will create 122,000 jobs and safeguard a further 76,000.

Further information can be found in the Industrial Development Act Annual Report, published by the Stationery Office and placed in the Library of the House.

Solar Power

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how much solar power the UK generated in the last period for which figures are available; [198278]

(2) what targets there have been for the installation of solar power in domestic properties in the last 10 years; [198279]

(3) what target has been set for the installation of solar panels. [198280]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Solar power is used for generating electricity using photovoltaic panels (solar PV). It is estimated that at the end December 2003 there was 5,903 kWp of installed PV in the UK (Source: International Energy Authority—National Statistics).

The current target for installation of solar PV under the DTI's Major PV Demonstration Programme launched in 2003 is 1,000 domestic/individual systems (2 MW) and at least 140 medium and large-scale non-domestic systems (5 MW). The budget for the Major PV Demonstration Programme has been increased from £20 million to £31 million this year and the targets will be reviewed.

EU State Aid

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment is made of the EU state aid scoreboards in decisions about the making of grants of aid to UK industry; and whether the scoreboards are regularly monitored to assess grounds for disputing state aid awards by other member states. [197602]

Mr. Alexander: The EU state aid scoreboard is published twice yearly and provides data on the levels of state aid granted by member states. The data presented in the scoreboards are at an aggregated level for the EU and individual member states; for example, total aid granted as a proportion of GDP, total aid granted by aid instrument (grant, loan, tax exemption etc.), total aid granted for particular activities (SME business support, environmental protection, training, regional development etc.). Therefore, it does not provide information that can be used for making decisions on granting aid to UK industry or disputing individual awards by other member states.

However, the Government do monitor other sources of information on other member state aid awards, particularly the information on aid approvals and investigations published in the Official Journal of the European Communities and makes representations to the Commission on cases where this is deemed to be appropriate.

Utilities

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effects of the provision of utilities by means of prepaid meters on communities at risk of social exclusion; and if she will make a statement. [198757]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Although the use of prepayment meters is concentrated among lower income customers, it is not synonymous with vulnerability or the risk of social exclusion. Prepayment meters enable customers to monitor and control expenditure on energy electricity supply, and are, in some cases, a valuable alternative to disconnection for non-payment of bills. Because of the additional cost of the meter and the administrative infrastructure that supports it, prepayment tariffs are customarily higher than those of other payment methods, although the differential will vary from company to company. Prepayment meter users may, therefore, be able to reduce their energy bills by switching supplier, as well as by seeking a cheaper, simpler payment method, which will, for most customers, be direct debit.

Business Women

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what percentage of businesses were run by women in each of the last 10 years. [190832]

Nigel Griffiths: Data are not available on the number and percentage of all businesses run by women. The number of businesses owned by women, in England, in small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) with less than 250 employees, can be estimated from business surveys conducted in 2001, 2002 and 2004 on behalf of the Small Business Service (SBC). SMEs account for 99.8 per cent. of the total business population. There are no data prior to 2001. The proportion and estimated number of women owned SMES is as follows:

Women-owned[1] SMEs 2001 to 2003, England only

	Percentage of all SMEs owned by women[2]	Estimated number of SMEs in England[3]	Estimated number of SMEs owned by women
2001	13	3,258,925	436,000
2002	14	3,258,925	452,000
2003	16	3,258,925	516,000

[1] Women-owned refers to SMEs where women make up the majority of the owners.

SBS SME Statistics for the UK, 2001

The number and percentage of self-employed people who are women can be measured using the Office for National Statistics' (ONS) Labour Force Survey. Female self-employment is not the same as business ownership as one self-employed woman could run several businesses or be involved in running a business where the majority of owners are men. Also, women working as directors of companies will be classed as employees in the Labour Force Survey.

The number of self-employed women and women self-employment as a proportion of all self-employed people is as follows.

Number of self-employed women and women as a percentage of all self-employed people aged 16 and over—UK, all persons, not seasonally adjusted

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) who is responsible for the enforcement of section 125 of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000; [198164]

(2) what the consequences are of breaching Section 125 of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000; and what measures are in place to prevent such a breach. [198163]

Mr. Leslie: It is the responsibility of those to whom section 125 of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 applies to ensure that they comply with the requirements of that provision. A person alleging a breach of section 125 could seek to bring a judicial review. It would be for the courts to decide the consequences of a breach according to the circumstances of the challenge.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Debts

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library copies of the contracts given to four debt collection companies to collect benefit debts from people no longer in receipt of benefit. [196509]

Mr. Pond: The generic contract has been placed in the Library. The schedules have not been included as they contain information that is commercial in confidence. This is in line with paragraph 13 of part 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much the Government expect to receive in repayments of overpaid benefits as a result of the exercise launched with four debt collection agencies in March. [196545]

Mr. Pond: It is early in the pilot to forecast accurately the return on the contracts with the four private sector suppliers. The agreement with Treasury is that recoveries to costs ratio should exceed 2:1 and we are confident that this will be achieved.

Benefit Entitlement (Newcastle-under-Lyme)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit claimants there are in Newcastle-under-Lyme, broken down by (a) local authority ward and (b) sex. [198576]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

Total numbers claiming incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance: Wards within Newcastle-Under-Lyme parliamentary constituency.

Benefit Take-up (Hendon)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Hendon are in receipt of (a) pension credit and (b) pension savings credit; what he estimates the take-up rate of each benefit in Hendon to be; what the (i) highest and (ii) average amount awarded is; and if he will make a statement. [197512]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on numbers of pension credit recipients in Hendon and the level of awards at 30 September, where available, is given in the table. The average award of the savings element in Hendon at the end of May 2004, the latest date for which this figure is available, was 7.44.

Information on the number of people likely to be eligible for pension credit is not available at constituency level. However, we estimate that approximately 450,000 households in the London Government Office Region (GOR), corresponding to approximately 500,000 individuals (rounded to the nearest 50,000), are likely to be eligible for pension credit in 2004–05. At 30 September 277,740 households in the London GOR, comprising 33,230 individuals, were receiving pension credit.

Pension credit recipients, Hendon constituency, 30 September 2004

	Pension credit	Savings element of pension credit
Households	4,070	1,960
Individuals	4,840	2,280
Highest award	£249.25	[1]—
Average award	£61.38	[1]—

[1] Not available.

Notes:

1. Numbers of recipients are rounded to the nearest five.

2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60.

3. The numbers of households and individuals in receipt of the savings element include those who were receiving the savings element only and those who were receiving both the savings and guarantee elements.

4. The maximum possible award for the savings element is £20.22.

Carers (Respite Leave)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what support is given to enable carers to take respite leave. [198717]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000 strengthens the rights of carers to an assessment of their own needs as carers. It gives local councils mandatory duties to support carers by providing them with services and short breaks, as well as providing direct payments for carers' services.

Breaks can be provided directly by the council or independent sector providers or through short-term break voucher schemes or direct payments.

The carers' grant was introduced in 1999 to support councils in providing breaks and services for carers in England. The grant has increased annually from £20 million in the first year and has provided an extra £325 million over the past five years. It is worth £125 million in 2004–05 and will be worth £185 million in 2005–06.

Child Support Agency

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his written ministerial statement of 28 October 2004, Official Report, columns 55–57W, on the new child support scheme progress report, upon what date the contract between EDS and the Government with respect to the new child support scheme entered into force; if he will list the sums retained by way of payments due to EDS in each year of operation of the contract; what percentage of the sums retained prior to the period 3 March 2003 to 19 September 2004 have since been paid to EDS; what the total estimated value of the contract between EDS and the Government with respect to the new child support scheme is; and what actions or omission on the part of EDS would amount to material breach of the contract between EDS and the Government. [196265]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Ms Annabelle Ewing, dated 16 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his Written Ministerial Statement of 28th October Official Report columns 55–57W on the new child support scheme progress report upon what date the contract between EDS and the Government with respect to the new child support scheme entered into force; if he will list the sums retained by way of payments due to EDS in each year of operation of the contract; what percentage of the sums retained prior to the period 3rd March 2003 to 19th September 2004 have since been paid to EDS; what the total estimated value of the contract between EDS and the Government with respect to the new child support scheme is; and what actions of omission on the part of EDS would amount to material breach of the contract as between EBS and the United Kingdom Government.

The Child Support Reform (CSR) contract was agreed with EDS on 8 August 2000. Its provisions subsumed an interim contract, for early EDS development work, first signed in December 1999.

All costs of design, development and implementation of the new IT system fall initially to EDS who provide this as a managed service to the Agency. The cost of the service is expected to be £456 million payable over the period to the completion of the contract in 2010. The payment due each year is determined by the contract. It is linked to service levels and to the degree of functionality delivered. Between 3rd March 2003 and 19th September 2004, EDS were paid £62.08 million in service charges. In that period the Agency retained £12.1 million because of performance problems.

As is usual with any contract, a major failure of delivery or performance can potentially constitute material breach of that contract. Ultimately, such matters may be subject to legal challenge.

Council Tax Benefit

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on how the eligibility requirements for council tax benefit differ from those for housing benefit. [198487]

Mr. Pond: The entitlement conditions for the award of housing benefit to those with a rental liability and council tax benefit to those with a liability to pay council tax are broadly the same. However the rate at which these benefits are reduced if a person's income exceeds their applicable amount are different. For housing benefit the taper is 65 per cent. and for council tax benefit 20 per cent.

Ethnic Minorities

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what grants are available to local authorities to promote training, employment and housing for ethnic minorities. [195314]

Jane Kennedy: The Department for Work and Pensions does not have the power to give grants to other organisations, including local authorities and the voluntary and community sector.

Gas Safety

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent by the Health and Safety Executive in the past seven years on improvements to gas safety. [198236]

Jane Kennedy: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) does not routinely collect information that would provide a basis for establishing the resources spent on gas safety.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many fatalities arising from gas explosions are estimated to have occurred in each year since 2000. [198240]

Jane Kennedy: The number of fatalities arising from gas explosions and/or fire from 1999–2000 to 2002–03 were as follows (commencing 1 April 1999):

1999–2000	10
2000–2001	8
2001–2002	4
2002–2003	5

Figures are not yet available for 2003–4.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when it was decided that a fundamental review of the gas safety regime was necessary. [198266]

Jane Kennedy: The Health and Safety Commission agreed in July 1998 that the review should be undertaken. HSE initiated the review process through a public discussion document in November 1999.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many gas explosions are estimated to have occurred in the home in (a) 2000, (b) 2001, (c) 2002 and (d) 2003. [198267]

Jane Kennedy: The number of gas-related fire and explosion incidents reported to HSE for the years 2000–01 to the present is as follows (commencing 1 April 1999):

Number of gas-related fire and explosion incidents

1999–2000	56
2000–2001	38
2001–2002	43
2002–2003	32

Figures are not yet available for 2003–4.

Gas Supplies

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment the Health and Safety Executive has made of implications of the Ghislenghien gas explosion for the safety of gas transmission and distribution systems in the UK. [198259]

Jane Kennedy: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has assessed the information available on the Ghislenghien explosion, which appears to have occurred as a result of third party damage to a high pressure gas pipeline. HSE is working in partnership with the United Kingdom Onshore Pipeline Operators' Association (UKOPA) to raise the awareness of risks from major accident hazard pipelines with construction contractors and utility companies. This work will form part of HSE's Major Hazards strategic programme for 2005–06.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many departmental Green Ministers there have been since 1997. [197838]

Mr. Pond: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the former Department of Social Security (DSS) and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment (DfEE) including the Employment Service (ES). Since that date there has been one Green Minister—my noble friend the right hon. Baroness Hollis of Heigham.

Health and Safety

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Health and Safety Executive (a) regulatory contacts and (b) investigations were carried out in Scotland in each of the last seven years. [197337]

Jane Kennedy: Tables 1 and 2 show the number of regulatory contacts and the number of investigations in Scotland respectively. The data includes all operating divisions of HSE, and figures are given for both accident and complaint investigations.

Table 1—HSE regulatory contacts in Scotland

	Total HSE contacts
1997–98	25,319
1998–99	22,951

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many health and safety inspectors there are in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales; and how many there were in each year since 1998. [197338]

Jane Kennedy: The following table shows the total number of inspectors that are employed by the Health and Safety Executive in Great Britain. Information on the number of inspectors in England, Scotland and Wales is not routinely maintained.

At 1 April	Number of inspectors[1]

Notes:

1. The annual basis is the planning year from 1 April to 31 March.
2. The number of cases where information was laid in respect of separate offences by HSE in England and Wales and those approved by the Procurator Fiscal in Scotland.
3. The figures for Information laid are those heard in court, based on date of hearing.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) enforcement notices have been served and (b) prosecutions have been initiated by health and safety inspectors under Health and Safety at Work legislation in Scotland in each of the last 12 months. [197340]

Jane Kennedy: In Scotland, in each of the last twelve months for which figures are available, Health and Safety Executive (HSE) inspectors issued enforcement notices and initiated prosecutions as follows:

2003–04[1]	Notices issued	Prosecutions initiated
April	91	4
May	146	4
June	191	8
July	102	5
August	157	3

Note:

The annual basis is the planning year from 1 April to 31 March. Figures for enforcement action by local authority health and safety enforcing officers is not available on a monthly basis. Overall figures for local authority health and safety enforcement activity for 2003–04 will be available in autumn 2005.

Health Projects

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what feedback his Department has received from general practitioners in the Pathways to Work pilot areas, regarding the desk aid and educational DVDs that have been distributed; and if he will make a statement. [193258]

Maria Eagle: A range of initiatives to engage with local GPs were developed for the Incapacity Benefit 'Pathways to work' pilot areas and included an online learning module, a desk aid and two educational DVDs.

The Department has commissioned some qualitative studies with GPs in the Pathways to Work pilot areas.

A study, to be published in spring 2005 investigates whether GPs engage with patients in 'return to work' discussions/how and when this happens, what the drivers and barriers are and GPs' knowledge and use of rehabilitation health services.

In spring 2005 we will also publish findings from a project undertaken to evaluate the 'Engaging Physicians Benefiting Patients' pilot which included asking GPs about their knowledge of the ways in which DWP communicate with them. This evaluation covered guidance, desk aids and DVDs on medical evidence gathering for sickness certification and return to work advice for patients.

In addition the Department has commissioned research with GPs who have registered on the DWP website to evaluate the online training, desk aid and DVD we provide to improve training for GPs in patient interaction on issues such as sickness certification and return to work. Findings from this research will be available in autumn 2005.

Holiday Caravan Parks

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions his Department has had with local authorities regarding the safety of holiday caravan parks. [198068]

Jane Kennedy: HSE has had no central discussions with LAs regarding safety at holiday caravan parks. The Department for Work and Pensions is unable to categorically state that no discussions have taken place at the local operational level between HSE and LAs regarding safety at holiday caravan parks, especially as routine liaison meetings take place, but the information we have suggests this has not happened or is very unlikely.

Jobcentre Plus Offices (Argyll and Bute)

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his plans are for each of the Jobcentre Plus offices in the Argyll and Bute constituency. [198518]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Alan Reid, dated 16 November 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the plans for each of the Jobcentre Plus offices in the Argyll and Bute constituency. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

All four offices in your constituency have already been rolled out to offer the new Jobcentre Plus services. It is planned that these offices will remain open and continue to deliver an integrated customer facing service, providing a single access point to job vacancies and benefits for all people of working age.

It may be helpful if I explain that Jobcentre Plus has reviewed the way in which all our benefit processing is delivered and we have been exploring ways of improving efficiency for some time. We currently process benefits in all the offices within your constituency. The processing teams in each of these offices operate with 8 staff or less and we have concluded that we should consolidate the benefit processing work into a larger site. The move to a centralised operation will concentrate expertise and experience, ensure consistency of decision-making and bring continuity of service, thereby improving customer service. It will also deliver the necessary economies of scale.

Our plans for the roll out of the Benefit Processing Centres, including Clydebank Benefit Processing Centre are at an early stage and you will be kept informed of progress as these develop.

I hope this is helpful.

Incapacity/Severe Disablement Benefit

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many new incapacity benefit beneficiaries there were, broken down by (a) Government office region and (b) gender in each year since 1995; and how many were (i) new entrants on to benefit and (ii) existing beneficiaries in each case. [190901]

Maria Eagle: The information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what previous employment new incapacity benefit claimants had before making their claims in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) age and (b) region. [191696]

Maria Eagle: The information has been placed in the Library.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of people making a fresh claim for incapacity benefit in each year since 2000 had been in receipt of incapacity benefit during the previous 12 months. [195808]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

Period	All IB/SDA commencements	Number of commencements with previous IB/SDA claim in last 12 months	Percentage of commencements with previous IB/SDA claim in last 12 months
1 June 1999–31May2000	763,000	153,000	20.0
1 June 2000–31 May 2001	750,900	151,700	20.2
1 June 2001–31May2002	697,800	134,800	19.3
1 June 2002–31May2003	691,000	132,000	19.1
1 June 2003–31May2004	640,100	126,300	19.7

Notes:

1. Case load figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
2. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample, and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
3. Figures are based on persons claiming severe disablement allowance, long term or short term incapacity benefit, credits only cases, and those persons claiming IB but who have their benefit extinguished for reasons such as an overlap with another benefit, or because of hospitalisation.
4. Some IB/SDA end dates will have been estimated at the end of a quarter, where the true end date is not known.
5. A person is counted only once in each year, regardless of the number of times they claim and subsequently leave each benefit. If however a claimant makes a claim to IB/SDA in more than one year shown then they will appear in each year's figures.
6. SDA is not available to new claimants from 6 April 2001. From this point, disabled people, whose period of incapacity begins before the age of 20 (or 25 if in education or training before the age of 20), may be able to receive incapacity benefit without having to satisfy the national insurance contribution conditions. SDA recipients aged below 20 at the cut-off point will transfer on to IB at the long-term rate in April 2002. Existing recipients can continue to receive the benefit for as long as they satisfy the conditions of entitlement for the benefit.
7. Figures for the latest period (2003–04) will increase in due course because of late notifications not yet recorded on the computer system.
8. Commencements include all benefit recipients and national insurance credits only cases.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the overall expenditure on incapacity benefits including severe disablement allowance and income support on the grounds of incapacity (a) on the grounds of mental and behavioural disorders and (b) in total were in each year since 1997. [195823]

Maria Eagle: Details of the primary diagnosis of income support recipients whose benefit is paid on the grounds of ill health are not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The available information is in the table.

Pension Payments

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions with what frequency pensioners who receive a pension through a weekly order book at post offices and switch to direct payment will receive their payments; and whether they will be paid in arrears. [198047]

Mr. Pond [holding answer 15 November 2004]: When a customer converts to Direct Payment from order book, payments into their chosen account are made to match the frequency and payday of their current order book payments. Payment of state pension is made in advance if paid weekly and in arrears if paid monthly or less frequently.

Pensioners

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions at what age (a) men and (b) women become eligible to receive an old age pension in each of the European Union states. [197653]

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many UK pensioners in receipt of basic state pensions are resident overseas, in (a) Commonwealth countries, (b) in EU countries and (c) elsewhere; and if he will make a statement. [198169]

Malcolm Wicks: The total number of people receiving a UK state pension outside GB is 970,300, of whom: 534,200 reside in a country which is a member of the Commonwealth alone; 274,500 reside in a country which is an EU member state alone; 150,400 reside in countries outside both the EU and the Commonwealth; 8,100 reside in Cyprus and 3,100 reside in Malta, countries which are in both the EU and the Commonwealth.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of pensioners retire on incomes higher than the average weekly wage in the last period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [198172]

Malcolm Wicks: The information available is set out in the table.

Number of recently retired pensioner units with net income above mean and median gross weekly earnings in 2002–03

Notes:

1. Mean and median gross weekly earnings are based on the New Earnings Survey 2002 for employees in full-time work.

2. Recently retired pensioner units are those pensioners where the head is less than five years over state pension age, excluding pensioners reporting earnings.

3. Net income is income from all sources deducting income tax and council tax.

Source:

Pensioners' Incomes Series 2002–03, based upon data from the Family Resources Survey (FRS).

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what he estimates the cost would be of raising the basic state pension to £105.45 per week; what the annual cost is of the pension guarantee credit at the current rate; what the cost would be of the pension guarantee credit if the maximum basic state pension were raised to £105.45 per week; and if he will make a statement. [198207]

Malcolm Wicks: It is estimated that the cost of increasing the full rate of the basic state pension to the level of the guarantee credit in 2005–06 would be £13.5 billion (gross) and £7.3 billion (net). The current forecast for spending on pension credit in 2005–06 is £5.7 billion which, it is estimated, would reduce to £2.1 billion if the rate of the full basic state pension was increased to the level of the guarantee credit.

Notes:

1. Figures are for Great Britain and overseas in 2004–05 price terms, using the Gross Domestic Product deflator index, rounded to the nearest £100 million.

2. It is assumed that the full rate of basic state pension is increased to the level of the individual guarantee credit in 2005–06 and that both are increased in line with earnings. The married woman's (60 per cent.) rate of Category B basic state pension and rates of pension paid to people entitled to less than the full rate of basic state pension are increased by the same proportion.

3. Gross basic state pension costs are estimated by the Government Actuary's Department, are consistent with Budget 2004 assumptions and use 2002-based population projections. Basic state pension costs refer to the additional costs after allowing for consequential changes to national insurance fund benefits and non-income-vote benefits.

4. Costs net of income related benefits (savings credit, guarantee credit, housing benefit and council tax benefit) and income tax are calculated using the Department's policy simulation model for 2005–06. It is assumed that the savings credit is abolished.

5. Some people who are without full contribution records, or who qualify for premiums in pension credit (such as severe disability premium), may continue to receive guarantee credit. It should also be noted that pension credit is paid to those over 60, and men aged 60–64 are not be entitled to basic state pension.

6. Estimates for pension credit spending under current policies taken from published DWP forecasts.

Somalian Nationals

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what action he has taken to raise awareness among Somalian residents of training opportunities provided by his Department; [195312

(2) what steps he has taken to increase employment opportunities for resident Somalian nationals. [195313]

(3) if he will meet representatives of Somalian nationals to discuss integration into the UK employment market. [195315]

Jane Kennedy: We are committed to providing a fair and equal service to all our customers, irrespective of their race or cultural background. At a local level, we consult widely with communities to raise awareness of the opportunities available, and to identify the most appropriate provision. Somali nationals resident in the UK have access to the full range of Jobcentre Plus services.

People with basic skills needs, including English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL), can, at their personal adviser's discretion, have early entry to training and employment programmes to support them into employment. These include the New Deal, which has already helped more than 111,000 ethnic minority people into work; as well as Work Based Learning for Adults, which offers people a range of occupational skills and gives them the opportunity of working towards a recognised qualification that will increase their chances of finding work.

We also have a range of initiatives specifically aimed at increasing employment among ethnic minority groups. These include setting stretching job entry targets for areas with high ethnic minority populations; Ethnic Minority Outreach, which operates in similar areas and aims to help ethnic minority people with little or no contact with Jobcentre Plus to engage with our services and with the wider labour market; and the Ethnic Minority Flexible Fund, which provides funding for Jobcentre Plus at a local level to initiate innovative measures to help more ethnic minority people find work.

I would be happy to arrange, in the first instance, a meeting between my officials and representatives of Somalian nationals to discuss their employment needs.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many senior citizens in Bury, North were in receipt of the winter fuel allowance in each of the last seven years. [198321]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of senior citizens in Bury, North constituency who have received a winter fuel payment in each year since 1999–2000 is in the table. Information relating to the 1997–98 and 1998–99 winters is not available.

	Payments made
1999–2000	15,295
2000–01	17,180
2001–02	17,385

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Union

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many pages of the acquis communautaire are in operation in the United Kingdom. [197796]

Mr. MacShane: The acquis communautaire is not a document. The term, translated as 'Community Patrimony', stands for the wide-ranging principles, practices, policies, obligations, objectives and laws that have been agreed or have developed in the European Union. These include, most noticeably, the Treaties in their entirety, as well as all existing EU legislation and Court of Justice judgements.

In principle, all of the acquis communautaire applies to the UK (indeed to all EU Member States) with the exception of opt-outs and legislation yet to be implemented.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are taking to increase awareness among UK citizens of the work of the European Union. [197762]

Mr. MacShane: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is leading a programme of activities to raise awareness of the EU. We are producing and distributing a range of materials to communicate the facts about the EU, including the Guide to the European Union, which was launched on 1 November.

Additionally, I am leading a programme of ministerial visits around the country to discuss European issues with the public. These include business seminars, cultural events, radio-phone-ins and public debates. We are also developing our e-communications and have a dedicated EU website. I also provide interviews and articles for a wide range of publications.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what research has been undertaken to monitor the treatment of asylum seekers deported from Britain; and what proportion of failed asylum seekers suffered imprisonment, torture or death within 12 months of their deportation from the UK in the last period for which figures are available. [193468]

Mr. Browne: I have been asked to reply.

Each asylum claim is considered on its own merits taking account of relevant country information, caselaw and factors specific to the individual claim. Where a decision has been taken that an individual would not be at risk if returned to their country and that decision has been upheld by the independent appellate authorities we consider that it is safe for that individual to be removed.

We do not consider it necessary to research the treatment of failed asylum seekers who have been removed in accordance with the proper procedures. However, any reliable information about the treatment of returned asylum seekers in a particular country will be referred to in the appropriate country information materials produced by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and will therefore form part of the individual assessment of asylum claims made by nationals of that country.

Belarus

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the primary (a) import and (b) export goods and services are between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Belarus. [196158]

Mr. Alexander: The latest figures are found in the following table, which show the top 10 commodities imported from and exported to Belarus in pounds sterling in 2003 and in the first eight months of 2004. The figures for trade in services between the UK and Belarus could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Chairman Arafat

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the Palestinian authorities regarding the condition of Chairman Arafat. [197821]

Mr. Rammell: During President Arafat's illness officials remained in close touch with members of the Palestinian Authority in Jerusalem and Paris. President Arafat died in the early hours of Thursday 11 November. My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary issued statements on the 11th following President Arafat's death.

Palestinian basic law stipulates that presidential elections should be held within 60 days. It is for the Palestinian people to elect any future president. The UK Government will continue to support the Palestinian people and the transitional Palestinian leadership.

China

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Chinese Government on the subject of the arrest of church leaders in Xinjiang Autonomous Region on 12 July. [198070]

Mr. Rammell: Foreign and Commonwealth Office Officials raised the mass arrests of religious practitioners in Xinjiang Autonomous Region with Deputy Director General of the State Administration for Religious Affairs, Wang Zuo'an during the latter's visit to the UK in September.

We are deeply concerned about religious freedom in China. We use the biannual UK/China Human Rights Dialogue to raise our concerns about these and other human rights issues with the Chinese Government. At the last round, held in May, we noted our concern that the prohibition of some religious groups and the legal restrictions placed upon members of others were tantamount to a denial of their members' freedom of religious belief.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Chinese authorities on the situation of Pastor Gong Shengliang of the South China Church and Mr. Zhang Yinan. [198071]

Mr. Rammell: We are aware of the cases of both Pastor Gong Shengliang and Zhang Yinan.

UK officials raised our concerns about Pastor Gong with the Chinese Government in May 2004. We also supported an EU demarche on his, and other cases, on 17 June.

We are deeply concerned about religious freedom in China, including the treatment of Christians, and monitor the situation closely. We raise religious freedom, the issue of torture and other human rights issues regularly with the Chinese Government, including during our biannual UK/China Human Rights Dialogue. We are also funding projects in China, which aim to reduce the incidence of torture.

Colombia

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much military aid has been given to Colombia since 1994. [198081]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 15 November 2004]: In financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05 the cost of military assistance provided by the UK to the Colombian armed forces was around £120,000 per year. This assistance focused primarily on Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) and provision of training courses to members of the Colombian armed forces both in Colombia and in the UK. It aims to reduce the number of deaths, both civilian and military, from explosive devices, and at introducing Colombian military personnel to British defence concepts in key areas such as Rules of Engagement and democratic and accountable control of the armed forces. We have also trained elements of the Colombian Authorities engaged in Counter-Narcotics work.

We anticipate a similar programme in the financial year 2005–06.

The information for previous years is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Croatia

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Croatia is expected to start accession negotiations with the European Union. [197763]

Mr. MacShane: The European Council of 17–18 June 2004 decided that Croatia is a candidate country for membership and that the accession process should be launched. It also emphasised that Croatia needs to maintain full co-operation with the International Criminal Tribunal on Yugoslavia (ICTY) and take all necessary steps to ensure that the remaining indictee, Ante Gotovina, is located and transferred to the Hague. This Government strongly supports Croatia's EU candidacy but Croatia must continue to comply with its ICTY obligations.

Cyprus

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring of (a) imports and (b) immigration to the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus is being carried out following the EU decision to treat the Green Line as not being a border of the EU for importation and immigration purposes. [197586]

Mr. MacShane: The entire island of Cyprus acceded to the EU in May this year. Pending a settlement to the current division of the island, the application of the acquis communautaire has been suspended in the north. This means that the line between the areas in which the Government of the Republic of Cyprus exercises effective control and the areas where it does not is not an external border of the EU. A special regulation (8208/04) has been passed setting out rules concerning the crossing of goods, services and persons to ensure an equivalent standard of protection while facilitating intra island trade and other links. A copy of the Green Line Regulation is available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff (Upper Age Limits)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which it is responsible (i) have a set retirement age which applies to all or most personnel and (ii) have a maximum age beyond which applications for employment will not be considered; and what the age is in each case. [186085]

Mr. Alexander [pursuant to his reply, 11 October 2004, Official Report, c. 31W]: There was an error in my answer of 11 October to the hon. Member. The correct answer should read as follows:

In the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, including its Wilton Park agency, all officers have a set retirement age of 60 years. However, if band A (clerical) officers wish to postpone their retirement they may do so up to 65 years and band B (junior management), band C (middle management) and band D (senior management) may do so up to 63 years.

Members of the Diplomatic Service are recruited up to 52 years to allow time for training and tours of duty at home and abroad before retirement. Members of the FCO Home Civil Service cadre are recruited up to 57 years to allow time for a normal tour of duty in a home job before retirement.

EU Constitution

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether equal status will be awarded to the (a) UK Parliament, (b) Scottish Parliament and (c) National Assembly for Wales in the consultation process for proposed legislation stipulated in the EU constitution. [197484]

Mr. MacShane: The Protocol on the Role of National Parliaments in the European Union and the Protocol on the Application of the Principles of Subsidiarity and Proportionality provide for the transmission of draft European legislative Acts to national Parliaments—in our case, the United Kingdom Parliament. Article 6 of the Protocol on subsidiarity and proportionality, which provides reasoned opinions to be submitted on compliance with the principle of subsidiarity, also states that > "it will be for each national Parliament or each chamber of a national Parliament to consult, where appropriate, regional parliaments with legislative powers".

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the areas of European Union legislation, together with their current relevant bases in constitutional treaties in force, for which the coming into force of the proposed constitutional treaty will change the requirement for unanimity. [197539]

Mr. MacShane: In the EU constitution signed by Heads of State and Government at the European Council on 18 June 2004, 15 Articles (or sub-paragraphs) would move from a unanimous voting mechanism to Qualified Majority Voting. These are: Articles I-37(3) (Article 202 TEC), I-54(4) (Article 269 TEC), III-136 (Article 42 TEC), III-141.1b (Article 27 TEC), III-187(3a) (Article 107 TEC), III-236 Article 71 TEC), III-270 (Article 31(1) TEU), III-273 (Article 31(2) TEU), III-275 (Article 30(1) TEU), III-276 (Article 30(2) TEU), III-280 (Article 151 TEC), III-359 (Article 225a TEC), III-364 (Article 229a TEC), III-381 (Article 245 TEC) and III-382 (Article 112 TEC). One of these Articles (III-136) has an emergency brake mechanism which allows a member state an effective veto. Article (III-270) has an emergency brake mechanism which can lead to enhanced co-operation, allowing a member state not to participate in the action concerned.

Under the EU constitution, the UK would retain its existing 'Protocol on the position of the United Kingdom and Ireland on policies in respect of border controls, asylum and immigration, and on judicial co-operation in civil matters' and therefore retains the right to take part in such measures on a case by case basis. Articles III-265 (Article 62 TEC), 266 (Article 63(1) and (2) and 64(2) TEC), and 267 (Article 63(3) and (4) TEC), covered by this protocol, now provide for decisions by QMV under the new treaty, but the treaty of Amsterdam provided anyway for a potential move to QMV from 1 May 2004. A council decision to endorse this move is currently being negotiated. Of the articles mentioned above, the protocol also covers Articles III-260 (under certain circumstances), and III-275(2a). The above references use the revised article numbering as it appears in the final text. I have made available a table summarising these changes in the Library of the House.

EU Enlargement

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of other European Union countries regarding the prospects of new member countries joining the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [197799]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I have regular discussions with EU partners about EU enlargement, most recently at the European Council on 4–5 November when the Commission presented its latest progress reports on the enlargement candidates. The Foreign Secretary discussed Turkey's bid for EU membership with the Belgian Foreign Minister, Karel de Gucht, on 9 November. I discussed Turkey's membership with fellow Europe Ministers in Brussels on 4 November and Croatia's bid with the Hungarian Foreign Minister, Ferenc Somogyi on 11 November. On these and other occasions, we reaffirmed the support of the UK Government for the membership prospects of all EU candidates, provided they fulfil the necessary criteria for membership.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further expansion of the EU he supports; and what the largest geographical extent of the EU is that the UK would support. [197565]

Mr. MacShane: There are four existing EU candidates—Bulgaria, Romania, Turkey and Croatia. In addition, the European Council agreed at Thessaloniki in June 2003 that the countries of the Western Balkans (Serbia and Montenegro, Bosnia and Herzegovina, former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Albania) are all potential future EU candidates. The UK strongly supports each country's EU aspirations provided they meet the appropriate criteria.

Article 49 of the Treaty on European Union states that any European state, which respects fundamental European values, may apply to become a member of the Union. No decision has yet been taken whether to offer the prospect of EU membership to other countries.

EU/UK Law

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) additional scrutiny safeguards are applied and (b) minimum negotiating positions are strengthened by the UK Government in respect of EU proposals where UK primary legislation relating to a proposal has been passed in the last three years. [197567]

Mr. MacShane: If the UK Parliament had recently agreed primary legislation in a particular area, this would be reflected in the Explanatory Memorandum which accompanies all draft European laws deposited with Parliament for scrutiny. The Government would of course take this into account during any relevant European negotiations.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list cases which the UK has referred to the European Court of Justice in relation to (a) legal base and (b) the principle of subsidiarity in each of the last five years; and what the outcome was in each case. [197635]

Mr. MacShane: In the last five years the UK has made two applications to the ECJ in relation to legal base and they are:

ECJ Case C-61/04 UK v. EP & Council: application for annulment of Regulation 2065/2003 on smoke flavourings used or intended for use in or on foods; and

ECJ Case C-217/04 UK v. EP & Council: application for annulment of Regulation 460/2004 establishing the European Network and Information Security Agency.

Both challenges are on the basis that Article 95 is not an appropriate legal base for the Community to establish centralised EU procedures and bodies. Article 95 allows for the harmonisation of national laws and provisions and requires qualified majority voting. HMG believes that such measures should only be adopted unanimously and that Article 308 (which requires unanimity) is the correct legal basis for such measures. We have not been given a hearing date for either case yet.

No applications have been made in relation to the principle of subsidiarity.

Freedom of Information Act 2000

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely costs to his Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if he will make a statement. [198763]

Mr. Straw: The cost of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA) will depend on the number and complexity of the requests received. The resources of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's (FCO) central unit dealing with FOI have been strengthened to cope with the anticipated demands of the FOIA and contingency arrangements are in place to augment the unit further should need arise. These additional costs are being met from within the existing FCO budget.

Iran

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the government of Iran about the sentence of death by stoning given to 13 year old Zhila Izadi; and if he will make a statement. [193061]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 25 October 2004]: We have made clear to the Iranian authorities, including by my noble Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean to the Iranian Ambassador in London, our deep concern at media reports that Ms Izadi has been sentenced to death by stoning. The Iranian authorities have indicated to us that Ms Izadi will not be executed, and that she, and her brother, have been transferred to a welfare organisation.

With our strong support, the use of the death penalty has been an important theme of the EU/Iran Human Rights Dialogue, including the most recent round in June.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the reasons for the continued detention of Amir Hamudi Hasan Al Sadi by coalition forces in Iraq; what the conditions of his detention are; what access (a) the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and (b) his family has to him; what views the ICRC has expressed on his detention; and whether a date has been set for his trial. [197537]

Mr. Rammell: I am not in a position to provide details on individuals held by the US. Mr. Al Sadi's case will be reviewed by the detainee review committee in the same way as all other cases. I am aware that the ICRC has visited Mr. Al Sadi. I cannot comment on ICRC observations, since the ICRC reports confidentially to the detaining authority, in this case the US.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what decisions have been made as to which regiments will be sent to Iraq when the Black Watch forces return to the UK in December. [197819]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans to replace the one Black Watch Battlegroup when it returns to the United Kingdom in December.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his Answer of 11 October 2004, Official Report, columns 755–6W, on Iraq, whom the British officials, told by Mr. Turki about his concerns in September 2003, informed about his representations; if he will list the British officials concerned; and whether Mr. Turki mentioned specific detention facilities. [194494]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 28 October 2004]: Mr. Turki raised some general concerns in Baghdad in a meeting with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's Special Envoy on Human Rights to Iraq, my right hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd) and a British official, in September 2003. On her return to the UK, Ms Clwyd reported these concerns to the Prime Minister, in a meeting on 15 October 2003. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials followed up these concerns with the US. In the afore mentioned meeting, Mr. Turki said that a number of individual complaints of poor conditions had been raised with him, but he did not go into detail about specific complaints or facilities.

Ivory Coast

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the government of France on bringing about (a) an immediate cease-fire in and (b) an early withdrawal of French troops from the Ivory Coast. [198317]

Mr. Mullin: The International Community, including France and the United Kingdom, has urged all sides in the Ivorian conflict to respect the cease-fire of May 2003. We will continue to do so.

The French peacekeepers in Côte d'Ivoire operate under a UN mandate. Their presence is a result of an agreement between the French and Ivorian governments. We will review the position of all foreign troops in Côte d'Ivoire with France and other members of the UN Security Council once the security and political situation in Côte d'Ivoire has clarified.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring he is undertaking of the situation in the Ivory Coast, with particular reference to (a) civilian casualties and (b) the role of French troops. [198318]

Mr. Mullin: We have continually monitored the situation in Côte d'Ivoire, including the role of French troops, through our Embassy, the UN, the media and humanitarian organisations on the ground such as Human Rights Watch and the International Committee for the Red Cross. However, this coverage is now reduced following the departure of our British diplomatic staff on 13 November.

Kidnapping (Britons)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens have been kidnapped in foreign countries in the past five years. [198078]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 15 November 2004]: According to our records, 74 British nationals have been reported kidnapped overseas in the last five years. However, not all kidnaps are notified to us. Some incidents are over very quickly and without any HMG involvement.

North Korea

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had regarding North Korea's nuclear weapons programme; and what research he has commissioned concerning the possible threats that North Korea's nuclear weapons programme poses to international security. [197808]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and other Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers have discussions with a wide range of interlocutors on counter-proliferation including the Democratic People's Republic of Korea's (DPRK) nuclear aspirations. Most recently my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (Mr. Rammell) visited DPRK from 11–14 September, where the issue of DPRK's nuclear aspirations was an important element of his discussions. A statement about this visit was made to the House on 16 September 2004, Official Report, columns 186–88WS.

Information on the DPRK nuclear weapons programme is also available to FCO officials from a number of other sources both within and outside Government. It is evaluated continually by them and by experts in other Departments to determine, among other things, the level of threat posed to the UK and internationally. The Foreign Secretary has not asked for other specific research on the DPRK nuclear weapons threat to be undertaken.

Nuclear Disarmament

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals to strengthen nuclear non-proliferation were put by the United Kingdom to the most recent session of the United Nations General Assembly's (UNGA) Committee on Disarmament; which proposals on non-proliferation put forward by other states the UK (a) supported and (b) abstained on; if he will list the resolutions debated during this session of the Committee; what the reasons were for the way the United Kingdom voted in each case; and if he will make a statement. [197616]

Mr. MacShane: At the most recent session of the UN General Assembly First Committee on Disarmament (4 October—5 November) the United Kingdom co-sponsored a number of resolutions on non-proliferation. These included: L31 measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction, L49 prevention of the illicit transfer and unauthorised access to and use of man-portable air defence systems, and L50 Hague Code of Conduct against ballistic missiles.

The UK also joined consensus on L5 national legislation on the transfer of arms, military equipment, dual use goods and technology, and supported L37 risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East.

A full list of all 57 resolutions tabled at this year's First Committee with the United Kingdom's voting record and copies of the explanations of vote offered by the United Kingdom to the Committee will shortly be published on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at www.fco.gov.uk/ukdis.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to promote the peace process in Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement. [197599]

Mr. Alexander: We welcome the progress that has been made in the peace process since the ceasefire came into effect in February 2002. We are however concerned that there have been no direct peace talks between the Government of Sri Lanka and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam since April 2003. We are working closely with international partners to encourage all parties to return to the negotiating table. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, explained our concern that peace negotiations need to be resumed quickly in meetings with the Sri Lankan President in June, and the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister in July. We are supporting small-scale peacebuilding activities in Sri Lanka with funding from the Global Conflict Prevention Pool and the Department for International Development. The details of a final peace settlement in Sri Lanka will, of course, be for the Sri Lankans to decide. We are keen that any settlement should be one that takes account of the legitimate demands of all communities within a democratic and stable Sri Lanka.

Subsidiarity

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what point in the EU decision-making process it is the policy of the UK to refer disputes over subsidiarity to the European Court of Justice. [197564]

Mr. MacShane: The Government takes a view on subsidiarity in respect of all draft European laws and communicates this view to the UK Parliament through an Explanatory Memorandum. If the Government felt that a particular draft law breached the subsidiarity principle then it would seek to address this during negotiations and if necessary oppose adoption of the measure. In the event that a measure was adopted which we felt constituted a breach of the subsidiarity principle then, in line with other challenges on procedural issues, we would consider referring a case to the European Court of Justice at that point.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the regime in Khartoum on the forced movement of internally displaced people in the camps in Darfur; and what discussions he has had with the UN on this. [198075]

Mr. Mullin: We are gravely concerned by the forced relocations of people in camps in Darfur. This appears to be a breach of international humanitarian law, as well as the established mechanisms on relocations. We have repeatedly made clear to the Government of Sudan that all returns must be voluntary and appropriate and carried out with full and prior consultation with the international community, as agreed in the Memorandum of Understanding between the Government of Sudan and the International Organisation for Migration.

During our respective visits to Sudan, both my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I met the UN Special Representative to Sudan, Jan Pronk. We discussed the need for a co-ordinated international response on the protection of civilians, including displaced persons, in Darfur.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Sudan Liberation Army. [198076]

Mr. Mullin: I met the leadership of the Sudan Liberation Movement/Army when they visited London on 13 October. I pressed them on the need to abide by the ceasefire, to sign the Humanitarian Protocol, and to engage fully on negotiating a Security Protocol. We welcome the signing of both Protocols in Abuja on 9 November.

Trafficking/Illegal Weapons Export

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many countries have taken up the UK's offer of help in meeting the 28 October deadline for making a report to the UN on (a) trafficking prevention and export controls of illicit weapons trade and (b) how dangerous weapons-related materials are secured; and if he will make a statement. [198058]

Mr. MacShane: The UK was approached by a number of states seeking advice on the structure and scope of national reports under United Nations Security Council Resolution 1540. In response to these approaches, the UK circulated widely its own draft report on 13 August in order to provide a possible model for others to follow. The UK formally submitted its national report to the 1540 Committee on 29 September, and my right honourable Friend the Foreign Secretary made a written statement on 11 October Official Report, column 3WS.

We remain fully committed to the work of the 1540 Committee in ensuring global implementation of this resolution, including—where appropriate—through providing assistance or advice to others.

Turkey

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 8 November 2004, Official Report, column 523W, on Turkey (Penal Code), whether the introductory paper to the new Turkish penal codes refers to the withdrawal of Turkish troops from Cyprus and the Armenian Genocide in its explanatory notes on Article 305; and if he will make a statement. [198617]

Mr. MacShane: Article 305 concerns Turkish citizens acting against national interests in return for material benefits from a foreign individual or organisation. The wording of this article only refers to such national interests as independence, territorial integrity and national security. There is no mention of Cyprus or the Armenian genocide.

The explanatory note to this Article, designed as guidance to the judiciary, remains unchanged from the guidance drafted under the previous government. It states that in this context (of receiving material benefits from a foreign individual or organisation) "a citizen who demands the withdrawal of troops from Cyprus, or declares that the Armenian genocide took place during the First World War, can be pursued by virtue of this article."

This explanatory note, however, does not have the same legal status as the Penal Code and is not legally binding.

The Commission has made it clear to Turkey that they expect the language not to be taken into consideration when interpreting Article 305. The Commission, with our support, will monitor implementation of the law closely to ensure Turkey meets its international legal obligations, including those concerning freedom of expression under the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights.

Ukraine

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken to monitor the presidential election in Ukraine. [197476]

Mr. MacShane: The United Kingdom made the largest contribution to the OSCE's Election Observer Mission to the first round of Ukraine's presidential election on 31 October. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office funded 60 short-term observers and five long-term observers together with the OSCE's Deputy Head of Mission. We shall repeat this for the second round scheduled for 21 November.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Regional Referendum

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many cases of electoral fraud are being investigated arising from the North East Regional Assembly referendum. [198374]

Mr. Raynsford: The Chief Counting Officer is not aware of any cases of electoral fraud that are being investigated arising from the North East Regional Assembly referendum.

Buildings (TV Reception)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what remedies are available to residents when building developments interfere with the quality of television reception. [198690]

Keith Hill: There are essentially two types of interference: electromagnetic interference, usually caused by a radio transmitter or other electrical equipment; and physical interference, due to some obstruction or reflection of the signal by a building or other large object, such as a crane.

While the wireless telegraphy legislation is in place to avoid creating undue radio interference with other users (including domestic television sets), the second type of interference—physical interference—cannot be dealt with under radio legislation.

There are, of course, a number of electronic ways to boost a weakened television signal, which is the result of interference from another building, many of which are inexpensive and widely available.

In addition, digital television signals are generally more robust than analogue in terms of signal strength and are becoming accessible in an increasing number of areas. Thus, as viewers change to digital television, such problems as interference caused by reflections from structures can be expected to diminish over time.

Circular 1/94

Mr. Horam: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to publish a revised Circular 1/94. [198464]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to publish a revised draft of Circular 1/94 (Gypsy Sites and Planning) for consultation before the end of the year.

Community Housing Task Force

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will take steps to ensure that the private financial and consultancy sectors involved in the operations of the Community Housing Task Force contribute financially to its work. [197783]

Keith Hill: There are no private financial and consultancy sectors involved in the operations of the Community Housing Task Force (CHTF).

Compulsory purchase

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister under what circumstances a house can be compulsorily purchased; and whether compensation is paid. [198861]

Keith Hill: Many enactments provide powers for the compulsory acquisition of land, including houses. These are usually expressed in terms appropriate to the functions of the particular acquiring authority concerned rather than the existing use of the land being acquired. The principle underlying the exercise of all such compulsory purchase powers is that there must be a compelling case in the public interest.

The Land Compensation Act 1961 establishes that compensation is payable where an interest in land is compulsorily acquired. The principle underlying the level of compensation payable is that persons with an interest in the land should be left no worse off and no better off in monetary terms after the acquisition than before. The amount claimable will depend on the circumstances of the individual case.

Consultancy Projects

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many consultancy firms or companies have been retained by the Department since June 2001; what the projects are for which each has been retained; and what the total is of the fees paid or incurred in each case. [193430]

Phil Hope: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Consultants

Mr. Maples: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the contracts awarded by his Department to consultants in each of the last five years, stating in each case (a) the name of the consulting company, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the purpose for which the contract was awarded; and if he will make a statement. [191728]

Phil Hope: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Contaminated Land

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the Secretaries of State for (a) Health and (b) Environment, Food and Rural Affairs about the development of contaminated land. [198607]

Keith Hill: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Health, the right hon. Member for Hamilton, North and Bellshill (Dr. Reid) and the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Margaret Beckett) were consulted by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on the preparation of "Planning Policy Statement 23: Planning and Pollution Control". This incorporates an Annex on the development of land affected by contamination. It was published on 3 November 2004.

Copyrighted Material

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has issued to local authorities about the reproduction of local authority-owned copyrighted material by political parties; and if he will make a statement. [198022]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not issued guidance to local authorities about the reproduction of local authority-owned copyrighted material by political parties.

Decent Homes Standard

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the independent companies appointed to conduct consultations into achieving the Government's Decent Homes Standard; and how much they are being paid. [198341]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not employed any independent companies to conduct consultations into achieving the Decent Homes Standard.

It is for individual local authorities to determine their need for consultations conducted by independent companies, and how much they are prepared to pay them.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to achieve compliance with the Decent Homes Standard. [198342]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has increased spending on social housing, through a mix of public and private money. Since 1997 spending by local authorities has increased by 13 per cent. in real terms amounting to £13 billion. On top of this we have made around £4 billion available for Arms Length Management Organisations and £2.6 billion for Private Finance Initiative (PFI), with £5.3 billion levered in through stock transfer. Local authorities should have Options Appraisals, which select their route to delivery, signed off by Government Offices by July 2005.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197289]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002. In the financial year 2002–03 the cost of creative work was covered by a commission of 8.5 per cent. on the total media spend. This equates to £284,750 spent through the agency Euro RSCG. The total media spend came to £3.35 million spent through the media agency CARAT Communications.

In 2003–04 the cost of creative work was covered by a commission of 7.5 per cent. on the total media spend. This equates to £307,500 spent through the agency Euro RSCG. The total media spend was £4.1 million through the media agency CARAT Communications.

In 2004–05 the estimated cost of creative work on fire safety advertising will be 8.5 per cent. on an estimated media spend of £2.9 million. This equates to £246,500 spent through Euro RSCG. The cost of creative work on the elected regional assembly advertising campaign was £465,000 spent through Robson Brown. The total estimated media spend for 2004–05 is £4.4 million spent through CARAT communications.

Costs for administration are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

East of England Assembly

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost has been of (a) setting up and (b) running the East of England assembly since its inception. [197872]

Mr. Raynsford: Between April 2001 and March 2004 the East of England regional assembly was awarded a Government grant of £2,974,000.

Fire Authorities

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate his Department has made of projected cost savings in each fire authority resulting from integrated risk management plans. [197690]

Mr. Raynsford: Under Integrated Risk Management Planning (IRMP) it is up to each Fire and Rescue

Authority (FRA) to assess the risks faced by its communities and to consider how best to use resources to meet its area's needs. Savings in some areas may allow increased provision in others where there is greater scope for saving lives. Fire and rescue authorities are also expected to pursue best value for local council taxpayers.

Fire Service

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to remove rescue tenders from the fire and rescue stations in (a) Retford and (b) Newark. [197422]

Mr. Raynsford: None. The deployment of rescue tenders in Retford and Newark is a matter for the local fire authority.

Each fire and rescue authority (FRA) is requested to develop its own Integrated Risk Management Plan (IRMP) and action plan.

IRMPs provide the strategic overview that is used by fire authorities to determine immediate and future policy decisions.

Any proposals to change its IRMP should form part of the consultation on their action plan which all fire and rescue authorities are required to undertake.

Home Ownership

Mr. Cash: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on large scale voluntary transfer of housing in Staffordshire. [198467]

Keith Hill: Stafford borough council were given a place on the 2004 transfer programme. They are proposing a whole stock transfer, a total of 6,091 properties, to a new Registered Social Landlords (RSL), Stafford and Rural Homes. The council are currently drafting their offer document. The stage one notice informing tenants of the transfer proposal and likely consequences is set to go out in January 2005, with the stage 2 letter following in February or March. A ballot is scheduled to start in March 2005, although no date has been set. If the council receives a yes vote they will have until March 2006 to complete the transfer.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authorities are planning to ballot their tenants on possible large scale voluntary housing transfer. [198468]

Keith Hill: Seventeen local authorities on the 2003 and 2004 transfer programme are currently planning to ballot their tenants.

Homelessness

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the level of priority homelessness was in (a) England and (b) Greater London in each year since 1993. [190615]

Phil Hope: Estimates of the number of homeless households accepted by local authorities in England and London as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need under homelessness legislation in each year since 1993, is in the table.

	England	London
1993	127,630	31,570
1994	118,490	28,690
1995	117,490	26,690
1996	113,590	25,730
1997	102,000	24,370
1998	104,630	26,310
1999	105,370	28,380
2000	111,340	28,230
2001	118,610	31,370
2002	125,330	30,320
2003	137,440	32,330

ODPM P1E homelessness returns (quarterly)

After being accepted as homeless, a household will be placed in some form of accommodation. They may be placed in temporary accommodation, until a settled solution becomes available, or they may be given a settled solution straight away depending on the accommodation available to the local authority. Alternatively, if possible, the household may remain in their current accommodation (homeless at home). In addition to estimates of statutory homeless households, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister publishes annual estimates of the number of people sleeping rough.

The priority need groups include households with dependent children or a pregnant woman and people who are vulnerable in some way, e.g. because of mental illness or physical disability. An Order made under the 1996 Act, brought into force in July 2002, extended the priority need categories to include, additionally: applicants aged 16 or 17; applicants aged 18 to 20 who were previously in care; applicants vulnerable as a result of time spent in care, in custody, or in HM Forces, and applicants vulnerable as a result of having to flee their home because of violence. This widening of priority need has contributed to recent increases but means more vulnerable people are receiving help when they need it.

Low-cost Housing (Islington)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many shared ownership properties were sold in Islington in each year since 1997; and how many of those properties were purchased by a person (a) already in social housing in that area, (b) on the single housing register in that area and (c) a key worker. [198618]

Keith Hill: Estimates of annual shared ownership sales in Islington from 1997–98 to 2003–04 are in the table.

	Total shared ownership sales in Islington	Shared ownership sales to people who were previously social tenants in Islington	Shared ownership sales to purchasers who were registered on a local authority waiting list/common housing register
1997–98	28	10	16
1998–99	67	6	31
1999–2000	48	8	36
2000–01	35	7	23

	Total shared ownership sales in Islington	Shared ownership sales to people who were previously social tenants in Islington	Shared ownership sales to purchasers who were registered on a local authority waiting list/common housing register
2001–02	42	16	25
2002–03	137	22	68
2003–04	82	13	40

Note:

The occupation of purchasers was not collected as part of CORE Sales during the period 1997–98 to 2003–04. Consequently it is not possible to provide figures on the number of key workers that bought shared ownership properties in Islington during this period.

Housing Corporation: CORE Sales

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will break down the low cost homeownership units planned for Islington in the Housing Corporation's 2004–06 Approved Development Programme by (a) conventional shared ownership, (b) Do-It-Yourself shared ownership and (c) Homebuy; [198619]

(2) if he will break down the low cost homeownership units planned for Islington in the Housing Corporation's 2004–06 Approved Development Programme by (a) one-bed, (b) two-bed, (c) three-bed and (d) four-bed or more units. [198620]

Keith Hill: The Housing Corporation have so far allocated resources to fund a total of 299 shared ownership dwellings and 342 Homebuy dwellings in Islington over the years 2004–06. In 1999, Homebuy was introduced into the Housing Corporation Approved Development Programme to replace the Do-It-Yourself shared ownership scheme.

The following table shows the split of low cost homeownership schemes by one, two, three and four or more bedrooms. The figure for Homebuy Market Purchase cannot be broken down until the individual properties are purchased.

Low cost homeownership in Islington

	Dwellings	One bed	Two bed	Three bed	Four bed
Homebuy Market Purchase (for North London, including Islington)	342	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
Conventional shared ownership—keyworker	260	138	114	8	0
Conventional shared ownership—other	39	7	32	0	0
Total	641	145	146	8	0

Mobile Phone Masts

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his planning policy for mobile phone masts. [198644]

Keith Hill: Current planning guidance on telecommunications is set out in the revised Planning Policy Guidance Note 8: Telecommunications. The general policy is to facilitate the growth of telecommunications systems while protecting the environment.

I refer the hon. Member to the debate given by my hon. Friend the Member for Corby (Phil Hope) on 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 739.

North West Development Agency

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new members of the North West Development Agency are (a) women and (b) black or Asian. [198024]

Mr. Raynsford: The North West Development Agency staff recruitment during the period 1 May 2004 to 31 October 2004 included:

(a) 20 women

(b) three black or Asian women (included in the figure at (a)) and no black or Asian men were recruited.

Overcrowded Housing (Children)

Jon Trickett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the number of children living in overcrowded housing in the UK. [198755]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister estimates on the basis of the "bedroom standard" used in the Survey of English Housing, that there were 770,000 children under 16 living in overcrowded households in England in 2003–04. That figure represented 8 per cent. of all children.

Police Authority Budgets

Phil Sawford: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to cap police authority budgets for 2005–06; and what criteria will be used. [197856]

Mr. Raynsford: No decisions on capping in 2005–06 and beyond have been made. But the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made it clear that we expect to see significantly lower council tax increases next year and will take even tougher capping action in 2005–06 if that proves necessary. This applies to all authorities, including police and fire authorities.

PPG3

Mr. Key: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will announce his conclusions on his Consultation Paper of July 2003 on a Proposed Change to Planning Policy Guidance Note 3, Housing. [198493]

Keith Hill: The intention is to publish the proposed changes to Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing" by the end of the year.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to publish a revised version of Planning Policy Guidance 3; and if he will make a statement. [198809]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister consulted on proposed updates to Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing" (PPG3) last year entitled 'Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability of Housing', and 'Supporting the Delivery of New Housing'. We are considering responses to the consultation exercises undertaken last year and intend to publish the updates to PPG3 by the end of this year. Any further revisions to PPG3 to take account of the recommendations of the Barker review of housing supply will be completed in 2005.

Private Finance Initiatives

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193984]

Phil Hope: The following table shows the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is engaged. The information sought on the cost of each arrangement is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

All private finance initiative arrangements in which the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is engaged in are procured by and through local authorities or its agencies and do not therefore appear on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's resource accounting.

Referendums

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) focus groups, (b) opinion polling and (c) local government sources he consulted before going ahead with a referendum in the North East on a directly elected regional assembly. [197903]

Mr. Raynsford: The decision to proceed with the North East referendum was made in July, when Orders were laid before Parliament. I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Worthing West on 7 September 2004, Official Report, column 1167W.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has made to address the differentiated application of the powers of honourable Members in the constituent parts of the United Kingdom since the decision was taken not to take forward further referendums for regional assemblies. [.98074]

Mr. Raynsford: None.

Regional Assembly Referendums

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) focus groups, (b) opinion polling and (c) local government sources he consulted before aborting the referenda in (i) the North West and (ii) Yorkshire and the Humber on directly elected regional assemblies. [197902]

Mr. Raynsford: The reasons for the Government's decision not to proceed with the referendums in the North West and Yorkshire and the Humber were set out in the statement my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister made on 8 November, Official Report, columns 587–606W.

Regional Fire Control Centres

Mr. Swire: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what redundancy package will be offered to control staff who lose their jobs as a result of the relocation of fire brigades to a regional control centre. [196490]

Mr. Raynsford: There is no plan to relocate fire brigades, only to rationalise control services at a regional level. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister recognises that this will have implications for existing fire control staff. However, the skills of these staff are generally transferable, so there will be a premium on ensuring both that people who are not going to find jobs under the new arrangements are helped to relocate and secure other jobs and that the service will continue to operate in the most effective way. If staff were to lose their jobs, the redundancy package would be a matter for negotiation between staff representatives and the employers. At a minimum such staff would be eligible for the statutory redundancy payment, as dictated by their length of service with the fire and rescue service.

Right to Buy

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average purchase price of a right to buy (a) flat and (b) house in England was in (i) 1997 and (ii) the last year for which figures are available. [197087]

Keith Hill: Average right-to-buy selling price figures (net of discount) for England are tabled as follows. The higher average price for flats in 2003–04 results from the sale of large numbers of relatively expensive flats in London, whereas the average house price is lowered by sales of cheaper houses in the north and midlands.

£000

	1997–98	2003–04
(a) Flat	17.7	57.3
(b) House	22.2	39.3
All dwellings	21.5	43.5

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average discount applied to a right to buy (a) flat and (b) house in England was in (i) 1997 and (ii) the last year for which figures are available. [197088]

Keith Hill: Average right-to-buy discount figures for England are tabled as follows:

£000

	1997–98	2003–04
(a) Flat	26.5	32.9
(b) House	20.5	22.5
All dwellings	21.4	25.0

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ambulance Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent on ambulance services in the Province in each of the last five years. [198141]

Angela Smith: The information in respect of the expenditure on ambulance services in the Province in each of the last five years is detailed in the table.

Expenditure on ambulance services from 1999–2000 to 2003–04

	£000
1999–2000	22,707
2000–01	23,978
2001–02	26,532
2002–03	28,763
2003–04	32,653

These figures represent the operating expenses of the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service HSS Trust for each of the last five years.

Area Plans

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his assessment is of progress with each of Northern Ireland's area plans; and what steps are being taken to ensure that the timetables for the plans are being adhered to. [197020]

Angela Smith: For some time, the Department of the Environment's (NI) Planning Service has had an ambitious programme to update the current Area Plan coverage. Good progress has been made to implement this challenging programme: in the past two years the Planning Service has published two adopted plans and two draft Plans, and it is scheduled to publish the Draft Belfast Metropolitan Plan 2015 later in November 2004. Collectively this covers 11 of the 26 council areas in Northern Ireland. Draft plans for a further 12 council areas are under preparation.

In recent months, however, the Planning Service has been forced to review the rapidly increasing, and unprecedented, workload pressures being faced by the Planning Service. After very careful consideration, it has been decided to concentrate as many resources as possible for a period of time on dealing with operational matters—i.e. planning applications. This reallocation of resources will have some short-term implications for the Area Plan programme. Despite this, every effort is being made to ensure that any delay is kept to a minimum.

ASSIs

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which proposed Area of Special Scientific Interest sites have yet to be declared in order to complete the ASSI programme. [197793]

Angela Smith: There are currently 212 Areas of Special Scientific Interest [ASSI] in Northern Ireland covering over 92,000 hectares.

An additional 15 sites are currently proposed, having been endorsed by the Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside, the Department of the Environment's statutory adviser in such matters.

They are:

Site name	Nearest town	County
Ballymacombs More	Bellaghy	Londonderry
Ballypalady	Templepatrick	Antrim
Banagher	Enniskillen	Fermanagh
Edenaclogh Wood	Kesh	Fermanagh
Errigal Glen	Garvagh	Londonderry
Feystown	Glenarm	Antrim
Lemnalary	Carnlough	Antrim
Lenaghan Wood	Derrygonnelly	Fermanagh
Lough Aleater	Garrison	Fermanagh
Lough Corry	Rosslea	Fermanagh
Lough Scolban	Beleek	Fermanagh
Lurgan River Wood	Belcoo	Fermanagh
Murrins	Omagh	Tyrone
Rehaghy Wood	Aughnacloy	Tyrone
Shimna River	Newcastle	Down

These sites will cover less than 1,000 hectares. Even when they have been declared, the ASSI programme will still be far from complete.

A forward programme for the declaration of ASSIs was published in March 2003. The programme is a framework for completing the main phase of ASSI declarations by 2015. It is predicted that an additional 40,000 hectares of land will be found to merit ASSI status.

Although the general location of many more potential ASSIs is known, their description and exact definition requires further survey, assessment and mapping.

At-risk Children

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety with (a) other Government departments and (b) NHS trusts in Northern Ireland to develop an information-sharing database between professional agencies on children who are at risk or in need; and what plans he has to bring forward legislation paralleling the provisions in the Children Bill [Lords] to facilitate information sharing. [197624]

Angela Smith: The creation of a database for sharing information on children who are at risk or in need will be considered by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety as a part of work on a forthcoming Strategy for Children and Young People in Need.

This strategy will be developed in conjunction with representatives of the HPSS and other stakeholders including other Departments. Dependent on the outcomes of the strategy, the Department will consider enacting legislation allowing it to take powers similar to those proposed in the Children Bill.

The Children Bill provisions for facilitating information sharing build on structures which do not exist in Northern Ireland. Obviously, any cross-cutting database will require close co-operation between the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and other Government Departments.

Chemotherapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on chemotherapy drugs in the Province in each of the last five years; and what the proposed spending is in the next 12 months. [198150]

Angela Smith: Approximately £6.3 million was spent on chemotherapy drugs in 2002–03 and approximately £7.9 million in 2003–04. Approximately £13.8 million of chemotherapy drugs demand is currently anticipated for 2004–05.

Further information is not available

Community Care

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many community care packages have been provided in the Province in each of the last 10 years. [198144]

Angela Smith: The number of community care packages in effect in each of the last 10 years is detailed in the following table.

	Number of community care packages in effect
2004	19,015
2003	19,003
2002	17,359
2001	16,587
2000	15,485
1999	14,756
1998	13,942
1997	13,491
1996	12,180
1995	9,385

Note:

Figures show a snapshot at 31 March for each year, and refer to care managed packages. Data for 2004 is provisional and may be subject to change.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what change in the number of community care packages required in the Province he expects in the next decade. [198145]

Angela Smith: On the basis of current trends, it is estimated that the need for community care packages would grow by approximately 5,000 to 24,000 over the next decade.

Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions have taken place with Belfast International Airport on the impact on its business of the proximity of asbestos storage and destruction at Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin. [196085]

Angela Smith: The Belfast International Airport was consulted in relation to the asbestos storage application and was content with the proposal.

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under what authority and regulatory provision, railway carriages containing blue asbestos were crushed and buried at Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin by Eastwood Environment Waste Company. [196086]

Angela Smith: Approval for the repositioning and burial of 18 railway carriages at Crosshill Quarry, was given to Eastwood Limited by the then waste disposal regulator, Antrim borough council. The council was the regulating authority under the Pollution Control and Local Government (Northern Ireland) Order 1978 for Waste Disposal Licences. Eastwood Limited held a Waste Disposal Licence for the deposit of controlled waste at Crosshill Quarry.

A Method Statement was prepared by the company and the carriages were relocated and encapsulated in clay to the satisfaction of the council and the Health and Safety Executive. Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) was consulted about the relocation proposals and was also content.

The Waste Management Licensing Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 came into operation on 19 December 2003 and the regulatory powers for waste licensing were transferred from the district councils to the EHS.

Under the transitional arrangements a Waste Disposal Licence is deemed to be a Waste Management Licence and this would apply to the licence for Crosshill Quarry.

The 18 carriages were repositioned within the Crosshill Quarry site immediately before EHS became the regulator under these provisions.

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what environmental impact assessment has been made of (a) the storage and (b) the destruction of asbestos at Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin in the last five years. [196087]

Angela Smith: (a) The consideration of the need for a formal environmental impact assessment is triggered by a planning application. In this case the storage application fell outside the regulations and no formal determination was necessary. Environmental issues were dealt with through the normal expert consultees who were content with the proposal. No destruction of asbestos has occurred on site.

(b) A Method Statement was prepared by Eastwood Limited for the repositioning of 18 railway carriages within their licensed facility at Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin. The carriages were relocated and encapsulated in clay to the satisfaction of the council and the Health and Safety Executive. This work was undertaken in the latter part of 2003. The Environment and Heritage Service is not aware of any destruction of asbestos having taken place at the Crosshill Quarry site.

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what tourism impact assessment has been made of the effect of the storage and destruction of asbestos at Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin on the local area. [196088]

Angela Smith: The tourism authority was not consulted on the matter. The expert consultees consulted on the asbestos storage planning application are satisfied that there are no environmental effects that cannot be satisfactorily mitigated.

District Councils

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) the total cost and (b) cost per elector of the 26 district councils in the provinces was in each of the last three years. [197668]

Angela Smith: The total cost, expressed in terms of net expenditure, and cost per elector for the last three years of each of the 26 district councils, is set out in the following table.

		2001-02
District council	Number of electors	Net expenditure £	Cost per elector £
Antrim	33,025	8,332,999	252.32
Ards	54,708	10,503,734	192.00
Armagh	39,567	9,244,560	233.64
Ballymena	44,466	9,605,185	216.01
Ballymoney	19,755	3,952,736	200.09

Domestic Rates

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how domestic rates in Northern Ireland are calculated; and what this revenue is used for. [190179]

Mr. Pearson: The rate bill for individual domestic properties is calculated by multiplying the property's Net Annual Value (NAV) by the overall domestic poundage, which encompasses two elements. These are the Regional Rate poundage, which is uniform across Northern Ireland, and the District Rate poundage, which is dependant upon the district council that the property is located in.

Regional Rate revenue is not allocated to specific areas of expenditure, but instead contributes to the overall amount of money available to the Secretary of State to allocate to regional public services in Northern Ireland. Regional Rate revenue accounts for around 6 per cent. of total planned spend on public services.

The level of District Domestic Rates is determined by each of the 26 district councils, with all revenue generated being used by the relevant council.

Education Initiatives

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he is taking to provide help to parents in (a) Greater Shankhill and (b) north Belfast to return to full-time education. [197100]

Mr. Gardiner: The Department for Employment and Learning has a number of measures in place to help parents in Greater Shankill and north Belfast to return to full-time education including:

the Spring vale Community Outreach Initiative, which aims to improve educational standards in these areas;

the Essential Skills for Living strategy, in which parents are included as a priority group;

a number of Peace II projects, specifically targeted at family learning, to improve levels of Essential Skills;

a marked expansion in higher education provision, with a significant growth in HE provision delivered in the further education sector, to widen access for mature students; and a wide range of support for students entering higher education, including allowances, bursaries, loans and grants and non repayable support grants for students in specific circumstances.

Additionally, Belfast Institute, East Antrim Institute and the Workers' Educational Association offer a wide range of family learning provision, including Essential Skills, in the north Belfast and Greater Shankill areas. Plans are also in place to establish a Family Literacy and Numeracy Innovation Fund to further promote family-based adult Essential Skills learning.

Family Health Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on family health services in the Province in the last year for which figures are available. [198142]

Angela Smith: The total spent on family health services in the 2003–04 financial year was £563,740,000.

Fertility Treatment

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients are awaiting (a) initial outpatient assessment and (b) treatment for sub-fertility in the Province. [198652]

Angela Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recent changes in waiting lists for those seeking sub-fertility treatment in the Province. [198653]

Angela Smith: The interim fertility service in Northern Ireland started in December 2001, at the Regional Fertility Centre, Royal Group of Hospitals. Access to publicly funded fertility services is regulated by eligibility criteria and these criteria have been in operation from this date. There are currently 201 patients waiting for treatment on the NHS waiting list. A patient referred to this waiting list in November 2004, could expect to wait between 18 and 24 months for treatment. The publicly funded waiting list continues to accept people for treatment in line with the referral date from their GP. There have been no significant recent changes to the NHS waiting list for fertility treatment.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to announce proposals for the further development of fertility services in the Province. [198656]

Angela Smith: To inform decisions on the longer-term provision of fertility services in Northern Ireland I issued the document "From People to Parents" for public consultation in October 2003. The consultation process has now closed and officials are preparing options for my consideration.

Any enhancement to fertility services will have to be considered within the resource limits set out in the draft Priorities and Budget document issued for consultation on 12 October 2004. Consultation on this draft Budget ends on 7 December and I hope to be in a position to announce my proposals for the future development of fertility services in Northern Ireland when the revised Budget is finalised.

Fire Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent on fire services in each of the last five years in the Province. [198143]

Angela Smith: The information in respect of expenditure on fire services in Northern Ireland in relation to each of the previous five years is detailed in the table.

	£000
1999–2000	49,616
2000–01	51,307
2001–02	52,275
2002–03	59,346
2003–04	60,673

From 2001–02 onwards the figures are derived from the relevant Resource Accounts, prepared on an accruals basis. Prior to this the figures are taken from the former cash-based Appropriation Accounts, and these are therefore not directly comparable.

Firearms (Retired Police)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to remove the requirement for retired prison officers to carry a firearms certificate and replace it with an authorisation card. [198294]

Mr. Pearson: It is a fundamental requirement of the firearms legislation that, save for a number of specified exemptions, all firearms must be held on firearm certificates. I have no plans to change that.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many retired police officers in Northern Ireland have been issued with a firearms authorisation card. [198295]

Mr. Pearson: There is no legislative provision for a firearms authorisation card. Retired police officers wishing to hold firearms must do so on the authority of a firearm certificate.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many retired police officers in Northern Ireland have been issued with a firearms certificate. [198296]

Mr. Pearson: The PSNI firearms licensing computer system is not programmed to provide this information in the format requested and it can only be provided manually at disproportionate cost.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reason (a) retired prison officers are required to carry a firearms certificate and (b) retired police officers carry an authorisation card. [198297]

Mr. Pearson: No distinction is made between a retired prison officer and a retired police officer in respect of the holding of firearms. Both are required to have a firearm certificate.

Fruit-growing Land

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the overall area of (a) apple orchards and (b) other fruit-growing land was in the Province (i) in 1974, (ii) in 1984, (iii) in 1994 and (iv) on the latest date for which figures are available. [198838]

Mr. Pearson: Information on the area of land devoted to commercial fruit growing in Northern Ireland is collected each year as part of the Agricultural and Horticultural Census conducted by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development.

The information requested is as follows.

		hectares
	Area of apple orchards	Area of other fruit growing land
1974	2,515	97
1984	2,064	91
1994	1,701	72
2003	1,545	57

2003 is the most recent year for which data is available.

GP Contract

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effects on morale of general practitioners in the Province of the implementation of the new General Medical Services contract. [198147]

Angela Smith: No assessment has been made of the effects on morale of general practitioners in Northern Ireland following the implementation of the new General Medical Services contract. It is, of course, part of the aims of the new contract to boost the morale of the profession and to make general practice a more attractive career option for qualifying doctors by, for example, offering GPs improved remuneration prospects, a better work/life balance through the ability to opt out of providing out-of-hours care, and, through the Quality and Outcomes Framework, financial rewards for meeting clinical and other specified quality standards. Implementation of the new contract is being supported in Northern Ireland by the investment of new monies in excess of £44 million over 3 years. The contract has, however, only been in operation a matter of months and it may take a longer period before the benefits it offers GPs are fully realised.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many departmental Green Ministers there have been since 1997. [197836]

Angela Smith: Since May 1997, there have been two Northern Ireland Office 'Green' Ministers.

Inquiry (Child Deaths)

Mr. John Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that the families of the children whose deaths are the subject of Mr. John O'Hara QC's independent inquiry have access to independent legal representation; and what the (a) terms of reference and (b) scope of the inquiry are. [198497]

Angela Smith: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I have given today to the hon. Member for Strangford (Mrs. Robinson).

Lucy Crawford

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether medical expertise for the inquiry into the death in April 2000 of Lucy Crawford will be sought from (a) outside Northern Ireland and (b) from doctors within the Province; [197850]

(2) whether the proceedings of the inquiry into the death in April 2000 of Lucy Crawford will be conducted in public; [198014]

(3) whether the inquiry into the death in April 2000 of Lucy Crawford will have the power to compel witnesses, with particular reference to doctors, to provide evidence; when he expects the inquiry will commence; and whether the actions of the (a) Sperrin Lakeland Trust and (b) Department of Health Social Services and Personal Safety in response to the death of Lucy Crawford will be investigated by the inquiry. [197848]

Angela Smith: Officials are currently finalising the detailed arrangements for the conduct of the inquiry with Mr. John O'Hara QC and I hope to make an announcement shortly. These arrangements will take account of Cabinet Office guidance on inquiries and a copy of the Terms of Reference will be placed in the House Library.

Mediboxes

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 239W, on GP prescribing, whether Mediboxes have been available in Northern Ireland through the NHS. [198146]

Angela Smith: Mediboxes have never been available on health service prescription.

MRSA

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of new drugs to combat MRSA. [197849]

Angela Smith: There are no new drugs licensed to combat MRSA. Licenses for use indicate a drug's range and spectrum not specific diseases or ailments. Clinicians assisted by Trust guidelines and aided by local laboratory appraisals of efficacy make assessments as to the effectiveness of particular licensed drugs.

Museums

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the publicly funded museums in Northern Ireland; how many visitors there were to each in the last year for which figures are available; and what the net cost of each facility was in 2003–04. [191629]

Angela Smith: Publicly funded Museums in Northern Ireland may receive funding from Northern Ireland Government Departments, District Councils, NIO, and the Ministry of Defence and, in some cases, a combination of sources. The following table lists museums in Northern Ireland which received public funding towards their operating costs in 2003–04, the most recent annual visitor numbers available, and the net cost of each in 2003–04.

Notes:

The museums listed are those museums that have received public funding towards their operating costs in the financial year 2003–04. Where it has proved impossible to obtain the relevant information to date this has been shown on the table as n/a (not available).

Neurosurgery

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what intensive rehabilitation facilities are available in the Province for patients following neurosurgery. [198098]

Angela Smith: Various levels of rehabilitation are provided for patients following neurosurgery, depending on their individual needs. These include initial in-patient rehabilitation until medically fit for discharge; specialist in-patient rehabilitation facilities; hospital out-patient services, and specialist community teams, which have links with voluntary sector organisations providing vocational rehabilitation.

A regional acquired brain injury rehabilitation unit, with 25 beds, is due to open at Musgrave Park Hospital in 2006.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on neurosurgery provision for children in the Province. [198152]

Angela Smith: All paediatric neurosurgery is carried out at the Royal Group of Hospitals. There are two neurosurgeons with an interest in paediatric surgery and the hospital runs four clinics per month. The current waiting time for an outpatient appointment is four weeks. Children requiring inpatient treatment are generally treated as urgent cases and therefore experience little or no waiting time.

Night Flights

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many breaches of the late night flight curfew at Belfast City Airport there have been in each of the past five years; and which airlines were involved in each case. [197314]

Angela Smith: The total number of delayed late night flights after 21.30 hours during each of the last five years, is as follows:—

	Number
1999	350
2000	334
2001	340
2002	520
2003	648

The current Planning Agreement is between the Department of the Environment and Belfast City Airport, not individual airlines. Consequently, my Department does not hold information on individual airlines delayed and late night flights.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what enforcement action has been taken against (a) airlines and (b) the operators of Belfast City Airport for breaches of the late-night flight curfew (i) in each of the last four years and (ii) to date in 2004; and if he will make a statement. [197315]

Angela Smith: No enforcement action has been taken in relation to flights which have been delayed after 21.30 hours. However, officials have been working with the airport operators to reduce the number of flight movements after 21.30, as part of an agreed Action Plan. The target is to achieve a 10 per cent. reduction in the total number of flights operating after 21.30, including a 90 per cent. reduction in flights after 23.00.

To date, during 2004, there is an overall 15 per cent. reduction in the number of flights operating after 21.30 during the extended hours period, when compared to 2003. During 2004, one late flight occurred after midnight.

This is a significant reduction, against the background that the total number of late flights (648) during 2003 represents less than 2 per cent. of the total air traffic movements.

Parades

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what the total policing cost of parades was from 1 April to 14 August; and what the figure was for the same period last year. [187889]

Mr. Pearson: Further to my earlier reply, I am now in a position to provide the information you requested. The policing cost for the period in question for 2004 was £5,552,544, compared with £5,217,215 for the previous year.

Rivers Agency

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the religious composition is of the technical staff in the Western Regional Office of the Rivers Agency. [198510]

Mr. Pearson: The confidentiality of monitoring information and the categories of statistical analyses, which are published, is governed by statutory requirements and a Code of Practice agreed with the trade unions. In addition, under fair employment legislation, NICS is treated as a single entity for the purposes of monitoring. Equality of opportunity and fair participation is assessed by examining the compositional profile of the NICS at occupational groups and grade levels. It is information at this level, not the composition of particular offices or locations, which is used to inform the development of policies, practices and procedures which promote equality of opportunity and fair participation across the NICS as a whole.

I am sorry that my response cannot be more forthcoming, but I hope you will appreciate that we have to have proper regard to statutory requirements and the Code of Practice agreed with Trade Unions.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many internal transfers have taken place in the Western Regional Area of the Rivers Agency involving (a) industrial staff and (b) technical staff in each year since 2000. [198511]

Mr. Pearson: The number of internal transfers in the Western Region of the Rivers Agency is as follows:

	Industrial staff	Professional and technical staff
2001	0	3
2002	4	1

Students

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students ordinarily resident in Northern Ireland are taking courses (a) at Northern Ireland universities and (b) at universities outside Northern Ireland. [198505]

Mr. Gardiner: (a) In 2002–03, 44,137 NI domiciled students were enrolled at the four locally established NI higher education institutions and 3,481 were enrolled at the Open University.

(b) In 2002–03, 15,260 NI domiciled students were enrolled at higher education institutions in Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland.

The Department for Employment and Learning does not hold information on students enrolled at higher education institutions outside the United Kingdom and Republic of Ireland.

The Department publishes annual statistical bulletins on higher education enrolments which are available to download from: http://www.delni.gov.uk/index.cfm/area/information/page/SRHEEnrolments

Sure Start

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that a multi-agency approach in service delivery is central to the proposed new Sure Start model. [198288]

Angela Smith: Sure Start promotes and adopts a partnership approach to providing co-ordinated services for families with young children. The programme is both designed and delivered at a local level through a network of local statutory agencies and community-based voluntary organisations working in the fields of health, early education and family/parenting support. Thus, in each local area, different programmes are set up according to the range of existing services and the particular needs of the community.

Tyrone County Hospital

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on acute services provision at Tyrone County Hospital. [198272]

Angela Smith: "Developing Better Services" and the Western Board's subsequent strategic context document "Planning for Change" detail how the Tyrone County Hospital will evolve into a local hospital, in parallel with the development of the new South West Hospital in Enniskillen. The implementation of "Developing Better Services" will provide a network of fully integrated services across Northern Ireland and the new local hospital in Omagh will play a key role in that network of services. It will continue to provide some 70 per cent. of the services that people require in hospital settings, including a local assessment and treatment unit, diagnostics including X-ray and CT scanning, a mobile coronary care service, renal dialysis, in-patient beds for rehabilitation and palliative care, and a wide range of out-patient and day case surgery services, all in modern, state of the art facilities.

During the transition to the new service model set out in "Developing Better Services", I will do everything I can to ensure that standards are maintained and that no services are removed from Tyrone County Hospital until appropriate alternative provision has been put in place.

Accident and Emergency Services

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional investments have been made in accident and emergency services in North Staffordshire since 1997. [198569]

Dr. Ladyman: During the period 1999–2001, the former North Staffordshire Hospital National Health Service Trust—now the University Hospital of North Staffordshire NHS Trust—received the following amounts from the capital modernisation fund for accident and emergency.

(£000)

Wave of scheme	Details of scheme	Cost
First wave	To upgrade and modernise the A and E department	700
Second wave	To improve responsiveness, efficiency and quality of A and E services	150

The Trust has also received the following capital payments from the Department's accident and emergency incentive scheme.

(£000)

Period of incentive scheme	Qualification for payment	Payment received
March 2004	At least 94 per cent. of all patients spending under four hours in A and E during March 2004	100
First quarter 2004–05	At least 95 per cent. of all patients spending under four hours in A and E during first quarter of 2004–05	100

Alzheimer's

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to make anti-dementia drugs freely available on the NHS for all Alzheimer's disease sufferers; and if he will make a statement. [196929]

Dr. Ladyman: In 2000, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) recommended to the national health service that the three drugs: donepezil, rivastigmine and galantamine should be made available in the NHS as one part of the management of some people with mild and moderate Alzheimer's disease. Not all people taking one of these drugs will benefit from them. For those who do not show improvement, or a slowing down of the disease in the first few months, it is unlikely that they would show any benefit later on.

NICE is currently reviewing the original appraisal and recommendations, including looking at whether a fourth drug, memantine, should also be made generally available.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people suffering from Alzheimer's disease under the age of 65. [197924]

Dr. Ladyman: The Alzheimer's Society estimate that around 750,000 people in the United Kingdom have dementia and more than half have Alzheimer's disease. They further estimate that around 18,500 people under the age of 65 have dementia.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to include early onset Alzheimer's disease in the forthcoming Green Paper on Adult Social Care. [197925]

Dr. Ladyman: Our vision for adult social care is for services that are tailored to individual circumstances, enabling adults of all ages, whatever their circumstances, to live more fulfilled and independent lives.

Barnet and Chase Farm NHS Trust

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the financial position of Barnet and Chase Farm NHS Trust. [197513]

Dr. Ladyman: The retained deficit reported by Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals National Health Service Trust in its annual accounts for the year ended March 2004 was £4,398,000.

The trust is currently forecasting that it will break even in 2004–05.

Barnet Hospital

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurses, (b) junior doctors, (c) registrars, (d) consultants and (e) managers were employed at Barnet hospital on (i) 1 May 1997 and (ii) the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [197516]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the table.

Department of Health medical and dental workforce census

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients from Barnet had (a) elective surgery, (b) emergency surgery and (c) out-patient appointments in (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [197518]

Dr. Ladyman: Information requested for elective surgery and emergency surgery is shown in the table. Information on out-patient appointments is not collected centrally. 2003–04 figures are not yet available. 2002–03 figures are shown instead.

Primary care trust (PCT) of residence: 5A9 Barnet PCT
All operations, count of finished admission episodes
Operative procedure (OPCS-4 AGO-X59)
National health service hospitals, England 1996–97 and 2002–03

Other	3,257	3,940

Finished admission episodes

A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year. All Operations count of Episodes

These figures represent a count of all FCE's where the procedure was mentioned in any of the 12 (4 prior to 2002–03) operation fields in a HES record. A record is only included once in each count, even if an operation is mentioned in more than one operation field of the record.

Charnwood and North West Leicestershire PCT

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding Charnwood and North West Leicestershire Primary Care Trust has received in each year since 2001. [197428]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the following table.

	Leicester health authority (HA)	Charnwood and North West Leicestershire primary care trust (PCT)
2000–01	570,686	n/a
2001–02	615,919	n/a
2002–03	682,748	n/a
2003–04	n/a	183,850
2004–05	n/a	200,628
2005–06	n/a	218,365

Note:

The Department has only made direct allocations to PCTs since 2003–04. Prior to this, allocations were made directly to HAs. Therefore allocations information from the relevant HA is also included.

Children's Hospices

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met interested groups in the Greater London area to discuss core funding for hospices for children; and if he will make a statement. [197717]

Dr. Ladyman: I have not met with any groups in Greater London to discuss funding for hospices. I did however meet with representatives of the Association of Children's Hospices and the Association for Children with Life Threatening Illnesses on 21 July 2004.

The principles governing sources of funding for children's hospice services are the same in Greater London as in any other part of the country. Primary care trusts (PCTs) may commission services according to their assessment of the needs of their child population and their priorities. It is for children's hospices to enter into a dialogue with their local PCT, or the lead commissioning PCT where a hospice serves a wide area, who may seek to place a child with them and so establish the level of demand for their services.

The disabled child module of the children's national service framework (published on 15 September) acknowledges the importance of palliative care services for children and recommends that high quality palliative care services should be available for all children and young people who need them.

Dentistry

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been allocated by his Department for the development of dentistry services provided by the national health service in England in the last 12 months. [195928]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In July, we announced that, over the period to 2010, an extra £368 million has been allocated to recruiting 1,000 more dentists, funding an extra 170 training places for undergraduates in dental schools and increasing the overall expenditure on primary care national health services by 19 per cent. from £1.33 billion in 2003–04 to £1.58 billion in 2005–06. In addition, for the current year, we have allocated a total of £59 million; comprising £35 million for grants to dentists to improve facilities to increase access to NHS dentistry, £15 million to primary care trusts (PCTs) for local access initiatives and £9 million for use by the NHS support team to target assistance to the 16 PCTs with some of the most pressing access problems.

Diagnostic Testing

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bed days related to diagnostic testing there were in the last year for which figures are available. [198241]

Mr. Hutton: Data on the number of bed days relating to diagnostic testing is not collected centrally.

Dorset Hospitals

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which departments in Dorset hospitals are unable to provide hospital staff to lift wheelchair-bound patients. [197996]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, Dorset and Somerset Strategic Health Authority advises that there are no departments in acute national health service trusts in Dorset that do not have staff available to lift an individual who uses a wheelchair.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what facilities are available in accident and emergency departments in Dorset hospitals to lift wheelchair-bound patients. [197997]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Requested information is not centrally collected. However, Dorset and Somerset Strategic Health Authority advises that all accident and emergency departments in Dorset have access to a full range of manual handling equipment to assist the moving and lifting of individual patients who use a wheelchair.

E111 Forms

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the number of British citizens in possession of E111 forms issued (a) before and (b) after August; and if he will make a statement. [195073]

Mr. Hutton: About 1.5 million new E111s have been issued since August 2004. Precise numbers of old E111s still held by the public are not known but annual issue rates have been between three and four million in each of the last five years.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of British citizens who required medical treatment while on holiday in the EU in each year from 1997, broken down by those (a) in possession and (b) not in possession of an E111 form; and if he will make a statement. [195074]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Esher and Walton (Mr. Taylor) on 1 September 2004, Official Report, columns 926–27W. United Kingdom residents not in possession of Form E111 when treatment abroad is needed may apply for one from abroad. Numbers of such applications are shown in the table.

	Number
1999–2000	5,447
2000–01	5,302
2001–02	5,675
2002–03	6,932
2003–04	7,137

Electronic Patient Records

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether IT contracts for the provision of electronic patient records in England and Wales will ensure integration with systems to be adopted in (a) Scotland, (b) Northern Ireland and (c) the EU under the e-Health initiative. [197569]

Mr. Hutton: The National Health Service Care Records Service (NHS CRS) is the core component of the National Programme for IT in England (NPfIT). Through the United Kingdom Information Management and Technology Forum, and the NHS information standards board, NPfIT officials work closely with officials in the Scottish Executive, the National Assembly for Wales, and the Northern Ireland Office to ensure common standards and interoperability of clinical information systems.

The NHS CRS is being designed and developed in accordance with international and European Union-wide standards which have been adopted by the UK e-Government interoperability framework. NPfIT also works with European and international standards bodies to ensure interoperability subject to strict security and confidentiality safeguards. However, it is not currently envisaged that non-UK health providers will have direct access to the NHS CRS.

Emergency Readmissions

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency re-admissions to NHS hospitals there were in each quarter since January 2003. [198481

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the following table.

	Quarter	Number re-admitted as an emergency within 28 days of discharge (patients of all ages)	Rate of people admitted as an emergency within 28 days of discharge (as a percentage of all discharges
2002–03	4	138,773	5.
2003–04	1	135,153	5.
	2	136,701	5.
	3	143,187	5.

Epsom Hospital

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been admitted to accident and emergency at Epsom Hospital in each of the past 12 months. [197806]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Figures are not available at individual hospital level.

Figures are collected quarterly and figures for accident and emergency attendances at Epsom and St. Helier University Hospitals National Health Service Trust are shown in the table.

	Quarter	First attendances	Follow-up attendances	Total attendances
2003-04	3	30,716	2,036	32,752
2003-04	4	29,778	2,255	32,033

2004-05	2	32,408	1,369	33,777

Fair Trade

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is his policy to ensure that hospitality within his Department is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [197061]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I can confirm that it is the Department's policy to pursue through our catering company the use of Fairtrade goods wherever possible.

Foot Operations

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received on the standardisation of the monitoring of foot operations carried out by orthopaedic surgeons and podiatric surgeons; [198615]

(2) what plans he has to standardise the monitoring of foot operations carried out by orthopaedic surgeons and podiatric surgeons. [198616]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Miss Melanie Johnson) on 20 October 2004, Official Report, column 790W.

General Practitioner Contracts

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether health checks, as proposed in the forthcoming Health White Paper, will be (a) enhanced and (b) additional services under the new general practitioner contract; and what payments he plans for the service. [197510]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government published "Choosing health, making healthy choices easier", its White Paper on public health, today. National health service patients already have the right to request a health check-up from their general practitioner if they have not been seen by their GP in the previous three years. People aged 75 or over can request a check-up if they have not been seen by their GP in the previous year.

General Practitioners

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners there are per head of population in England. [197609]

Mr. Hutton: There are 63.8 general practitioners, excluding GP retainers, GP Registrars and locums, per 100,000 weighted population in England.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average list size is of a general practitioner in England. [197610]

Mr. Hutton: The average general practitioner list size in England, as at 30 September 2003, was 1,845.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner surgeries have closed in (a) England, (b) each strategic health authority and (c) each primary care trust in each year since 1997. [196194]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not collected centrally.

In 2003, there were more than 8,800 general practitioner practices, some of which had one main surgery, while others may have one or more branch surgeries.

Between July 2000 and September 2004, 734 GP premises have been replaced and 1,737 premises refurbished. The Government have embarked on one of the most sustained programmes of primary care modernisation in the history of the national health service and that work is on-going to ensure a primary care infrastructure that is fit for purpose and suitable for the twenty-first century.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been made available under the local investment finance trust scheme for improvements to general practitioner surgeries in West Sussex. [198000]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No funding has been made available through the local improvement finance trust for improvements to general practitioner surgeries in West Sussex.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners there were per head of population in (a) Leicester South, (b) Leicester West Primary Care Trust area, (c) Leicester East Primary Care Trust area and (d) England on the latest date for which figures are available. [198661]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the table.

General medical practitioners (GMPs) excluding retainers, registrars and locums[1] for Leicester primary care trusts (PCTs) per 100,000 weighted population

As at June 2004			Numbers (headcount)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner surgeries there are in the Leicester South constituency. [198664]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Partnerships of unrestricted principals and equivalents (UPEs)[1] for Eastern Leicester and South Leicestershire primary care trusts (PCTs) as at 30 June 2004

	Partnerships of UPEs
Eastern Leicester PCT	33

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many departmental Green Ministers there have been since 1997. [197835]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Four.

Health Access Card

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of how the proposed EU health access card might be integrated with other proposed UK entitlement and identity cards. [197568]

Mr. Hutton: The United Kingdom is required under European law to introduce the European health insurance card by 31 December 2005. Meeting our treaty obligations so as to ensure that UK citizens continue to receive the health care to which they are entitled when travelling in other European Economic Area countries is a top priority. At the same time, the Department is contributing to the Home Office-led identity cards programme, as well as considering the development of a national health service card, which could, 'support smart access to personal data and speed confirmation of access to appropriate care', as promised in the NHS Improvement Plan. The Department is considering how in the medium term this work programme can best be integrated, so as to maximise the benefits for patients and frontline services.

Health Centre (Birmingham)

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will direct Birmingham and Solihull Solutions to accelerate its acquisition of the Leyland Club on Alum Rock Road for the development of a new health centre. [198179]

Mr. Hutton: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, does not have the statutory power to intervene directly in this matter. Birmingham and Solihull Solutions (BASS) is a limited company and it is a matter for their shareholders, which include East Birmingham Primary Care Trust (PCT).

East Birmingham PCT is a shareholder in BASS and has been working closely with Birmingham city council to establish ownership of the site in question, in order to facilitate its acquisition at the earliest possible opportunity.

Hospital Budgets

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget of (a) the University Hospital of North Staffordshire (formerly the North Staffordshire Hospital), (b) North Staffordshire Combined Healthcare and (c) the Staffordshire Ambulance service has been in each year since 1997. [198573]

Dr. Ladyman: National health service trusts receive income for service provision from health authorities and primary care trusts. The figures shown in the table are the total income, including all income from activities and all other operating income, of each of the trusts.

	University Hospital of North Staffordshire NHS Trust[1]	North Staffordshire Combined Healthcare NHS Trust	Staffordshire Ambulance Service NHS Trust

Hospital Funding

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much additional funding was given to the Ashford and St. Peter's Hospitals NHS Trust to enable them to implement their 2002 franchise plan. [196522]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The Department has not provided additional funding to Ashford and St. Peter's Hospitals National Health Service Trust to implement its 2002 franchise plan. Information about the local budget identified to support the implementation of the trust franchise plan can be obtained from the trust.

Hospital Transport

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the effect of changes in (a) insurance specifications and (b) the level of monitoring required of drivers on the number of volunteer drivers who use their own vehicles to transport patients to and from hospital or other medical facilities; [191024]

(2) what complaints he has received about the operation of hospital transport of patients where volunteer drivers are concerned. [191035]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Arrangements for providing volunteer driver schemes for non-emergency transport are a matter for the local national health service or other organisation that is providing the transport. The Department does not collect information centrally on complaints received about volunteer drivers.

Infection Control

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether all staff not covered by "Agenda for Change" will receive training on infection control (a) during initial training or induction and (b) periodically during their career. [198248]

Mr. Hutton: Staff not covered by "Agenda for Change" are doctors, dentists and senior managers. For doctors and dentists, the medical royal colleges will lead and influence the development of the education curriculums. All national health service doctors will be subject to annual appraisal which will help them reflect on their development needs. Training for senior managers will be determined locally by their employer. The Department issued guidance and training materials on cross-infection control to all dental practices in May. Primary care trusts include compliance with this guidance in the inspections they make of dental practices.

Journey Times (Derbyshire)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average journey time is for patients to the nearest (a) general practitioner surgery, (b) dentist and (c) accident and emergency unit in West Derbyshire. [198364]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected centrally.

Keele University Medical School

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been invested in the new medical school at Keele University and the University Hospital of North Staffordshire. [198564]

Dr. Ladyman: Departmental funding for medical schools takes the form of the Service Increment for Teaching (SIFT). This reimburses national health service organisations for the extra costs they incur by providing clinical placements for medical and dental undergraduates. Capital SIFT helps pay for the extra premises needed to accommodate medical and dental undergraduates, both in hospital and primary care settings. Revenue SIFT pays for other infrastructure, including staff time, needed to provide clinical placements for undergraduates.

Extra SIFT has been provided to support expansion at the Manchester/Keele medical school since 2000–01. Most undergraduates from Keele undertake their clinical placements at the University Hospital of North Staffordshire NHS Trust which is not a medical school as such but has an education department for Keele medical undergraduates.

Information on how SIFT capital funding was distributed between Manchester and Keele prior to 2002–03 is not available centrally. Since 2002–03 SIFT funding has been managed by strategic health authorities and while a split can now be provided for capital this is not so for revenue. The available information is given in the table.

2003–04	Not known	Not known	3,018
2004–05	Not known	Not known	2,644

Notes:

Figures represent the additional funding provided each year to support expansion at the Manchester/Keele medical school. In the case of revenue the new money is added to baseline provision for the following year. Revenue baseline provision, to support the cohort of students prior to 2000–01, is not shown. Capital payments are one-off each year.

In addition, University of North Staffordshire Hospitals NHS trust has received NHS research and development funding as follows:

£2 million during 2000–03 to provide facilities for research;

£146,000 in 2002–03 to mobilise and support research at the school.

This is in addition to the annual allocation of NHS research and development support funding to the trust to meet the research priorities and needs of the NHS and to provide the NHS base for high quality science. The trust's support funding in 2004–05 will be £2,014,000.

LIFT Programme

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been allocated through the LIFT programme to improve primary care in (a) Newcastle-under-Lyme and (b) North Staffordshire. [198575]

Dr. Ladyman: The North Staffordshire National Health Service Local Improvement Financial Trust (LIFT) project covers the whole of the North Staffordshire area, including Newcastle-Under-Lyme. The Department of Health has allocated capital enabling funding of £5.37 million to the end of 2004–05 to support LIFT developments across the North Staffordshire area.

Mental Health

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of spending on health and personal social services in each of the last five years was spent on mental health. [197614]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The proportion of mental health spend within the hospital and community health services and personal social services budgets over the past five years for which data are available are shown in the following table. The data exclude expenditure concerning people treated in primary care, for whom a specific diagnosis has not been reached. The figures therefore underestimate the total mental health expenditure.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) adults and (b) children have been diagnosed as suffering from depression in each year since 1997. [197977]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the requested format.

The Department provides hospital episode statistics data which relate to diagnostic information for in-patients in national health service hospitals. During their course of treatment over a period of time, patients may have a number of episodes of care, which are counted each time they have a stay in hospital. Information relating to diagnosis where a patient is still under the care of a hospital consultant is not recorded. Information on finished consultant episodes with a primary diagnosis of depression is shown in the table.

[1] Figures are grossed for both coverage and missing/invalid clinical data, except for 2002–03, which has not yet been adjusted for shortfalls in data.

Finished consultant episode (FCE)

An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare. The figures do not represent the number of patients as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Diagnosis (primary diagnosis)

The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the hospital episode statistics (HES) dataset and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

Mental Health (Plymouth)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total budget is for the delivery of mental health services in Plymouth for this financial year, including relevant primary care trust, acute hospital trust and social services provision. [197948]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department allocates revenue funding to primary care trusts (PCTs) on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. In the allocations for 2003–04 to 2005–06 none of the growth money has been identified for specific purposes.

It is for PCTs in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use these funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

Plymouth local authority was allocated £629,000 for adult mental health services, and £322,000 for children and adolescent mental health services, as part of the overall social services provision made by the Department in 2004–05.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many secure units there are for mental health patients in Plymouth; and if he will make a statement. [197949]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally. In line with our policy of shifting the balance of power, responsibility for the provision of local health services, including mental health services, now rest with primary care trusts (PCTs). It is for PCTs, in conjunction with strategic health authorities to plan and develop services according to the needs of their local communities.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bed spaces for mental health patients there are in Plymouth. [197950]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department collects beds data as the average daily number of available beds in each financial year. The latest available figures for 2003–04 show that Plymouth Primary Care Trust has 166 mental illness beds and Plymouth Hospitals National Health Service Trust has five beds.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is primarily responsible for the delivery of mental health services in Plymouth. [197951]

Ms Rosie Winterton: National health services adult mental health services are provided by Plymouth Primary Care Trust, and child and adolescent mental health services are provided by Plymouth Hospitals NHS Trust.

Microsoft

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Department of Health's press release dated 3 November, if he will make a statement on the extent to which (a) products provided to the NHS free by Microsoft will be customised and (b) users have been consulted in drawing up plans with Microsoft; and what assessment has been made of the benefits to Microsoft from the arrangement. [196965]

Mr. Hutton: Work has begun, and is still ongoing, to determine the extent to which the relevant Microsoft products will need to be customised. The work is being informed by very wide-scale consultation involving individual expert clinical systems users covering a variety of disciplines and fields; representatives of appropriate professional bodies including the royal colleges; the National Patient Safety Agency; the British Computer Society's primary care group; the national health service information standards board; and an action team of expert front-line practitioners commissioned by the care record development board. Consultation will be an interactive process and will include arrangements for sign-off of any interface intended for deployment across the NHS.

Assessment of the benefits to Microsoft from the agreement is a matter for the company.

Mixed Sex Wards

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made in ending mixed sex wards in Leicestershire; and if he will make a statement. [197426]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has set three objectives to support the delivery of single-sex accommodation, designed to deliver single-sex sleeping accommodation, segregated bathroom and washing facilities and to safeguard the mentally ill. The objectives apply to all national health service organisations providing inpatient accommodation.

All inpatient hospital accommodation provided within Leicestershire is fully compliant with the standards which the Department has set.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria are used in selecting locations for National Institute for Clinical Excellence meetings. [197636]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The selection criteria used by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) for choosing meeting venues are an internal matter for NICE.

National Programme for IT

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation with general practitioners has taken place on the National Programme for IT. [197975]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) on 20 October 2004, Official Report, columns 797–99W.

NHS Care for the Elderly

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent estimate he has made of the cost of providing free personal care for the elderly; [198743]

(2) how many people aged over 65 years in England and Wales are receiving a pension; and what estimate he has made of the cost of providing them with free personal care. [198745]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of people over 65 in England in 2003 was 7,946,933, the majority of whom will be receiving a state pension, personal pension or some other form of pension.

We estimate that free personal care for those requiring it in England and drawn from all age groups would cost some £1.5 billion. It is not possible to break this estimate down by age grouping.

Information relating to Wales is a matter for the Welsh Assembly.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates he has received on (a) the total cost of providing free personal care for the elderly in Scotland and (b) the number of elderly people receiving free personal care in Scotland. [198744]

Dr. Ladyman: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive and my hon. Friend may wish to write to them about this issue.

NHS Expenditure

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on the NHS in North Staffordshire in each year since 1997. [198574]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is not available in the format requested.

Expenditure in the Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA) area, which includes North Staffordshire, increased from £831,797,000 in 1997–98 to £1,292,573,000 in 2002–03.

This does not represent the total expenditure, as some elements of health expenditure cannot be identified by SHA area.

NHS Foundation Trusts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the written statement of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 4WS, on ministerial accountability for NHS foundation trusts, whether the chairs of NHS foundation trusts will be expected to meet the deadlines which apply to Ministers when answering hon. Members' questions; [194177]

(2) if he will ensure that the requirements set out in guidance to Ministers on answering parliamentary questions apply equally to answers given by chairs of NHS foundation trusts, with particular reference to the requirement that answers should not be misleading. [195130]

Mr. Hutton: Individual national health service foundation trusts (NHSFTs) are responsible for replying to hon. and right hon. Members' questions or correspondence referred on to them by Ministers, where they specifically relate to operational matters of the organisations. These trusts' terms of authorisation, that is, their "licence" to operate, will include the requirement that they comply with the same standards expected of Ministers in responding to parliamentary questions. This means that a NHSFT that fails to comply with this requirement will be in breach of its terms of authorisation and that Monitor, the statutory name of which is the independent regulator of NHSFTs, can intervene to put this right. I expect, however, that NHSFTs will continue to respond promptly, helpfully and accurately to hon. and right hon. Members' queries.

NHSFTs are asked to copy their responses to parliamentary questions to Monitor. They are also asked to copy responses to the Department so that they may be placed in the Library.

NHS Staff

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many NHS nurses qualified in each year since 2002; and how many nurses specialising in paediatrics there were in each year since 2002; [198184]

(2) how many (a) consultants and (b) paediatric consultants there were in the NHS in each year since 2002. [198185]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the number of consultants, paediatric consultants, nurses and paediatric nurse employed in the national health service since 2002 is shown in the table.

Information is not collected centrally on the number of nurses qualifying each year. The Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC) holds information on the number of nurses and midwives initially entering the register, a pre-requisite for employment in the NHS and other sectors in the UK. This information can be found on the NMC website at www.nmc-uk.org.

Between September 2002 and September 2003, the number of consultants increased by 1,680, or 6.2 per cent., and the number of paediatric consultants, comprising paediatric dentistry, paediatric surgery, paediatric cardiology and paediatrics, increased by 115, or 6.3 per cent.

Between September 2002 and June 2004, the number of consultants increased by 3,101, or 11.5 per cent., and the number of paediatric consultants, comprising paediatric dentistry, paediatric surgery, paediatric cardiology and paediatrics, increased by 210, or 11.5 per cent.

Between September 2002 and March 2004, the number of nurses employed in the NHS has increased by 28,839, or 7.8 per cent., and between September 200 and September 2003, the number of nurses employed in the paediatrics area of work has increased by 423, or 2.3 per cent.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to attract more doctors and nurses into the NHS since 1997. [19856

Mr. Hutton: A range of recruitment and retention initiatives are in place to help expand the national health service workforce. These include improving pay and conditions, encouraging the NHS to become a better, more flexible and diverse employer, help with accessing childcare, increasing training, attracting back returners and running national and international recruitment campaigns. As a result of these measures, between September 1997 and March 2004, the number of nurses employed in the NHS has increased by 77,500. Between September 1997 and September 2003, the number of doctors, excluding retainers, employed in the NHS has increased by 19,374.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the number of nurses employed in North Staffordshire has changed since 1997. [198566]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the table.

Overseas Nurses

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's rules are on overseas nurses coming into the UK receiving (a) student visas and (b) work permits. [187854]

Mr. Browne: I have been asked to reply.

(a) A person seeking leave to enter the United Kingdom as a student nurse must meet the definition of a student nurse in paragraph 63 of the Immigration Rules and must have been accepted for a course in a recognised nursing educational establishment offering nursing training, which meets the requirements of the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting. The applicant needs to show that they did not obtain acceptance by misrepresentation; that they are able and intend to follow the course of study and that they do not intend to engage in business or take employment except in connection with the course. They also need to demonstrate that they intend to leave the United Kingdom at the end of the course and that they have sufficient funds to accommodate and maintain themselves and any dependants without engaging in business or taking employment (except in connection with the course), or having recourse to public funds. Those student nurses who successfully complete their course and are offered employment as a nurse can apply to switch into work permit employment. This will be granted provided all the requirements for switching into work permit employment at paragraph 131B of the Rules are met. Most importantly they must hold a valid immigration employment document for employment as a nurse.

(b) Nurses coming into the UK to take up employment must hold a valid work permit and, in most cases, entry clearance in this capacity. Their employer applies for the work permit on their behalf, and must show that the vacancy meets the work permit requirements. On entering the UK, nurses must show that they are capable of undertaking the employment for which they hold the work permit, and that they do not intend to take any other employment. They must also be able to maintain and accommodate themselves and any dependants without recourse to public funds.

The Government is committed to managing the impact of international recruitment on source countries. The Department of Health, in consultation with the Department for International Development, has published a Code of Practice for NHS employers involved in the international recruitment of healthcare professionals. This seeks to ensure that countries suffering significant skill shortages of their own are not targeted. On 25 August the Department of Health published proposals to strengthen the code of practice to bring the private sector in line with the NHS.

Work Permits UK ensure that establishments recruiting overseas nurses are registered with the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC) and are accredited to provide supervised training to nurses undergoing supervised practice. They also check that the number of authorised supervised practice places allocated to the establishment is not exceeded and that the Personal Identification Number (PIN) is valid.

The Work Permits UK Intelligence Team investigate all allegations of abuse relating to nurses and disseminate their findings as appropriate. The Work Permits UK Compliance and Validation Team also undertake visits based on a random sample to establishments to ensure that overseas nationals are working where the permit was issued for and receiving the training and pay that was stated on the initial application form. This team also conduct visits on behalf of the Intelligence Team, following allegations of abuse.

Paediatric Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets exist for the recruitment of doctors working in paediatric specialities. [194244]

Mr. Hutton: There are no national targets for the recruitment of doctors working in paediatric services. Since 1997, the number of consultants working in paediatric specialties rose from 1,321 to 2,032 by June 2004, an increase of 54 per cent.

Pain Relief

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are registered in England to attend (a) pain clinics and (b) appointments with consultants for pain relief on a regular basis. [197833]

Mr. Hutton: Information is collected centrally on the number of attendances at consultant out-patient clinics for pain management, including both first and follow-up appointments. The latest information available is for the first quarter of 2004–05, when there were 66,079 attendances in England.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to change the prescription charge. [197803]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Prescription charge costs in England are reviewed annually and any changes introduced in April. In recent years, increases in charge costs have been below the rate of inflation. Currently, 86 per cent. of prescription items are dispensed in the community free of charge.

Primary Care Trust (Newcastle-under-Lyme)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget of Newcastle-under-Lyme Primary Care Trust has been in each year since its establishment. [198572]

Dr. Ladyman: The table shows the allocations and cash increases to Newcastle-Under-Lyme Primary Care Trust for each year since its establishment in 2002.

Psychiatric Care

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalent (a) psychiatrists and (b) psychiatric nurses are employed in each of the primary care trusts that cover the Geater London area. [197702]

Residential Homes

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the cost of care in residential homes that is paid for by residents of homes. [195901]

Dr. Ladyman: Care homes are private businesses and the fees residents pay are negotiated between the care home and the person or organisation that pays the fees. Residents with less than £20,000 in savings are entitled to help with these costs and residents with less than £12,250 have their care paid for by social services.

In assessing a resident's ability to pay, local authority social services use the National Assistance Act (Assessment of Resources) Regulations 1992.

The next set of amendments to the National Assistance (Assessment of Resources) Regulations will come into force in April 2005. We will be consulting on changes to the Regulations and the accompanying Charging for Residential Accommodation Guide, the guidance to local authorities which helps them to apply the regulations, later this year.

School Nurses

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many school nurses are employed in each primary care trust area. [197958]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available. Information on the number of school nurses employed in the national health service will be collected in the September 2004 non-medical work force census, and we intend to publish the data in February 2005.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what services are offered by school nurses. [197992]

Dr. Ladyman: School nurses provide health services to school aged children with a particular emphasis on health improvement. The role includes monitoring the health of children and young people, delivering health promotion and immunisation programmes, providing one to one health advice and contributing to the curriculum. School nurses also provide nursing care to support pupils with medical needs in school. The service varies according to local priorities and needs and the contribution of other practitioners.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many school nurses there are per school age pupil. [197993]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available. Information on the number of school nurses employed in the national health service will be collected in the September 2004 non-medical work force census and we intend to publish the data in February 2005.

Smoking

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent measures his Department has taken to increase the awareness in schools in the Greater London area of the dangers of smoking. [195366]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I have been asked to reply.

All pupils learn about the dangers of smoking as a statutory part of the National Curriculum Science Order and the non-statutory framework for Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE).

In 2003–04 we rolled out a programme of certification for PSHE teachers to improve their knowledge and expertise, including a specialist module for drug, alcohol and tobacco education. Already over 600 teachers have participated and there is funding for up to 3,000 teachers in 2004–05. The National Healthy Schools Standard (NHSS) supports the teaching of drug, alcohol and tobacco education and currently over 14,000 schools are participating. We aim to recruit all schools with a 20 per cent. or more free school meals entitlement to the NHSS by 2006.

Although there is currently no pan-London project specifically on smoking, many of the local NHS Stop

Smoking Services are working with schools in their area to provide support and information to teachers, pupils, and school nurses.

Waiting Times

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what milestones have been set for delivering the planning framework target of maximum 18 week waits by 2008; and what changes have been made to data collection to support (a) the measurement of the target and (b) the monitoring of the milestones. [197818]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 November 2004]: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) will need to agree primary care trusts' annual plans to ensure delivery of all national targets.

Central working assumptions have been shared with SHAs to test the robustness of these plans and are available on the Department's website at http://www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/08/83/44/04088344.pdf. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Officials are working with national health service colleagues to ensure the necessary amendments are made to existing collections in order to monitor progress against these assumptions and measurement of the target.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the clinical areas where the NHS in West Derbyshire has longer (a) waiting lists and (b) waiting times than the national average. [198368]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the following tables.

Department of Health form QF01.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes there have been to NHS waiting list times for (a) inpatients, (b) outpatients and (c) accident and emergency cases in North Staffordshire since 1997. [198570]

Dr. Ladyman: At the University Hospital of North Staffordshire National Health Service Trust (formerly North Staffordshire Hospital NHS Trust) in March 1997 there were 93 patients waiting more than 12 months for inpatient treatment and 382 waiting 9–11 months. Latest figures show no one is waiting more than nine months.

In March 1997, there were 3,966 patients waiting more than 13 weeks for outpatient treatment at the trust. Latest figures show 1,282 waiting more than 13 weeks.

Latest figures show that 89 per cent, of patients spend less than four hours in the major accident and emergency departments of the trust. In September 2002 the figure was 35.9 per cent. This data was not collected centrally before 2002.

Worcester

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Worcester constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on Worcester constituency. [198034]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government have put in place a programme of national health service investment and reform since 1997 to improve service delivery in all parts of the United Kingdom. There is significant evidence that these policies have yielded considerable benefits for the Worcester constituency.

For example:

At the end of June 2004, the number of people waiting more than nine months for in-patient treatment within South Worcestershire Primary Care Trust (PCT) has fallen to 0, from 752 in June 2002.

At the end of June 2004, the number of patients waiting over 13 weeks for out-patient treatment within South Worcestershire PCT has fallen to 445, from 743 in June 2002.

In September 2002, at Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust, 85.3 per cent. of patients spent less than four hours in accident and emergency from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge. Figures for June 2004 show an improvement to 90.8 per cent.

Between September 2000 and June 2004 the number of consultants at the Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust has increased from 144 to 181. Between September 2000 and September 2003 the number of nurses has increased from 1,485 to 1,875.

Between September 2001 and June 2004 the number of General Medical Practitioners within South Worcestershire PCT has increased from 172 to 208.

Figures for September 2004 show that all patients within South Worcestershire PCT are able to be offered an appointment with a general practitioner within two working days and a primary care professional within one working day.

Worcestershire Royal Hospital, part of Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust, is a new £87 million hospital with the latest facilities and equipment. The hospital, which opened in March 2002 has 550 beds and incorporates nine operating theatres, a large accident and emergency department, a medical assessment unit, and a critical care unit.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the salary costs to the Department were for employees working in public relations and publicity in each year since 1997. [183854]

Fiona Mactaggart: Within the Home Office, the Marketing and Strategic Communication Unit (MSCU) is responsible for public relations and publicity. The salary costs of staff involved in this area of work since 1997 are as follows:

Financial year	MSCU
1997–98	367,340
1998–99	391,703
1999–2000	607,327
2000–01	705,086
2001–02	760,373
2002–03	1,002,436
2003–04	1,371,718

Notes:

1. 2002–03 Communications Strategy and Co-ordination Unit merged with MSCU.

2. 2003–04 These figures do not include the salary costs of the Web Services team, which transferred to MSCU in September 2003.

In 2003–04 this cost was 0.045 per cent. of the overall salary bill for Home Office.

The Marketing and Strategic Communication Unit develop communication campaigns which support the delivery of Home Office objectives. Recent campaigns have helped recruit record numbers of police officers, reduce vehicle crime, warn children and their parents about the dangers of paedophiles on the internet, and provide a source of help and advice on drug misuse. Expenditure on communication staff has risen as the Home Office has become increasingly engaged with the public to help deliver real social change.

Details of expenditure on staff outside of this unit who may have been involved in any related exercises is not held centrally and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Annual Report

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many copies of his Department's annual report were printed in each year since 1997; how many were sold in each year; and what the (a) publication costs and (b) sales revenue were. [183886]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office Departmental Report is the main vehicle by which the Home Office explains its aims and performance for 2003–04, and how it organised itself to deliver. As such it plays an important part in maintaining accountability to both Parliament and the public. It also provides key external stakeholders with an overview of the Department's activities as a whole. The annual report can be downloaded free of charge on the Home Office website.

The Report's publication was handled by The Stationery Office (TSO). Under the terms of the contract with TSO, that company generally meets the costs of printing and publication and uses its commercial judgement as to the number of copies which it prints and the sale price. TSO are not obliged to provide such information as these are costs which they meet themselves and are not charged to Departments.

TSO have provided details of the number of copies of the Annual Report which they have sold since 1998 (those for previous years are not available). These figures do not include those copies ordered by the Home Office for distribution to senior staff and key stakeholders.

2003	506

[1] To date.

The Publisher retains the revenues which they earn from sales and which are aimed at ensuring the recovery of their costs.

The direct costs of production borne by the Home Office and the printing costs of those copies ordered by the Department for senior staff and key stakeholders are shown in the table.

These costs exclude VAT (where applicable). They also exclude the costs of staff time within the Department as obtaining estimates would involve disproportionate cost.

Asylum Seekers

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding was provided to local authorities to deal with the costs associated with asylum seekers and their dependants in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) local authority and (b) funding stream. [190934]

Mr. Browne: Information for the financial years 1997–98 and 1998–99 is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Payments made to local authorities on the basis of normal funding grants and special circumstances grants in 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02 are presented in the following table by authority and funding stream and a copy will be placed in the Library. These payments are made from within the overall National Asylum Support Service budget.

Payments for 2002–03 and 2003–04 are subject to audit.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) asylum seekers and (b) asylum seeker dependants reside in the UK, broken down by local authority area. [190938]

Mr. Browne: Figures for asylum seekers (including dependants) supported in National Asylum Support Service (NASS) accommodation and those in receipt of subsistence only support from NASS in each local authority area as at the end of June 2004 are presented in the following tables. Corresponding figures for those not in receipt of NASS support are not available.

Numbers of asylum seekers placed in NASS accommodation and numbers who are in receipt of subsistence only support from NASS, are published on a quarterly and annual basis. Information covering the third quarter of 2004 (July to September) was published on 16 November on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Disbenefited cases are cases which were previously supported under the main UK benefits system and have been moved onto NASS support. Some of these cases have remained in the original social services accommodation.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent in each year since 1996 from all public funded sources in support of asylum seekers and their families. [190971]

Mr. Browne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate of the Home Office assumed responsibility for the direct costs of supporting asylum seekers from April 1999. The costs include payments made to local authorities for accommodation, as well as those made to the private sector. Prior to this, costs fell to the Departments of Health and Social Security. The following amounts have been spent directly on asylum seeker support.

	£million
1996-97	413
1997-98	375
1998-99	475
1999-00	590
2000-01	747
2001-02	1,046
2002-03	1,070
2003-04	[1]—

[1] The actual Asylum Support costs for 2003-04 are yet to be audited and published.

Further information on any other costs to local or central Government, specifically related to the support of asylum seekers is not currently available.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed Palestinian asylum seekers have been removed in the last 12 months. [192885]

Mr. Browne: It is not possible to say how many asylum seekers of Palestinian origin have been removed from the United Kingdom in the last 12 months. Information is collated only on the nationality of asylum seekers; Palestine is an occupied territory rather than an independent country.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time is between initial decision in asylum cases and the hearing of an appeal before an adjudicator. [193252]

Mr. Browne: Information on the average time between an initial decision in asylum cases and the hearing of an appeal before an Adjudicator is unavailable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records.

However, the Home Office and the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) set a jointly owned Public Service Agreement target for 2003–04 that 60 per cent. of substantive asylum applications received from 1 April 2003 should have a decision, up to and including appeal at the Immigration Appeal Tribunal, within six months. The latest published data shows that the Home Office and DCA are exceeding this target. 63 per cent. of substantive applications[1,2], received in the period April to December 2003, were decided within six months[3]. This compares to an average of 20 months for a decision in 1997.

Information on the timeliness of case processing, up to and including appeals, is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

[1] A-CID as at 12 July 2004.

[2] Excludes withdrawals and 3rd country cases, which may be the responsibility of other EU member states under the Dublin Convention. Home Office's Public Service Agreement target for 2003-04 is 60 per cent. Details of the targets are given in the 2000 Spending Review Public Service Agreements White Paper at http://www.treasury.gov.uk/. Excludes asylum applications lodged by Iraqis between 1 February and 31 May 2003.

[3] "Six months" is defined as 182 days.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate how many failed asylum seekers remain in the UK. [193253]

Mr. Browne: Information on the total number of asylum seekers currently in the UK, including failed asylum seekers, is not available. Some applicants may leave the United Kingdom without informing the Immigration Service.

The number of cases (principal applicants) awaiting initial decision or awaiting appeal determinations continues to fall as the level of applications falls, initial decisions continue to outstrip the number of applications, and record numbers of appeals are determined by the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA). The latest published figures show that as at the end of June 2004 there were:

> 13,300 cases awaiting an initial decision (of this total, 4,900 cases were work in progress, ie the application had been outstanding for six months or less), the lowest level for a decade
> an estimated 9,000 appeals lodged with the Home Office which had not been sent to the IAA (a proportion of appeals lodged do not result in appeal bundles being sent to the IAA); and
> 22,600 asylum cases work in progress in the IAA (9,900 at the adjudicator tier, 7,300 applications for permission to appeal to the tribunal, and 5,400 tribunal appeals).

Information on asylum applications are published on a quarterly and annual basis. The next publication covering the third quarter of 2004 (July to September) will be available on 16 November 2004 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what access to (a) the benefit system, (b) local authority housing and (c) medical care failed asylum seekers have. [193254]

Mr. Browne: Failed asylum seekers are not able to access mainstream benefits or social housing. The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) provides support to eligible asylum seekers until a final decision is made on their claim. With the exception of families including dependants under 18, support must end no later than 21 days after the receipt of a final negative decision. Failed asylum seekers unable to leave immediately due to circumstances entirely beyond their control may be eligible for accommodation under section 4 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. The criteria are published on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate website www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk.

No one requiring immediately necessary medical treatment will ever be denied it, irrespective of their immigration status. However, under the provisions of the National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989, as amended, failed asylum seekers will be expected to pay for NHS hospital treatment in certain circumstances, just like anyone else without a legal basis of stay in this country. Failed asylum seekers are not normally eligible for NHS primary medical services.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers were removed from the UK during the last 12 months. [193472]

Mr. Browne: Between July 2003 and June 2004 (the latest date for which data are available) 13,495 principal asylum applicants were removed from the UK; 17,020 including dependants. This includes people who departed 'voluntarily' after enforcement action has been initiated against them and those who departed under the Assisted Voluntary Returns scheme organised by the International Organisation for Migration.

Information on asylum seekers who were removed from the UK between July and September 2004 will be published on 16 November on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) services and (b) assistance are available to asylum seekers who have been refused asylum but are unable to return home, with particular reference to those who have no means of income or independent support; and what plans his Department has to improve services and assistance for such people. [194044]

Mr. Browne: There is nothing to prevent the majority of failed asylum seekers from leaving the UK voluntarily. Failed asylum seekers are provided with details on assistance for those wishing to depart voluntarily. Those failed asylum seekers who are destitute and unable to leave immediately for reasons entirely beyond their control can seek the provision of accommodation under section 4 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. The criteria for accessing section 4 support are tight since the provision of accommodation is restricted to those who cannot rather than will not leave.

In addition, the National Asylum Support Service grant funds voluntary sector organisations to provide one stop services for asylum seekers in each region of the UK. The grant agreements with the voluntary sector have recently been expanded to require the one stop services to give impartial advice about and assistance with the options open to failed asylum seekers including the Voluntary Assisted Returns and Reintegration Programme (VARRP), support under section 4 and other voluntary sector support.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to permit failed asylum seekers who cannot be returned home the right to work in this country. [194045]

Mr. Browne: It would be wrong to allow failed asylum seekers to work because it would undermine their incentive to comply with the removal process. It also runs counter to the Government's policy of protecting the asylum system from being exploited by people who are in fact illegal economic migrants. Failed asylum seekers who are genuinely unable to return home due to circumstances beyond their control can, providing they are complying with efforts to return them, seek accommodation under section 4 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. There is no need for them to become homeless or destitute.

Asylum/Immigration

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time taken to reach a final decision on an asylum application was in the last period for which figures are available. [193299]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 25 October 2004]: Information on the average time taken to reach a final decision on an asylum application is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case files. Some cases do not result in such decisions, for example if the application is withdrawn.

However, the Home Office and the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) set a jointly owned public service agreement target for 2003–04 that 60 per cent. of substantive asylum applications received from 1 April 2003 should have a decision, up to and including appeal at the Immigration Appeal Tribunal, within six months. The latest published data show that the Home Office and DCA are exceeding this target. 63 per cent. of substantive applications[1,2], received in the period April to December 2003, were decided within six months[3]. This compares to an average of 20 months for a decision in 1997.

Information on the timeliness of case processing, up to and including appeals, is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

[1] Source: A-CID as at 12 July 2004.

[2] Excludes withdrawals and third country cases, which may be the responsibility of other EU member states under the Dublin convention. Home Office's public service agreement target for 2003–04 is 60 per cent. Details of the targets are given in the 2000 Spending Review Public Service Agreements White Paper at http://www.treasury.gov.uk/. Excludes asylum applications lodged by Iraqis between 1 February and 31 May 2003.

[3] "Six months" is defined as 182 days.

Bribery

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the UK Central Authority received a request from the (a) US authorities, (b) French authorities and (c) Nigerian authorities for assistance with their investigation into allegations of bribery relating to a Nigerian LNG plant. [196427]

Caroline Flint: Letters of request for assistance in criminal matters from foreign governments are treated confidentially, as communications between two countries. In accordance with this practice, we are unable to confirm or deny that we have received requests in this matter.

Burglary

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were jailed in (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) 2003 under section 111 of the Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 for a third offence of burglary. [193991]

Paul Goggins: Information reported to the Home Office shows that six people were sentenced under section 111 of the Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 (previously section 4 of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997) in England and Wales for a third offence of burglary in 2001 and two in 2002.

Information for 2003 is due for publication in November.

Cannabis

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there have been for possession of cannabis in each of the last 10 years. [148604]

Caroline Flint: Details of the number of convictions for possession of cannabis in each of the years between 1992 and 2002 are in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin on Drug Seizure and Offender Statistics 2001 and 2002 (Table S2.29 of the Supplementary tables). The information is analysed from the Home Office Drug Seizures Database.

The Bulletin is available on the RDS website and in the Library http://uk.sitestat.com/homeoffice/homeoffice/s?rds.hosb0804pdf&n s_type=pdf&ns_url=%5Bhttp://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs04/ hosb0804.pdf%5D http://uk.sitestat.com/homeoffice/homeoffice/s?rds.hosb0804areap df&ns_type=pdf&ns_url=%5Bhttp://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdf s04/hosb0804area.pdf%5D.

Charities Bill

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why service non-public funds are no longer to be excepted charities in the draft Charities Bill. [194453]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Charity Commission's register was created in the 1960s to provide public information about the existence and status of individual charities. Some classes of charity, including service charitable funds, were excepted from the registration requirement because either the relevant information about them was provided by some other means or there was no public interest in them. Excepted charities continued to be regulated by the Commission even if they were not registered with it.

The Government believes that, to enhance the accountability of charities and to promote public confidence in the regulatory arrangements, all charities that are regulated by the Charity Commission should appear on its public register. The Government have included a provision in the draft Charities Bill to achieve this by ending the system of exceptions from registration. The Government have set the initial income threshold for registration at £100,000 per annum in order to provide for a manageable process of registration over time.

There is a public interest in service charitable funds. They benefit from the tax reliefs available to charities generally, and they can make use of the Gift Aid scheme which allows them to receive donations in a tax efficient way.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether heritage assets are to be included in the balance sheets of service non-public funds under the draft Charities Bill. [194454]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Charities Bill will make no change to the existing rules on the content of the accounts of non-public funds belonging to service charities. This is a matter for the Charity Commission as the Government department responsible for the regulation of charities in England and Wales. The Director of Policy and Strategy at the Charity Commission will write to the hon. Member and a copy of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Citizenship Requirements

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to modify the language requirement for citizenship applications for people from countries where English is either an official language or is the sole official language. [195473]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 2 November 2004]: We have no plans to discriminate between nationalities in this way. The requirement to demonstrate knowledge of English applies to all applicants. The fact that someone comes from a country where English is an official language does not guarantee that they can speak it to the standard required for naturalisation as a British citizen.

The Home Office website explains how fluent English speakers can most easily demonstrate their knowledge of the language.

Community Punishment (London)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours of community punishment were awarded by the courts in the London area in each of the last three years. [143395]

Paul Goggins: The available information, from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database is as follows:

Total number of hours of community punishment[1] imposed by all courts in London, 2000 to 2002

	Total number of hours
2000	768,445
2001	770,256
2002	878,510

[1] Total hours of community punishment orders and community punishment within community punishment and rehabilitation orders. Data are on the principal offence basis.

Statistics for 2003 will be published later in November.

Convicted Criminals (EU Nationals)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many nationals of the new EU accession states have been convicted of crimes in magistrates courts in England and Wales since May. [198092]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 15 November 2004]: Information held on the Home Office court proceedings database does not include the nationality of the defendant.

Crime

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers preventing racial harassment have been introduced since 1997; and how many times these powers have been used in Burnley. [168316]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 created new and separate offences where the offences of causing fear and violence or of causing harassment, alarm or distress under the Public Order Act 1985, or the offences of harassment or putting in fear of violence under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 were racially aggravated.

Figures for the number of prosecutions in Burnley for this type of offence are not centrally available. Over the period 1999–2000 to 2002–03, Lancashire police recorded a total of 1,122 racially- or religiously-aggravated harassment offences.

Prior to 1997, the Race Relations Act (RRA) 1976 prohibited discrimination on racial grounds. The RRA did not specifically refer to harassment, but it was clear from case law that racial harassment was a type of detriment capable of amounting to the kind of treatment prohibited by the Act.

As part of its fulfilment of its obligations under the EC Race Directive, the UK amended the Race Relations Act 1976 (by virtue of the Race Relations Act 1976 (Amendment) Regulations 2003) so as to make it unlawful to harass a person, on grounds of race or ethnic or national origins, in the areas of activity covered by the 1976 Act.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed by juvenile offenders in (a) West Derbyshire and (b) the East Midlands in each of the last two quarters for which figures are available; and how many cautions were issued. [198370]

Paul Goggins: The information contained in the table gives the number of juveniles (persons aged 10–17) convicted of all offences and those given reprimands and final warnings, during the last two quarters of 2002 in the East Midlands. It also contains data for the Derbyshire police force area, and, for persons found guilty, in the petty sessional areas of Derby and South Derbyshire and North East Derbyshire which cover the area of the West Derbyshire constituency.

The information collected centrally does not enable cautions in the West Derbyshire constituency to be identified. Neither is it possible to give the number of crimes committed by juveniles, only the number of juveniles who are found guilty of all offences.

Statistics for 2003 will be published on 18 November.

Number of juveniles found guilty at all courts, and those given reprimands and final warnings[1] for all offences, East Midlands, 3rd and 4th quarter 2002

Area, age and disposal etc.	3rd Quarter 2002	4th Quarter 2002
East Midlands[2]
Juveniles aged 10–17 receiving a reprimand	1,243	1,138
Juveniles aged 10–17 receiving a final warning	451	404
Juveniles aged 10–17 found guilty	1,781	1,669
of which:
Derbyshire police force area
Juveniles aged 10–17 receiving a reprimand[3]	250	224
Juveniles aged 10–17 receiving a final warning[3]	139	141
Juveniles aged 10–17 found guilty
of which:
found guilty in the Derby and South Derbyshire PSA	172	150
found guilty in the North East Derbyshire and Dales PSA	116	100

---

[1] Cautions were replaced by reprimands and final warnings for persons under 18 from June 2000.

[2] Police force areas of Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Northamptonshire and Nottinghamshire.

[3] Not available by petty sessional area.

Criminal Justice

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place between his Department and his colleagues at the Northern Ireland Office about the Draft Treaty on Co-operation on Criminal Justice issues between the Republic of Ireland and the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [192342]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 19 October 2004]: There have been official-level contacts between the Home Office and the Northern Ireland Office during the year with respect to co-operation on criminal justice issues between the UK and the Republic of Ireland. These have included reference to the proposed draft Intergovernmental Agreement on Criminal Justice Co-operation as set out in the Updated Criminal Justice Review Implementation Plan published by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in June 2003.

Northern Ireland Office officials have been in touch with officials in the Performance and Delivery Unit, Judicial Co-operation Unit, Criminal Law Policy Unit and the European and International Unit of the Home Office, and through them also with officials involved in road crime and drugs policy, as well as the Secretary of State's private office. I am satisfied that the Department is being kept fully apprised of relevant developments in this area.

Custodial Sentencing Statistics

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were given custodial sentences of (a) less than 12 months, (b) between one and four years and (c) more than four years in Crown Courts in each year since 1995, broken down by (i) gender, (ii) age and (iii) type of offence. [190890]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is contained in the table and relates to England and Wales for the years 1995 to 2002 and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Statistics on court proceedings for 2003 will be published in the autumn.

Cyber Crime

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to prevent financial fraud originating on the world wide web. [197809]

Caroline Flint: The Government take the issue of fraud on the world wide web very seriously and have taken a number of steps to tackle this kind of crime.

The Home Office website provides advice on avoiding internet fraud, while the Department of Trade and Industry has advice on scams and rip-offs, including internet scams, on its Consumer Direct website.

The Home Office has created, and maintains the 'e-tailing mini site', which forms part of the crime reduction website. The mini site provides information to help both businesses and consumers protect themselves specifically when using the internet.

We have published, jointly with the Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS) a leaflet on card safety which includes a section on using cards safely over the internet. The leaflet has been sent to all police forces in England and Wales, and to Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships. It is also available on the Home Office website and the e-tailing mini site, and APACS members (banks) will be sending a version of the leaflet to their cardholders.

The Home Office is represented on an industry-led steering group which aims to tackle 'Card Not Present' (CNP) fraud (which includes fraud over the internet). We support practical measures being introduced by the industry to increase levels of security for internet transactions. These include Address Verification Services (AVS) and Card Security Code (CSC), along with Mastercard Secure Code and Verified by Visa which require password verification for internet transactions. These initiatives are already making a significant impact on CNP fraud.

The work of the CNP steering group has also led to the production of a manual (Spot and Stop Card Fraud Retailer Pack) which aims to educate merchants on the dangers of CNP fraud and the steps which can be taken to prevent it.

Government are also involved in the development of Project Endurance, an initiative aimed at launching an internet security awareness campaign in 2005. The project brings together a number of UK Government Departments and law enforcement organisations with a number of high-profile private sector companies. This campaign is to be targeted at micro businesses and consumers, primarily aimed at helping these users gain confidence in using the internet.

Dangerous Driving

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the steps he has taken to strengthen the punishments available to courts when dealing with people who have caused death by bad driving. [192977]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 21 October 2004]: We have increased the maximum penalties for causing death by dangerous driving and causing death by careless driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs from 10 to 14 years imprisonment, and for aggravated vehicle taking where a death occurs from five years to 14 years imprisonment. The new maximum penalties for these offences were introduced in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and apply to all offences committed on or after 27 February 2004.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the properties occupied by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004; and what the (A) area and (B) annual rental value (1) in aggregate and (2) in each case was in each year. [196069]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 4 November 2004]: The addresses of Home Office properties are not disclosed for national and personal security reasons.

The non-agency part of my Department currently occupies 1,498 properties which have a combined floor area of 773,357 square metres. Home Office agencies occupy 605 properties which have a combined floor area of 3,606,948 square metres.

The figures exclude premises that are held under service agreements and those where costs are shared with other Government Departments where the other Department pays the rent. The total number of properties figure includes leased residential accommodation but as the floor areas of this type of property are not known residential floor area figures have been excluded.

A rental valuation of the estate has not been undertaken. Historic records in respect of earlier years are not kept.

Departmental IT

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the Department's (a) implemented and (b) planned computer systems use open source software; and what plans are in place to raise this level. [195654]

Fiona Mactaggart: The choice of software to meet the business needs of the Home Office largely rests with our contracted strategic ISIT suppliers who include the consideration of open source solutions on a level basis with proprietary software in accordance with the Governments open source software police, which would include a test to ensure value for money. The Governments policy on open source is available on www.govtalk.gov.uk.

Current suppliers to the Home Office are not known to extensively use, or have plans for implementing, open source software. None of the major non-PFI delivered projects utilise open source software.

However within parts of the Home Office, where they no longer operate under PFI arrangements for IT there is a greater degree of choice over the software used e.g. The Immigration and Nationality Directorate intend to trial Linux solutions in a research and development area, as well as such things as Open Office, Apache, Tomcat, Mozilla.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196151]

Fiona Mactaggart: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the right hon. Member for Haltemprice and Howden (David Davis) on 15 July 2004, Official Report, column 583W.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's target is for the interval between publication of (a) departmental announcements and documents and (b) material published by public bodies for which his Department has oversight and their posting online; and what the average interval was in the latest year for which figures are available. [195393]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office seeks, wherever possible, to ensure that publication on the internet is simultaneous with publication in other media.

In doing so, the Department follows guidance contained in section 2.2 of the "Guidance for UK Government Websites" available at www.cabinet office.gov.uk/e-government/webguidelines.

The Department does not keep statistics on typical intervals between publication and posting online, nor do we hold information about the operation of agency and non-departmental public body websites.

Departmental Publications (Access)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what proportion of publications issued by his Department are available in (a) Braille, (b) autoprint, (c) large print and (d) easy read format. [194287]

Fiona Mactaggart: All Publications produced by the Home Office are readily made available in these formats on request as this has proved to be the most cost-effective approach.

If publications relate directly to people with disabilities then these formats would be produced as a matter of course.

Publications produced this year in alternative formats:

	Number
Braille	15
Large print	4
Audio tape/CD	4
Easy read format[1]	—

[1] All publications are produced in plain English.

4.25 per cent. of publications are currently produced in these formats (demand is low).

The Home Office follows the good practice guidelines included in a range of central guidance including: "Let's Make it Accessible" (improving government information for disabled people); The Informability Manual, and Guidelines for UK Government Websites (illustrated handbook for web management teams).

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the staff of the Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196136]

Fiona Mactaggart: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 619W.

Detention Centres

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the detention centres in England and Wales. [194138]

Mr. Browne: Section 66 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 changed the name of detention centres to removal centres. There are nine immigration removal centres in England and one in Scotland. There are no immigration removal centres in Wales. The following table lists immigration removal centres and indicates their location:

Centre	Location
Campsfield	Oxfordshire
Colnbrook	Heathrow
Dover	Dover
Dungavel	Strathaven, South Lanarkshire
Harmondsworth	Heathrow
Haslar	Gosport, Hampshire
Lindholme	Doncaster
Oakington	Cambridgeshire
Tinsley House	Gatwick
Yarl's Wood	Bedfordshire

Domestic Violence

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures the Government are taking to tackle domestic violence in North Yorkshire; and how many convictions for domestic violence there have been in each year since 1997. [192403]

Paul Goggins: As part of a three-year funding package from November 2003 to March 2006, the Home Office has allocated £230,000 to North Yorkshire, spread evenly between the eight Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships (CDRPs), to improve local responses to tackling domestic violence.

The eight CDRPs in North Yorkshire work closely with each other and with North Yorkshire police and have formed the North Yorkshire Domestic Abuse Initiative which employs four full-time domestic abuse co-ordinators. In addition, the North Yorkshire Domestic Abuse Strategy has just completed its initial consultation stage.

There is no specific offence of domestic violence, but we are currently working with the Crown Prosecution Service to develop a new performance indicator for tracking domestic violence cases.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long it has taken, on average, to reach the first positive decision for applications under the domestic violence rule. [195649]

Mr. Browne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate is responsible for considering applications for indefinite leave to remain from victims of domestic violence using special provisions under the Immigration Rules. Information on the average length of time to reach the first positive decision in these applications is not currently available.

Information on immigration applications is published annually in the Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom". The next publication covering 2003 was published on 16 November 2004 on the Home Office Research and Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Drunk Driving

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions for drunk driving resulted in a custodial sentence by courts in the Greater London area in each of the last five years. [197706]

Caroline Flint: Information taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database on convictions and custodial sentences for offences of driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs 1998 to 2002 is given in the table. Data for 2003 will be available early in 2005.

Findings of guilt and immediate custodial sentences at all courts for offences of driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs within Greater London[1] 1998–2002

	Findings of guilt	Number of offences Immediate custody[2]
1998	14,190	1,059
1999	12,650	843
2000	11,963	895
2001	11,422	938
2002	13,126	939

[1] Metropolitan and City of London police force areas combined.

[2] Immediate custody includes sentences of secure training order, detention and training order, young offender institution and unsuspended sentence of imprisonment.

Driving Offences

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drivers convicted of driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs in each of the last five year had a previous conviction for the same offence. [197720]

Caroline Flint: I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Caithness, Sutherland and Easter Ross (John Thurso) on 14 October 2004.

Drug Abuse Treatment

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been allocated to the treatment of drug abuse among offenders in each of the last five years. [196805]

Caroline Flint: Total community treatment budgets, comprising ring-fenced and local funds, that benefit problematic drug users with a history of offending are estimated as follows:

£ million

	Allocation
2001–02	287
2002–03	322
2003–04	436
2004–05	[1]457
2005–06	[1]508

[1] Estimated

Drug Treatment and Testing Orders (DTTOs), which are community sentences with a drug treatment requirement, have been allocated the following funding:

£ million

	Allocation
2000–01[1]	20
2001–02	40
2002–03	36
2003–04	53.7
2004–05	76

[1] Six months only

In addition, Her Majesty's Prison Services also fund the treatment of drug misusers in prison.

Of further note, the Drug Intervention Programme (formerly known as the Criminal Justice Interventions Programme) provides improved access to treatment for drug misusing offenders, as well as supporting their positive reintegration into society. The following table shows the estimated annual central funding figures for the programme:

Criminal Justice Interventions Programme: Funding

£ million
2003–04[1]	55
2004–05[2]	188
2005–06[3]	250

[1] Estimated out-turn

[2] Estimated figure

[3] Provisional allocation

Note:

This does not include some of the resources used by local partnerships to assist in delivering the programme.

EU Visitors (Northern Ireland)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the change in number of citizens from EU accession countries travelling to Northern Ireland since the expansion of the European Union in May. [197612]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mrs. Iris Robinson, dated 16 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the change in number of citizens from EU Accession Countries travelling to Northern Ireland since the expansion of the EU in May. I am replying in his absence. (197612)

Visits to the UK by overseas residents are estimated from data collected on the International Passenger Survey (IPS). The survey is conducted at major airports, and on major sea and tunnel routes, and the data collected is weighted up to national passenger figures provided by the Civil Aviation Authority, British Airports Authority, Department for Transport, Eurotunnel and Eurostar. Although this provides estimates of visits to the UK, it should be noted that interviewing is not carried out in Northern Ireland.

Because of the small number of interviews carried out with nationals of the EU Accession Countries, as well as the factor that interviewing is not carried out in Northern Ireland, the IPS is unable to provide reliable information for visits to Northern Ireland by nationals of the EU Accession Countries.

Drug Seizures

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what quantity of illegal drugs were seized by the police in (a) 1997 and (b) the most recent year for which figures are available. [191246]

Caroline Flint: The quantity of illegal drugs seized by the police in 1997 and 2002 is detailed in the table. The 2002 data is currently the latest published data.

Table 1: Seizures of controlled drugs made by the police and other authority[1] by drug type and amount seized.

Extradition

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests are pending for extradition of United Kingdom citizens (a) to the United States and (b) from the United States to the United Kingdom. [194225]

Caroline Flint: As at 25 October 2004, there are 21 British citizens who are the subject of US requests for their extradition from the UK to the US, whose cases have been placed before the courts. These figures include some British citizens who are dual nationals. We do not have complete information on nationality for outgoing requests but there are eight UK requests pending for extradition of persons from the US to the UK.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many requests for extradition of United Kingdom citizens were made by the Government to the United States Administration in (a) 2001, (b) 2002, (c) 2003 and (d) 2004 to date; for what reason the extradition was sought; how many of these requests have been granted to date; and if he will make a statement; [194226]

(2) how many requests for extradition of United Kingdom citizens were made by the United States to the United Kingdom in (a) 2001, (b) 2002, (c) 2003 and (d) 2004 to date; how many of these requests for extradition have been granted to date; and if he will make a statement. [194227]

Caroline Flint: We do not retain records of nationality or of the types of offences after cases are closed. I therefore set out, for those years, the total number of requests made by the US which resulted in arrests for extradition from the UK to the US, as follows:

	Individuals
2001	14
2002	8
2003	9
2004 (to date)	18

Because extradition cases are of varying duration, those returned to the US in those years are not necessarily the same individuals as those who were the subjects of the above requests. The total numbers returned, of all nationalities, are as follows:

	Individuals
2001	8
2002	12
2003	6
2004 (to date)	6

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests have been made by the United States Administration to the United Kingdom for extradition of British citizens since the Government introduced the existing extradition laws; and if he will make a statement. [194228]

Caroline Flint: Since the introduction of the Extradition Act 2003 the US has requested the extradition of 12 British citizens, whose cases have been placed before the courts.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many United Kingdom citizens who are subject to extradition orders have consented to their removal to the United States; and how many of these requests have been granted in each of the last four years. [194229]

Caroline Flint: We do not retain records of nationality after cases are closed, two individuals have consented to their extradition to the US in the last four years.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the United States Administration on ensuring that British citizens extradited to the United States are not subject to the death penalty; and if he will make a statement. [194747]

Caroline Flint: Whenever the UK receives an extradition request from the United States, or any other country, where the subject of the request has been, will be, or could be sentenced to death, extradition will not be ordered unless the Secretary of State receives strict written assurances from the requesting state that the death sentence, if imposed, would not be carried out.

Failed Asylum Seekers

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers are receiving sector 4 support; and if he will make a statement. [189958]

Mr. Browne: The most recent information shows that 869 unsuccessful asylum seekers are in receipt of section 4 support.

Falun Gong

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many known members of the Falun Gong movement have applied for asylum in each of the last four years; how many of these have had their application rejected; and how many are still awaiting a decision. [193616]

Mr. Browne: Applications for asylum in the UK are collated and published by nationality, and are made in the UK rather than from abroad. The available data do not include breakdowns by religion or membership of specific groups, which would not necessarily be reliable even if such information were collated.

Information on asylum applications is published in quarterly web pages and in the annual statistical bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom". Copies of these publications and others relating to general immigration to the UK are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Foreign Agencies

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether foreign agencies are entitled to raid UK premises (a) with and (b) without his Department's authorisation. [195834]

Caroline Flint: No foreign agencies are entitled to act in the UK without prior authorisation from the appropriate Government Department. Any acts requiring search of premises and seizure of property in connection with a foreign enquiry could only be carried out by UK law enforcement agencies under strict legal criteria pursuant to the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

Gurkhas

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on UK citizenship for the Gurkhas. [195535]

Mr. Browne: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Home Secretary announced on 30 September a change in policy for Gurkhas and other non-British members of the British Armed Forces which will enable them to apply for settlement in the UK on discharge from the Armed Forces. This will in turn provide an avenue for naturalisation as a British citizen. This new policy on settlement was implemented by an amendment to the Immigration Rules which took effect on 25 October. Officials are now considering citizenship applications made by people granted settlement under the new rules.

Horse Passports

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions he has issued to police forces with reference to the enforcement of the horse passport regulations. [193484]

Alun Michael: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency will be responsible for enforcing the checks carried out at slaughterhouses, while local authorities (in particular trading standards departments) will be responsible for enforcing the law elsewhere. We have not issued any instructions to police forces regarding enforcement of the horse passport regulations.

Identity Cards

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated costs are of introducing a national identity card, broken down by (a) installing computer systems and software, (b) issuing cards and (c) running costs. [191139]

Mr. Browne: Set up costs for the first three years have been estimated at £186 million. Costs thereafter will be covered by charges. It would not be appropriate to publish more detailed information while we prepare options for procurement and implementation of the identity cards scheme.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what safeguards will be put in place to ensure that legislation to provide for identity cards will give primacy to the privacy provisions of the Gender Recognition Bill. [191892]

Mr. Browne: Section 22 of the Gender Recognition Act 2004 sets out how information relating to a person's application for a gender recognition certificate or about the gender history of a successful applicant, is to be protected. Subsection (4) sets out the exceptions to the general prohibition on disclosure of such information, including where this information is disclosed in accordance with any provision of an enactment "other than this section".

The draft Identity Cards Bill establishes to whom information may be disclosed and creates a specific offence of unauthorised disclosure of information (at clause 29). Clause 24 of the draft Bill sets out the rules to be followed when information is disclosed from the National Identity Register. During the consultation on the draft Bill, we have discussed this clause and other provisions of the Bill with interested parties and it is our view that these rules are consistent with the provisions of the Gender Recognition Act.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department what consultation he has undertaken regarding the right of privacy in relation to the identity card scheme. [191946]

Mr. Browne: The Government have undertaken two formal consultations on its proposals for an identity cards scheme, and on draft legislation. In addition officials have had several meetings with officials from the Office of the Information Commissioner and with other interested parties.

The identity cards scheme will be covered by the Data Protection Act 1998 and will comply with the data protection principles set out at Schedule 1 of that Act. This will include the right of people to check the information recorded about them subject to exemptions set out in the Data Protection Act eg in cases of national security. The draft Bill sets clear limitations on the information which can be held on the scheme and requires the consent of a card holder before a check is made except in limited, specified circumstances such as checks by the police when a person has been arrested.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with IT companies on providing services for the identity card project. [193386]

Mr. Browne: The Identity Cards Programme has met a range of companies, including those in the IT sector, as part of its market sounding activities. Market sounding is the process of assessing the reaction of the market (that is, all potential suppliers considered collectively) to a proposed requirement and procurement approach , and is recognised as best practice in Government procurement.

Priority for market sounding to date has been given particularly to the smartcard and biometric sectors where the technology is developing quickly, standards are evolving and there is uncertainty about future trends. Seminars targeted at the IT sector have been run in conjunction with Intellect, the trade body for the UK based information technology, telecommunications and electronics industry and other events are being planned to address the wider requirements of the programme.

Market sounding focuses on suppliers as a whole, rather than the merits of individual suppliers. It includes no element of supplier selection (choosing suitable suppliers) or bid evaluation (looking at proposals, technical solutions or prices). There is no commitment of any kind involved—on either side nor any advantage to be gained by a supplier by getting involved. Further it is stressed that there is no formal procurement underway at the moment.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passports were recorded as (a) lost and (b) stolen in the London area in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [143394]

Mr. Browne: On 8 December 2003 the UK Passport Service implemented a new reporting procedure and database for passports which are lost and stolen, and for those which are subsequently recovered.

The total number of passports recorded as lost or stolen for the period 8 December 2003 to date is 277,421 and the recovered total is 25,456. Of these 25,898 were reported as lost and stolen in the London area and 4,398 as recovered.

Illegal Immigration

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the numbers of illegal entries to the UK by (a) rail, (b) sea and (c) air in each of the last three years. [191268]

Mr. Browne: Information on the ports at which illegal entry is detected is not held centrally and would only be available by examination of individual case-files at disproportionate cost.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department what the Government's policy is on how the EU can further develop its policy to fight illegal immigration. [192141]

Mr. Browne: The Government supports work that adds value to the efforts of member states in tackling illegal immigration, an approach we have advocated throughout the on-going negotiations of the new five-year work programme on Justice and Home Affairs.

In the context of these negotiations the UK wants to see: effective exchange of information between all member states; the incorporation of biometrics into visas and EU nationals' passports; and the establishment of the European Border Agency which will take forward high quality risk analysis and co-ordination of member states joint action at the EU external borders. Together these different work strands will enable the EU to adopt a more intelligence-led, outcome focused policy towards managing the external border and combating illegal immigration.

The UK supports the continuing need to work in partnership with third countries to improve the management of migratory flows, addressing the factors that encourage or force people to leave their countries and preventing illegal immigration, including people smuggling and trafficking. This requires a coherent and comprehensive approach, working with source and transit countries and EU and bilateral action.

While we are largely supportive of the way in which EU illegal immigration policy is developing, we do not believe that a case has been made for the need for a European Border Guard. We believe that member states should remain responsible for managing their own borders.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use the UK makes of the secure web-based platform set up by the EU Commission to assist member states' migration management and to exchange strategic, tactical and operational information concerning illegal migration. [192142]

Mr. Browne: The UK has participated actively in the development of the secure web-based platform set up by the EU Commission to assist member states' migration management and to exchange strategic, tactical and operational information concerning illegal migration—commonly known as the "ICONet". The Immigration and Nationality Directorate Intelligence Service, among others, was asked by the Commission to trial the system. At the moment it cannot handle classified material but the development anticipates that eventually messages up to a "Restricted" level of classification will be handled.

The system allows member states (MS) to notify events such as large scale migration, movements of suspect ships and other information to combat illegal immigration. The system does not permit the exchange of nominal data. Once the information is received it is assessed for intelligence value and then handled according to the Association of Chief Police Officers' standards for intelligence material and disseminated if appropriate. The UK is working with the Commission and other MS to fully develop the "ICONet" as an important resource to combat abuse.

Immigration

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many suspected sham marriages have been reported to his Department by registrars in each of the last 24 months; how many prosecutions have been brought; how many convictions have been obtained; and what penalties have been imposed. [193265]

Mr. Browne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate has received the following notifications of alleged sham marriages from Register Offices in the last 24 months:

	2004	2003	2002
Jan	364	110
Feb	420	159
Mar	458	210
Apr	386	201
May	329	176
Jun	317	195
Jul	239	242
Aug	212	172
Sep	249	260
Oct		259	171
Nov		323	140
Dec		377	127

It is not possible to provide a monthly breakdown of results for previous activity to counter marriage abuse as such information has only recently started to be recorded in an easily collated format. However, since April 2002, enforcement teams in London have undertaken a number of operations in respect of marriage abuse with over 240 arrests and over 110 individuals charged with a range of offences, including perjury, deception and conspiracy to defraud the Secretary of State. Sentences passed on individuals taking part in sham marriages have ranged from six to 24 months. In addition, those criminals responsible for organising these marriages have received sentences in excess of 18 months.

The Government are introducing a number of additional measures to protect the integrity of UK marriage ceremonies. These include establishing a joint team of caseworkers and immigration officers to analyse intelligence and follow up reports from Registrars more effectively. In addition, a joint working group between the Home Office and Registrars has been established to share intelligence and enable enforcement efforts to be better targeted.

Legislation has also been introduced to restrict the capacity to authorise marriage involving non-EEA nationals to designated register offices, which will enable us to focus our enforcement efforts into a more concentrated area, and also allow intelligence and expertise on marriage abuse to be built up in these dedicated centres. In addition, a new pre-marriage lawful status eligibility requirement will be introduced for marriages involving non-EEA foreign nationals to further deal with those seeking to circumvent immigration controls by entering into sham marriages. This would give registrars the power to refuse to accept notification of marriage in the absence of a document from the Home Office or an entry clearance for marriage.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to publish the amended eligibility criteria in relation to the one-off exercise to allow families who have been here for at least three years to stay launched in 2003; and whether he plans to extend the deadline for applications beyond 31 December. [193460]

Mr. Browne: I wrote to right hon. and hon. Members on 19 August and the eligibility criteria are published on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate website (www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk). I will place a copy of the criteria in the Libraries of the House. I have no plans to extend the closing date for applications beyond 31 December 2004. Anyone who thinks they may be eligible should contact the Home Office at PO Box 1541, Croydon CR9 2YS as soon as possible and no later than that date.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. [194375]

Mr. Browne: As of 30 June 2004, there were 14,501 full-time equivalent staff employed at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate.

Immigration Controls

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reintroduce embarkation controls from non-EU countries. [186552]

Mr. Browne: The Government announced on 28 September that as part of its ambitious long-term e-Borders programme Project Semaphore, the first stage, would be under way by the end of this year. This pilot scheme will use on-line technology and advance passenger information provided by airlines to screen and record individuals as they enter and leave the UK. It is proposed that the e-Borders programme will provide a modern, high-tech replacement for the outdated paper embarkation controls.

Immigration Detention Centres (Chaplaincy Services)

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision has been made to provide full chaplaincy services at immigration detention centres; and if he will make a statement. [194034]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 26 October 2004]: In accordance with the detention centre rules 2001 every immigration removal centre must appoint a manager of religious affairs. The religious affairs manager's task is to facilitate religious observance and the provision of pastoral care for detained persons with the assistance of suitably qualified staff, including ministers of religion. An operating standard on religion, which sets out the minimum requirements expected of removal centres in relation to religious affairs, was issued to all removal centre operators in December 2002. The performance of the religious affairs office in each removal centre is monitored continually.

Immigration Officers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration officers were recruited in each of the last 10 years. [191451]

Mr. Browne: The number of immigration officers recruited in each of the last 10 years is:

	Number
1995	95
1996	31
1997	2
1998	1
1999	50
2000	257
2001	417
2002	417
2003	289
2004[1]	135

[1] To 26 May only.

These figures do not include serving staff who moved into the IO grade as a result of transfer or promotion.

Indefinite Leave to Enter

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times he has exercised his discretion on compassionate grounds and granted indefinite leave to enter in 2004. [194376]

Mr. Browne: Data on the number of persons granted indefinite leave to enter the UK on compassionate grounds is not available.

Since December 2003 persons seeking leave to enter at a port for stays of more than six months are required to hold a United Kingdom Residence Permit. It is not possible to say how many of those were granted on compassionate grounds.

There is no power of discretion to grant leave to enter for more than six months at a port of entry.

John Lennon Airport

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of immigration controls at John Lennon airport, Liverpool. [191485]

Mr. Browne: Since Liverpool airport has been in operation immigration officers have routinely attended all flights. All arriving passengers are examined by an immigration officer and those subject to control will have their details checked against the Warnings Index (a database of known immigration offenders). Local managers monitor flight schedules on a regular basis and adjust staffing rotas to ensure adequate coverage at all times and in accordance with risk assessment.

Furthermore there are a range of measures in place to stop inadequately documented passengers arriving in the UK. These include an informed and robust visa strategy; a network of airline liaison officers posted abroad; close co-operation with carriers, port authorities and our EU colleagues.

Knife Crimes

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government is taking to prevent under-aged children from purchasing knives on the internet. [193069]

Caroline Flint: It in an offence to sell a knife to a person under the age of 16. It is the responsibility of the company selling the knife to ensure that the person is over 16. It is for the police to prosecute those companies who breach the law.

Lord Chief Justice

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Lord Chief Justice; and if he will make a statement. [194377]

Paul Goggins: My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary has regular meetings with the Lord Chief Justice. He last met the Lord Chief Justice on 5 May 2004, and has spoken to him on a number of occasions since then.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mobile phones were used by (a) Ministers and special advisers and (b) officials in his Department in each year since 1997; how many were (i) lost and (ii) stolen; and what their cost was. [191445]

Fiona Mactaggart: Records on mobile telephony are not held centrally and in order to obtain information would incur disproportionate costs. I can, however, provide information on mobile phones and associated equipment purchased via our Central Procurement unit since 1997, which is as follows:

1997	175.00
1998	5,516.16
1999	163,933.83
2000	146,201.48
2002	64,750.00
2003	78,018.22

Information is not held centrally on call and line rental charges and could be provided, again, only at disproportionate cost.

NGOs

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to ensure that where a non-governmental organisation is supported by a charitable trust there is a clear separation between the two organisations. [194842]

Fiona Mactaggart: This is a matter for the Charity Commission as the Government Department responsible for the regulation of charities in England and Wales. The Director of Policy and Strategy at the Charity Commission will write to the hon. Member and a copy of her reply will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance is given to non-governmental organisations on creating clear separation between charitable trust and campaigning activity; [194843]

(2) how the Charity Commission ensures that non-governmental organisations with charitable status comply with the relevant regulations. [194844]

Fiona Mactaggart: This is a matter for the Charity Commission as the Government Department responsible for the regulation of charities in England and Wales. The director of policy and strategy at the Charity Commission will write to the hon. Member and a copy of her reply will be placed in the Library.

Night Clubs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the criteria are for the granting of licences to night clubs; and whether the location of CCTV cameras are taken into account by licensing authorities. [197874]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

For a nightclub to trade under current law, a licence for the provision of alcohol and a special hours certificate must be obtained from the licensing justices and a music and dancing certificate of suitability from the local authority. For a club to be granted a liquor licence and a special hours certificate, the justices must be satisfied that the applicant is a "fit and proper" person, and that the whole or any part of the premises is structurally adapted, and bona fide used or intended to be used, for providing members with music and dancing and substantial refreshment to which the supply of intoxicating liquor is ancillary. Conditions may be attached to these permissions in appropriate circumstances, including those which require the use of CCTV cameras on or outside the premises, by either the licensing justices or the local authority.

Offender Management

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate has been made of the number of (a) male high security, (b) male category B, (c) male category C, (d) male category D, (e) male local, (f) male remand, (g) female local, (h) female closed, (i) female open, (j) male closed young offender institutions and (k) male open young offender institutions juvenile places that will be required in each of the 10 areas under the new National Offender Management Service structure in each of the next five years. [168836]

Paul Goggins: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) will, in the immediate future, continue to plan its requirement for prison capacity for all categories of prisoner on a national basis, taking account of suitable regimes and factors such as closeness to home.

In due course NOMS will move towards a regional framework, with Regional Offender Managers commissioning places according to local need. Planning for some aspects of the prison estate, such as the accommodation for high security category A prisoners will, however, remain co-ordinated centrally.

Offender Assessment

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in encouraging the Prison Service and Probation Service to share data relating to the Offender Assessment System needs assessment. [197678]

Paul Goggins: The Offender Assessment System (OASys) was developed for use in both the National Probation Service and the Prison Service. There are clear benefits in having a common tool.

When the two services' OASys IT systems are connected to one another next year it will be possible to pass completed assessments electronically between them, quickly and securely. Until then staff are expected to send assessments in hard copy and have been reminded of this by the National Probation Directorate and Prison Service Headquarters.

Overseas Corruption

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many allegations of overseas corruption on the register held by the National Criminal Intelligence Service relate to offences that occurred prior to February 2002. [197960]

Caroline Flint: There were eight allegations of overseas corruption on the register held by the National Criminal Intelligence Service that related to offences that occurred prior to February 2002.

Overseas Corruption Offences

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many allegations there are on the register of allegations of overseas corruption offences. [194684]

Caroline Flint: The National Criminal Intelligence Service has 37 allegations on the register of allegations of overseas corruption offences.

Mr. Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the allegations on the register of allegations of overseas corruption offences have come from (a) Africa, (b) Central and South America, (c) North America, (d) Asia, (e) Western Europe, (f) Eastern Europe, (g) Russia and the former Soviet Republics and (h) the Middle East. [illegible]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Africa	14
(b) Central and South America	4
(c) North America	2
(d) Asia	3
(e) Western Europe	8
(f) Eastern Europe	1
(g) Russia and the former Soviet Republics	0
(h) Middle East	4

Passport Control

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the current time taken for British passport holders to pass through passport control at Heathrow Terminal One. [195534]

Mr. Browne: The UK Immigration Service is committed to clearing bona fide passengers with minimal delay while ensuring immigration controls remain robust. It has set standards for passenger processing times, which comply with international standards, although there is no specific measurement of the time take to clear British passport holders of Heathrow Terminal 1. These standards are embedded in the UK Immigration Service's annual business objectives, and are kept under regular review.

The UK Immigration Service's performance is also measured independently by the British Airports Authority, which includes queuing times. The Immigration Service including Terminal 1 continues to score well against this measure and performance is at a comparable level compared to 12 months ago.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to ensure that British passport holders returning to the UK are dealt with (a) effectively and (b) efficiently at passport control points. [195537]

Mr. Browne: The passports of British nationals are subject to examination at ports of entry. While we are committed to fulfilling our obligations to process British nationals without delay, the security of our borders is a priority and it is imperative that effective controls are in place so that criminality and illegal migration are identified and appropriate action taken.

The majority of international travellers will understand the benefits of the examination of British passports. To reduce impact on queuing times we are negotiating with port operators to develop flexible queuing systems wherever possible. Ports managers have been advised to respond quickly by deploying additional staff if significant queues develop and to make themselves accessible to passengers to explain why such levels of examination are necessary.

Passports

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to ensure that, where it is known to the Passport Agency that passport applications and accompanying documents are lost or stolen, these are not used to make false applications or acquire false identities. [194732]

Mr. Browne: If the UK Passport Service (UKPS) becomes aware of the loss or theft of a passport application and supporting documents, the details of the passport application and documents submitted are recorded. For each application this record is checked as part of the systems the UKPS has in place to authenticate a passport applicant's identity. These arrangements should ensure that false applications are identified, and that passports are not issued in false identities.

Police

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces have case custody computer systems; and what steps are being taken to increase this number. [191288]

Caroline Flint: Custody and case preparation systems are designed to reduce bureaucracy and improve efficiency in police forces in the processing and handling of arrests. The case preparation system provides other criminal justice organisations with accurate, timely, data that meets the needs of victims, witnesses and other criminal justice organisations. Once implemented the system has the ability to deliver business benefit to both the police service and other criminal justice organisations.

Currently nine police forces are using the National Strategy for Police Information Systems (NSPIS) developed custody application and 11 are using the case preparation application. A number of other forces are using in-house legacy or off-the-shelf systems for one or both these functions.

The Police Information Technology Organisation plans to have at least 20 forces working operationally with NSPIS custody and a further 20 with NSPIS case preparation this financial year. Other forces should have custody and case applications in place by 31 March 2006.

Forces are being encouraged to take these applications by a number of means and we are working closely with the Association of Chief Police Officers to ensure that the police service has systems that will join up with the rest of the criminal justice system.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to monitor the revised guidance issued by the (a) Press Complaints Commission and (b) Association of Chief Police Officers' guidelines on anonymity for individuals who are under investigation but have not been charged. [197437]

Paul Goggins: The Interdepartmental Ministerial Group on Sexual Offending will examine the impact of the revised guidance after May 2005, when the Sexual Offences Act 2003 will have been in operation for 12 months.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the use of arresting officers in progressing arrests to charge; and if he will make a statement. [196234]

Ms Blears: The processing of an arrest can result in a significant amount of administrative paperwork for the arresting officer, leading to their abstraction from front line duties.

We are determined to reduce unnecessary paperwork and bureaucracy in the police service. There are a number of projects under way to assist and encourage forces to release police officers from tasks where their powers and training are not required, to increase the time spent on the frontline, and specifically on patrol by police officers.

As part of a range of work funded by the Workforce Modernisation Implementation Fund, Northumbria, Wiltshire and Lincolnshire police are actively piloting models utilising police staff investigators, case builders and other supporting roles. These pilots will support police officers as part of integrated criminal justice management process, following arrests being made.

The processing of an arrest, and the associated functions of criminal justice units within forces, including prisoner handling, case building and investigation, are areas which can be effectively undertaken by police staff and other members of the extended police family.

Polygamous Marriages

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to tackle the problem of unregistered polygamous marriages; and if he will make a statement. [195466]

Mr. Browne: Government policy is to prevent the formation of polygamous households in this country.

The Immigration Rules do not allow entry clearance to be granted to the wife of a man if:

the marriage is polygamous; and there is another woman already living as the wife of the man in the UK.

Prison Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the results of the DORE Achievement Centres and dyslexia, dyspraxia and attention deficit treatment programme with the Prison Service in Stafford; and what plans he has to extend the programme to other prisons. [146170]

Paul Goggins: The results of the programme run at Stafford prison are encouraging, albeit on the basis of a very small sample.

The research raises some complex issues and needs a co-ordinated approach to further development involving health, physical education and education providers. I have asked those responsible for the DORE programme to discuss their work further with the Prison Service.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the real terms change in total spending for the Prison Service was in each of the last 10 years. [169092]

Paul Goggins: The real term changes in total spending for the Prison Service over the last 10 years are given in the following table.

Prison service budget

	£ million	Real terms £ million 2003–04 prices	Year on year increase (percentage)	Deflators: Index 2003–04 = 100
1994–95	1,597.900	2,019.463	—	79.125

Notes:

1. These are figures for the Prison Service.
2. Please note that from 2001–02 onwards figures are on accruals basis. Figures are cash prior to that.
3. Note also that from 2003–04 onwards the figures reflect transfers of functions and funding to Correctional Services/NOMS, including private prisons.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish a business case in respect of contestability plans for the probation and prison services. [192730]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The case for the establishment of the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) is outlined in Patrick Carter's independent report "Managing Offenders—Reducing Crime". The draft detailed business case will be presented to the NOMS Programme Board shortly.

Prisoners (Employment)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his latest estimate is of how many hours on average per week a prisoner serving a sentence in a London prison spends in employment; and if he will make a statement. [197715]

Paul Goggins: Prisoners in London establishments spend an average of 9.7 hours a week engaged in work related purposeful activity. The Prison Service continues to provide work opportunities for as many prisoners as possible. The figure is an average for all prisoners in London establishments. These establishments are mainly local prisons which serve the courts, and contain a high proportion of remand prisoners. As remand prisoners are not obliged to undertake work, their numbers bring down the overall average of work related hours. Additionally, local prisons are most likely to experience high levels of overcrowding and the amount of work available for each prisoner will naturally diminish as the population increases.

Prisons

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of (a) male and (b) female prisoners have (i) self-harmed, (ii) attempted suicide and (iii) committed suicide while in prison in each of the last five years. [191332]

Paul Goggins: The numbers and percentages of individuals who self-harmed or apparently took their own lives in prisons (1999–2003), are included in the following tables. While the new self-harm reporting system which started in 2003 has improved the consistency with which such incidents are reported, and improved the detail and quality of the information collected, it makes meaningful comparisons across time more difficult.

Table 1: Numbers and proportions of male self-inflicted deaths and self-harm

	Male Prison population	Numbers of male self-inflicted deaths	Percentage of males who killed themselves	Numbers of males who harmed themselves	Percentage of males who harmed themselves
1999	61,523	86	0.14	2,569	4
2000	61,252	73	0.12	2,922	5
2001	62,560	67	0.11	3,510	6
2002	66,479	86	0.13	3,485	5
2003	68,612	80	0.12	—	—

Table 2: Numbers and proportions of female self-inflicted deaths and self- harm

	Female prison population	Number of female self-inflicted deaths	Percentage of females who killed themselves	Number of females who harmed themselves	Percentage of females who harmed themselves
1999	3,247	5	0.15	296	9
2000	3,350	8	0.24	413	12
2001	3,740	6	0.16	632	17
2002	4,299	9	0.21	904	21
2003	4,425	14	0.32	—	—

Note: A new form for reporting self injury (the F213sh) was introduced across the prison estate in December 2002.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change diets in (a) prisons and (b) young offender institutions, following recent studies on the effects of diet on behaviour. [195768]

Paul Goggins: In 1996, a study was conducted at Her Majesty's Young Offender Institution (HMYOI) Aylesbury by 'Natural Justice', a research charity investigating the relationship between nutrition and criminal behaviour. They reported a significant reduction in offending behaviour amongst young offenders who had taken nutritional supplements.

Half of the young men participating received pills containing vitamins, minerals and essential fatty acids. The other half received placebo or dummy pills. The researchers recorded the number and type of offences each of the prisoners committed in the nine months before they received the pills and in the nine months during the trial. They found that the group that received the supplements committed 25 per cent. fewer offences than those who had been given the placebo.

The results were independently reviewed by the Research, Development and Statistics Directorate (RDS) at the Home Office. RDS acknowledged that the results of the study showed a positive effect on behaviour. However, the number of participants involved was small and the study did not follow through to see whether re-offending reduced or continued once the trainees had left the establishment. This made it very difficult to validate wider implications from the results.

Natural Justice have plans to replicate the project on a much broader scale. Approval was given in October 2002 for Natural Justice to have access to Warren Hill and Stoke Heath if they could satisfy ethical requirements and obtain funding for the research. On similar grounds, the Scottish Prison Service approved access to Polmont.

Beyond this research, other work is taking place to ensure that individual prisoners are encouraged to eat healthily, and that the food provided is nutritious. A partnership between the catering, education and physical education departments in prisons encourages the promotion of high-starch, fibre-rich foods rather than sugary or processed ones, or those which contain too much salt or sugar.

Catering staff are provided with training information and the skills required to produce healthy food. The Prison Service runs nutrition-training courses at intermediate level for prison caterers, which lead to a formal qualification from the Royal Institute of Public Health. Some establishments involve the local hospital dietician in their menu planning and some have obtained Healthy Eating Awards (Heartbeat) from their local authorities.

The content of meals provided in prisons and young offender institutions is constantly evolving with prison caterers being aware of and trained to provide nutritious and healthy diets. Prisoners and young offenders are increasingly being educated and made aware of the importance of healthy eating.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of prisons offer a 24 hour counselling service; and what the most common reasons are for prisoners using counselling services. [196650]

Paul Goggins: The specific information requested is not available. A wide range of counselling and support mechanisms are available to prisoners. Counselling in drug and substance misuse is provided in every prison establishment as part of the Counselling, Assessment, Referral and Treatment (CARAT) programme. Individual establishments also have arrangements for the provision of professional counselling services through both primary care trusts and local voluntary sector providers. Referrals to outside counselling services can be made through psychology, health care, the chaplaincy and mental health in-reach teams.

In common with arrangements in the community, counselling services are generally provided during normal working hours and not on a 24 hour basis. 24-hour support is, however, normally available to prisoners through listener schemes, whereby prisoners who have been trained by the Samaritans are available to provide emotional support to other prisoners. Prisoners also have access to the Samaritans by telephone.

By their very nature many counselling and support services operate on a strictly confidential basis. While comprehensive information about the reasons for seeking counselling is not available, the areas covered include physical, emotional and sexual abuse; family issues and relationship problems; suicidal and self-harm tendencies; substance abuse; and offending behaviour.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of transferring the prison health service to the national health service on prisoners reporting historical sex abuse. [197438]

Paul Goggins: No such assessment has been made. We expect all prisoners to benefit from the transfer of responsibility for prison health services to the national health service (NHS). When completed in 2006, this change will represent another significant step towards giving prisoners access to the same range and quality of health services as the general public receives from the NHS.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether prison regulations permit visits by the visually impaired to be accompanied by guide dogs. [197508]

Paul Goggins: As a service provider, the Prison Service is fully aware of its obligations under the Disability Discrimination Act and seeks to ensure it meets the needs of all visitors, including those with disabilities. Visitors accompanied by an assistance dog are welcome at prison establishments and certainly would not be excluded on this basis. However, a reasonable adjustment may need to be made to accommodate the dog and to ensure there is no distraction to patrol or passive drug dogs on site. For this reason, it is advisable that the prison is notified of any special requirements in advance of the visit.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of inmates of each (a) prison and (b) young offenders institution are detained within 50 miles of their homes, broken down by category of prisoners; and what the average (i) stay of inmates and (ii) length of time served by prison officers in each establishment is. [198200]

Paul Goggins: The proportion of each prison's population with a home address or committal court address within 50 miles of the establishment is as follows:

Mrs. Cheryl Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list prison refurbishment projects by establishment that have been undertaken since April 2000; and what the (a) date of completion or projected completion date, (b) cost of the refurbishment and (c) number of places added was in each case. [198473]

Paul Goggins: The projects in the following table are those that have been classified as major refurbishment work. Projects classified as maintenance are not included.

The primary objective of refurbishment projects is to modernise buildings and keep them fit for purpose; they are not as a general rule intended to produce additional places. A small number of places may have been created or taken out of use by individual projects but the net effect on number of places is broadly neutral.

The information supplied has been collected within the Property Services Group of Her Majesty's Prison Service, which does not deal directly with refurbishments carried out within the Private Estate. As the establishments within the Private Estate have not been running long enough for the need to modernise, it is unlikely that any large scale refurbishments have been planned so far, although some upgrading work may have been carried out at local level.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether all prisons in England and Wales have a race relations officer in service; and what action he is taking to promote such a position. [197718]

Paul Goggins: All establishments must appoint a race relations liaison officer to provide information to staff and prisoners on national and local policies and to monitor race relations within the establishment. Race relations liaison officers are allocated a core minimum of eight hours a week, with additional hours dependent on the nature of the establishment. An increasing number of establishments have also appointed full-time diversity officers. These are usually prisons that are large, have a large minority ethnic prisoner population, or are in an isolated location making community links difficult to organise.

The name and role of the race relations liaison officer s widely publicised to staff and prisoners. Many establishments display photographs of the race relation liaison officer and also members of the establishment's race relations management team.

Proceeds of Crime Act

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the value was of assets (a) seized and (b) frozen under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 in (i) 2002 and (ii) 2003, broken down by region. [197625]

Caroline Flint: The total value of criminal assets recovered under all proceeds of crime legislation was £47 million in 2002–03 and £54.5 million in 2003–04. The £47 million comprises £41 million in confiscation orders and £6 million in cash forfeitures. The £54.5 million comprises £38.9 million in confiscation orders and £15.6 million in cash forfeitures.

The confiscation and restraint powers in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 are triggered by offences committed after the provisions were brought into force on 24 March 2003.

The total value of receipts recovered under the Act in 2003–04 was just over £5 million comprising £4.7 million in cash forfeitures and £343,671 in confiscation order receipts. Information on the value of cash forfeitures broken down by region is not available. Table A shows the value of confiscation order receipts under proceeds of crime legislation broken down by magistrates courts committee areas in 2002–03 and 2003–04.

Table B shows the value of restraint orders made in 2003–04 under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 by the Crown Prosecution Service broken down by area. Information on the value of restraint orders made by HM Customs and Excise is not available. In 2003–04 the Assets Recovery Agency had 24 civil recovery cases subject to freezing orders with a total value of £14.1 million.

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the value of assets (a) seized and (b) frozen under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 in (i) the West Midlands, (ii) Birmingham and (iii) Hodge Hill was in (A) 2002, (B) 2003 and (C) 2004. [197626]

Caroline Flint: The confiscation and restraint powers in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 are triggered by offences committed after the provisions were brought into force on 24 March 2003.

The information available relates to confiscation order receipts received by the West Midlands magistrates courts committee area. The total value of confiscation order receipts recovered in the West Midlands under proceeds of crime legislation was £2,967,853 in 2002–03, and £1,308,343 in 2003–04. The total value of confiscation order receipts recovered in the West Midlands under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 in 2003–04 was £5,724 and £66,631 at the end of the second quarter in 2004–05.

The value of restraint orders obtained under the Act by the Crown Prosecution Service in the West Midlands was £275,320 in 2003–04 and £1,085,000 by the end of the second quarter in 2004–05. Information on the value of restraint orders obtained by HM Customs and Excise is not available. As at the end of September 2004 the Assets Recovery Agency had 40 civil recovery cases subject to freezing orders with a total value of £19.8 million.

Prostitution

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action is being taken by (a) his Department, (b) the police authorities and (c) immigration officials to seek to prevent women from overseas countries seeking residency in the United Kingdom to become self-employed prostitutes; and if he will make a statement. [193470]

Caroline Flint: The immigration rules do not allow residency in this country on the basis of self employment as a prostitute.

We also have strong measures in place to tackle those looking to come into the country illegally. Organised immigration crime is being addressed by Reflex, a multi-agency taskforce involving the police and immigration service and led by the National Crime Squad. Last year (April 2003–04) Reflex resulted in the disruption of 38 criminal gangs involved in organised immigration crime.

In July this year the Home Office published "Paying the Price: a consultation paper on prostitution". Part of this consultation exercise focuses on the legal framework relating to prostitution. The consultation period runs until the 26 November.

Rackspace

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what correspondence his Department had with foreign government agencies prior to the seizure of web servers from the office of Rackspace on 7 October. [197784]

Caroline Flint: Home Office officials did not enter into any correspondence with foreign government agencies in this matter prior to 7 October.

Sex Abuse Investigations

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the implications of offering anonymity to teachers accused of sexual abuse until a decision has been made by the court. [197446]

Paul Goggins: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave her on 1 July 2004, Official Report, column 394W.

Speeding Fines

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average revenue received by the Metropolitan police for speeding fines imposed by them was in each of the last three years. [197719]

Caroline Flint: Fines are imposed by courts, not by the police, and the police receive no revenue from them.

Speeding offences are also dealt with by fixed penalty notice. Fixed penalty income usually goes to the Consolidated Fund. Under the provisions of the national safety camera programme, however, local partnerships of police, magistrates courts and local authorities can net off as much income from fixed penalties resulting from camera enforcement as is needed to meet the approved costs of such enforcement. Income cannot be netted off for other purposes. The London Partnership, of which the Metropolitan police are part, was established in 2002. In its first year, it netted off approved costs of £4,549,380.

Street Crime

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use has been made of the power of courts in 10 street crime force areas to remand young offenders aged 12 to 16 years into secure accommodation. [193582]

Paul Goggins: Between 22 April 2002 (when the relevant powers were extended to include those with a repeat offending history) and 22 October 2004 1,133 young defendants aged 12–16 were remanded to local authority secure accommodation in the 10 street crime areas.

Student Visas

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will extend the number of hours a student from overseas in the United Kingdom on a visa is able to work; and if he will make a statement. [193491]

Mr. Browne: No. Overseas students are already allowed to take part-time employment during term time up to a maximum of 20 hours per week. They are also allowed to work full-time during vacation periods. This follows the general principle which traditionally allows students to take employment that is incidental to study and to supplement their income. It strikes a sensible balance between the permitted number of working hours and the minimum of 15 hours of organised daytime study required by the Immigration Rules. There are no plans to change this.

Styal Prison Deaths

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the report by the Prisons and Probation Ombudsman into deaths at Styal Prison. [150724]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 26 January 2004]: I commissioned the Prison and Probation Ombudsman (PPO) to investigate the circumstances and events of the death of Julie Walsh at Her Majesty's Prison Styal on 12 August 2003 and to examine the death in the context of five previous deaths. On 23 January I issued a statement summarising the main findings of the report and the action that the Prison Service is taking to prevent a recurrence.

I have asked the PRO to prepare an abridged version of the report for publication omitting personal and sensitive information which, if published, would add unnecessarily to the distress of the bereaved families. In recognition of the public interest in the report I intend to seek the agreement of the Coroner before publication in order to ensure that he is content that the five outstanding inquests will not be prejudiced.

Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake to comply with the Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order 2003. [194435]

Fiona Mactaggart: At present the Home Office has no Combined Heat and Power (CHP) plants on its office estate. There is one pilot CHP unit at a Young Offender's Institute.

We are working towards the target set under the Framework for Sustainable Development of sourcing at least 15 per cent. of electricity from good quality CHP by 2010. As an initial step we will look at setting up a procurement standard for CHP in conjunction with the Office for Government Commerce. Work has also been commissioned to explore the possibility of introducing more CHP units within the Prison Service estate.

Tampere Agenda/Outcomes

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the main targets for the Tampere 2 Agenda are. [193131]

Caroline Flint: The main objectives for the Tampere 2 Agenda, now to be called the "The Hague Programme", is to add value to the efforts of member states to tackle cross-border crime, asylum abuse and illegal immigration. We aim to do this through development of practical measures aimed at improving co-operation between member states on access to justice, strengthening external borders, fighting organised cross-border crime and combating terrorism. We welcome measures to; improve intelligence-led policing; strengthen the EU's border controls; develop minimum security standards in passports/ID cards including use of biometric identifiers; and incorporation of JHA issues into the European Union's external priorities, in particular re-admission and returns.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of (a) the reaction to the outcome of Tampere 1 in (i) Poland, (ii) Hungary, (iii) Slovenia, (iv) Slovakia, (v) Czech Republic, (vi) Estonia, (vii) Latvia, (viii) Lithuania, (ix) Cyprus and (x) Malta; and (b) how Tampere 2 has been received in each country. [193132]

Caroline Flint: The Secretary of State for the Home Department has noted that the 10 member states have applied those measures adopted under the Tampere 1 agenda (the Tampere Programme) as part of their accession to the European Union acquis.

These 10 member states have been full participants in discussions on the Tampere 2 programme (The Hague Programme) but it has not yet been agreed. The Government has kept in contact with all member states, including the 10 referred to, during discussions on the Hague Programme. Like other member states they have key interests in The Hague proposals, which in many cases align with those of the UK.

TETRA Radiation

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Government plans to commission further research programmes on the effects on human health of exposure to TETRA radiation modulated at approximately 16Hz, using human volunteer studies. [192891]

Caroline Flint: We have commissioned a number of research projects to study the effects of TETRA emissions on human health, some of which use human volunteers. Earlier this year, as part of the Mobile Telecommunications and Health Research Programme, we commissioned the University of Bradford to carry out a study into possible non-linear and demodulation mechanisms in biological tissue. We will commission further studies as necessary as part of our ongoing research programme.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation exercises have taken place with police officers regarding the use of TETRA headsets. [192892]

Caroline Flint: The police service has been fully involved in the review of radio communications that lead to the adoption of the new TETRA Airwave radio system. Deployment of police equipment is for individual forces to decide on.

The Police Federation supports the new system, and is keen to see realised the benefits to officer safety from the clearer signals, better coverage and enhanced safety features that Airwave offers.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research his Department has commissioned on the health issues surrounding the TETRA system. [196067]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 4 November 2004]: We have a wide programme of research in place on the health and safety aspects of TETRA. Recently we have, as part of the Mobile Telecommunications and Health Research Programme, commissioned the University of Bradford to carry out a study into possible non-linear and demodulation mechanisms in biological tissue.

Further research is under consideration. Details of any additional research will be placed on the Home Office website as soon as they are available.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation he has had with the Police Federation on the use of radios linked to the TETRA system by police officers. [196068]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 4 November 2004]: The police service was involved in the decision to adopt Airwave, the new police radio system that uses TETRA technology.

The Police Federation supports the introduction of Airwave, and is keen to realise the benefits to officer safety from the clearer signals, fuller coverage and enhanced security features Airwave provides.

The Police Federation has been, and continues to be, involved in the implementation of the Home Office's programme of research into the health and safety aspects of TETRA technology.

Theft/Criminal Damage

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will require offenders who have committed offences of theft or criminal damage and who are required to pay an on-the-spot fine to be registered in such a way as to enable their victims to seek compensation from the offender. [196114]

Ms Blears: Penalty notices for theft and criminal damage will be targeted at low level offences, normally those committed by first time offenders. The operational guidance issued to the police advises that the value should not exceed £200 for theft with values over £100 deemed exceptional, and over £500 for criminal damage with values above £300 deemed exceptional. Where an officer considers an offence suitable for a fixed penalty notice he is required to consult the victim and advise that this will remove the possibility of a criminal court awarding a compensation order. However, compensation may still be pursued through the civil courts.

If a victim wished to seek compensation he would be able to cite the issue of a penalty notice for the offence as evidence and the police would provide details of the offence and offender to facilitate this process.

It is expected that fixed penalty notices will be issued for offences usually involving low values where the victim is likely to benefit by not having to attend court and give evidence, but can see the offender punished by receiving an on the spot fine of £80.

Visas

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons visa applicants are asked not to contact the Immigration and Nationality Directorate about their applications. [193551]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 25 October 2004]: A person applying for a visa or entry clearance must be outside the UK or Islands at the time of making their application and must apply to a diplomatic post designated for that purpose. The majority of these applications are decided locally by Entry Clearance Officers, to whom this function is delegated, without any reference to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND). In such cases, there would be no need for the individual concerned to contact the Immigration and Nationality Directorate about their application.

Visa applications may be referred to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate for a final decision if discretion outside of the Immigration Rules is to be considered or deferred for further inquiries to be made in the United Kingdom. When this happens there would be no objection to the applicant making contact with IND direct.

Work Permits

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications were submitted for work permits under the (a) seasonal agricultural workers scheme and (b) sector based schemes since May 2003; how many were approved; and to which countries' citizens they were issued. [194121]

Mr. Browne: The Immigration Employment Document used under the Seasonal Agricultural Workers' Scheme (SAWS) is known as a work card. The scheme is run on behalf of the Home Office by Operators who are not required to maintain information on the numbers of applications made for work cards.

The numbers of applications that were approved, and for which a SAWS work card was issued, in 2003 was 23,329.

Between 30 May 2003 (the date SBS was launched) to 30 June 2004 28,102 Sectors Based Scheme (SBS) applications have been submitted, and 18,725 SBS permits have been approved.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications were submitted for the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme between January 2002 and October 2003; how many were approved; from which countries applicants came; how many (a) applications and (b) approvals there have been since November 2003; and from which countries applicants came. [194122]

Mr. Browne: The latest available information on the top 10 nationalities for the Highly Skilled Migrant's Programme is shown in the table.

Data on applications approved for the period November 2003—June 2004 is incomplete as a number of these applications have not yet been decided.

Young Offenders

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the offences for which young offenders have been remanded in secure accommodation under section 130 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001. [193583]

Paul Goggins: The information provided by the Youth Justice Board does not distinguish between remands to local authorities and those to other accommodation. It is not possible to provide a breakdown by offences.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders have been subject to the Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programme since its launch; and what the recidivism rate has been of those who participated in it. [193584]

Paul Goggins: Between the start of the scheme in July 2001 and the end of August 2004, 10,831 young people have been subject to the Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programme . The recently published initial evaluation report showed a re-offending rate of 85 per cent. but a 43 per cent. reduction in the frequency of offending and a 16 per cent. reduction in the seriousness of offending.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Barker Review

7. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Barker review on housing. [198438]

Keith Hill: Kate Barker's review on housing reinforced the Government's strategy for more growth and we have accepted her central recommendation in favour of a step change in housing supply.

In responding to the specific proposals in her report, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will adopt the principles set out in our Sustainable Communities Plan, published last year. We want to create sustainable communities—thriving and vibrant places where people want to live and work, and which will stand the test of time.

E-Government

8. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance he issues to local authorities on how e-government can contribute to efficiency savings in the provision of services. [198439]

Phil Hope: Business transformation, including efficiency gains, has always been part of the local e-Government strategy. The latest Implementing Electronic Government return incorporates guidance on how e-government will help deliver efficiency gains. Last week the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published an information pack for councils on the efficiency target which includes reference to e-government. Further guidance will be issued as required.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on e-delivery of government services in rural North Yorkshire. [198646]

Phil Hope: All local authorities in North Yorkshire are required to e-enable their services by December 2005. The ability to access services by phone or over the web will bring considerable benefits to users of local services, especially in rural areas served by councils in North Yorkshire. The North Yorkshire ICT Partnership was set up to e-enable services on behalf of councils in the area, but now comprises only two of the original nine councils which could delay planned improvements to local services. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently working with all councils involved to identify possible remedial action.

Economic Regeneration

9. Linda Perham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what role he plans for local government in furthering economic regeneration. [198440]

Phil Hope: The Local Government Act 2000 reinforced the powers of local authorities to promote the economic well-being of their area. Community Strategies are bringing together local partners to support jobs and growth. The Government are also taking forward the Local Authorities Business Growth Incentives scheme, which will create new incentives and directly benefit communities.

Street Wardens (Wandsworth)

10. Martin Linton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance he has given to Wandsworth council on the funding of street wardens when departmental funding ceases in 2005. [198441]

Phil Hope: Guidance has been issued to all street warden schemes whose funding ends in March 2005. This includes information on how other schemes achieved continued funding, a list of funding sources and guidance for schemes on how they can contribute to Government floor targets. A sustainability event for London was organised in July.

Travellers' Sites

11. Mr. Heath: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on enforcement action by local authorities in respect of unauthorised Travellers' sites. [198442]

Keith Hill: Local authorities have a wide range of discretionary enforcement powers to enable them to deal with unauthorised Travellers' sites.

The temporary stop notice has been introduced in the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 to give local authorities greater ability to respond quickly to inappropriate developments of all kinds.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many Traveller caravans were on (a) authorised and (b) unauthorised sites in each local authority in England in each year since 1997. [198180]

Keith Hill: The information requested has been made available in the Library of the House.

Local Government Reform

12. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to re-examine local government structures. [198443]

Mr. Raynsford: Following the decision of voters in the North East referendum on an Elected Regional Assembly, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no plans, at present, to introduce changes to the structure of local government.

Affordable Rural Housing

13. Norman Lamb: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on planning policies relating to the provision of affordable housing in rural areas. [198444]

Keith Hill: The Government's draft changes to Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing" aims to increase affordable housing for local communities and key workers. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister proposes to build on existing rural exception policy by enabling local authorities to allocate sites solely for affordable housing. We are considering responses and intend to publish the update by the end of the year.

Thames Gateway South Essex Partnership

14. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the future of the Thames Gateway South Essex partnership. [198445]

Keith Hill: The Thames Gateway South Essex Partnership was established by the local authorities in South Essex to facilitate continued strategic leadership and collaboration on behalf of its partners in the East of England part of the Thames Gateway. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to continue working with the Partnership in taking forward the Thames Gateway programme in South Essex and I will be meeting with them at their Board meeting in January.

Housebuilding (West Sussex)

15. Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effects of housebuilding levels in West Sussex on Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty. [198446]

Keith Hill: It is the responsibility of regional planning bodies to prepare regional spatial strategies for their areas, which will include providing housing figures for districts. In distributing housing, they will need to have regard to national guidance that the conservation of the natural beauty of the landscape and countryside should be given great weight in planning policies for Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty.

Affordable Housing (London)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many shared ownership properties were sold in Southwark in each year since 1997; and how many of those properties were purchased by (a) someone already in social housing in that area, (b) someone on the single housing register in that area and (c) a key worker. [199043]

Keith Hill: Estimates of annual shared ownership sales in Southwark from 1997–98 to 2003–04 are tabled as follows:

	Total shared ownership sales in Southwark	Shared ownership sales to people who were previously social tenants in Southwark	Shared ownership sales in Southwark to purchasers who were registered on a local authority waiting list/ common housing register
1997–98	4	1	2
1998–99	64	21	14
1999–2000	21	4	9
2000–01	10	5	6
2001–02	61	31	19
2002–03	44	26	18
2003–04	76	15	35

Note:

The occupation of purchasers was not collected as part of CORE Sales during the period 1997–98 to 2003–04. Consequently it is not possible to provide figures on the number of key workers that bought shared ownership properties in Southwark during this period.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many shared ownership properties were sold in Lambeth in each year since 1997; and how many of those properties were purchased by (a) someone already in social housing in that area, (b) someone on the single housing register in that area and (c) a key worker. [199070]

Keith Hill: Estimates of annual shared ownership sales in Lambeth from 1997–98 to 2003–04 are tabled as follows:

	Total shared ownership sales in Lambeth	Shared ownership sales to people who were previously social tenants in Lambeth	Shared ownership sales in Lambeth to purchasers who were registered on a local authority waiting list/ common housing register
1997–98	43	19	13
1998–99	68	19	20
1999–2000	49	11	10
2000–01	41	8	23
2001–02	20	2	10
2002–03	48	8	29
2003–04	55	5	41

Note:

The occupation of purchasers was not collected as part of CORE Sales during the period 1997–98 to 2003–04. Consequently it is not possible to provide figures on the number of key workers that bought shared ownership properties in Lambeth during this period.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195614]

Phil Hope: The information requested is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Decent Homes Standard

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent on promoting the Decent Homes Standard. [198340]

Keith Hill: This financial year the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has spent just under £8,000 promoting the Decent Homes Programme. This money was spent on the Decent Homes Event held on 5 May 2004. This event was to announce policy changes to the financing of the programme, the success of local authority bids for additional funding and the achievement of a 1 million reduction in the number of non-decent homes.

It is up to individual local authorities to decide how they wish to promote the standard, as they will need to take into account the situation in their authority, i.e. size of area, distribution of stock. This will determine any amount they spend.

Departmental Archaeologists

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many professional archaeologists are employed in his Department. [198848]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not employ archaeologists.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196606]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002.

Details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 are published in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Annual Report for 2003 published on 13 May 2003 and the Annual Report for 2004 published on 30 April 2004.

Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Freedom of Information Act

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the likely costs to his Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if he will make a statement. [198765]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister already deals with requests for information under the Open Government Code of Practice on Access to Government Information and the Environmental Information Regulations. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made an assessment, through internal research, and estimates that the introduction of the Freedom of Information (FOI) Act will generate additional requests for information above and beyond the volumes that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently handling, but this research suggests that it is not possible to quantify the additional volumes reliably.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has implemented a variety of measures aimed at keeping down the costs of responding to FOI requests which include general awareness raising for staff, more detailed training for inquiry handlers in the handling of FOI requests and the introduction of efficient standardised request handling procedures and systems. In so doing, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made full use of central guidance from the Department for Constitutional Affairs. The efficiency and effectiveness of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's procedures and systems is currently being tested in the run up to full implementation of FOI access rights on 1 January 2005.

Gambling

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the occasions on which (a) he and (b) other Ministers in his Department have met representatives of (i) US casino operators, (ii) British casino operators and (iii) casino operators from other countries to discuss gambling issues, broken down by date of meeting. [195069]

Phil Hope: Since the publication of the report of the Gambling Review Body (Cm 5206) in July 2001, the Department has undertaken a very extensive programme of consultations with interested bodies about options and proposals for changes to gambling law in Great Britain. There have been two formal public consultations, the first on the Review Body's report and the second on the draft clauses published for pre-legislative scrutiny in November 2003. In addition to these consultations the relevant Government Departments have corresponded with and met individual companies, trade associations, charities and other bodies concerned with problem gambling or who benefit from lotteries, local authorities, trade unions, law enforcement agencies, academics and many other bodies and individuals, including member of the public, with an interest. These contacts, designed to ensure that the Government's policy proposals are sound and take full account of all relevant benefits, costs and risks, have involved both Ministers and officials. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Code.

Government Offices for the Regions

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the responsibilities of the Government Offices for the Regions; and if he will break down the components of their estimated programme expenditure in the current financial year by main budget heading. [190612]

Phil Hope: The responsibilities of the Government Offices for the Regions are set out in the Regional Co-ordination Unit and Government Office Network Corporate Plan 2004–05. A copy of which will be made available in the Library of the House.

Details of the programme expenditure of the Government Office for the Region (GO) are given in their published annual reports. A copy of each GO's most recent report will be made available in the Library of the House. Two GOs are still to publish their reports for the year 2003–04 and those will also be made available in the Library of the House in due course.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will break down the programme expenditure of each Government Office for the Regions in (a) 1997 and (b) the current year by main budget heading. [194331]

Phil Hope: Details of the programme expenditure of the Government Office for the Region (GO) are given in their published annual reports. A copy of each GO's most recent report will be made available in the Library of the House. Two GOs are still to publish their reports for the year 2003/04 and those will also be made available in the Library of the House in due course.

Home Ownership

Mr. Cash: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many homes have been transferred in large scale voluntary transfers by local authorities since 1 May 1997; [198465]

(2) how many local authorities have completed a large scale voluntary transfer since 1 May 1997. [198469]

Keith Hill: Since 1 May 1997, 100 local authorities have completed large scale voluntary transfers (LSVTs) and as a result 604,158 dwellings have been transferred.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many homes are in the ownership of local authorities. [198466]

Keith Hill: The latest data returns to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister from local authorities in England record a stock of 2,309,948 at April 1 2004. Since then there has been some loss of stock resulting from transfers to Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) and from the exercise of Right To Buy.

Housing (Leicester)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people are on the housing list waiting to be rehoused in Leicester. [198639]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is advised by Leicester city council that there are currently 13,000 people on their housing waiting list.

Housing Directorate

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total number of employees was within the Housing Directorate and its predecessor for each year since 1997. [197926]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established in May 2002.

The Housing Directorate currently employs 125 staff but this is only part of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's work on housing, which is integrated into the work of a number of directorates across the Office. Owing to changes in the structure of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister since May 2002 it is not possible to give meaningful equivalent figures for previous years.

Key Worker Scheme

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to expand the key worker scheme; and if he will include in the scheme essential personnel such as mental health support workers. [198851]

Keith Hill: The Key Worker Living programme aims to keep the skills needed in frontline public services, in areas where there are significant recruitment and retention needs.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister recognises that all key worker groups provide a valuable service, however resources are finite and decisions prioritising those eligible for assistance from the scheme have been made following discussions with key worker sponsor departments to set the key worker groups and areas where the assistance will be targeted. Based on current evidence, we have no plans to extend the scheme.

Key workers who are not eligible for the Key Worker Living programme may benefit from shared ownership and Homebuy programmes funded by the Housing Corporation to help existing social tenants and those on waiting lists into home ownership.

Ministerial Meetings

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what meetings (a) he, (b) his departmental Ministers and (c) advisers and officials have held with representatives of (i) Sun City International, (ii) MGM Mirage, (iii) Mandalay Resort Group, (iv) Kerzner International, (v) Las Vegas Sands, Inc.,(vi) Harrah's Entertainment, (vii) Caesar's Entertainment and (viii) other foreign casino firms; what the (A) dates and (B) venues of the meetings were; and which individuals were present; [193764]

(2) how many recent meetings (a) officials and (b) special advisers of his Department have had with representatives of (a) Sun International, (b) MGM Mirage, (c) Kerzner International, (d) Caesar's Entertainment and (e) the British Casino Association. [193899]

Mr. Gray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many recent meetings he has had with representatives of (a) Sun International, (b) MGM Mirage, (c) Kerzner International, (d) Caesar's Entertainment and (e) the British Casino Association; when those meetings took place; and if he will list the representatives whom he met from each organisation; [193898]

(2) which (a) UK and (b) international organisations have submitted written representations to the Department concerning the Government's proposals for changes to legislation on gambling; and on what dates each representation (i) was received and (ii) was given a substantive response; [194511]

(3) what dates (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the Department have held meetings with representatives of the UK gambling industry to discuss proposed changes to legislation on gambling; [194518]

(4) if he will list the overseas visits made by (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the Department in relation to proposed changes to legislation on gambling; what the itinerary was for each visit; how long each visit lasted; which hotels were used; what the cost was in each case; and how each visit was funded. [194542]

Phil Hope: Since the publication of the report of the Gambling Review Body (Cm 5206) in July 2001, the Department has undertaken a very extensive programme of consultations with interested bodies about options and proposals for changes to gambling law in Great Britain. There have been two formal public consultations, the first on the Review Body's report and the second on the draft clauses published for pre-legislative scrutiny in November 2003. In addition to these consultations the relevant Government Departments have corresponded with and met individual companies, trade associations, charities and other bodies concerned with problem gambling or who benefit from lotteries, local authorities, trade unions, law enforcement agencies, academics and many other bodies and individuals, including members of the public, with an interest. These contacts, designed to ensure that the Government's policy proposals are sound and take full account of all relevant benefits, costs and risks, have involved both Ministers and officials. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Code.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Gray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he has visited (a) Las Vegas and (b) Atlantic City in his official capacity. [193900]

Phil Hope: Since 1999 this Government has published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government has also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Library of the House.

Information on travel by officials is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate costs.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code, Travel by Ministers and the Civil Service Management Code copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

New Deal for Communities

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of the New Deal for Communities in (a) West Derbyshire and (b) the east midlands on (i) reducing crime, (ii) creating jobs and (iii) raising standards in education since 1998. [198357]

Phil Hope: The information is as follows:

(a) There are no New Deal for Communities (NDC) partnerships in West Derbyshire so there is no direct benefit to West Derbyshire from New Deal for Communities programme.

(b) In the east midlands, there are three NDC partnerships, in Leicester (Braunstone), Derby (Derwent) and Nottingham (Radford and Hyson Green).

The NDC programme is scrutinised and reviewed using two, complementary and linked streams of work:

a performance management system. which drives annual and mid-year reviews, lead by the Government Offices for the Regions. Partnerships reviewed their own performance and the results that they are starting to achieve.

the NDC National Evaluation, providing external assessment at partnership, programme and theme level, lead by Sheffield Hallam University.

The evidence provided in these reviews by the NDC partnerships show that partnerships in the east midlands are beginning to make an impact in reducing crime, creating jobs and raising standards in education. For example:

In Nottingham the NDC has recruited and trained local residents to act as teaching assistants;

In the Derby NDC area, GCSE results are up 30 per cent. in the first three years of the programme;

In Braunstone, 89 jobs have been created and 350 residents have accessed employment.

Nottingham NDC's achievements on reducing crime include target hardening, street lighting, extra policing and neighbourhood wardens;

In the Braunstone area of Leicester, burglary has fallen by 40.6 per cent. and theft of and from vehicles reduced by 48.6 per cent.

A national evaluation has been commissioned to examine the impact and effectiveness of the New Deal for Communities. A number of reports have already been published and a full interim report will be made available in autumn 2005.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to (a) continue and (b) develop New Deal for Communities schemes in (i) West Derbyshire and (ii) the East Midlands. [198358]

Phil Hope: The information is as follows:

(i) There are no New Deal for Communities (NDC) schemes in West Derbyshire. There are no plans to develop any NDC schemes in West Derbyshire.

(ii) In the East Midlands, there are three NDC schemes, in Leicester (Braunstone), Derby (Derwent) and Nottingham (Radford and Hyson Green). The Leicester programme is scheduled to complete in seven years (in 2006–07), the Nottingham programme is scheduled to run over 10 years and will continue until 2009–10 and the Derby Partnership, also over 10 years, until 2010–11. There are no plans to develop any further rounds of NDC.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) schemes and (b) funding made available to West Derbyshire since 1998 under the New Deal for Communities. [198359]

Phil Hope: There are no New Deal for Communities (NDC) schemes in the West Derbyshire district and so no funding has been made available in the area under the NDC scheme.

Public Conveniences

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to amend section 87 of the Public Health Act 1936 in order to make it mandatory for local authorities to provide public conveniences. [198787]

Phil Hope: The Government have no plans to amend section 87 of the Public Health Act 1936 to make it mandatory for local authorities to provide public conveniences.

Regional Co-ordination Unit

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the functions are of the Regional Co-ordination Unit; what guidelines have been issued governing its activities; and to whom it reports. [198156]

Phil Hope: The unit's current responsibilities are set out in the Regional Co-ordination Unit and Government Office Network Corporate Plan 2004–05. A copy of this has been made available in the Library of the House.

Fire Service

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the terms of the tender for the regional fire control centre for the South West were; how many bids were received; how many were shortlisted; and what shortlisting process was used for the tenders. [197356]

Mr. Raynsford: The tender for the control centre was for a private developer scheme using the "Restricted" procedure of the EU Services Directive, advertised in the Official Journal of the European Union on 21 April 2004. In parallel, submissions were invited from the public sector to be put forward with the endorsement of the relevant Regional Management Board. In the South West 31 sites were put forward in 28 submissions, including regional submissions. The criteria for the evaluation were determined by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Corporate Procurement. A financial evaluation was undertaken of the private sector submissions. A technical evaluation was undertaken on a like for like basis of private sector and regionally submitted sites, including site visits by local property advisors. Those that passed the criteria were then visited by the full technical team. Each stage of the process concluded with a moderation meeting. The meeting at the final stage was attended by a representative from the Local Government Association.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what role regional chambers (a) have and (b) will have in relation to fire and rescue services. [198486]

Mr. Raynsford: The regional chambers have no role in relation to fire and rescue services. There are no plans to change this.

Regional Housing Boards

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) which regions have established regional housing boards; [198482]

(2) how regional housing boards are funded; and what their estimated budgets are in the forthcoming financial year; [198483]

(3) if he will make a statement on the relationship between regional housing boards and regional chambers. [198484]

Keith Hill: The Communities Plan, published in March 2003, introduced a regional housing board in each of the nine English regions, chaired by the regional director of the Government Office. The boards receive no direct funding: secretariat costs are met from within existing Government Office budgets. The regional chamber (in London the GLA) is a key member of each board. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently consulting on our proposal that to achieve greater integration at the regional level between housing and planning responsibility for the work of the regional housing boards (i.e. production of a regional housing strategy and making recommendations to Ministers on allocations for housing capital investment) should pass to the regional chamber, which, in each region, is already the regional planning body.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many recommendations by parliamentary select committees have been adopted by his Department since June 2001. [197771]

Phil Hope: Select committee reports are given very careful consideration by the Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. Since June 2001, several committees of both Houses have made recommendations on matters for which the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is responsible. Select Committee reports and their responses are a matter of public record.

South East England Regional Assembly

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost will be of the south east England regional assembly sending a questionnaire to households to gauge their views on housebuilding. [198338]

Keith Hill: The regional assembly currently estimate it will cost in the order of £175,000 to provide leaflets with a brief questionnaire to all households and to local authorities for wider distribution, in order to gauge views on spatial options for future development in the south east.

PRIME MINISTER

Butler Report

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 3 November, Official Report, column 250W, whether he has a timescale for completing the implementation of the Butler recommendations. [198348]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my answer of 3 November, Official Report, column 250W.

Honours System

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what changes he plans to make to the Honours system. [198335]

The Prime Minister: I shall respond to the reviews carried out by the Public Administration Select Committee and Sir Hayden Phillips shortly.

Iraq

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will publish the evidence on the basis of which he disputed the findings, published in The Lancet, estimating the number of Iraqi civilians killed as a result of military actions since 20 March 2003; [196013]

(2) what bodies are (a) funded and (b) supported by the British Government to gather, collate and publish the number of Iraqi civilians (i) killed and (ii) injured by the military actions of coalition forces; [196014]

(3) pursuant to his oral answer of 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 301, to the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) if he will request the Iraqi Ministry of Health to furnish him with a breakdown of the 3,000 deaths by (a) gender, (b) age, (c) location and (d) cause; [197271]

(4) what action he plans to take to ensure independent assessment of civilian casualties in Falluja as a result of the recent military activities; and if he will make a statement. [199140]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the written ministerial statement "Iraq: Casualty Estimates: Lancet Study" made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Straw) today.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) of 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 301, if he will request the Iraqi Ministry of Health to furnish him with the number of civilian deaths in the six months from November 2003 to April 2004, broken down by (a) gender, (b) age, (c) location and (d) cause. [197270]

The Prime Minister: The Iraqi Ministry of Health only began collating figures for civilian casualties in April 2004. They are unable to provide figures for periods before that.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) of 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 301, if he will list the sources other than the figures provided by the Iraqi Minister of Health which caused him not to accept figures of civilian deaths reported by The Lancet. [197334]

The Prime Minister: As I made clear in my answer to the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) on 3 November, Official Report, column 301, the figures to which I referred were from the Iraqi Ministry of Health.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects Saddam Hussein to be brought to trial; and if he will make a statement. [198375]

The Prime Minister: Saddam Hussein was arraigned by an Iraqi court on 1 July and appeared before the court again last month. It is for the Iraqi courts to determine the timing of Saddam Hussein's trial.

Parliamentary Questions

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what his policy is on making corrections in the Official Report of parliamentary answers which turn out to be inaccurate. [198677]

The Prime Minister: I act in accordance with the Ministerial Code.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abattoirs

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which (a) abattoirs and (b) low-throughput abattoirs (i) operated in 1997, (ii) operated in 2001 and (iii) operate now. [196683]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The number of licensed abattoirs in the United Kingdom in the years 1997, 2001 and currently is shown in the table.

	Full throughput	Low throughput
Red meat abattoirs
1997	473[1]
2001	238	156
2004[2]	225	130
Poultry meat abattoirs
1997	172[1]
2001	97	54
2004[2]	87	50

[1] No separate figures for low throughput category available.

[2] To 1 October.

Lists of the names and addresses of these abattoirs in the years requested are only partially available. The following have been placed in the Library:

1997—no available lists.

1998—list of full throughput and low throughput abattoirs in England (lists for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are not available).

2001—lists of full throughput and low throughput abattoirs in England and Scotland (lists for Wales and Northern Ireland are not available).

2004—lists of full throughput and low throughput abattoirs in the United Kingdom.

Archaeology

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many professional archaeologists are employed in her Department. [198849]

Alun Michael: There are no posts within the Department that require qualified archaeologists.

Chewing Gum

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much it cost to fund the Chewing Gum Action Group chewing gum segmentation survey. [197654]

Alun Michael: The chewing gum segmentation study, commissioned by the Chewing Gum Action Group cost £60,170. It has provided valuable information about the different ways in which gum chewers dispose of gum after use and will assist by informing campaigns to change behaviour.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers she plans to give to local authorities to tackle the problem of chewing gum. [197681]

Alun Michael: Under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, local authorities and police community support officers already have the power to issue fixed penalty notices to those who drop chewing gum. The current level of fixed penalty is £50. The Government are working with local authorities and with business to promote action to tackle problems arising from the dropping of chewing gum.

Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made, in relation to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, of the effect on tiger and leopard populations of the trade in animal skins between India, Nepal, Tibet and China; if she will make representations to the authorities in those countries on the matter; and if she will make a statement. [197506]

Mr. Morley: The Government have not made a formal assessment, but we are concerned that the poaching and illegal trade in Asian big cats is a serious problem. Since the 1990s the evidence suggested that use for traditional medicine was the major factor behind much of the poaching that was taking place but more recently the demand for big cat skins has re-emerged as a key issue. The impact of this illegal trade is difficult to assess because there is so little information on the scale of the trade and the population data for some of the species concerned is scarce and unreliable.

The CITES Secretariat did some research into this illegal trade as part of their enforcement missions to Bhutan and China (including Tibet) that were carried out in the summer of 2003 with funding from the UK. The Government are aware that large seizures that have been made by the authorities in China, India and Nepal and have provided the CITES Secretariat with some £15,000 to help fund a meeting of the Tiger Enforcement Task Force to look into this trade. This is planned to take place in the spring of 2005 and aims to help the countries concerned set up appropriate mechanisms for the exchange of relevant intelligence that will enable them to work together to crack down on this illegal trade.

Deer /Bovine TB

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many (a) farmed and (b) park deer were slaughtered at abattoirs in the last five years; [197322]

(2) how many (a) farmed, (b) park and (c) wild deer entered the human food chain in the UK in each of the past five years; and what percentage of the carcases were subject to inspection by the Meat Hygiene Service. [197331]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency (FSA) have advised that it is not possible to determine the percentage of deer carcases in the United Kingdom which have been subject to inspection by the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) in Great Britain and Department for Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) in Northern Ireland. This is because only meat from wild deer destined for the export market is required to be processed in licensed premises and inspected by the MHS or DARD. However, operators of licensed wild game processing facilities producing wild deer intended for the domestic market can choose to have their wild deer inspected and health-marked for commercial reasons.

Premises which only supply wild game to the domestic market are not licensed and are under local authority control. The number of wild deer processed in unlicensed premises or supplied directly to the final consumer are not recorded centrally.

The table shows the number of deer in Great Britain that are recorded as having been slaughtered and/or processed in licensed farmed game handling facilities (the deer farm), farmed game processing facilities, red meat slaughterhouses and wild game processing facilities, and inspected by the MHS. The data for wild deer comprises carcases either for export, the domestic market (when requested by the producer) or exported in fur. Park deer are those living within an enclosed area under conditions of freedom similar to those enjoyed by wild deer. They are shot and handled as if they were wild.

Information on the number of deer in Northern Ireland processed in licensed premises and inspected by DARD is not currently collected centrally.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the risk posed to human health by the consumption of deer in relation to bovine TB; and what discussions she has had with the Food Standards Agency on this issue. [197332]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency has advised that bacteria are killed by proper cooking and there are no recorded instances of humans catching bovine TB from the consumption of meat.

Domestic Water Bills

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average percentage increase in domestic water bills has been since May 1997; and if she will make a statement. [194646]

Mr. Morley: The average increase in domestic water bills in England and Wales since 1997–98 has been 11 per cent. for water and 8 per cent. for sewerage (a reduction of 7 per cent. for water and 9 per cent. for sewerage in real terms). A company by company breakdown of the average domestic water and sewerage bills for each company in England and Wales for each financial year since 1996–97 is set out in the following tables in both cash and real terms.

Fisheries

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cod by-catch from hauls using (a) 80 mm and (b) 110 mm mesh in cod ends deployed by the Fleetwood over 10 metre fishing fleet in the Eastern Irish Sea were in the last 10 years for which figures are available. [192947]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information is only available on the proportion that cod made up of total landings of fish caught in the Irish Sea, as opposed to total catches of fish, and this is given in the following table. This excludes any fish that may have been caught and then discarded before landing. There are several different types of fishing gear that have been used with the mesh sizes quoted, depending on the species of fish being targeted. Only those involving otter trawl in any form have been included. In addition, the 110 mm mesh size was not used significantly in the Irish Sea by the over 10 metre vessels based in Fleetwood until 2003, when it made up a sixth of the trips carried out. Prior to that year, 100 mm and 80 mm gear represented the most frequently used mesh sizes. The figures represent averages, and there is considerable variability seen between individual vessels and individual months of the year.

Emissions Trading

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on how the European Emissions Trading Scheme will apply to non-EU companies operating in the UK. [198471]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 November 2004]: The EU Emissions Trading Scheme will apply to all installations operating in the UK regardless of whether they are owned by EU or non-EU companies. Operators must comply with the obligations set out in the regulations implementing the scheme in the UK. These include requirements to hold an emissions permit, and to monitor and report emissions of carbon dioxide.

Energy Efficiency

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will arrange an international conference on energy efficiency objectives as part of the forthcoming UK presidency of the European Union. [197867]

Mr. Morley: There are no plans as yet to hold an event specifically focused on energy efficiency under the auspice of the UK's presidency of the European Union. The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs recognises the key role that energy efficiency will play in tackling climate change, which in addition is itself one of the two priorities for our G8 presidency. However ministers have not yet approved the programme of events, conferences and seminars that will be held next year.

Energy Recovery

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to which organisation and for which projects her Department is providing funding to develop demonstration units in the UK for new technologies involved in energy recovery processes. [183556]

Mr. Morley: The Department funds the Carbon Trust to support the development of a low carbon economy in the UK. The Carbon Trust are contributing £150,000 to a project costing £430,000 to recover waste heat from industrial processes. In this case the Carbon Trust have defined "energy recovery" as recovering useful energy from a waste stream. Heat pumps would not come into this definition.

As a private company provision of support and funding by the Carbon Trust is a matter for the Carbon Trust board. Defra does not provide direct funding to support the development of energy recovery processes.

Flood Prevention

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what flood prevention schemes have been implemented since 1997; and what the cost of such schemes has been, broken down by county. [198530]

Mr. Morley: We do not currently hold the information in the form requested. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Foster) on 15 November 2004, Official Report, column 1013W. This included a list of flood defence (including flood warning) projects approved for Defra grant aid which started after 1 May 1997 and gave the Operating Authority, the date the scheme started and the approved cost.

Officials have been asked to consider whether the data currently held can be analysed by county but this cannot be completed in the time available.

GM Crops

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Dutch Government on the publication of national proposals for GM co-measures; and what discussions she has had with the IFOAM EU Group on the proposals. [198478]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2004]: Each EU member state is responsible for developing its own proposals to ensure the co-existence of GM and non-GM crops. We are aware of the recent announcement that a commission has presented a national co-existence plan to the Dutch Government. We have not discussed this development with either the Dutch authorities or the IFOAM EU Group.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which EU countries have already put in place proposals for a compensation fund for farmers affected by GM contamination. [198077]

Mr. Morley: We are aware of three EU member states which have prepared definite proposals covering this issue. Denmark is proposing a levy per hectare of a GM crop to finance a compensation fund. Germany is proposing to amend its code of civil law to clarify liability in cases where a non-GM farmer suffers an economic loss as a result of a GM presence. Finally, Luxembourg is proposing that each GM grower will be required to take out a civil liability insurance contract.

We understand that other member states are in the process of developing proposals but the details of these are not yet confirmed.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many homes in Bury Metropolitan borough council area have benefited from the home energy efficiency scheme in each of the last three years. [198322]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2004]: The Home Energy Efficiency Scheme is now marketed as Warm Front. Between the launch of the scheme in June 2000 and the end of September 2004 approximately 4,000 households in Bury Metropolitan borough council, received assistance from the scheme.

This includes in the past three years:

	Approximate number of households
2002	1,000
2003	1,000
January–September 2004	800

Kyoto Protocol

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the level of emissions reduction that will be needed after the ratification of the Kyoto Protocol. [198060]

Mr. Morley: The EU Environment Council has stated that to prevent dangerous anthropogenic interference with the climate system, overall global temperatures should not exceed 2 degrees C above pre-industrial levels, with a carbon dioxide stabilisation level below 550ppm. To be on track for this goal, the UK considers that developed countries will need to make a reduction in carbon dioxide emissions of approximately 20 per cent. by 2020 and 60 per cent. by 2050 (compared to 1990 levels), as outlined in the Government's Energy White Paper of 2003. The UK has therefore set itself on a path to achieve these reductions domestically.

Making Space for Water Consultation

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many responses her Department has received to its consultation Making Space for Water. [197781]

Mr. Morley: There have been 275 responses to the consultation.

Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many press releases have been issued by her Department in each month of 2004; and if she will make a statement. [195365]

Alun Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly), on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 855W.

Select Committees

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many recommen~~dations~~ by parliamentary select committees have been adopted by her Department since June 2001. [197768]

Alun Michael: Since 2001, several committees of both Houses have made recommendations on matters for which Defra is responsible and all have been given careful consideration by the Department's Ministers. Select Committee reports and their responses are a matter of public record.

Waste (Efficiency)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department will be taking to assist local authorities deliver efficiency gains in waste services. [198796]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1946W.

Waste Disposal

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer of 4 February 2004, Official Report, column 903W, on waste disposal, whether she intends to publish the results of her Department's investigation of the feasibility of variable charging for waste before the end of the year. [198009]

Mr. Morley: The Department's work on variable household charging and household incentives for waste recycling and reduction is based on the body of existing, publicly available, research, supplemented by investigation into specific examples of such activity and by specially commissioned research.

It is my intention to publish this new research once the Government have reached a decision on how best to proceed.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department will issue the (a) consultation document for Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Permitting, (b) revised refrigerator guidance and (c) Environment Agency audit report; and if she will make representations to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to extend the deadline for responses to the consultation beyond 29 October. [197004]

Mr. Morley: As regards (a), the Department will consult on changes to waste management licensing in line with the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive as soon as practicable. The documents referred to at (b) and (c) are matters for the Environment Agency. As regards (b), the agency and industry are working together to identify reasonable levels for ozone depleting substances and revised guidance on the recovery and disposal of controlled substances contained in refrigerators and freezers will be produced once these levels have been agreed; it is anticipated that this will be in the New Year. As regards (c), the findings of an audit of fridge treatment facilities have been discussed with the site operators and the agency expects to publish the key findings shortly.

Waste Management

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department is conducting into (a) differential and (b) variable rate charging schemes for waste management. [198281]

Mr. Morley: The Department's work on variable household charging and household incentives for waste recycling and reduction is based on the body of existing, publicly available, research, supplemented by investigation into specific examples of such activity and by specially commissioned research into household incentives in England.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the suitability of private finance initiatives as a funding option for waste management facilities and services in the UK. [198230]

Mr. Morley: Defra's Waste Implementation has commissioned a monitoring and evaluation study from The Public Private Partnerships Programme ("The 4Ps") to obtain a clearer picture of the contribution of the Private Finance Initiative (PFI) to the sustainable management of household waste in England. This was completed in January 2004.

The study, which was based on the experience of the majority of all operational PFI projects to date, found that the contribution of PFI towards the achievement of national recycling targets and EU Landfill Directive targets was significant and growing. Existing operational and currently planned projects should reduce dependency on landfill by 14 per cent. of present levels if they delivered their contract objectives. The overwhelming majority of waste PFI projects were designed to achieve or exceed Landfill Directive targets for the procuring authorities.

The report also found that quality management requirements and standards were consistently being met in PFI projects. There had been no significant failures in the quality of service provision. And there was no evidence that waste PFI projects took longer or cost more to procure than comparable projects in other sectors or large-scale, conventional procurements in the waste sector.

Wildlife Crime

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her plans to increase resources to tackle wildlife crime. [197712]

Mr. Morley: In recent years, the Department has made an important contribution to promoting and enhancing wildlife law enforcement activity, through, for example, the Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime and also by providing over £0.5 million towards the establishment and maintenance of the National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit.

However, responsibility for tackling wildlife crime rests primarily with the police service and HM Customs and Excise, and we have no plans to increase significantly resources in this area.

TRANSPORT

A38

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the section of the A38 between Ashburton and Buckfastleigh to be resurfaced with a noise-reducing surface; and if he will make a statement. [198527]

Mr. Jamieson: Most of the section of the A38 between Ashburton and Buckfastleigh already has quieter surfacing. As parts of the carriageway are now worn out, this surfacing is due to be replaced, again with quieter materials, during a carriageway reconstruction and bridge repair scheme planned for autumn 2005, subject to the availability of finance.

The other parts of the Buckfastleigh and Ashburton Bypasses, which currently have conventional surfacing, are in good condition and are not expected to require maintenance in the foreseeable future. Lower noise surfacing would be used when maintenance becomes necessary.

Aeroplane Collision

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cause was of two aeroplanes colliding at Manchester airport on 4 November; what assessment he has made of precautions in place to prevent such collisions; and if he will make a statement. [198331]

Charlotte Atkins: The accident is being investigated by the Air Accident Investigation Branch. As part of the investigation process the AAIB may make safety recommendations aimed at preventing similar accidents from occurring in the future. A report of the accident investigation and any safety recommendations will be published once the investigation has been completed.

Air Accident Investigation Branch

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the relocation of the Air Accident Investigation Branch from Farnborough; and if he will make a statement. [198775]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport has no plans for the relocation of the Air Accident Investigation Branch from Farnborough.

Car Servicing Industry

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has held with stakeholders in the car servicing industry on improving standards. [198858]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 16 November 2004]: None. This is a consumer issue so primary responsibility lies with the Department for Trade and Industry.

Commercial Drivers (Time Regulations)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the Government plan to enforce the new time regulations for commercial drivers and crew. [198330]

Mr. Jamieson: Inspectors from the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) will enforce the new working time regulations for commercial drivers; mainly, in response to complaints they receive.

Data Protection

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, columns 155–56W, on data protection, if he will make a statement on the conviction of Barry Dickinson, formerly employed by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency. [197453]

Charlotte Atkins: Mr. Barry Dickinson was dismissed from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency with effect from 14 October 2004. This followed a police investigation leading to a court case where he pleaded guilty to the charges against him. He was dismissed from the Agency for gross misconduct in connection with the release of information in contravention of the data protection rules.

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with his Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with his Department in each of the past four years. [196903]

Charlotte Atkins: The information is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Departmental IT

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the Department's (a) implemented and (b) planned computer systems use open source software; and what plans are in place to raise this level. [195665]

Charlotte Atkins: At present, it is estimated that less than 1 per cent. of the Department's current or planned computer systems use open source software. The Department's procurement of software solutions follows the 'level playing field' Government OSS policy, which does not require the raising of levels of OSS usage in Government, rather that Government considers OSS solutions alongside proprietary ones in IT procurements and that contracts should be awarded on a value for money, case by case basis. The Government's OSS Policy can be viewed at www.govtalk.gov.uk.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196138]

Charlotte Atkins: Since the Department's inception in May 2002 expenditure on its London offices has been:

(£000) plus VAT

	2002-03	2003-04
(a) decoration:	nil	6,082
(b) refurbishment works	298,233	99,807

In 2003–04 the Department also paid £1,203,362 plus VAT towards the fit out works for two floors that it has leased in a building in the Victoria area.

Departmental Policies (South Dorset)

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the South Dorset constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on the South Dorset constituency. [194965]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport has put in place a considerable programme of improvements across a wide range of transport policy areas since 1997. The South Dorset constituency will have benefited from these. For example, the injury totals for all road causalities in Great Britain fell from 327,803 in 1997 to 290,607 in 2003, and the numbers of children aged under 16 years killed or seriously injured on our roads fell from 6,452 in 1997 to 4,100 in 2003. On our railways, passenger kilometres have increased from 32.1 billion in 1996–7 to 40.9 billion in 2003–4, a rise of 27 per cent. In terms of improvements to air quality, emissions of the UK's two main pollutants—nitrous oxides and particles—fell by 31 per cent. and 27 per cent. respectively between 1997 and 2002.

The funding provided direct to Dorset county council, which includes the South Dorset area, for local transport over the past five years is set out in the following table. It has been for Dorset county council to determine how that allocation has been spent, in line with their local transport plan and their priorities.

£million

Dorset	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
Block	0.952	2.628	3.257	3.247	3.016
Maintenance	1.645	5.807	6.218	6.444	7.437
Total	2.597	8.435	9.475	9.691	10.453

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's target is for the interval between publication of (a) departmental announcements and documents and (b) material published by public bodies for which his Department has oversight and their posting online; and what the average interval was in the latest year for which figures are available. [195394]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department aims to publish statements, announcements and associated materials to the DfT website (www.dft.gov.uk) within 30 minutes of their release into the public domain. We achieve this in the majority of cases (over 95 per cent.) and this target is frequently exceeded. Press notices are published automatically as they are released.

Where documents are not embargoed under a timed release, the aim is to publish the documents to the DfT website on the same day as they are released into the public domain. Practice across the Department's Executive Agencies generally mirrors the Departments although most aim for same day rather than 30-minute publishing.

It is not possible to provide figures, which demonstrate the average interval between documents being published and appearing online, as not all publications are published centrally and not all are associated with identified statements and announcements.

Lighthouses

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were employed by (a) the Northern Lighthouse Board, (b) Trinity House and (c) the Commissioners of Irish Lights in each of the last 10 financial years; what the (i) role and (ii) terms of reference of each body are; and what the expenditure of each body was in each year. [197346]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is set out below:

Financial year	Average employees (including part-time)	Operating costs (£ millions)
(a) Northern Lighthouse Board
1994–95	447	19.1
1995–96	430	18.7
1996–97	416	18.7
1997–98	405	18.4
1998–09	402	18.9
1999–2000	393	20.4
2000–01	379	21.9
2001–02	373	23.8
2002–03	355	19.9
2003–04	357	21.1
(b) Trinity House Lighthouse Service
1994–95	687	29.8
1995–96	643	28.9
1996–97	602	29.6
1997–98	555	27.7
1998–09	499	27.2
1999–2000	466	26.7
2000–01	450	28
2001–02	439	29.6
2002–03	438	26
2003–04	421	27.9
(c) Commissioners of Irish Lights
1994–95	646	15.5
1995–96	624	16.2
1996–97	573	16.0
1997–98	546	16.7
1998–09	501	15.4
1999–2000	511	15.7
2000–01	529	16.8
2001–02	515	16.4
2002–03	453	15.9
2003–04	419	17.1

All the figures in the table are cash prices

The role and terms of reference of the General Lighthouse Authorities is to provide and maintain aids to navigation around the coastline of the UK, Ireland, the Channel Islands and Gibraltar and to deliver a reliable, efficient and cost effective service for the benefit and safety of all mariners. The Trinity House Lighthouse Service provides the service for coastlines of England and Wales, the Northern Lighthouse Board for Scotland and the Isle of Man, and the Commissioners of Irish Lights for the whole of Ireland as an all Ireland body.

Road Accidents

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatal road accidents in each year between 2000 and 2004 involved drivers that were foreign visitors, broken down by nationality of driver concerned. [198561]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not available.

Road Safety

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on road safety in Wirral, South. [198938]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government are committed to helping local highway authorities play their part in delivering the national casualty reduction targets by 2010. The local highway authority has invested £1.1 million in road safety initiatives in Wirral, including £150,000 on traffic signal improvements in Wirral, South.

Roads

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve (a) maintenance, (b) signage and (c) markings on (i) trunk roads and (ii) motorways; and if he will make a statement. [197649]

Mr. Jamieson: This Government have made the maintenance of trunk roads and motorways in England their first investment priority for strategic roads. The Highways Agency aims to carry out the right maintenance treatment at the right time in order to minimise costs and delays to traffic. Signage and markings are maintained in accordance with the Highways Agency's standards and guidance, which are kept under review.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many recommendations by parliamentary select committees have been adopted by his Department since June 2001. [197777]

Charlotte Atkins: Select committee reports are given very careful consideration by the Department's Ministers. Since 29 May 2002, when this Department was formed, several committees of both Houses have made recommendations on matters for which the Department for Transport is responsible. Select committee reports and their responses are a matter of public record.

South West Trains

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 21 October 2004, Official Report, columns 871–74W, on South West Trains, what information the Strategic Rail Authority received from South West Trains concerning (a) the dates of the consultation exercise and (b) details of the representations they received; and if he will make a statement. [197684]

Mr. McNulty: South West Trains (SWT) was not required to advise the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) of the dates of its consultation. SWT provided the SRA with a summary of the responses to its consultation between April and May 2004 and a copy has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Thameslink 2000

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of the Thameslink 2000 project. [198136]

Mr. McNulty: This project requires a number of different statutory approvals from the Department and from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. Following a public inquiry between June 2000 and May 2001 decisions were deferred pending the resolution of three issues identified by the Inspector relating to deficiencies in the design of the scheme in central London.

Now that Network Rail has submitted further planning and listed building consent applications to address those issues, we are considering with ODPM whether to re-open the earlier inquiry and, if so, what its scope should be.

Train Operating Companies

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much compensation has been paid to each train operating company in each of the last five years. [197650]

Mr. McNulty: The payments that are made to train operating companies (TOCs) are franchise payments in accordance with their contracts. Net franchise payments to TOCs are published in the Strategic Rail Authority's annual reports, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House.

TransPennine Express

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much public subsidy was provided to the operator of the TransPennine Express franchise in each year since it was originally granted; and what the (a) punctuality and (b) reliability figures were for the operator of the TransPennine Express franchise in each of these years. [198786]

Mr. McNulty: The TransPennine Express franchise commenced on 1 February 2004. Details of the subsidy payments made and due to be made to each train operating company are presented in the Strategic Rail Authority's (SRA's) Annual Reports. Punctuality and reliability figures are presented in the SRA's Quarterly National Rail Trends. Copies of both documents are in the Libraries of the House.

Unstaffed Stations

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requirements on franchisees to communicate information on delays to trains to passengers waiting at unstaffed train stations are planned. [198782]
